Five stars instead of the usual one are seen in "Grand Hotel," spectacular picturization of the celebrated Vicki Baum novel and play, now showing for the second day at the Carolina theatre. The remarkable cast is headed by Greta Garbo, John Barrymore, Joan Crawford, Wallace Beery and Lionel Barrymore. Lewis Stone and Jean Hersholt are featured in the large supporting cast.

The story, which takes place entirely within the confines of a fashionable Berlin hotel, entwines the lives of a varied group of persons, including an exotic Russian dancer whose romantic interlude with a reckless baron saves her from suicide but results in her lover's murder.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA TO PLAY DECEMBER 11

The University symphony orchestra, under the direction of Professor Harold S. Dyer, will present its initial concert of the year December 11.

Professor Nelson O. Kennedy's vespers concert, originally scheduled for that date, will be postponed until December 18.

Jack Wardlaw Making Improvements In Band

Plans to make his twelve-piece orchestra one of the finest are being carried forward rapidly by Jack Wardlaw, who has had five year's experience at the University in the capacity of orchestra leader.

Rehearsals are being conducted four times a week at the old Buccaneer shack back of 212 East Rosemary street. The finest musical talent at the University is being moulded into a smooth dance orchestra.

The personnel of the band with Jack Wardlaw as director is: Earl Wolslagel, violin and voice; Tom Teer, piano; "Mac" McCormick, banjo and arranger; James Fuller, bass and violin; Mike Boone, drums and vibraphone; Johnny Best, first trumpet; Harold Nicholson, second trumpet; Vernon Randolph, trombone; "Baer" Johnson, first saxophone; T. L. Worsley, Jr., tenor saxophone; and Sydney Franklin, third saxophone.

Play Readers to Meet

The Play Readers will convene for their first meeting at 8:00 o'clock tonight in the Episcopal parish house.

"Nature in the Raw is seldom MILD"

THE INDIAN RAID
"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by the celebrated artist, Fred Madan... inspired by that wild, bloody scramble of covered wagons in the Colorado Gold Rush (1858), as described in the National Geographic Magazine. "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes.

No raw tobaccos in Luckies —that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

Y CABINET TALK BY WEATHERFORD IS WELL RECEIVED

Leader of Christian Group Centers Speech on Questionnaire by Will Durant.

"The job for these three cabinets is not to act as errand boys; but to help make this place a better place in which to live, or to so set the trend so as to make it easier to live here in a better manner," declared Dr. Willis Duke Weatherford in his final speech made during his sojourn here before a joint gathering of the three Y. M. C. A. cabinets Monday night in Gerard hall. A large crowd attended the lecture.

The speaker said that the way to make this locality a better place in which to live was to know something about religion, to watch for a chance to help, and to be prepared to help, which he gave as answers to the subject of his speech, "What do You Think of Religion?"

Cites Types of Students
Dr. Weatherford gave a very concrete example of the three attitudes generally held by college students toward religion. In Cornell University, taken to be one of the nation's representative institutions, it was found that the first group consisted of those interested and active in religious activities, the second of those opposed to it, who were the most vocal and vociferous in denouncing it, and the third, constituting the great majority, composed of those who were indifferent.

"Students are indifferent to religion because they know so

TRAINED PUBLIC OFFICERS NEEDED STATES COATES

Law Professor Condemns Rotation of Government Office-
Holder as Ineffective.

Opening the year's program on "Public Affairs," Professor Albert Coates of the law school addressed the North Carolina club on the aims and work of the Institute of Government, Monday night in the library. Professor Coates was introduced by Professor S. H. Hobbs, of the rural social economics department, and began his talk by commenting on the effect the almost constant rotation of holders of public offices has on the work of those departments.

"These officers," he explained, "are not born with a knowledge of the powers and duties of the offices to which they are elected... their private occupations and professions do not teach them the powers and duties of public officials; the uncertainties of political life do not offer them incentives to study the responsibilities of a public office before they seek it; the democracy which clothes them with the public trust does not provide them with training to fit them to discharge it."

Aim of Institute

It is to remedy this condition, he said, to bring to each government officer the methods, practices and techniques arising out of the initiative and resourcefulness of other officers in similar offices in this and other states, to collect the steadily ac-

JOHN WILKINSON HITS DEMOCRATS IN CHAPEL TALK

President of Republican Club Is Greeted by Cheers and Cat-Calls in Freshman Assembly.

John Wilkinson, speaking in behalf of the Republicans on the campus, was received by freshman assembly yesterday in a very boisterous manner as he attempted to speak on the policies of the present Republican administration. At various times during his talk he was greeted by "boos" and cheers that prevented his being heard.

The first part of his address was devoted to an attempt to prove the Democratic contention that the Smoot-Hawley tariff bill was responsible for the economic depression was entirely wrong. He then outlined the measures that were passed by the Democrats during the last session of Congress for relief from the depression.

In conclusion he said that the state, during thirty years of Democratic government, had degenerated rather than advanced, and that every man, woman, and child in the state owed $162 for state bonds, four times as much per capita as any other state in the Union.

BOULANGER WILL PLAY FOR DANCES

Columbia Broadcasting Orchestra to Furnish Music at Coming Festivities.

Couples will dance to the strains of music by Charlie Boulanger and his Columbia Broadcasting orchestra at the annual fall German club dances November 18 and 19 in the Tin Can. A partial list of the dance places at which this orchestra has played includes: Trianon Ballroom, Granada Cafe, Chicago; Youngs Restaurant, Park Central Hotel, New York City; Convention Hall, Million Dollar Pier, Atlantic City; Asbury Park Casino, Asbury Park, N. J.; Ship Cafe, Milwaukee, Wis.; and other well known places.

The German club dances are scheduled for November 19 from 4:30 until 6:15 and from 10:00 until 1:00 and for November 19 from 11:30 a. m. until 1:15 and from 9:30 until 12:00. Anyone wishing to join the German club should see Milton Barber, secretary, at the Zeta Psi house any day at 1:30 to 2:00 or at 7:00 to 8:00. The club has made a special arrangement this year permitting a small number of freshmen to attend the dances. Fifty first year men out of those who first apply will be considered for membership.

There will be a meeting of the German club Thursday at 1:30 in Gerrard hall to elect dance leaders. The committee announces that no member will be allowed at the dance November 18 or 19 unless he has a membership card, which may be obtained from Milton Barber at the Zeta Psi house.

DAILY TAR HEEL STAFF TO MEET THIS AFTERNOON

Meetings for four divisions of the editorial staff of THE DAILY TAR HEEL have been called for this afternoon in Graham Memorial.

The editorial board will gather at 2:30 o'clock; the city editors and desk men at 3:00; reporters, including sports men, at 3:30; and the feature board at 4:00.

University Colored Servants In Danger Of Losing Property

Excessive Assessments Resulting From Franklin Street Improvement Project Can Not Be Paid by Two Colored Janitors
And Painter in Employment of University.

"Old Uncle Green" McDade is in deep trouble. He and two of his aged friends, who have been associated with the University their entire lives, are in danger of losing their homes due to the excessive assessments resulting from the Franklin street improvement project. Caught with "Uncle Green" in this difficulty is "Old Uncle Billy" McDade, janitor of Graham Memorial, and another old colored man known as Rick Taylor.

These three familiar figures in the University and community are threatened with the loss of their homes because of their inability to earn the money to pay assessment which was laid upon them four or five years ago.

Each owns property facing Franklin street, and when the tax bill was passed they were assessed the $7.70 per front foot.

Amounts Protested
This amount, it is charged, is several times that which was agreed upon in the petitions for assessment. "Uncle Green" declares he signed with the promise that the assessment was to be $1.50 per front foot of property. He was upheld by the other victims when he said that the majority of the colored property owners were tricked into signing the petition by various forms of deception practiced by those circulating the petition for street improvements.

The most deceptive scheme that was applied to the task of getting colored property owners to sign the petition was ascribed to a certain pastor of the colored Baptist church at the time the project was started. This parson, according to McDade and Taylor, tricked his entire congregation into signing the petition by telling them that if they had their names on the church roll and would sign the paper they would all be eligible to vote.

Served Alderman and Noble
"Uncle Green" McDade was born in Chapel Hill eighty-five years ago, on the very property which he is now in grave danger of losing. He was born a slave of a certain Patterson McDade, from whom he received his name. After the Emancipation he went to work for the University as janitor of Old East and Old West. He is proud of the fact that he waited on Dr. Edwin Alderman and Dr. M. C. S. Noble as students. When these men were mentioned to him, he apparently forgot his assessment woes and began to speak on his past experiences.

Rick Taylor has lived all the sixty-eight years of his life in the community. He has never left Chapel Hill except for three months on one occasion when he worked at a hotel in Greensboro. He has not waited on any of the students, as have the McDade negroes, but has served the University as painter. He proudly claims to have done almost all of the painting for the University except that of the last few years. He is now too aged and feeble to compete with other workers in his trade.

McDades Not Brothers
"Uncle Billy" McDade, who has been associated with the University for all of his seventy-eight years, is commonly known as "Green" McDade's brother. But, contrary to this belief, the two colored men are not any way related. This misconception is due to the fact that both belonged to the same master at the time of the Emancipation. "Uncle Green" painstakingly explained that his young master

Depression Leads To Self-Burial As Method Of Obtaining Money

Idea Conceived by Would-Be College Student in Time of Need Is Taken Over by Another Who Will Not Rise Until Roosevelt Is Elected.

Three weeks ago in Raleigh a would-be college student was struck by a motorcycle and an idea. The idea was that he would earn part of his first year expenses in college by the novel scheme of having himself buried alive and charging thrill-seekers for the privilege of looking at him through a pipe.

He got a friend to aid him in digging a five-foot hole and covering the box and to attend to the very necessary job of feeding him soup and orange juice through a tube. The friend also collected the offerings given by the curious. Business was brisk, but heavy rains came and, fearful of a cave-in, the self-dead student had himself reincarnated.

Possible Fad

It seems now that the student may have started a fad which will reach the proportions of the one of a year or so ago, when every tree housed a long-time sitter.

For now, a mile from Raleigh on the Wake Forest road, there lies buried six feet deep a thirty-four-year old man who has a wife and baby. "Doc." Proecher, of "no place in particular," is the "dead" man. He declares that he will not allow his partner, T. Tunnell, to dig him up until Roosevelt is elected president of these United States.

He "went down" on Monday, October 31, and if he stays until the next president is selected, he will have been down over eighteen days.

Unemployed

"Unemployment" is the excuse he gives for his stunt. He hopes to earn enough through contributions to support his wife and baby.

His partner declares that food is severely rationed to the buried man as "he is so hungry he would eat a dead dog." Twice daily he is given one ounce of hominy and a half pint of milk. He is allowed as much water as he wants, however.

Above the grave, which has the protection of an open-sided tent, appears a "tombstone" with the following inscription:

WITH

EXTENSION PLAN REPRESENTATIVES TO CONVEENE SOON

Many State Schools Now Participate
In Cooperative Program Of Colleges.

The North Carolina Association of College Extension representatives will meet at a short session in the Washington-Duke hotel, November 10. R. M. Grumman, director of the extension division of the University and chairman of the organization, will preside.

The group of directors organized September, 1930, and adopted for their purpose "to promote cooperative relationships among the institutions of higher learning in the state in the conducting of extension teaching; to encourage the development of general adult education; and to provide for an exchange of ideas and discussion of all phases of college extension work."

The following institutions are now participating in the cooperative program: Catawba College, Davidson College, High Point College, Lenoir-Rhyne College, North Carolina College for Women, N. C. State, Salem College, and the University of North Carolina.

FRESHMEN WILL ELECT OFFICERS

Secretary and Treasurer of Class
To Be Incorporated Into One
Office at Election.

Following the nomination of men for offices of the freshman class and speeches by the nominees in Memorial hall, the freshman election will take place November 16 in Graham Memorial.

Nominations will be made November 14 in the assembly period with Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, presiding. Speeches by those men nominated will be delivered the next morning in assembly.

The actual election in Graham Memorial with the student council presiding will take place from 9:00 a. m. until 5:00 p. m. The Australian or secret ballot will be used in the election. Three officers, a president, vice-president, and a secretary-treasurer will be elected, and will remain in office until next spring when a new group will be chosen for the ensuing year.

DEBATERS WILL MEET STATE GROUP THURSDAY

Debaters of the University will meet a State College group in forum debate on the subject "Which party should be supported at the next election?" Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

The speakers for the University are Bill Eddleman, speaking for Roosevelt; McBride Fleming-Jones, speaking for Hoover; and John Jenkins, representing Thomas.

INFORMAL UNION DANCES TEMPORARILY STOPPED

The informal dances which have been given in Graham Memorial during the past two weeks have been discontinued until the Graham Memorial board of directors can make more satisfactory arrangements for handling the affairs.

The reason for discontinuance was because the floor was too crowded and proper control could not be exercised over the dances.

LARGER NUMBER TO HAVE PHOTOS IN YACKETY YACK

Increase Shown in Number of Juniors and Seniors to Have Their Pictures Made.

According to information released yesterday by Nutt Parsley, editor of the Yackety Yack, a large increase in the number of junior and seniors having their pictures taken for the University annual has been shown this year in comparison with last year.

This total will be increased today since the deadline has been set aside for the one day to allow juniors and seniors whose appointments could not be filled yesterday to have their pictures taken at the Wootten-Moulton studio.

Thus members of these two classes may have their photos made today in time for publication; but, as the material has to be in the hands of the printers tomorrow, pictures for the junior or senior sections taken later will be disregarded. All underclassmen will have until November 15 for their pictures to get into the fraternity sections.

Yesterday afternoon 754 pictures, 341 of seniors and 413 of juniors, had been made. This total was a marked increase over any previous year. Ninety-five were taken Monday to set a record for the number made in one day.

Indications are that this increase in number has resulted from the new plan inaugurated this year whereby the fees for these pictures are included in class fees paid at matriculation.

SPECIALTIES WILL ADD TO PROGRAM OF PLAYMAKERS

Players in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Will Present Extra Numbers;
Follow Original Custom.

The presentation of Uncle Tom's Cabin by the Carolina Playmakers will be augmented by specialties put on by the actors in the play. At the time the play was originally produced it was customary for the actors to offer these diversions as well as act in the play. Miss Phoebe Baughan Barr, formerly with Ted Shawn's company, will direct these specialties.

The grand opening chorus will be a polka, authentic dance of the "fifties." At various intervals during the show the following entertainment will be offered: a song and clog dance by Topsy (Sue Sutherland); a breakdown, with guitar accompaniment, by Donald LaBowme and W. A. L. Bonyon; a novelty act by Topsy and Eva (Eugenia Rawls); a song, I Got a Home in That Rock by Uncle Tom (David McIlheny); Pictures from Life's Other Side will be sung by Marie (Mary Aileen Ewart); and finally Ophelia (Margaret Hervey) will sing, She Is More To Be Pitied Than Censured for a Man Was the Cause of It All.

These acts will be accompanied by Flow James. The faculty orchestra and Carolina Ensemble under the direction of Thor Johnson will offer incidental music during a number of the scenes.

Are These Our Children?

In recent years the undergraduate student body has been so merged socially that little evidence of distinction between classes now exists. Since the state legislature took steps to eradicate all discriminatory hazing, the University has been free from the innocuous freshman and the predatory sophomore. Thus far it has been to the advantage of both freshmen and upperclassmen.

But after yesterday morning's raw exhibitionism in Memorial hall where six hundred freshmen resisted every attempt of a representative of the Young Republicans club to express his views and those of his candidate with repeated hisses and boos punctuated by untimely applause, we are led to wonder whether the lenient status accorded freshmen is not a mistake. Apparently the efforts of orientation week have been to no avail.

Unquestionably, not one out of fifty freshmen is aware of the platforms and policies of either "his" party or the opposition. We venture to state that nine out of ten collegians who are voting this November 8 would throw up their hands in mute horror should the question be put to them "Why are you voting the Democratic ticket?"—or the Republican or Socialist ticket as the case might be. How many are aware of their party's stand on the Garner bill, the Patman bill, the War debts, or the minute points of the tariff? Thousands of college students of the voting age will either fail to cast their ballot or will vote the hereditary ticket. The freshman class, which in four years will be voting as newly ordained graduates, has an excellent jump on their elders in the college ranks.—D.C.S.

Darkened Windows At Columbia

Parallel to the hue and cry raised over the Tatum petition is the much more violent demonstration occurring at Columbia when 1,000 students battled police in protest to the dismissal of an English professor because of his alleged communistic sympathies. No such mass uprising is likely to occur at the University of North Carolina or any other southern school, but an effective protest against such attempts to curb free thought will take place at any time that a group of fanatical conservatives propose to restrict the growth of higher education by condemning competent teachers for their personal views.

Regardless of whether the Columbia faculty member taught communistic principles, there was no justification for his losing his position. The average college undergraduate is mature enough in his judgment to choose what stand he will take on economic questions, and the alleged teachings of what are so fondly termed subversive principles will not, in most cases, impel him to radicalism. At any rate, the majority of college students are not as gullible as our conservative brethren would have us believe.

Regardless of their ways of thinking, there should be no such asinine objection to allowing competent teachers to remain on our university faculties. Why should education suffer for the prejudices of a few? These few in every instance are monomaniacs who seem to think that our universities are hot-beds of revolution and that the average college student is so puerile in mind that he changes opinions acquired in years of environmental influence because of contact with a professor who, after all, is human and has the same right as any other man to express his views.

But there are some who still do believe that education should suffer for these narrow-minded reasons. Until they change to a more tolerant outlook on university education, they will be in continual conflict with its traditional spirit of liberalism and enlightenment.—A.T.D.

Merrily We Go to H—

It is almost a truism that Carolina is one of the most "un-collegiate" colleges in this country. Freshmen coming here for the first time are surprised and, in many cases, disappointed at the negligible amount of rah-rah stuff that is found on this campus. With a few exceptions this University is completely removed from what the average person's idea (taken from movies, magazines, etc.) of a college is. But, ah, we have kept this unique distinction too long—we are due for a change. It has been rumored that, with the formation of a Greater University that the consolidation of the three state-controlled institutions of higher learning, a large number of girls, now going to N. C. C. W., will be enrolled here.

Imagine the havoc and chaos that a thousand or so more or less attractive co-eds will cause on this campus. Visualize, if you can, the effect that all this pulchritude will have on Carolina's sex-starved, erotic-minded young manhood. Recruits by the dozens will flock to the ranks of the brown coat—grey pants boys. Raccoon coats (thank God for this moderate climate) and Harold Teen Fords will miraculously make their appearance. No longer will the stags at the dances be outnumbered, though they will be even more outworn. Down with a crash will come the last remnants of our honor system, for "what is there of honor in a woman?" Tailor shops will spring up as if by magic, and men who used to wear a shirt 'till, regardless of previous color, would assume the hue of freshly dug potato will now send seven a week to the laundry. Banners will be waved at football games and the star halfback will be the idol of the campus—green-eyed idol as far as the boys are concerned. In short, Carolina will go hot-cha, rah-rah, or whatever you will. But, lest this black picture disturb anyone unduly, remember it is but rumored.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

Educating The Freshmen

When the freshman class resorts to such barbaric practices as were reported to in assembly Tuesday morning, it is time for the upperclassmen to rise up and offer enlightenment, which our frosh should have, and no doubt did receive at home from their good parents. The most barbaric and ungentlemanly conduct that I have ever witnessed was displayed in the assembly by no small portion of the freshmen present. No doubt, every student at the University has been taught at home to have respect for the speaker at any meeting. But the freshmen need to be reminded of the respect that should be shown a speaker by University gentlemen.

The Chess Player

"The Game of Kings, the King of Games"

By Paul J. Miller, Jr.

CHESSNERS! All chess players in North Carolina are requested to write their name and address on a government postal and mail to THE CHESS PLAYER, P. O. Box 893, Chapel Hill, N. C.

In co-operation with the movement to increase the public interest in chess, and to advance the art and cause of chess, we also request the chess enthusiasts to send in the name of his chess friends.

—ICA—

It is indeed amazing to note the meager information available in our libraries concerning the growth of chess. A game of pure skill that dates its origin 3,000 years before the birth of Christ (according to some historians), chess has been the theme of thousands of skilled analysts and clever writers. Several private libraries in the United States possess from 2,000 to 3,000 different tomes on the art of chess.

The J. G. White chess collection, bequeathed to the Cleveland Public Library, embraces 12,000 invaluable volumes on chess and checkers. It is the largest chess library in the world.

In the United States some 200 game manufacturers produce chessmen and chess boards of Staunton or French design, ranging from cheap fifty cents pinewood chessmen to gigantic chessmen, used for lawn chess, Several persons other than the freshmen went to chapel Tuesday to hear John Wilkinson give the Republican side of the pre-election clash. Not only were these visitors prevented from hearing Mr. Wilkinson, who is, by the way, an excellent speaker and should be respected for that alone; but also Mr. Wilkinson was hindered in his talk by untimely applause and by the hissing and booing of the freshmen. No one should be so dogmatic that he refuse to hear views other than his own. Much less should one attempt to prevent others from hearing just because of one's own dogmatic views.

The least that the freshmen should do is to feign attention, if not interest, by being quiet. Moreover, no view is absolutely set, and they might be enlightened by turning an attentive ear to opposite views and assay them in forming their own dogmas.

May the freshmen remember the ethics of culture and refinement and their mothers taught them and continue to use them in times and places when and where one is supposed to be a gentleman, lest there be future recurrence of the acts that shamed visitors to assembly Tuesday.

Current World Chess Magazines

For almost fifty-one years on the first of every month, with clock-like precision, has issued the British Chess Magazine. The Social Chess Quarterly appears in London four times the year. Other foreign chess periodicals are: Il Problema, Die Schwalbe, L'Italia Scacchistica, Wiener Schach-zeitung, Els Escacs A Catalunya, and Cahiers de L'Echiquier Francais.

Undoubtedly the greatest international chess publication is L'Echiquier, founded in 1925, and published at Bruxelles, Belgique. Chess articles printed in three languages appear in this brilliant review of the royal game.

International and National Organization

The foremost authority on chess, in all its phases, is the Federation Internationale des Echecs—the International Federation of Chess—centered at The Hague. Every prominent state in Europe has a branch federation that co-operates with the International Federation. In England, there is the British Chess Federation. In the United States there is the National Chess Federation, with central headquarters at Chicago.

Among the colleges and the universities, in the United States, there is the national honorary chess fraternity, Chi Eta Sigma, founded in 1929, and the Intercollegiate Chess Association of American Social Chess Clubs, the I. C. A. C. Chessists interested in these units may obtain details from THE CHESS PLAYER.

In the Y. M. C. A.'s throughout the breadth of the land are chess clubs. Many private clubs exist as the Missouri-Pacific Chess Club at Saint Louis, the Paul Morphy Chess Club at New Orleans, and the Frank Marshall Chess Club of New York City, and others.

—ICA—

THE DAILY TAR HEEL is the first college periodical in America to devote a column to Chessana, and will offer a special subscription rate to chess fans everywhere for thirty-six issues, including the present edition, for $1.50.

THE CHESS PLAYER invites contributions but will publish only items of unusual merit and catholic interest—local, national, and international.

In The Main

By MAYNE ALBRIGHT

Last week a stranger from the north who was looking for a friend rooming in Everett dormitory stopped a student in the quadrangle and asked: "Where is Everett hall?" But the student only laughed and said, "Why, I don't know him. I'm a freshman here myself."

Haywood Weeks, as chairman of the Student Auditing Board, was arguing with Mac Fleming-Jones, former president of the Publications Union, about the advisability of that organization coming under the new auditing system. Mac sided with Mr. Lear, chief proponent of the P. U. Board's independent audit, and used many of Mr. Lear's arguments. Finally President Weeks thought he had won him over, but Mac shook his head and said: "I guess I am getting Leary about the whole thing."

I don't know whether its a tribute to College Humor's popularity or an indication of the type of readers it attracts, but somehow that publication lasts but a short time in Graham Memorial reading room. The other magazines are well thumbed by the end of the month but College Humor is missing by the end of the first week. But I have a plan. Is there a beautiful lady on the cover? I rubber stamp her between the eyes! Is there a particularly attractive piece of anatomy exposed? I stamp it most unbecomingly. Nobody seems to want a branded lady on his dormitory walls, and College Humor remains intact between the leather covers of its holder. Thus does romance yield to expediency.

I have always had a mania for saving old papers, letters, foreign coins, ivory elephants, trinkets, and personal junk of every kind. Last week-end in Raleigh I was trying to reduce a most impossible collection to a single large boxful, and in the back of an old note-book I found scrawled in a large hand easily recognizable as my own:

"This is for spelling
So far I have missed 274 words
This is May 1, 1922
By June first I will have missed 282 words."
Ever a boastful youth!

And rummaging on into a few graduations later I ran across this tear-jerking little gem:

"We are leaving, we must sever,
From our school we must depart.
Tho' we're leaving, still we'll never Fail to hold her near our heart."

Which inspires me to call upon my slumbering powers of poetry to answer our lady columnist whom I read but have not seen.

Poem to E. H. who criticized my spelling:
"A Column has meanings too many to quote,
But a colyum could only be something you've wrote."

Tar Heels Basketeers Begin Work Today For Coming Season

Coach Bo Shepard Issues Call for Candidates to Meet in Tin Can This Afternoon.

SCHEDULE IS ANNOUNCED

Navy and V. M. I. Are Newcomers on List of Foes for White Phantoms This Year.

Coach Bo Shepard, Carolina cage mentor, will call the first basketball practice of the year this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in the Tin Can. Lettermen, reserves, and all others who are interested are asked to report for this initial practice.

Although a fat roster of eight lettermen is to be had, Coach Shepard is not optimistic concerning the coming season. The absence of Alexander, all-southern guard, and Edwards, veteran center, will hurt Carolina's starting lineup. However, a fine group of reserves and sophomores should bolster the lean outlook.

Coach Shepard said concerning the present outlook, "Our losses of Alexander and Edwards will be felt; it will be a very tough job to fill their places."

The lettermen who will report today are: forwards, Hines, Weathers, Chandler, Markham; center, Brandt; guards, McCachen, Henry, and Jones. Some of the promising reserves are: Barber, Lineberger, Harris, Carr, Minor, Nalle, McGlenn, Long, and Beale.

Coach "Sandy" Dameron's freshman cagers made a fine record last year and will have more than ten promising candidates on the floor this afternoon. The following men won their spurs as frosh basketeers last year: Aitken, Rand, Kaveny, Blood, Patterson, Glace, Vick, Jacobs, Zaiser, and Heidrich.

The complete schedule has been completed with allowances for practice games with "Y" teams. Two new comers appearing on this year's card are Navy and V. M. I. The Carolina cagers will open their court schedule with Guilford College here January 5, while the last contest prior to entering the Southern Conference tourney will be with N. C. State College at Raleigh, February 24.

The schedule is as follows:
Jan. 5.—Guilford, here.
Jan. 7.—Davidson, Charlotte.
Jan. 12.—Wake Forest, here.
Jan. 13.—V. P. I., here.
Jan. 18.—N. C. State, here.
Jan. 21.—Wake Forest, Raleigh.
Jan. 27.—V. M. I., here.
Jan. 31.—Duke, Durham.
Feb. 3.—Maryland, College Park.
Feb. 4.—Navy, Annapolis.
Feb. 6.—V. M. I., Lexington.
Feb. 7.—Washington and Lee, Lexington.
Feb. 11.—Duke, here.
Feb. 16.—Davidson, here.
Feb. 18.—N. C. State, Raleigh.

PICARD BECOMES NEW OPEN GOLF CHAMPION

Henry Picard, youthful pro from Charleston, S. C., became the new Carolina open golf champion by defeating Walter Hagen, former British and American open champion, in an 18-hole play-off over the Star-mount course at Greensboro Sunday.

Hagen and Picard were tied at the end of the regulation 72 holes with 295 each, but Picard shot a brilliant 69 against the 79 for Hagen to win the title by ten strokes.

The big difference between them was their tee shots; Picard hitting his long and true, the "Haig" being in the rough several times. Picard's 69 set a new official course record, being the only sub-par score turned in by any pro or amateur during the tournament.

Leads Basketeers

Wilmer Hines, captain and star forward of the Tar Heel quintet, leads candidates in their initial workout today in the Tin Can.

TEAMS WORK OUT WITH COACH ON FLORIDA OFFENSE

Three Lineups Run Through New Plays as Preparation for Game Friday.

Coach Chuck Collins put in a hard day yesterday on Kenan field mapping out an offense for the Florida game Friday. Three full teams ran through new plays designed to go against Florida.

He is taking no chances injuring his men before this important set to with the 'Gators and the work yesterday was confined to the learning of the new plays and the signal drills.

The first two teams to get the plays showed several changes in their make-up. The first team showed Brandt and Walker, ends; Smith and Hodges, tackles; Philpot and Kahn, guards; and Underwood, center. The quartet behind this line had Phipps and Daniels, half backs; Chandler, fullback; and Burnett, silent quarterback.

The second eleven had Frankel and Cozart, ends; Collins and Tatum, tackles; Newcombe and Froneberger, guards; and Gardner, center in the line and a backfield combination of Thompson and McCaskill, halves; Lasiter, fullback; and Martin, at quarterback.

The 'Gators are coming with a powerful eleven which has not hit its stride as yet but which was strong enough to get the jump on Georgia last week and tally early in the fray. A pass combination of Henderson to Moye was the Florida instrument on both the scores, and Carolina will have to watch this pair of talented halfbacks closely Friday.

Lightweight Title Bout Set For Friday Night

An important fight of the boxing world is the contest Friday night between Tony Canzoneri, present lightweight champion, and Billy Petrolle, the Fargo Express, for the lightweight title.

The match was scheduled to come off in August but was postponed until November 4 because of an injury to Billy's elbow. Petrolle packs a mean wallop in either mitt, but critics claim that Tony is the better of the two.

Sing Sing Wins Again

The Black Sheep from Sing Sing rolled up a 14-0 victory over John Law's Kingston Yellow Jackets, accounting for their fourth win this season over police opposition.

Last week six police were laid out when the Port Jervis team played the public institution.

MANLY LOSES TO GRIMES TEAM, 6-0

Carr and Swain Battle to Deadlock; Kappa Alpha Crushes Kappa Sigs.

Two of the first division teams which took part in yesterday's intramural tag football program gained victories, Grimes by a 6-0 win over Manly and Sigma Nu over Delta Tau Delta by forfeit. Carr was held to a slippery 2-2 deadlock by Swain Hall.

In this tie game, Carr had the best of things throughout, but was hindered by the muddy field. The law school outfit held a 1-0 lead in first downs at half time, and a 2-1 advantage until the last few minutes when Swain Hall completed a pass for a gain of about fifteen yards.

Swain Hall had a chance to score in the first quarter when it recovered a fumble on Carr's two yard line, but was unable to put the pigskin across in four attempts.

Grimes Wins

Grimes stepped into the lead in the dormitory circuit when it nosed out Manly, 6-0, in a hard fought game. The mud, however, slowed up their attack, and the leaders had to be content with a one touchdown margin.

Florida 'Gators With Wealth Of Material Prove Disappointment

Coach Charlie Bachman, With Such Stars as Ferrazzi, Bernard, Jenkins, Rogero, Fountain, McAnley and Henderson, Has Had Trouble Getting Started.

Badly defeated by State and Georgia on consecutive weekends, after coasting through easy wins over mediocre opponents in its first two contests, Florida will advance on Chapel Hill Friday with a team that has been woefully disappointing to those who predicted that the 'Gators would fight their way to the top of the heap this fall.

Florida, coached by Charley Bachman, has a more or less veteran line with the exception of ends and a fairly experienced backfield with just enough sophomore material on hand to keep the old-timers on their toes. On paper, the 'Gators seemed to lack but one thing at the beginning of the year and that was a pair of ends; but their season has been mediocre at best.

Another Good Center

The line boasts plenty of seasoned performers with Ferrazzi standing out as the best. The Southern Conference has been full of first class centers this year, but there have not been many to outplay the giant Ferrazzi. He it was who rallied a

FROSH SET FOR FIRST NET MEET

Tar Babies Meet Washington High School Saturday Morning Instead of Friday.

The Tar Baby net team will play its first and only fall match Saturday morning with Washington high school. This match, originally scheduled for Friday afternoon, was postponed because of a conflict with the Floride game.

The team will be picked from the men who made the best showing in the fall net tourney for freshmen and non-lettermen. Bernard Friedman, the tourney winner, will likely play number one with Hunter Lott as number two. The other places will probably be filled by Johnson, Lynch, and Sabol, who also showed promise in the tourney.

"Let's say you're painting clouds. You've got your primary colors here on the palette. But you haven't the clouds until you blend certain colors into the special tone you want.

"This is very much what happens in making a good cigarette. And I gather that what Chesterfield means by Cross-Blending is what an artist does with colors. Their Domestic and Turkish tobaccos—many varieties of each—are the primary colors.

They blend and cross-blend these tobaccos until they get the special tone they want—in other words, the Chesterfield flavor.

"And just as each color you use acts on the others to change and enrich them, so each Chesterfield tobacco partakes of the fine qualities of every other.

ENTERTAINMENT SERIES AT DUKE FEATURE STARS

Doris Kenyon Will Be First to Be Presented in Concert Programs.

Doris Kenyon, noted film star, will be the first attraction in a series of five Duke University concerts, according to J. Foster Barnes, manager of the series. Her program will be given November 28 and will be a costume recital featuring the dress and songs of many nationalities. Miss Kenyon appeared at Duke last year and was enthusiastically received by all those present.

December 16 Clare Clairbert and Andre D'Akor, celebrated singers will be heard as part of the series. They are from the Royal Theatre de la Monnaie Brussels, Belgium, and have sung together for several years in Europe, but this will be their first appearance in this country together.

Ballet to Appear

Gluck-Sandor and Felicia Sor-el will appear with their ballet in Page Auditorium January 6. Gluck-Sandor is known as the creator of many of the artistic Earl Carroll's vanities dances.

Ethel Leginska's National Woman's symphony orchestra comprising 100 feminine musicians will be the largest group coming to Duke as part of the entertainment series. Although the fact that the orchestra is composed entirely of women is a novelty, the performance of the orchestra is considered excellent.

The final program of the series will be given by Walter Gieseeking, often acclaimed as the world's most famous young pianist. His concert will be given February 13, and will undoubtedly be an outstanding feature of the entire series.

Old West Loses

Steele downed Old West in a slow contest, 7-0. Lynch scored a touchdown in the second half after the teams had battled to a 0-0 tie in the first part of the game.

Kappa Alpha Triumphs

Kappa Alpha crushed Kappa Sigma, 32-0, in the most one-sided contest of the day. Broadhurst, Schriver, and Linder stood out for the winners, while Rainey and Sardin performed well for the Kappa Sigs.

Signa Nu and Old East won forfeits from Delta Tau Delta and the Independents, respectively.

DR. H. D. MEYER INVITED TO SPEAK IN GREENSBORO

Dr. Harold D. Meyer of the department of sociology has been invited to address the Social Standards Conference in Greensboro, Friday, November 4. This the second annual conference of this kind at the senior high school in Greensboro. Its purpose is to give the boys and girls of the high school an opportunity to discuss for an entire day with educational leaders their relationships to life and all its demands.

The theme of the conference is "Life's Demands," and Dr. Meyer's speech will be on the subject, "Certain Concepts of Life's Demands."

"Uncle Billy" has been able to pay his assessment until this year. He sold one house in order to realize his share, but he has nothing else he can dispose of in order to meet further payments. He now works as caretaker of Graham Memorial.

All his working years have been spent in the service of the University; he was janitor of Old East and Old West for fifty-four consecutive years, thirty-five of which he worked unaided at the job. Later he worked for some of the fraternities. He was some time with Phi Delta Theta and also with Beta Theta Pi. He remains a great favorite with these fraternities, and it was customary for him to be asked to make the "welcoming address," as he calls it, to the pledges after each rushing season. A car was always sent for "Uncle Billy" to bring him to make a brief talk about "what-ever he feels like he wants to tell 'em."

little about it; because to some it seems to be a series of creeds and dogmas; and because they have never seen the relation between ethics and religion," affirmed Dr. Weatherford.

Need of Religion

"Why does the student need religion," asked the speaker. "It is on account of the fact that it gives him a sense of an orderly, intelligent, and meaningful universe—it saves him from pessimism; it sets moral standards for him; it furnishes him with the spiritual dynamic which enables him to overcome temptation; and it enables every man to adjust himself and get himself in hand."

Dr. Weatherford's entire speech was built around three questions recently sent out by Will Durant to prominent people all over the nation. They were: (1) What does life mean to you? (2) What keeps you going? (3) What does religion mean to you? The speaker answered all of these questions in a very clear cut and decisive manner, leaving no doubt in the minds of his audience as to the great potentiality behind them.

FLORIDA 'GATORS SLOW STARTING

but the rest were considered starting backs most of the season. Fountain ranks along with Rogero as the leading offensive back, but he is larger and more powerful, hence of more value to the Floridians on smashes inside tackles. Yet he has speed to burn as his two brilliant runs against State last year testify.

McAnley in Impressive Start

Florida's veterans have been getting the call so far, but they have had to go at top speed to keep youngsters like McAnley, Henderson, Davis, Moye, and Stoltz from shoving them into the background. McAnley gained prominence in his first varsity game by scampering 105 yards for a touchdown against Sewanee. Henderson has been hailed as another Crabtree and anybody who remembers Florida's great fullback of three years ago knows what that means. Stoltz weighs around 200 and has speed, and Davis and Moye were good enough to get the starting call against Georgia last Saturday.

Ferrazzi is flanked by McCampbell and Bernard in the line. Bernard is a veteran but this is the first year of competition for McCampbell. The tackles present the same situation with Shearer, a newcomer, pairing with the veteran Jenkins. The ends, admittedly weak since the first of the season, show Goodyear, a letterman, and McLean.

'Gators Start Late

Florida did not open its season until October 8 when Sewanee was taken on. The 'Gators stormed through to a 19-0 victory and everything seemed rosy. The Citadel offered more opposition than expected the following week, and the 'Gators were forced to show more than usual to win 27-7. Then came the first real disappointment of the season with N. C. State rumbling home with a 17-6 victory. Florida was sluggish that day and wasted several fine scoring chances. The Orange and Blue gained at will in mid field and rolled up first down after another only to see State crash through with a pair of touchdowns and a field goal by Bob McQuage to win.

Georgia Crushes Comeback

Last Saturday the 'Gators had high hopes of regaining their winning stride at the expense of Georgia; but the Bulldogs, who accumulating governmental experience and transmit it to successive generations of governmental officers, thus enabling them to start in where their predecessors left off rather than where they began, to eliminate the lost time which now accompanies a rotation of officers, and to create an inspiration in the minds of public servants to leave their offices a little better than they found them, that the Institute of Government has as its aim.

Emphasizing the need for properly trained public servants, Professor Coates said: "The letter of the law is in the book. The symbol of the law is the officer. But the life of the law is in the officer. In him the citizen and his government meet... popular government hangs upon the character of this acquaintance."

It was made plain that lack of governmental knowledge, which in its turn is due to the fact that a systematic study of governmental institutions and processes in the cities, counties and state has not been made here-to-fore, has been a handicap to both teachers and students of government in North Carolina's high schools, colleges and professional schools.

He pointed out that the expense of the program is more than justified by the many thousands of dollars which need not be wasted by well-intentioned but ignorant office-holders, who, by means of a school of governmental education, could profit from the rich experience of others.

New Mystery Film Playing At Carolina

Based on the novel by the British author, J. B. Priestly, "The Old Dark House," showing today at the Carolina theatre, tells a story of travelers who are caught in a howling storm and forced to seek shelter for the night in an ancient bleak house where a family of inherent insanity live ruled by a servant of brutal character.

As the night progresses the gigantic brute, resenting the intrusion, becomes dangerously drunk and threatens the entire household. Attempts to subdue him only enrage him. After a series of terrific battles he hastens to loose upon the group a terror which even the occupants of the house fear. From then on terror reigns and the horrified guests are placed in desperate situations.

Karloff has the role of the sinister servant. Lilian Bond and Melvyn Douglas provide the love interest, while other characters are played by Charles Laughton, Ernest Thesiger, Eva Moore, Raymond Massey, Gloria Stuart, Brema Wills, and John Dudgeon.

Tea to Be Given

Another of the series of weekly teas given by the Woman's Association will take place this afternoon in the reception rooms of Spencer hall from 4:30 to 6:00 o'clock.

FIRE DEMOLISHES SEDALIA SINGERS' DORMITORY HOME

Palmer Memorial Institute Sends
Plea to Local Y. M. C. A.
For Clothing.

Tragedy stalked in the wake of the Sedalia Singers after their appearance in a concert here at Chapel Hill last Sunday.

The Palmer Memorial Institute, a colored institution near Greensboro from which the singers came, had its boys' dormitory completely demolished following a disastrous fire Monday, the origin of which was unknown.

All of the furnishings were completely destroyed, and forty young men and four teachers lost all of their belongings.

Appeal to Local "Y"

Dr. Charlotte Hawkins Brown, president of the institution, has appealed to the University of North Carolina Young Men's Christian Association for aid.

She has requested Harry F. Comer, general secretary of the Carolina "Y," to speak to the University Y. M. C. A.'s friends and members and to ask if they would like to help the colored boys by donating discarded wearing apparel. The following list of immediate needs was given: socks, underwear, shirts, shoes, pants, vests, overcoats, and hats.

The three Y. M. C. A. cabinets are cooperating with the general secretary of the "Y," and they are making an urgent request to both students and townspeople to contribute any spare belongings to the University's friends at Sedalia as soon as possible.

Any donations will be received at the campus "Y," or a boy will be sent for them upon request. All contributions are voluntary.

CAROLINA MEETS STATE IN DEBATE

Representatives of Two Institutions to Discuss Candidates Of Leading Parties.

Debaters of the University will meet State college in forum debate on the subject "Which party should be supported in the election?" tonight at 7:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

The speakers for the University are Bill Eddleman, speaking for Roosevelt; McBride Fleming-Jones, speaking for Hoover; and John Jenkins, representing Thomas.

Last year State tied here, in the dual debate, and won in Raleigh. The subject was "Resolved: That the Swope Plan Should be Adopted."

Each speaker will have ten minutes and the first speaker will have a four minute rebuttal. The order of the speeches is, Socialist speaker for State; Democratic speaker for the University; Republican speaker for State; Socialist speaker for the University; Democratic speaker for State; Republican speaker for the University, and a four minute rebuttal by the first speaker.

German Club to Meet

The German club will meet this afternoon at 1:30 in Gerrard hall to elect dance leaders for the annual fall German club dances November 18 and 19 in the Tin Can.

'White And Blue' Published As Rival Paper To 'Tar Heel' In 1894

Leonard C. Van Noppen Opposed Policy of Then Existent Paper, Claiming It to Be Tool of Athletic Association; Bitterly Opposed Fraternities in Editorials.

THE DAILY TAR HEEL has not always held a monopoly on college newspaper interest at Carolina. March 8, 1894, when the paper was about a year old, a formidable competitor appeared upon the campus and became the TAR HEEL's first and last opposition. Though it survived only a year before it was absorbed by the wealthier TAR HEEL, the new paper attracted state-wide attention with the burning editorials of the first editor, Leonard C. Van Noppen. Van Noppen gathered around him a creditable staff, including Thomas J. Wilson, registrar of the University, who was then a student here.

The rival publication was called the White and Blue, after the school colors. The motto adopted was "America means freedom, and freedom means equality of opportunity." The first editorial charged that the TAR HEEL was published almost exclusively in the interest of athletics and solely by fraternity men in the Athletic Association.

For this reason a new weekly was founded while another already existed. "This paper," wrote the editor, "is to supply a long felt want in touching every phase of college life."

After charging that the TAR HEEL was "virtually controlled by fraternity men" the editor asked "Why should not the non-fraternity men, the majority of the students, have a publication of their own?"

Aimed to Revive Di and Phi

A stated object of the new paper was to revive the Dialectic and Philanthropic societies which had been "the toast of the south." The first several papers lent a good portion of their space to a discussion of the tragic decline of these once powerful organizations. Van Noppen laid the entire blame of their dis-

FORREST ANXIOUS TO GET STUDENT OPINION ON PLAY

English Actor Expresses Eagerness
To See Playmakers Produce
"Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Belford Forrest, English actor, dramatist and director is to read his latest play How It All Began at the Playmakers theatre Sunday night at 8:30 o'clock. In a letter to Harry Davis he says about his play:

"I very much need to know the reaction of an intelligent and unprejudiced audience to my play—I've huge faith in its worth and possibilities, but I'm equally certain that it still needs much work and that the theme is big enough to justify any time and effort expended on it." Forrest's play deals with Burbage's founding of the first Elizabethan playhouse.

Forrest is thrilled over the prospect of seeing the Saturday night performance of Uncle Tom's Cabin. He says: "I'm all a-piddle at the thought of seeing Uncle Tom's Cabin. I've wanted for years to fill that gap in my knowledge and understanding (if any) of the American theatre. I doubt if there's any play, ancient or modern, I'd rather see. It's just too good to be true that your production of the classic coincides with the only convenient date for the reading of my opus . . . Bless you."

Forrest is director of the Town theatre in Columbia, South Carolina.

NUMBER OF BOOKS READ BY STUDENTS INCREASES

A total of 310,461 volumes were loaned to students by the University library during the past year, according to statistics compiled by R. B. Downs, acting librarian. The average number of books read by each student in the University for the last three quarters is slightly over seventy-eight.

The average number read by each student has been rapidly increasing during the past several years. The circulation statistics in 1905 show an average of only eleven books. In 1925 this average had increased to fifty-nine. The rise has been even more rapid since the opening of the new building.

PHI ASSEMBLY IS AGAINST PLACING TAX ON CHURCHES

Freshmen of Assembly to Discuss Resolution Relating to Problems of Their Class.

The regular meeting of the Phi Assembly Tuesday night was featured by a very heated discussion on the bill favoring taxation of church property. Led by J. D. Winslow and J. P. Temple, several representatives presented arguments in favor of taxing the real property of churches, but the majority of the debate seemed to favor exemption, as is the policy of the state now. The vote on the resolution was close, but it was defeated.

The other bill brought up for discussion at the session was, "Resolved: That the Phi Assembly go on record as favoring the amendments to the state constitution, which are to be voted on in the coming general election." This measure was passed after a short discussion.

At the next meeting of the assembly, there will be a bill relating to some problem peculiar to the freshman class at the University. The discussion on this resolution will be limited to freshmen only.

LAW STUDENTS GET TWO FAMOUS MEN'S PICTURES

The second year classroom of the law building has two new pictures of lawyers who became great statesmen: John C. Calhoun and Charles Manly. Charles Manly graduated from the University in 1814 and was an attorney in Chatham county for thirty years following his graduation. He was a trustee of the University from 1826 to 1868. In 1849 he was elected governor of North Carolina and served until 1851.

John C. Calhoun graduated from Litchfield law school in 1806. He was admitted to the bar of South Carolina in 1807. In 1817 he was made Secretary of War and was elected Vice-President of the United States in 1824. After serving as Vice-President he was elected United States senator from South Carolina. To complete his career as a statesman he was appointed Secretary of State in 1844.

DI SENATE FAVORS CLASSIFICATION OF TAXES IN STATE

Amendment Passed at Meeting Exempts Four-Year Members From Paying Dues.

At its meeting Tuesday night in New West, the Dialectic Senate passed the bill, "Resolved: That the Di Senate go on record as favoring the classification of taxation in North Carolina. Senators Crowell, Minor, Lyons, and Blount debated the bill.

Senator Lyons gave a report of the debate committee. He stated that the committee from the Di had met with a similar group from the Phi Assembly and arranged for the annual debate between the two organizations. The subject for this year's Mary D. Wright debate will be, "Resolved: That the nations of the world disarm except for police purposes." The Di will uphold the affirmative. Following the new trend of the Di inaugurated last year in allowing freshmen to debate, all members of the senate will be eligible for participation in the contest, which will be held in Gerrard hall, December 7.

Amendment Passed

The amendment proposed at the last meeting by Senator Lyons to the effect that the present article regarding absolute payment of all dues before the sixth meeting of the year be amended so as not to include senators of four years' standing was discussed. After little debate, the amendment was passed unanimously. A report by the treasurer revealed that of the fifteen new members, only three had not paid all dues, and of the seven old members, six had paid in full and the other in part.

The initiation, which was scheduled for this meeting, was put off until next week due to the various other activities of the evening that diminished the attendance of the Di and the fact that many members wished to attend the Boethius lecture.

Axel Boethius Says Europe Leads America In Classical Appreciation

Prominent Swedish Archaeologist Believes Only Way to Understand Ancient Writers Is to Understand Period in Which They Lived, and Excavating Makes This Possible.

Interest and appreciation in the culture and wisdom of the classical writers is much more marked in English and continental intellectual circles than in America, according to Axel Boethius, noted Swedish archaeologist and lecturer. "The modern English and European school," he told a DAILY TAR HEEL reporter Tuesday afternoon, "is more thorough in its instruction and wider in its appeal in the classical field."

"Although Europe had its period of decline in the interest for the classics, it has in recent years been revived with new vigor," he said, speaking quietly and with a distinctive accent, which, were it not for the naturalness of his personality and expression, would have seemed affected. He is a man of short stature, with a slightly rotund and extremely pleasant face.

Archaeology Real Romance

He was enthusiastic in his desire to please, yet loath to speak of his own personal experiences as excavator. Archaeological research is, he believes, the only true romantic adventure left.

Hobgood Will Speak In Assembly Today

Hamilton Hobgood, representing the Young Democrats, will deliver the second of a series of political speeches about the three major political parties before the freshman assembly this morning at 10:30 o'clock. Hobgood was to have spoken Tuesday morning, but was unable to do so because of a slight illness.

Ben Proctor is scheduled to speak tomorrow morning in behalf of the campus Socialists.

These political speeches are being delivered as a result of a resolution passed by both the Di Senate and the Phi Assembly to give the local parties a chance to present their respective cases before the University.

Kappa Sigma Dance Scheduled Saturday

The Kappa Sigma fraternity will give a house dance Saturday night from 6:00 until 8:30 o'clock. The affair will be formal. Jack Wardlaw and his orchestra will furnish the music.

A number of young ladies will attend, among whom are: Askins Ivey of Concord, Marion Swaltury of Sweet Briar, Nancy O'Hanlon of Winston-Salem, Rebecca Young of Sweet Briar, Runt Rhodes of Lynchburg, Va., Jane Carlton of Greensboro, Lucile Meacham of Lexington, Dorothy Dosh of Harrisburg, Pa., Dorothy Sellers of Burlington, Mary Alice Coyle of Hickory, Nancy Hardison of Phoenix, Ariz., Helene Willingham of Chapel Hill, Charlotte Winborne of Chapel Hill, Grace Bowes of Chapel Hill, Sara Walser of Chapel Hill, and Helen Hall of Lexington.

"Y" MEMBERSHIP CARDS MAY BE OBTAINED NOW

All students who pledged as much as two dollars to the local Y. M. C. A. at the beginning of the year may now receive their membership cards by calling at the "Y" office as soon as possible.

BAPTIST STUDENT UNION TO CONVENE HERE TOMORROW

State-Wide Convention for This Year Will Meet at Local Church Over Week-End.

The convention of the Baptist student union of North Carolina will convene at the Chapel Hill Baptist church beginning Friday and continuing through Sunday afternoon. This convention meets annually at one of the leading colleges of the state. Last year the convention assembled in Durham, with an attendance composed of representatives from the majority of the colleges and universities in the state.

The Baptist students at Carolina will be expected to have the largest delegation present. Registration will begin at the Baptist church Friday afternoon, when all visiting delegates will be required to pay a registration of $1.00. At this time they will be assigned to rooms offered by the University, faculty and townspeople. All out-of-town delegates will take their meals at Swain hall. The local students attending will be exempt from the registration fee. Between three and four hundred students are expected to attend.

Famous Speakers Will Attend

The program committee has secured many good speakers who will be heard during the conference. Such out-of-state speakers as Dr. Ellis Fuller of Atlanta, Georgia, and Dr. Frank H. Leavell of Nashville, Tennessee, will be on the program. Some of the other speakers of importance are: Dr. Frank Graham of Chapel Hill, Rev. Forest C. Freezer and M. A. Huggins of Raleigh, Rev. Norfleet Gardner of Dunn, Miss Inabelle Coleman

GRAHAM STATES AIM OF CHEERIOS

Cheerios Hope to Form Center
Of Effective Community
Cheering and Singing.

At the first meeting of the Carolina Cheerios in Gerrard hall Tuesday night, President Frank P. Graham expressed his hope that through the work of the Cheerio group the entire student body would be able to join in community singing at the time of the Carolina-Duke game. He set this as the immediate goal of the organization. Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, and Alex M. Worth of Durham, alumnus of the University, presented tentative plans and ultimate goals of the Cheerios.

President Graham described to the group the beauty and effectiveness of mass singing, and stated his belief that the University of North Carolina can inaugurate mass singing and cheering here, with the Cheerios as a nucleus. The idea might be developed, he said, until the University would have a body of ten thousand persons singing in unison at football games.

Goal of Organization

The ultimate goal of the organization, as stated by Haywood Weeks and Worth, is to have several hundred Cheerios in distinctive uniforms and in a special section of the stadium, and to have singing and cheering in which the entire body of spectators will take part.

Music in The Air

They still boo Rudy Vallee when he appears on the screen in Chapel Hill, but when he sings, "Follow the bouncing ball," they all join in with him. When the bouncing ball movie cartoons were first shown here about four years ago, everybody liked them, but nobody sang. Nowadays the boys bass out right heartily and seem to enjoy it.

The popularity of group singing as a pastime was seen last Saturday at the football game. Student-President Weeks was given a goodly round of applause for his suggestion that the idea be adapted to mass meetings and stadium crowds.

So far, President Weeks and his associates have this plan: A nucleus-group of 300 boys, organized like Carolina's renowned Cheerios, is to be formed. This group will lead the singing and cheering at football games, after proper coaching by the cheerleaders. Rehearsals, with any other students who care to attend, will be held in Memorial hall. There will not be a bouncing ball, but the words of the songs will be projected on a screen. Organist Patterson will furnish the musical accompaniment.

Not only the University's yells and songs (of which they are more to come), but also other college and popular songs will be sung by this group. One has only to recall the fame of the Cheerios under Kay Kyser and to picture the colorful spectacle of an Army-Navy game to realize the enjoyment and value to be had from organized singing and cheering.

"So we'll gather 'round the well, Cheer the Tar Heel team like hell, For the glory of N. C. U."

Here's Mud in Your Face

Chapel Hill is beautiful to say the least. The celestial atmosphere of this sanctified spot conveys a sole-inspiring enthusiasm to poetic admirers. The added colonial tinge of past ages is portrayed and manifested in gravel pathways, quaint in their traditional existence. However, many a time comment from those who have become addicted to their usage, daily question the practicability of their sustenance.

In cement it is essential, but in shoes it is—(quite out of place). Better a slip on the pavement than a slip with the tongue. Is gravel slippery to walk on? Nature in the raw is seldom mild. Economically speaking, gravel is cheap because of the facility of access to it. Chapel Hill is situated upon a granite rise with an abundance of sand. However, beauty is forced out of the colonial picture when public convenience demands a change. Shoes constantly scuffed, winds creating mild sand storms, houses beset with sandy carpets and muddy when rain soaks the soil. In all probability this is not a rainy region, but it rains hard and long when precipitation does occur. This causes small streams to erode ruts in the walks for people to stumble, twist ankles, and pitch headlong into the abrasive gravel. At night in this sea of slush and slop only the wary survive without unpleasant contact with these mud flows, and even those fortunate reveal soiled trouser cuffs, stockings, and shoes. How glorified is this existence for the merchants. It means business in their trade, money in their pockets, bread on their tables, but mud in your face—F.N.

Life and Letters

These columnists, indeed! I consider it a more dubious compliment to be classed with "these columnists" than to be referred to as one of "those women." Incidentally, I'm wondering why members of the party of the opposition do not make much of Mr. Hoover's mispronunciation of that word "women." But at that it would hardly be of equal importance with Al Smith's "radio." So why bother. To return to columnists. They are an egocentric lot, else they wouldn't be writing columns. They prate of this and that, principally themselves. They fill columns with airy nothing. The psychological explanation, of course, is an inferiority complex. The proper treatment of one who would hold an Autopsy over the disinterred columns of less fortunate individuals for the purpose of determining the number of words from a dead language to be found therein would be simply to ignore both him and his efforts. But it has been many a long year since my risibilities have been so aroused by a TAR HEEL columnist. In fact, the only rise of which I am now capable is abject derision.

INQUEST for Mr. Berryman:

X marks the spot where the wandering mind was found.

I am in a constant state of wonderment as to the wisdom of the subject.

I am in a constant state of wonderment as to the wisdom of inflicting chapel upon even freshmen who come here fresh (very fresh) from the farm. A consensus of opinion of the majority of chapel-goers seems to be that chapel programs are composed of just so much piffle and as such should be condensed into one piffle program each week. Just think how much time chapel detracts from the all too few available hours for study. Better for those who now attend chapel under compulsion were they allowed to go out and make mud pies for themselves. Something ought to be done about it. There ought to be a petition. O, Mr. Tatum!

Puzzling me very much is the mental level (I. Q.) of the inhabitants of the quadrangle I reside in. To me or you or any other rational persons it would seem that by the time men become of college age they would know how to conduct themselves as gentlemen. Such is not the case. Instead, they think it funny to give public exhibitions of their particular brand of humor, which is neither yours nor mine. They are the lowest of the low. What is a sense of humor? Ask the man who owns one. Any man on the street has it. A sense of humor is a sense of proportion, or rather, disproportion. If the "gentlemen" who disturb the deadly quiet of a study hour by their unnecessary remarks which no one else considers funny can't be subdued, something ought to be done about it. There ought to be a petition. O, Mr. Tatum!

Along with the rest of the general illiterate electorate, we've been following the current political rodeo from the innocuous mouthings of the near-by-Throtheadbottomed Mr. Smith to the munificent platitudes of the present incumbent. Not quite being twenty-one, on November 8 we can throw over the whole business and do a George Jean Nathan. But despite our electoral reticence, we have been looking the situation over with open eyes.

We've noticed particularly that the younger generation has put its oar into the troubled sea with delicately phrased chalk exhortations on Chapel Hill sidewalks and board fences. The best of these we saw Tuesday be-

Analysis Of 'Daily Princetonian's' Presidential Poll

(By Vergil J. Lee, Tar Heel Editorial Board)

The recently completed presidential poll conducted by the Daily Princetonian has created quite a stir. This is especially true among those persons who believed that Governor Roosevelt would keep up his good work as exemplified by the Literary Digest's straw vote. The efforts of the Democrats to scoff at and belittle the figures showing Hoover leading the New York executive by a vote of 28,180 to 17,712 will remain impotent until cold figures are brought to light which challenge the validity of the tabulation.

Attacking the problem from the non-partisan standpoint, we come upon some interesting disclosures. At the outset, we might say that the survey included 46 colleges and universities in all parts of the country; twelve in New England; seven in the East proper (N. Y., N. J., Penn., Del., Md., W. Va.); nine in the south (includes the so-called solid South, with addition of Kentucky and the exception of Texas); nine in the mid-west (O., Ill., Ind., Iowa, Mich., Wis., Minn., N. D., S. D., Neb., Kas., Mo.); three in the south-west (Texas, Okla., Ariz., N. M.); two in the west (Mont., Wyo., Col., Utah, Id., Nev.); and three on the Pacific coast (Wash., Ore., Cal.).

A glance at the accompanying table will immediately show the greatly over-balanced character of the poll. New England, for example, (which is solely and exclusively Republican in the Literary Digest's survey) exhibits a percentage of fifty seven in the number of students canvassed relative to the total number of students in the New England section. Contrast this with the other sections of the country in which Roosevelt sentiment is strongest; East, 23 per cent; South, 23 per cent; Mid-west, 33 per cent; South-west, 31 per cent; West, 18 per cent; Pacific Coast, 49 per cent.

Furthermore, when we consider the various manners in which the student bodies were polled,—some voting en masse; others voting individually and at will—we can state rather conclusively that, although the Daily Princetonian meant well and deserves great credit for its efforts, the way in which the survey was conducted lead to a greatly distorted and partially fallacious picture of American college students' political preferences.

Tar Heel Cross-Country Team Will Meet Gators Here Friday

Carolina Team, Holder of Southern Championship, Will Open Its 1932-33 Schedule.

FLORIDA TEAM IS STRONG

Harriers of Florida University Conquered Georgia in Season's First Contest.

Carolina's cross-country team, southern champions last year, will engage in their first meet tomorrow afternoon against the harriers from Florida.

This will be the first meet for Carolina while Florida has already engaged in a meet with Georgia which it won. In that meet Florida finished, one, two, three, five, and six. C. C. Calmes won the race and was followed by R. Turrilland and J. Burnett, his teammates. Calmes ran the course in 16 minutes and 28 seconds. This year's team is considered to be the best Florida has turned out in years.

Carolina Led by Hubbard

Although the Carolina team is as yet untried, the race is expected to be very close. The main strength of the Tar Heels lies in the prowess of Captain Bob Hubbard, Louis Sullivan, Clarence Jensen, Walter Groover, Lew Cordle, and Henry Sullivan. Jensen was the individual champion of the Southern Conference last year and is expected to help bring a victory to Carolina. Captain Hubbard was fifth in the championship meet last year. Louis Sullivan, who ran fifth man on the team last year, and finished fourteenth in the championship race, is expected to show improved form and may be rated number one man on the team.

Carolina to Have Seven Runners

There will be seven official starters in the race for Carolina. The first six previously mentioned will most probably start along with one other man from the men out for the team. The others will run unofficially. The men from whom another starter will be picked are: Jerry Goldman, Tom Curlee, Jim Farr, Strat Donnell, Harvey Gwynn, Don Kimrey, Ben Rodin, Morton Olman, N. I. Williams, and Tom Henson, Ed Waldrop, Joe Pratt, and Fabius Haywood cannot run because of injuries.

The course is to be 3.3 miles long and will start in Kenari stadium and finish there between halves of the football game.

Cross-Country Coach

Dale Ranson, former Tar Heel cross-country star, begins his eighth year as coach of the harriers. Coach Ranson has tutored Carolina runners to seven state championships and five Southern Conference titles. His harriers meet their first test this season in a meet with Florida tomorrow.

I Only Heard

By Morrie Long

Splashing around dangerously in southern football waters but yet to clutch a major victory, the Florida 'Gators hope to turn their gridiron famine into a feast this Friday when they clash with "Chuck" Collins' rejuvenated Tar Heels. With Carolina back in winning form, the "Bachman-coached" juggernaut will have a tough time capturing a triumph.

The second fastest sprinter in the world, Ralph Metcalfe, is now doing the water toting act for Marquette's grid squad this season. The runner-up to Tolan in the Olympic dashes, hopes to increase his wind by his water-boy tactics. Just how many world renowned athletes would be seen in the water carrying role—not many.

To the roster of star tennis players at Carolina add the name of Bernard Friedman, freshman, winner of the fall intramural tennis tournament. Hailing from Philadelphia, Friedman has been capturing Middle Atlantic championships with regularity these last three years. He was finalist in both the National Boys Indoor and National Boys Junior Indoor meets last year, and since 1930 has been the Pennsylvania state champ. Last year he licked Tilden in a Middle Atlantic match.

Buster Crappe, Olympic winner of the 400 meter free style, recently signed up to play in a jungle picture a la Weismueller for a 200 a week salary—and Jerry Dalrymple former all-American from Tulane collected a cool 500 for writing a football article for a magazine.

BANQUET GIVEN TO CAKE RACERS

"Dean" Paulsen Entertains Winners, And Schnell Presents Medals At Annual Supper.

Presentation of medals and a banquet at the home of "Dean" G. H. Paulsen of the laundry department was on tap Tuesday night for the first ten men who crossed the finish line in last Friday's Cake Race.

Mrs. Paulsen prepared the meal, and the medals were presented to the winners by Herman Schnell of the intramural department. Henry Sullivan, the winner, who ran for Phi Delta Theta, won first place gold medal. Those receiving silver medals, from second through fifth places, are given with their organization and the order in which they finished: W. W. Carraway, Lewis Dorm; Barnaby Keeney, Sigma Chi; Bennett Nappier, Best House; and William Traverton, Best House. Those awarded bronze medals, from sixth through tenth places, follow in finishing order: William Thomas Bost, Sigma Nu; William Yandell, New Dorms; D. B. Fox, Old East; G. Stratford Donnell, Best House; and H. L. Umstead, Mangum.

Dale Ranson, head mentor of cross-country and in charge of the training end of the cross-country run, gave a short talk commending the boys for their perseverance and reminding them of the future ahead of those who continued with their running.

The "Dean," who gives this supper annually in collaboration with Mrs. Paulsen, also complimented the boys on their good work. A rising vote of thanks was accorded Mrs. Paulsen for her generosity and kindness in entertaining the lads.

Nine Sophs Play Guard and Tackle for the Florida 'Gators

THE UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA HAS FOUND the 1932 football season to be a parade of sophomores. In the line, particularly for the guard and tackle positions, newcomers to the varsity dominate. Look at this array: No. 1, Tommy Lane, Tampa; No. 2, Art Shouse, High Springs; No. 3, Welcome Shearer, Jacksonville; No. 4, "Beefy" Stark, Jacksonville; No. 5, Carl Schuman, Jacksonville; No. 6, Hal Starbuck, Tampa; No. 7, "Pug" Bryan, Gainesville; No. 8, Emmett Etter, Jacksonville; No. 9, George McCampbell, West Palm Beach.

TAR HEELS WORK LONG AND HARD ON NEW OFFENSE

Coach Collins Drives Squad Until Nightfall Perfecting Attack and Blocking.

Coach Collins worked long and hard on Carolina's offense yesterday afternoon, sending three varsities through line scrimmage against the frosh, and keeping the men out until after nightfall in an effort to develop better blocking and generate more power for Florida tomorrow.

Backs Look Good

Norman McCaskill was running hardest and best of the backs. Phipps, Daniel, and others were also looking good. The line blocking was not sufficiently clean-cut and consistent to please Coach Collins, but the varsities fooled the frosh regularly with their pass plays.

Earle Beale and Lee Manley got tries at end with the first string club and Harris Ogburn at guard with the second. George Barclay, star guard, remained the only man on the injured list, but Coach Collins wants every ounce of defensive strength possible for Florida's star backs.

The first string showed Walker and Brandt, ends; Hodges and Smith, tackles; Philpott and Kahn, guards; Underwood, center; Burnett, quarter; Phipps and Daniel, halfbacks; and Chandler, who called signals from fullback. The second backfield showed Woollen, quarter; McCaskill and Thompson, halves; and Lassiter, full.

NETMEN PRACTICE FOR FALL MATCH

Wilmer Hines Rated as Number One As Work for Meet With Virginia Begins.

Practice for the tennis match with Virginia, November 23, started today. This tourney is a regular affair between the two institutions while Coach Kenfield's men have been victorious almost without exception.

As practice starts, Wilmer Hines is rated number one due to the absence of Captain Bryan Grant. The number two place is held by Wright, number three by Morgan, and number four by Dillard. The other places will be fought over by members of last year's reserves, Harris, Levitan, Willis, and Minor.

Intramural Schedule

3:30 p. m.—(1) Phi Gamma Delta vs. Phi Alpha; (2) Sigma Alpha Epsilon vs. Lambda Chi Alpha; (3) Phi Kappa Sigma vs. Sigma Phi Epsilon.

4:30 p. m.—(1) Beta Theta Pi vs. Tau Epsilon Phi; (2) Theta Kappa Nu vs. Phi Sigma Kappa; (3) Sigma Phi Sigma vs. Chi Phi.

GOLDSBORO WILL MEET DURHAM IN IMPORTANT TILT

Two Teams Clash at Goldsboro Today in Decisive Class "A" Game.

Durham high school will risk its leadership in the class "A" football race in eastern Carolina this afternoon when the Goldsboro strong eleven invades the home field.

The Bull City gridders are expected to take their third straight championship game, although Goldsboro boasts a fast outfit. Durham has not been scored on by opposition this year. In the other eastern class "A" game, Rocky Mount will engage with Wilmington on the latter's ground Saturday. Neither team is a potential title threat.

In the western division of the same class, Charlotte's powerful eleven will meet High Point and are favorites to win. Salisbury, by virtue of its two straight triumphs, is favored to beat Gastonia tomorrow, and Winston-Salem and Greensboro will mix it up at Greensboro. Neither team is among the leaders and tomorrow's game will hardly affect the standing.

Graduates Must Register

Graduate students are reminded that by November 7 they should register in the graduate office for the reading knowledge examinations in French, German, and Spanish.

LEWIS DORM WINS OVER BEST HOUSE

Zeta Psi, Alpha Tau Omega, and Lewis Continue Undefeated Records With Wins.

Zeta Psi, Alpha Tau Omega, and Lewis continued their undefeated records in yesterday's intramural tag football program.

A.T.O.'s victory over Zeta Beta Tau was less one-sided than the score, 33-0, would indicate. The Z. B. T. eleven, although never having a chance to score, put up a stubborn resistance which was, however, useless before the brilliant open field running of Alan Smith.

Best House Bows

In the closest layout, Lewis kept its unique record of being undefeated without having scored a touchdown. After Best House had held a 2-1 lead in first downs at the half, Lewis put on a determined effort which brought them victory as the game ended. Drawing up to a 2-2 tie near the end of the game, Aitken reached out to snare a pass on the last for a first down and his team's fifth win.

Zeta Psi Scores

Zeta Psi gained its fifth victory at the expense of Theta Chi, 21-0. Trailing 21-0 at the intermission, Theta Chi rallied and netted several first downs and gave them a 7-3 margin in this department, holding the winner's scoreless throughout the last half. Henry Hayward and Sam Hanff scored the touchdowns for Zeta Psi.

Ruffin Loses

After holding a 3-1 advantage in first downs at half time, Ruffin went to pieces in the second half and lost to Everett, 12-0. The winners held a 6-4 lead in first downs at the last whistle. Leibowitz, Robins, and Robinson stood out for the winners.

Dekes Triumph

D. K. E. gained its fourth victory in five starts defeating Delta Psi, 12-0.

The best play of the game occurred near the end when Jim Peters intercepted a lateral pass in mid-air and galloped twenty yards for a score.

Question Marks Forfeit

Aycock scored over the Question Marks when the latter team failed to appear for the game.

Four Receive Passes

The following men have been awarded guest tickets to the Carolina theatre for good work during the past week: Lawrence Thompson, Phillip Hammer, James B. Craighill, and Bill Anderson. These tickets are given through the courtesy of E. Carlington Smith, manager of the local theatre, and may be obtained this afternoon at the office at 1:30.

Clarence Jensen, who will run against the strong Florida cross-country team tomorrow, won the individual title last year in the conference meet here and should break the tape tomorrow.

NOVEL FOOTBALL SONG INTRODUCED

New Song Sponsored by Alex Worth to Be Sung to Tune of "Over There."

Alex Worth of Durham will introduce a new football song at the pep meeting this evening at 7:30 o'clock in Memorial hall. President Frank P. Graham will be among the speakers at the meeting.

Chief cheerleaders, Hunt and Betts, expressed gratification at the large turnout at the cheerio meeting Tuesday evening, and urge everyone to attend the meeting tonight.

This new song, sponsored by Worth, is to be sung to the tune of Over There:

Over there!
Over there!
Take the ball,
Take the ball over there,
For the backs are running,
The line is plunging,
Football flying in the air.

Say a prayer!
Have a care!
We will score,
We will score over there;
Take it over,
We'll take it over
For we won't come back
Till it's over, over there.

Freshmen are requested to bring a copy of this song with them to Chapel this morning.

and Miss Cleo Mitchell of Greensboro. The convention leaders are: Perry Morgan, Miss Winnie Rickett, Miss Lucile Knight, Miss Alva Lawrence and Miss Kate Allison, president of the North Carolina B. S. U.

Registration Friday

With registration all Friday afternoon, the first session will begin at 7:00 o'clock Friday evening and last until about 9:30, after which refreshments will be served at an informal social gathering. The second session begins Saturday morning and continues throughout the day. Sunday, with programs in the morning and part of the afternoon, closes the convention.

The Baptist student union is a universal organization composed of all students who participate in any kind of Baptist work. Such a group appears on practically every campus in North Carolina. Each union has a council which has charge of directing all student activities and organizations in the Baptist church.

integration to the rise of social fraternities. After this, not one of Van Noppen's papers failed to assail the fraternities with bitter and invective editorials.

Claimed Success

The paper claimed great success. In the fourth week a letter of congratulation and encouragement was reported from "a trustee and prominent citizen" who opposed fraternities. By April 13 the paper had inspired a petition to abolish fraternities signed by 125 non-fraternity men. The petition was referred to the visiting committee of the state legislature.

September 15, 1894, at the opening of school, the new editors of the White and Blue flatly refused a proposition from the Athletic Association for a combination of the two weeklies under some new name, such as The Varsity. But for the fact that the White and Blue editors refused this compromise, Carolina's daily paper today might have another name.

Van Noppen was no longer the editor of the White and Blue. He seems to have been the moving spirit of the paper, because under the new regime the editorials lacked the rashness of those of earlier numbers. The Phi and Di were only timidly promoted, while fraternities were not even mentioned.

Papers Consolidated

In March of the next year a special meeting of the Athletic Association was called for the purpose of uniting the two papers. No union was necessary since the editors of the White and Blue were ready to resign if the Tar Heel would assume the notes of the White and Blue.

"Nature in the Raw is seldom MILD"

THE STRIPED TIGER
"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by the great animal artist, Paul Branson... inspired by the savage ferocity of the striped tiger, known throughout the world as the terror of the jungle. "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes.

No raw tobaccos in Luckies —that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted." That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

"It's toasted"

BAPTIST STUDENT UNION CONVENES ON CAMPUS TODAY

Opening Session of Meeting Is Scheduled Tonight at 7:00 At Baptist Church.

The Chapel Hill Baptist church will be host to the Baptist student union beginning tonight and continuing through Sunday. Out-of-town delegates will eat at Swain hall, and will be quartered in rooms offered by the University, the faculty, and townspeople.

The convention is an annual affair and met last year at Durham. Between three and four hundred students are expected to attend. The keynote of the entire program, over which Miss Kate Allison, the state president, will preside, is "If I Be Lifted Up."

Opening Session Tonight

For this evening the theme of the session, which will last from 7:00 to 9:00 o'clock, is "Visualizing the Task and Opportunity." This will be followed by an informal social gathering at which refreshments will be served.

Three sessions will convene Saturday; the first at 9:00 o'clock in the morning, the theme for which meeting will be "Projecting Christian Lives," and the second at 2:00 o'clock in the

SOCIALISTS WILL END DRIVE WITH MANY ACTIVITIES

Party Workers to Conduct Many Rallies and Meetings as Campaign Closes.

Local Socialists have outlined a program of intensive activity for the last days of the campaign. Debates, speeches, rallies, and organization meetings will occupy the attention of the group until Tuesday. The last minute campaign began Wednesday night when Arnold Williams spoke in Graham. Last night John Jenkins presented the Socialist case in the debate with State, while Ben Proctor and Arnold Williams were in Hillsboro organizing a local club and making a campaign speech.

Friday Dr. E. E. Ericson will leave on a tour of the eastern part of the state which will include speeches in Wilmington, Wilson, and other points along the route. Saturday will see two crews in the field. Williams and Proctor will address a meeting of the unemployed in Durham and Jenkins and Ervid Ericson will appear in Pittsboro.

The final note of the campaign will be sounded in Chapel Hill on election eve. A big demonstration is planned for Monday night at the Pickwick theatre. Several speakers, comprising the local oratorical battery, will be heard, and it is also expected that a band will be there to finish off the drive with the strains of the International.

President Graham to Talk At Kiwanis Convention

President Frank P. Graham of the University will open the twelfth annual convention of the Carolina Kiwanis district at Columbia, S. C. Dr. Graham will speak at a banquet tonight which will mark the commencement of the three-day activities.

STOLL RELEASED FROM UNIVERSITY INFIRMARY

George Stoll, Carolina student who was injured Saturday night in Durham, was discharged from the infirmary yesterday. He finds it necessary to employ a cane while walking as his legs are stiff from bruises and the nerves also slightly affected.

Stoll left the infirmary at his own request since he was anxious to return to his classes. He was struck by a speeding automobile driven by a man said to have been drunk.

SHERRILL DRAWS UP FINAL SYSTEM FOR AUDIT BOARD

Plans Completed for Auditing And Keeping Books of Student Activities.

The Student Audit Board announced yesterday through its auditor, R. H. Sherrill, that it has completed the system for handling all financial transactions of the member organizations. These transactions are audited by Sherrill and the books are kept by W. S. Klutz.

Last year the student body voted to create a Student Audit Board under whose direction all financial transactions of student activities would be audited. The Audit Board is composed of Dean Bradshaw and R. H. Sherrill of the faculty, Francis Anderson and Claiborn Carr from the student body, and Haywood Weeks president of the student body, who is chairman of the board.

Groups Included in Audit

The freshman, sophomore, junior, and senior classes, the engineering associations, the law, pharmacy, and woman's association, the student government and debating council, the athletic association, the student union, and the Student Entertainment Committee are the student activities which collect a compulsory fee through the University and which are forced to come under the supervision of the Audit Board according to the vote of the student body. The publication union is under the auditing system but as yet has not come under the book-keeping system of the board. Five activities have voluntarily come under the Audit Board. These are: the Y. M. C. A., the Grail, Kappa Sigma fraternity, the German club, and the interfraternity council.

RAYMOND EATON TO TALK ON LIFE-SAVING MONDAY

Students interested in first aid and life-saving will gather Monday afternoon in Gerrard hall at 4:00 o'clock for a conference with Raymond S. Eaton, field representative of the American Red Cross.

All students interested in first aid and life-saving are cordially invited to attend the gathering, and junior life-savers, senior life-savers, and examiners are urged to be present to hear the speaker. Eaton's appearance here is being sponsored by the Chapel Hill Chapter of the American Red Cross. Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt is the head of the local chapter.

Junior Executive Committee

There will be a meeting of the junior class executive committee in Graham Memorial Monday night at 7:00 o'clock.

Amendments To State Constitution To Be Voted On At Coming Election

Most Important Proposed Change Is to Alter Document So That Amendments May Be Added Through Special Votes of Electorate Instead of Waiting for General Elections.

A president will be elected or re-elected November 8. All the voters are fully aware of this. However, a large percentage of the electorate does not know that proposed amendments to the state constitution, measures of great significance to the citizens of the commonwealth, are to be accepted or rejected.

Legally, amendments are added to the constitution by an expression of the affirmative will of the people. However, figures show that a small percentage of the voters in this state actually consider and vote on projected revisions to the supreme law of their state.

Propose Change in Amending

In order to arouse interest in such additions to the state constitution, a new amendment is proposed this year which will provide for special elections to determine the fate of the constitutional amendments. This plan will change one sentence in Article XIII, section 2 of the constitution. As that portion reads now, amendments "shall be submitted at the next general election to the qualified voters of the whole state." It would be changed to read, "shall be submitted either at the next general election or at a special election to be called for the purpose."

The remaining amendments to be voted on at this election consist of one "to make the term of office of sheriff and coroner four years instead of two"; another, "to protect insurance for widows and children"; and a third, "providing for solicitorial districts."

Of these proposals, the one calling for special election for amendments of the future has aroused the most wide-spread discussion. The chief argument of those opposed to its passage is that it will be an unnecessary expense to hold a special election when the business could be transacted at a general election. Refuting this opinion is the statement of the supporters of the measure to the effect that when men are running for office, the interest of the electorate tends to center upon the personalities involved rather than the issues. Consequently, few vote on the amendments, and those few seldom realize the significance of their voting.

Candidates Avoid Issues

The fact that proposed amendments are often governmental and not political in their framework.

STATE TEACHERS MEETING TO HEAR TALK BY BROWNE

Dr. Knight Will Address Meeting in Raleigh Tonight on "Iraq in the League of Nations."

Members of the University faculty who are attending the north central district of the North Carolina State Teachers association in its meeting in Raleigh today and tomorrow from the school of education are Dean N. W. Walker, Professors I. C. Griffin, A. K. King, H. F. Munch, Dr. E. W. Knight, Professor W. J. McKee, Dr. C. E. Preston, Professor J. Minor Gwyn, Professor P. C. Farrar, and Professor Hugo Giduz, and Misses Sallie Marks and Nora Beust.

Professor Munch is chairman of the mathematics section of this district and has arranged a program which includes a lecture by Dr. E. T. Browne, of the University department of mathematics, on the subject of "The Incommensurables of Geometry."

Dr. Knight will address the social science sectional meeting tomorrow morning at 9:00 o'clock on "Iraq in the League of Nations." Miss Beust will speak before the section devoted to children's literature. Professor King is secretary of the history section. The entire staff of the Chapel Hill high school is also attending the meeting.

Kyser Sends Wishes

The following telegram was received last night by Haywood Weeks from Kay Kyser, originator of the Carolina Cheerios of a few years ago: "It makes me very happy to hear the Cheerios are to be reorganized. I will be rooting with you in every yell you give, and if there is anything I can do to help, let me know. Good luck and best wishes." Kay Kyser.

A. C. McINTOSH HONORED BY LAW SCHOOL FACULTY

Professor Atwell Campbell McIntosh, of the law school faculty, was yesterday honored by a dinner given in celebration of his birthday by his colleagues in the law school. The dinner was given in the banquet hall of Graham Memorial. Professor McIntosh received his A. B. degree in 1881 from Davidson College and his M. A. degree from the same school in 1887 and at a later date received the degree of doctor of laws.

RED CROSS WILL MAKE DRIVE FOR MORE MEMBERS

Local Campaign Will Begin Next Week With 1,000 New Members Set as Goal.

Beginning next week, the local chapter of the Red Cross will make a drive for members throughout Chapel Hill and the University, with 1,000 new members as the goal, according to information received from Joseph Hyde Pratt, head of the local organization.

A house-to-house canvass of the community will be made to secure 750 new members among citizens, and the dormitories and fraternities of the University will be covered by a number of students to get members and voluntary contributions. Students who are unable to join the Red Cross are urged to make contributions through the dormitory and fraternity representatives.

Students in Charge of Drive

William C. Medford, president of the inter-dormitory council, will conduct the drive in the dormitories, with one boy in each dormitory acting as assistant. The drive in Spencer hall and the two sororities will be carried on by Miss Elizabeth Moore, and fraternities will be covered by Irvin Boyle, president of the interfraternity council. The drive for members among graduate students is in charge of Horace Peters.

Pratt pointed out that it is of real benefit to students of the University to be members of the Red Cross, besides the aid they will give to others. In the past the Red Cross has been able to take care of a student who became seriously ill at the University, and who would not otherwise have been able to receive proper medical care.

Besides the members in the community, it is expected that at least 300 new members will be recruited among students.

GERMAN CLUB LEADERS SELECTED YESTERDAY

At a meeting of the German club yesterday in Gerrard hall, the following officers were elected for coming dances: ball managers, Milton Barber, chief, Shady Lane, Bill Roberts, Tom White, Jim Stikeleather, Hanes Lassiter, Albert Cowper, Alex Webb; Fall German officers: L. C. Skinner, leader, Bob Mebane, 1st. assistant, Bill O'Brien, 2nd. assistant; Sophomore German: Jack May, leader, Frank Hargrave, 1st. assistant, Jim Steele, 2nd. assistant; Mid-winter German: Tom White, leader, Jim Peacock, 1st. assistant, John O'Neill, 2nd. assistant; and for the Junior German: John Leak, leader, Phil Sasser, 1st. assistant, and Bob Reynolds, 2nd. assistant.

PLANS MADE FOR APPEARANCE OF CHEERIOS TODAY

Group Will Meet in Memorial Hall at 1:45 This Afternoon For Final Instructions.

Approximately 160 members of the newly revived Carolina Cheerios have been present for the last three nights in the meetings in Memorial hall, practicing in preparation for the community singing and cheering at the Florida game today. Great enthusiasm has been shown by the members as well as numerous alumni.

Meeting at 1:45 O'clock

Cheerleaders Hunt and Betts request that any students desiring to join the Cheerios meet at Memorial hall this afternoon at 1:45 o'clock, at which time, they will be instructed as to the plans for the game. Regular members will also meet at the same time and place.

Megaphones will be given out in Memorial hall and the Cheerios will proceed to the game in a body. Remaining megaphones will be distributed among other students at the game.

Special sections have been reserved in the stadium for the Cheerios. It is requested by the cheerleaders that as many as possible of the Cheerios wear blue coats and white trousers.

GENERAL ALUMNI ASSEMBLY PLANS ANNUAL MEETING

Nomination of Officers for Coming Year Scheduled for Meeting Here December 5.

Friday, December 9, is the date set for the annual General Alumni Assembly to take place in Chapel Hill, according to a bulletin in The Alumni Review, released yesterday. The program for the assembly this year will be concentrated in an afternoon meeting and supper session in Graham Memorial and will include much important business.

Alumni clubs and classes are expected to have delegates to the gathering, which is the most important meeting in the alumni year. In addition to the large amount of business to be transacted, there will be a report to the alumni by President Frank P. Graham on the condition of the University.

Nomination of Officers

The nomination of officers for the coming year will take place at this time. Nominations will be made for the following offices, two candidates to be chosen for each position: president, first vice-president, second vice-president, and one of the three alumni representatives on the University Athletic Council.

Officers of the association for the present year are K. P. Lewis, Durham, president; R. G. Stockton, Winston-Salem, first vice-president; Hugh Dortch, Goldsboro, second vice-president; and G. W. Hill, Durham, treasurer.

A. I. E. E. Meeting Wednesday

The student branch of the A. I. E. E. will conduct its regular meeting next Wednesday, November 9. Beginning then, meetings will take place only once a month. Members are urged to be present at this meeting.

Trained Loafers

Those persons who can really loaf, whole heartedly, wholesomely, and practically, may someday become ideal citizens. According to Keynes, economic intimator of wholesale spare time in the not so distant future, the ability of the human race to amuse itself wholesomely in its leisure hours may someday save our civilization from destruction. While machine production is leading to just such a state of affairs, our universities are as rapidly training men to spend those surplus hours.

Surely, no son of this University, who has safely maneuvered his week-ends in Chapel Hill throughout four long years can ever be at a loss as to how to while away leisure hours.

For the Saints in Keynes "economic paradise," more reading, travel, works of art, sports, and constructive thought, have been suggested. If each and every one of us have not experienced all of these diversifications in one lone week-end, a few experiences have not been representative of general student difficulties. More original ideas for ways of passing the Sabbath have arisen about campus than the number of students seen bumming rides out of town on Saturday afternoons.

Borrowed cars, rented cars, purchased cars, and Austins serve many students in their search for levity and excitement. Library volumes, Sunday papers, novels, and school books keep the more literary of our numbers from joining the ranks of the poker players, bridge players, pitch, and spunk-tail heart enthusiasts. The more amorous of our number find Spencer hall, the arboretum, and Gimghoul castle indispensable in lightening otherwise heavy hours of leisure.—L.M.J.

We Dredge Our Own Channel

Interest in the Tatum petition has spread like wild fire through American universities and circles of conservative capitalists. Problematical questioning has extended far beyond the realm of North Carolina to become one of the most discussed items of our present educational system.

Worried conservatives are trying to fathom the principles upheld by young America. Opinion rests with liberalism as a rapid development predominating our schools. The cause itself presents sufficient reason for disconcertion.

Is such liberalism taught to the youth in our schools or is it a result of general observation and conclusions which every normal minded student unknowingly makes? Psychology tries to determine why humans behave as they do through two methods: observation and introspection. Our channel for determination must be introspection.

Are not the shortcomings of the present system enough to evoke askance for a change? Does the youth of today need be taught by a college that all is not right in the world? One has only to look about for evidence of unbalance.

Youth brought up under the influence of such conditions does not have to be taught liberalism. It is only human nature to seek the necessities of life with ordinary comfort. Progress is made by trial and error. Is it not preferable that our universities present to their students all aspects of proposed measures or would the conservative group prefer that they be kept in ignorance as to the truth and draw their own conclusions, however radical that they may be?—F. A. N.

The Defense Crumples

Desperate in the face of imminent defeat at the coming election, President Hoover appears to be turning to invective and slander, the weapons so often used by the Democrats and Republicans alike, but so little to be expected of a man of the sincere integrity of the incumbent president. If there is one name that has never fitted President Hoover, it is that of slanderer and mud-slinger. Whatever the president may have lacked in personal initiative and ingenuity, there is hardly any question of his innate honesty. In the view of Hoover's recent Indianapolis address, it would seem that Governor Roosevelt was justified in accusing the President of abandoning "argument for personalities" and of seeking "to undermine reason with fear."

The only conclusion to be drawn from all this is that the Republicans, having discovered that the Coolidge myth of silence and phlegmatic nonchalance was exploded, are trying to reverse gear in record time and to resort to the old time methods of invective. For months the Republican politicians, news feature writers, and sob-sisters have been trying to endow the colorless Mr. Hoover with personality. Apparently not discouraged by their conspicuous lack of success in their first attempts, the now desperate G.O.P. string-pullers are pushing the reluctant Mr. Hoover onto a battle-field where he is not prepared to go. And Mr. Hoover, being wise, knows for himself that engineering training prepares no man to manipulate a political machine-gun.

It would seem that the Republican "Kitchen cabinet members" would do well to try for once to keep hands off and to let a president with four years' experience in office do his own campaigning. Hoover can play his own game best, and that game is not one of flashy display nor of bitter attacks on the opposition, but one of honesty, willingness to learn, and earnest endeavor to do the right thing for its own sake. Because Mr. Hoover does not blow any trumpets in the ordinary course of affairs is no reason why he should be shoved into a ring with such a presidential opponent as Mr. Roosevelt, a man of many years' experience in playing puss-in-the-corner with the voting citizen. Nor is it any reason to think that Mr. Hoover is not on the job and is not possessed of will and intelligence inferior to those of few men. It would appear that the Republicans, in condescending to play the Democrats' game, are conceding a fairly certain victory.—B.B.P.

With Contemporaries on the Presidential Poll

The Results of

The Presidential Poll

The Cardinal poll demonstrates that college students and professors do not believe that as yet the time has come to cry "Enough, enough" and boot our Mr. Hoover. . . . The poll reveals decisively, especially the faculty portion of it, that more and more there is coming to be only two parties, the capitalist and the socialist thinking groups, those who believe and those who disbelieve in the present economic order. . . . Many of those that voted for Roosevelt, we may safely infer, did so not because they were dissatisfied with the Republican party and the capitalistic order it epitomizes, but because they bear prejudices against Herbert Hoover, its leader. . . . Wisconsin Daily Cardinal (the vote: Hoover, 1481; Roosevelt, 1003; Thomas, 999; Foster, 77—Ed)

. . . The apparent Hoover landslide in college circles will soon become a political football for the amusement of any expert rationalizers who are interested in it. Every party will interpret the figures to its own satisfaction. Republicans will delight in remarking upon the "intelligent opinion which is coming to the surface now in the college straw votes." (New York Herald-Tribune) They will doubtless point out also that college and university thinkers, unlike certain other persons, are brainy enough to know that the Hoover administration did not cause the depression. . . . Democrats, on the other hand, will probably take refuge in denying that the figures have any material significance. The smallness of many state's votes will be noted. . . . Supporters of Roosevelt will choose to believe that the undergraduate vote of the country is not a reliable indication of anything except the undergraduate sentiment of the country—and perhaps not a very reliable indication of that. . . . In any case the contrast between the November election returns and these should prove interesting. . . . Daily Princetonian.

Hoover Wins

Like the bolt from the blue comes Hoover's smashing triumph in the campus straw vote Monday, and for Republicans in general it may look like a tiny ray of sunshine filtering through dark clouds. . . . We believe that Thomas, as is predicted for the national election, cut Roosevelt's margin greatly. . . . The University, representing every element in the state, is, in our mind, an excellent reflection of party affiliation in Ohio. But the Republican majority over the Democrats in Ohio certainly doesn't reach the total of two to one. . . . Ohio State University Daily Lantern (The vote at O. S. U.: Hoover, 2440; Roosevelt, 1025; Thomas, 1005; Foster, 2—Ed)

The National Student Votes

The University men of the country are clearly for the re-election of Herbert Hoover. . . . Although it is safe to assume that the majority of these straw votes will not participate in the actual election, there are obviously potent reasons for this clear plurality which the Democratic leaders will not be able to dismiss too easily, if it disturbs them at all.

(With a mind sensitive to sham they (students) have weighed the Republican achievements and the Democratic promises and decided that the record of President Hoover—defective though it is in many cases—is to be vastly preferred to the mental meanderings and political tawdriness of the opposing candidacy. . . . Cornell Daily Sun (Vote at Cornell: Hoover, 1468; Roosevelt, 493; Thomas, 334; Foster, 38—Ed)

Hoover, the Winner

Although political leaders will discount the results of the poll as that of non-voting citizens, the results must be considered as a gauge of political opinion throughout the nation. The poll shows that Southern colleges are as solid for the Democrats as their forbears since the Civil War. . . . The majority for Hoover has definitely shown that the Republican campaign has cut deeply into the Roosevelt vote during the past few weeks. The Hearst newspapers and the Literary Digest polls have been conducted since the end of the two political conventions and have not reported the reaction of the voters to the two party campaigns. The student poll reflects the thoughts of average voters and cannot be dismissed by politicians. . . . N. Y. U. Daily

Cross-Blending

WHAT IS IT..and how does it improve cigarette taste?

YOU'VE heard how fruit of one variety has been crossed with fruit of another to produce a new and more pleasing flavor. The loganberry, for example, is a cross between the raspberry and the blackberry.

Chesterfield's Cross-Blend gets the same result—better taste—by a different method.

It welds together the different kinds of several varieties of tobacco. Many types of Bright tobacco, a great many types of Burley tobacco, and numerous grades of Turkish tobacco are all merged into one—Chesterfield tobacco.

This welding or Cross-Blending goes beyond ordinary blending or mixing tobaccos together. It actually makes every kind of tobacco in Chesterfield partake of the qualities of every other type.

It's the Cross-Blending of fine Turkish and Domestic tobaccos that gives Chesterfields a distinctive, better taste.

They are milder. They have a flavor and aroma which, we believe, you will like.

Tar Heels Set For Game With Floridians In Kenan

Collins Works Men Hard Yesterday in Final Effort to Perfect Offense.

BARCLAY DEFINITELY OUT

Philpot Will Replace Star Guard For Crucial Game This Afternoon.

PROBABLE LINEUPS

| Florida | Carolina |

| Williamson | Walker |
| Shearer | Lt. Hodges |
| Lane | Philpot |
| Ferazzi | c. Underwood |
| McC Campbell | r.g. Kahn |
| Jenkins | r.t. Smith |
| Goodyear | r.e. Brandt |
| Dorsett | q.b. Burnett |
| Rogero | l.h. Phipps |
| Henderson | r.h. Daniel |
| Hughes | f.b. Chandler |

The stage is all set for the tilt this afternoon between Florida and Carolina at 2:30 o'clock in Kenan stadium. The 'Gators, forty-three strong, will arrive at the field house this morning and are set to upset the Tar Heels.

Coach Collins put his charges through a lengthy drill on offense yesterday, working on his new plays and perfecting the old ones. Pass defense for the 'Gators and kick-off formations were also rehearsed in the peppy session.

Philpot Replaces Barclay

George Barclay was ruled out of the fray definitely by the doctors due to his knee injury and this was a blow to Coach Collins as Barclay has been one of the most consistently good performers in the Carolina forward wall this season. Cable Philpot, who substituted so nobly for Barclay against State, will get the call today with Bob Froberger as reserve.

Though the coaches announced last night that the above lineups would start the game, it is highly possible that Coach Collins will start his "shock troops" as he did last week.

Florida Has Aerial Threat

Florida has a formidable pass combination in the personnel of Johnny Henderson and George Moye, this pair accounting for the two scores against Georgia, and the Tar Heels will have to be on their toes to stop them.

The game may develop into a kicking duel between Rogero, star Florida halfback, and Burnett, and this will be an interesting battle as the 'Gator star is rated with the best kickers in the south.

The Tar Heels will also have to stop the plunges of Hughes and Stolz, two hefty fullbacks, and the dashes of Fountain. Hughes and Fountain were the two who held the Carolina team at bay last year by pulling brilliant runs to halt Tar Heel advances.

COACHES SHAPE UP FROSH TEAM

Sapp and Howard Dissatisfied With Team's Showing Last Week Against State.

Although they haven't a scheduled game until a week from today, Coaches Sapp and Howard are driving their freshman team hard in an effort to mend the faults of last week's contest with State's yearlings.

The coaches were not at all satisfied with the work done by the first year men last Friday, being especially disappointed with the team which started the contest, and will probably make some shifts in this lineup.

Hobgood Has Leg Injury

Hobgood, star tackle, was the only bad injury of the Wolflet contest. Hobgood came out of the battle with a badly infected leg. Sutton, fullback, is still out of the lineup as a result of

Big 'Gator Tackle

Joe Jenkins, 200-pound right tackle on the Florida team, is expected to play an important part in Coach Bachman's attack. Jenkins is the boy who established a new Southern Conference record in the javelin throw last year in the outdoor meet.

CROSS-COUNTRY RUN STAGED FOR THIS AFTERNOON

Carolina Meets Florida Harriers This Afternoon Between Halves of Game.

Grid fans attending the Carolina Florida tilt today will witness a little bit of added rivalry between the two schools in the form of a cross-country run between the halves of the contest.

The local harrier outfit, five-time Southern Conference champions, will be furnished with plenty of opposition by the 'Gator club. Dale Ranson's boys are just opening their season here after an intensive training season while the Gainesville lads have already met and defeated Georgia's potent Bulldogs. Real threats will be offered by C. C. Calmes, R. Turrilland, and J. Burnett to the supremacy of Clarence Jensen, southern champion, Captain Bob Hubbard, and the remainder of the Tar Heel luminaries.

Each club will run seven boys, and the other Carolina men will run unofficially. The course will be 3.3 miles long, and the finish will be in Kenan stadium.

Carolina Entries

Louis Sullivan, who has shown up well during the training, Henry Sullivan, his twin brother who won the Cake Race, Walter Groover and Lew Cordle, who have also been luminaries in pre-season workouts, Captain Bob Hubbard, fifth in the Southern Conference run here last year, and Gerry Goldman or T. H. Curlee will be Carolina's official entries.

FRESHMAN TENNIS TEAM WILL PLAY WASHINGTON

The freshman tennis team will have its initial match with the Washington high school Saturday morning. The Washington net-men will arrive in Chapel Hill in time to see the football game with Florida.

The probable line-up for Carolina will be: for the singles, Friedman, 1; Lott, 2; Johnston, 3; Sobol, 4; and Lynch, 5. In the doubles Taylor and Baukney will probably hold down the top position while Trainer and Linker will play in the second division.

There will be five single matches and two doubles.

a sprained ankle which he got in the Oak Ridge contest, and Snyder still has a weak ankle but is able to do heavy work during practice.

PHI GAMMS NOSE OUT PHI ALPHAS BY 13 TO 12 SCORE

Betas, S. A. E., Phi Kappa Sigma, Sigma Phi Sigma, and Phi Sigma Kappa Are Other Winners.

Beta Theta Pi retained its place among the select group of five leaders in the fraternity tag football race by virtue of an 18-6 win over Tau Epsilon Phi yesterday afternoon.

The Beta outfit rolled up a 12-0 lead in the first half as a result of touchdowns by Billy Tenille and Charlie Rose. Both attempts for extra points were futile.

Eisner Scores on Kickoff

Joe Eisner received Rose's kickoff to start the second half on the fifteen yard line and proceeded to dash the eighty-five yards to the goal line behind perfect interference.

T. E. P. put on a rally at this point after intercepting a Beta pass, but the Betas regained possession of the ball, and Rose soon scored another touchdown on a pass from Henry Anderson.

Phi Gams Score

Phi Gamma Delta nosed out Phi Alpha in a hard-fought game, 13-12. Phi Alpha led throughout most of the game, but lost out when Lewish Fisher, Phi Gam star, recovered a blocked kick over the goal line for a touchdown. He also scored his team's other touchdown, while Jack Bessen and Henry Wilson were responsible for the Phi Alpha points.

Sigma Phi Epsilon Blanked

Phi Kappa Sigma, led by Fred Dossensbach and Bob Reid, outplayed Sigma Phi Epsilon to win, 6-0 in first downs. Phi Kappa Sigma was superior in all departments of the game and constantly threatened to score.

Phi Sigma Kappa Wins

Phi Sigma Kappa team defeated Theta Kappa Nu, 12-0, the winners leading in first downs, 6-5, at the final whistle. Longest and Berry played well for Theta Kappa Nu, while Teachey and Mitchell were responsible for the winning team's touchdowns.

S. A. E. outscored Lambda Chi Alpha, 18-6, in spite of the work of Sparks Griffin for the losers. First downs favored S. A. E., 6-2.

Sigma Phi Sigma won from Chi Phi by forfeit when the latter team failed to put in an appearance.

PROSPECTS GOOD FOR BOXING SQUAD

Quarles, Burke, Edwards, Caruth, Glover, and Ivey Show Up Well for Varsity.

In a workout at the Tin Can Wednesday afternoon, six varsity fighters and three freshmen came out of the welter of gloves to prove themselves excellent material for Carolina's boxing teams this winter.

Max Frucht and Bill Abernathy, freshmen in the featherweight division, made favorable impressions, while Norm Quarles, 129 pounder, displayed plenty of class at the beginning of his first year on the varsity.

In the middleweight group Lee Burke, undefeated as a freshman last winter, was in fine form against several promising youngsters. Two light-heavies, Val Edwards and Jim Carruth, both varsity candidates, were the only men out for the higher divisions and they were about even at the end of two fast rounds.

Cliff Glover, veteran of the 1932 squad, and Pete Ivey, up from last year's freshman crew, are the leading candidates for the varsity bantam post. Lewis Barnes showed a snappy left hand and plenty of promise among the frosh 119 pounders.

MENACES TO CAROLINA LAST YEAR

Dorsett, left, and Fountain, right, two of Florida's most powerful backs. Dorsett is a quarterback and Fountain a half and both boys were the main reasons the Tar Heels failed to score in the battle at Gainesville last year.

Florida 'Gators Prepared For Fight With Carolina

Visiting Team Will Try to Even Series With Tar Heel Eleven Today.

WILL RUN REGULAR TEAM
Coach Bachman Expects to Enter Game With Stronger Team Than Usual.

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL

Gainesville, Nov. 3.—The first football game the Universities of North Carolina and Florida played was in 1921, at Jacksonville, and the Tar Heels won 14 to 10. The second meeting of the two teams was last fall, just ten years later, and the contest resulted in a scoreless tie. To bring about a balanced situation as the teams swing into combat Friday at Chapel Hill for the third time, Florida must emerge victoriously.

After easy wins over Sewanee and Citadel, the "Fighting 'Gators" anticipated a victory over N. C. State, and it was that overconfidence, plus an inability to seize scoring opportunities, that cost Florida a victory. The surprise defeat put most of the boys right with themselves, and it was a hard-fighting, determined, aggressive football squad which went to Athens, Ga., last week. The boys realized their responsibilities before the game started. They knew that several valuable athletes were not there to help along. They knew a few others were bearing injuries, and not at peak form. They knew that Georgia's Bulldogs would have teeth sharpened; would make a desperate, supreme effort to win. It was Homecoming.

Fought Hard Against Georgia

But against great odds, the Florida team fought, nobly and courageously, and twice held the lead over a team which has every reason to rank as one of the south's strongest this year. Only after they had been bruised, battered, and overpowered, did the 'Gators yield in Athens.

Coaches and players are just as anxious to see Florida bounce onto the victory trail as are alumni and friends, and this week everyone has been working overtime. With Dorsett, Lane, Osgood, and Bryan restored to the varsity, Fountain able to play, and the remainder of the team in improved physical condition, Coach Bachman will undoubtedly put forth a stronger team in Chapel Hill than he did in Athens.

MANY LETTERMEN BACK FOR YEAR'S BASKETBALL TEAM.

Alexander and Edwards Are Only Two Lettermen Lost to Team For Coming Season.

Thirty-five men reported yesterday afternoon for the second varsity basketball workout of the season. The candidates are under the direction of Freshman Coach Dameron who is acting temporarily for Coach "Bo" Shepard until the first of next week.

The initial sessions have been devoted to calisthenics and light conditioning workouts. For a short time the squad will practice only three days a week, engaging in light drills in an attempt to gradually prepare for hard work.

Alexander, last year's captain and all-Southern guard, and Edwards, center, are the only lettermen lost to the team. Eight ettermen including: McCachren, Hines, Weathers, Jones, Henry, Brandt, Markham, and Chandler will appear in Tar Heel uniforms when the first whistle opens the 1932-33 court campaign. Every member of last year's first freshman team will be back, enriching the supply of reserve material.

RULES OF DANCE COMMITTEE

Listed below are the rules and regulations adopted by the University dance committee in joint agreement with the faculty committee on dances at the beginning of this year for regulation of all social functions taking place at the University.

I. The University dance committee shall act as a committee for the purpose of keeping order at all dances. The leaders of each dance shall act as temporary members of this committee.

II. For the control of all dances by fraternities, clubs, classes or individual students of the University, the following regulations shall apply in addition:

1. Permission to hold such dances must be obtained from the faculty committee on dances.
2. Every such dance must be under the auspices and regulations of the University dance committee.
3. Such dances may be held only on Friday evening and Saturday evening, except by special permission of the faculty committee on dances.
4. Any organization, fraternity, or club giving such a dance shall elect three of its members and individual students giving such a dance shall select three students of the University, whose names shall be given to the faculty committee on dances, and to the chairman of University dance committee. These three members shall thereupon become temporary members of the University dance committee, and shall be held responsible, for the time and the occasion of that dance only, in the same way that members of the University dance committee are held responsible, for the conduct of that particular dance, and said committee shall convene with the University dance committee at the next meeting after their dance. Penalty for failure in this last duty: Automatic suspension from giving dances or receptions, etc., for a period of two (2) years.

III. Chaperones for all dances given under the auspices of the University shall be selected subject to the approval of the chairman of the board of chaperones, or the dean of women.

IV. Any organizations giving a dance which in the judgment of the University dance committee is not up to University standards, shall not be allowed to give a dance for a period of time to be fixed at the discretion of the University dance committee, in conference with the faculty committee on dances.

V. The University dance committee shall be empowered to suspend from all dances given under the auspices of the University, for a period at the discretion of the committee, any student, visitor, or alumnus for misconduct whatever in any period during which the dance or dances are being held, regardless of whether the misconduct is before, during, or after the dance.

VI. The following rules shall govern conduct on the dance floor:

1. No one showing signs of drinking will be permitted to remain on the floor.
2. No girls will be allowed to leave the hall during an evening dance unless accompanied by a chaperone.

VII. All dances given under the auspices of the University shall close not later than 1:00 a. m. provided, that the last dance in the Commencement dances shall close not later than 2:00 a. m. When any dance is given on Saturday night, it shall close not later than 12:00 o'clock midnight.

Amendments To State Constitution Will Be Voted On At Election

ing results in the office-seeker's avoiding a statement of his views thereon. Since opinion concerning the amendments is individual rather than party, the mass of the voters seldom hear of the planned changes until they go to the polls.

A further argument for the adoption of the amendment to provide for special amending polls is based on time. Under the present system, proposed changes to the constitution are often laid aside for nearly two years before the people are able to decide for or against them. Their intrinsic importance or timeliness does nothing to hasten a ballot.

Another Important Change

There is a clause in the constitution which provides that in the case of the death of a husband, an insurance policy, made out expressly in favor of his wife or children cannot be claimed by creditors as an asset to pay off debts. This law, however, does not protect the cash value which every policy carries while the husband is alive. If the amendment is approved, the policy will in no way be subject to claims of creditors at any time.

Y. M. C. A. Cabinets Issue Second Appeal

A second appeal has been issued by the Y. M. C. A. cabinets in behalf of the Palmer Institute, whose boys' dormitory was completely demolished in a disastrous fire last Monday. The Sedalia Singers, who gave a concert here last Sunday, came from Palmer Institute.

Many young men students and four teachers lost all of their possessions in the fire, and the local "Y" is asking for any students or townspeople here at the University who wish to do so to give any spare apparel to the colored boys. Dr. Charlotte Hawkins Brown, president of the institution said that her boys needed socks, underwear, shirts, shoes, pants, vests, overcoats, and hats. All contributions will be received at the campus "Y", or a boy will be sent for them upon request. The aid being given the Palmer Institute is a part of the interracial program of the "Y."

Proctor Will Speak For Socialists Today

Ben Proctor, representing the Young Socialist club, will speak in behalf of the Socialists on the campus at the freshman assembly this morning. His talk will be the last in a series of political talks that has been presented during the past week advocating the three major political parties.

These talks have been presented as a result of a motion passed by both the Di and the Phi to enable the students of the University to become acquainted with the policies of their respective parties.

Charles G. Rose, Jr., president of the Di senate, will preside over the assembly.

Florida 'Gators Are Prepared For Fight With Carolina Today

Carolina last week beat the N. C. State Wolfpack two touchdowns, and folks are quick to recall that State beat the 'Gators by ten points. Scouts have brought to 'Gatorland reports of a very strong team in Chapel Hill, a team that piled up countless first downs against Vanderbilt and Georgia Tech, yet which could not score sufficient touchdowns to win.

Strong Players

No changes are expected in the Florida team, other than George McCampbell will probably be back at right guard, working in behind Drayton Bernhard. McCampbell is the 149-pounder who played so well against Georgia in spite of the fact that he was opposed by men who outweighed him in the neighborhood of 60 pounds. "Memory" Lane will take up his left guard post, and no one expects that position to be over-run. The two sophomore tacklers are playing dandy ball, and in Welcome Shearer and Carl Schuman, a pair of prizes are saluted.

With "Blimp" Goodyear back in shape, right end will be strengthened, although Schirmer's play against Georgia was of a high calibre.

afternoon when "Projecting the Denominational Program" will be the topic under discussion. The topic for the evening session, which begins at 7:00 o'clock, is "Projecting Missions Near and Far."

Sunday's program for the students in the conference, will begin at 6:00 o'clock in the morning with the Master's Minority prayer meeting, at which time the subject will be, "Have I Lifted Him Up on My Campus?" The subject of the morning session, which will last from 9:00 to 12:00 o'clock is "Future Possibilities Through Faith." The concluding session, which will meet Sunday afternoon from 2:00 until 3:30 o'clock, is "Present Day Courageous Living."

Among the speakers who will address the conference are: Dr. Ellis Fuller of Atlanta, Georgia; Dr. Frank H. Leavell of Nashville, Tennessee; Dr. Frank P. Graham; Reverend Forest C. Freezor, Miss Inabelle Coleman and Miss Cleo Mitchell of Greensboro. Leaders of the convention are: Perry Morgan, Miss Winnie Rickett, Miss Lucile Knight, Miss Alva Lawrence, and Miss Kate Allison, president of the North Carolina Baptist student union.

Date for Election Changed

Due to a conflict with assembly programs already planned, the date for the nomination and election of freshman class officers has been changed. Officers will be nominated Thursday, November 10, and the nominees will address the class in assembly Thursday, November 17. The election will be the next day. Contrary to information already published the offices of secretary and treasurer will not be combined.

in his first major game at quarterback, calling the plays in a manner that elicited much praise from the coaches. "Sonny Boy" Henderson stepped into the limelight with his accurate passing, initiating aerials which led to both Florida touchdowns. At fullback, in Hughes and Stolz, Floridians claim two of the best line plungers in the south.

Week-End Dances To Get Under Way Today

Following the Florida game, the social round of entertainments for the week-end will start to-night at 9:00 o'clock, when the Grail will stage the third dance of the year in the Tin Can. Continuing the social program, the Kappa Sigma fraternity plans a dance Saturday evening from 6:00 until 8:30 o'clock, preceding the sophomore hop which will take place in the Tin Can.

The Grail dance will last from 9:00 o'clock to 1:00 o'clock in the Tin Can which is being decorated for the occasion in conjunction with the sophomore hop. The decorations will be in blue and white.

The committee is expecting a large crowd for this dance which will follow one of the largest dances the Grail has ever held. Admission is $1.00 a person, and, as is customary, freshmen will not be permitted to attend. Jack Wardlaw and his orchestra will provide the music for the dance of tonight and tomorrow night.

FOOTBALL COMEDY IS CAROLINA SHOW TODAY

Greta Nissen, feminine lead in "Rackety Rax," Fox football comedy now showing at the Carolina theatre, has the role of a racketeer's "moll." Marjorie Beebe is cast as the racketeer's wife who spends her time looking for hidden trouble.

Victor McLaglen, male lead, has the part of a sports racketeer who muscles into college football. Nell O'Day has an interesting part, that of a young newspaper woman whose fiancé, played by Arthur Pierson, is constantly in danger of being "rubbed out" by his racketeer boss. Pierson is cast as a sports page press agent, a light comedy role which fits him perfectly. Others included in the cast are Vince Barnett, Allan Jenkins, Ivan Linlow, Ward Bond, Eric Mayne, Joe Brown, John Keyes and Jack Perry.

tra will provide the music for the dance of tonight and tomorrow night.

NOVEMBER ISSUE OF HIGH SCHOOL PAPER PUBLISHED

Many Interesting Articles Contributed by University Faculty Members.

The November issue of The High School Journal, published monthly by the school of education, has been edited and is now in the mail.

This latest issue contains several comments concerning North Carolina, the nomination of President Frank P. Graham as head of the greater University of North Carolina, the Carolina Dramatic association, and the property tax now levied for the support of the six months school term, and a resolution which has been suggested for this year's contest of the high school debating union of North Carolina.

J. F. Webb, superintendent of the schools for Granville county, has contributed an article entitled "What Is a Uniform System of Schools?" Dr. A. Monroe Stowe has set forth the degree requirements of liberal arts colleges in the South Atlantic states in a tabulated form.

In his mathematics column, Professor H. F. Munch presents the results of the freshman mathematics placement tests which were given to 596 new students this year. Professor Hugo Giduz also gives the results of the French placement tests in his column.

A. I. E. E. MEETS IN FALL SESSION

John E. Lear of the University School
Of Engineering, Presides Over Meeting at State College.

Several local persons attended the fall meeting of the North Carolina section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers at State College yesterday. Addresses by Dr. E. C. Brooks, president of State College, officials of the society, and prominent engineers were features of the afternoon and banquet meetings.

John E. Lear, head of the school of electrical engineering of the University, presided at the sessions. Raymond F. Stainback, also of the University, is secretary of the group.

Several nationally prominent engineers were on the program for the afternoon meeting, including: A. O. Austin, widely known authority on high voltage insulation and M. E. Noyes, engineer of the Aluminum Company of America. H. P. Charlesworth, national president of the A. I. E. E., delivered the principal address at the banquet session.

FERGER WILL TALK ON BRITISH-INDIAN POLITICAL STATE

Reverend Henri R. Ferger, Brother of University Professor, to Speak At Seminar Wednesday.

First-hand impressions of India's attitude in her political difficulties with England will be presented before a graduate seminar next Wednesday evening in Bingham hall by Rev. Henri R. Ferger, missionary educator and platform lecturer.

Graduate students in sociology and political science, as well as those in economics, will be extended a special invitation to attend this meeting, which will be the regular bi-weekly seminar of graduates in the economics department. All other interested persons will be welcomed.

The speaker, who is a brother of Dr. W. F. Ferger, of the University, is engaged in a speaking tour during a furlough from his educational work in north India and the Punjab. Having been stationed in India since 1910 by the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, Rev. Ferger has made a thorough study of native conditions. His lecture will be illustrated by his own motion pictures revealing various aspects of life in India.

Hillsboro Fair Offers Numerous Attractions

Beginning yesterday and continuing today, the Orange County Educational Fair is being conducted in Hillsboro. The fair opened yesterday at 1:30 with an address by A. H. Graham.

Yesterday's activities included a football game between Hillsboro and Alexander Wilson high schools, a band concert, a fiddlers' convention, a beauty contest, and a number of athletic events.

A large display of exhibits has been arranged of farm and garden products, livestock, poultry, cookery, arts and crafts, relics and antiques. Six granges of the county are jointly exhibiting a live-at-home booth showing the way it is possible for Orange County farmers to live on their own products.

One of the most outstanding exhibits is one of the Strudwick paintings and Hillsboro pottery.

Tatum Petition Recalls Struggle Arising From Poole Bill Of 1925

Scopes Trial in Tennessee Brought About Poole Resolution Which Sought to Restrict Freedom of Teaching Policies In State-Supported Institutions.

If the signers of the Tatum petition against the liberal policies of the University expected this institution to cower under their attack, they completely forgot the courage and spirit displayed in Chapel Hill under similar fire. The struggle in 1925 against the Poole resolution which reached the house committee of the state legislature clearly indicated the extremes to which the University will resort when its ranking as an enlightened institution is threatened.

Shortly after the notorious Scopes evolution trial in Tennessee, Representative Poole, a Hoke county editor, introduced into the legislature of this state a bill intent on prohibiting the teaching of Darwinism in any state school or college.

His argument for the bill centered in the conviction that state supported institutions should not be allowed to teach that "the Bible is a myth and that Christianity is a superstition."

Mindful of the success that the prosecution of Scopes had within Tennessee and of the decision showered upon the trial throughout the nation, the progressives of the state feared that there would be enough bigoted supporters of the bill to effect its passage in the legislature.

Consequently, the students and professors of the state universities publicly attacked the measure, and on February 10, when the bill was to be discussed, Dr. Harry W. Chase, then president of the University, and many members of the student bodies of both Carolina and

Dr. Ericson Explains Scandinavian Custom Concerning Choice Of Name

University Professor and Linguistic Expert Tells of Customs in Sweden That Might Have Influenced Name of Axel Boethius, Recent Lecturer at University.

An effort on the part of the Swedish nation to relieve the confusion of names, caused by the long-standing practice of taking the father's name and affixing son to it, is cited as an explanation of the name of Axel Boethius, recent lecturer at the University.

Dr. E. E. Ericson, of the University English department, believes that some ancestor of the archaeologist probably liked the name of Boethius, the ancient author of De Consolatione Philosophiae and so adopted the name. Dr. Ericson is recognized as a linguistic authority.

Referring to the old custom of securing names in Sweden, Dr. Ericson observed that John Nelson's son, Nels, would be known as Nels Johnson, his son Axel in turn would have the name, Axel Nelson. Consequently there might be a hundred Johnsons in the same community and yet no relationship.

Too Many Johnsons

"I well remember," he said, "the difficulties of a sister of mine in Newmans Grove, Nebraska, who was supervisor of a large telephone exchange. In this community, for instance, there were twenty-seven Eric Johnsons, and, in that day, rural subscribers called for telephone

A. A. U. W. PLANS BENEFIT SUPPER

Association of University Women to Give Annual Bridge Supper Benefitting Their Loan Fund.

The Chapel Hill branch of the American Association of University Women will give its annual bridge supper at the home of President and Mrs. Frank P. Graham, Friday night, November 11, at 7:00 o'clock. Supper followed by bridge will be a feature of this year's program, as in the past.

This annual affair is sponsored by the association for the purpose of raising money for its local loan fund. Tickets are $1.00 each, and reservations may be made with Mrs. John Couch or any member of the local organization. Mrs. Harry F. Comer is in charge of the supper.

The local branch of the A. A. U. W. maintains a loan fund for the use of women graduate students in the University. Each year one hundred dollars is added to that fund with the idea of eventually endowing it as a fellowship. To date all money loaned has been returned in full at the date of maturity.

PROCTOR BOOSTS SOCIALIST PARTY IN SPEECH HERE

Student Socialist Leader Attacks Capitalism of Democratic and Republican Parties.

In the last of a series of political speeches, Ben Proctor, representing the Socialists on the campus, attacked the plans and policies of both the Democratic and Republican parties as he spoke before the freshman assembly yesterday. At the same time he presented the Socialist views on certain topics of the day. As an introduction he said that the people were awakening to the fact that the notion that Socialism is a radical idea is passing.

Continuing, he said, "The only difference between the two major parties is a few vote catching devices. They are both backing a system, a capitalistic system."

In conclusion to his address, he outlined briefly the reforms advocated by the Socialists. Among these are an immediate relief of the suffering, a clean up of the slums, disarmament, and production of manufactured goods, not for profit, but for use. Charles G. Rose, Jr., president of the Di senate, presided over the assembly.

Rotary Club Hears Lecture By Dr. Bost

One of the most interesting addresses Chapel Hill Rotarians have listened to recently was heard at the meeting this week when Dr. Ralph W. Bost, of the University chemistry department, gave an illustrated talk on the many different uses that are made of extracts from coal.

He also showed the hundreds of different uses for dyes and how the sales value of countless articles are improved by dye colorings.

He told of one firm that recently greatly increased the sales of its pecans by dyeing them a nice bright color.

AUDIT DECLARES FINANCIAL STATE OF COUNTY GOOD

Bonded Debt Reduced $161,000
In Four Years According to Auditor's Statement.

The decrease in the Orange county net debt on bonds for loans due to the state has decreased $161,000 in the past four years, as shown by the official audit of the county finances recently made public.

Of this decrease $87,000 is in the total bonded debt of the county, $32,000 is due to an increase in the cash and securities of the sinking fund, and $42,000 comes from a decrease in state loans to schools. The decrease is also due in part to the fact that there are now no temporary loans outstanding, whereas four years ago these amounted to $77,000.

The audit was made by K. W. Parham, of the firm of Goodno and Parham, certified public accountants. Parham, in a letter to the chairman of the board of county commissioners, states that he considers the financial condition of Orange county exceptionally good, in view of existing financial conditions.

The surplus in the county's funds, which include, among other items, salaries and road funds, is $5,316 greater than it was four years ago. A further indication of the county's good financial condition is made clear by the fact that the tax rate has dropped from $1.45 in 1928 to 80 cents in 1932.

Another Step

The Carolina Playmakers' presentation of this Fall is very much of an innovation, not only for the Playmakers, but also for the state of North Carolina and for the whole south. The play is the famous "Uncle Tom's Cabin," originally produced in Troy, New York, in 1852 and tremendously popular at once throughout the United States and in England. Originating in a modest novel by Harriet Beecher Stowe which set the world on fire back in the pre-Civil War days, the subsequent play earned a livelihood for many so-called "Tom" actors, who devoted their lives to portraying characters in this politically portentous drama. While the novel may have been intended as anti-slavery propaganda, the play, as developed by Mr. George L. Aiken, was a collection of vital, vividly real characters grouped together in a story of pure dramatic.

But the intense drama of the 1850's is often referred to today as melodrama, and the latter is to be mentioned only when accompanied by lifting of the eyebrows. The Playmaker production, however, is to be a real and sincere effort to get into the spirit of the time when the play was at the height of its popularity. Accordingly, there are to be "special features" in the style and spirit of the 50's, which will help establish the mood of the play. Even the program is a scroll written in the sensational manner of the time.

It is a credit to the liberalism for which this University is famous that provincial prejudice and outworn tradition are to be eliminated in favor of liberalism and true appreciation of dramatic art.—B.B.P.

Soon Back to Amos 'n' Andy 'n' Ben Bernie

There is great consolation in the knowledge that must endure the obfuscating din of political strife for only a few more days and, regardless of who the unlucky party may be, peace and quiet will reign again. Then, perhaps the newspapers may be read without finding that the administration has been flayed by the combined hosts of the democratic and socialist parties, and that Hoover and his cohorts have administered a much needed castigation to the inmates of the donkey camp. Again, there will be rejoicing when the air waves have been purged of their calumny, and the radio will, for the first time in months, return to a state of salubrity, and refuse to shout out aspersions, defaming quotations, obloquies, desecrations, oburgations and all the malevolent factors entering into a presidential campaign.

This campaign will, undoubtedly, go down in history as being notorious for the atrocities and equivocations resorted to by its political contenders of all parties. The candidates have apparently forgotten that this is the twentieth century, for they have harped back to the methods used during Reconstruction days in their most abortive forms.

Nothing goes farther toward abnegating the theory that we are an intelligent people than the complacency with which we regard present methods of carrying on political campaigns in this country. A clear cut, straightforward, campaign, where all the issues were defined, and a definite stand taken on them, in America would be a political impropriety, worthy of political scorn.

Perhaps, after all, this is a complex of the American people, and not entirely the fault of the politicians.—W.A.S.

Good Men And True

One of the most flagrant evils which exist in North Carolina today is that of the jury system. Here in America, thought by civilized countries to be a land of justice, freedom, and equality, we allow persons to be sentenced to death and to life imprisonment by juries with practically no other qualifications than that they be composed of "twelve good men and true," which are selected at random in the community and are generally possessed of no knowledge fitting them to discern the primary issues involved. The qualities of honesty and integrity, admirable though they be, are not enough to insure to the individual or to the state an intelligent and comprehensive trial. Extensive training and specialization are necessary to make one capable of deciding upon the cases of most people; the majority of our jurors have no special training and, because they lack adequate social contact with the world at large, have only superficial ideas of fields not connected with their own immediate occupations. As was stated in one of our local papers recently, the man most prominent on the jury had never been twenty miles outside of the town in which he was born. This citizen was lauded as a commendable example for his stay-at-home talents, but pity the poor prisoner who came from the other side of the county!

An excellent innovation would be the installation of a jury of experts, best suited to the problem in hand and with the ability to estimate clearly the questions at stake.

The cost of retaining specialists for this purpose would only be a fraction of the sum now employed for the hiring of incompetent jurors, the maintenance of state institutions, and the commission of criminals; the amount of crime would be enormously reduced in proportion.—P.A.H.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

The Hungry Pack

With the electorate shouting for bonus, booze and better times, the political ringmasters follow the dictates of popular appeal and pack their campaign speeches with tumultuous trivialities. Candidates spend an entire address on the minor issues amid the frenzied gesticulations of their devout admirers. Actually, in the last analysis, it is difficult to pick out many constructive oratorical contributions of any one speaker.

Most flagrantly ignored of the major issues is that of economic adjustment and recovery. Both parties are pleasantly oblivious of any reference to the questions extending beyond the realm of empty promise. They both intend to cut down public expenditures, yet they are not quite certain what steps should of necessity be employed for such a move. They fling about "we'll cut federal expenditures twenty-five per cent" and "pare the public debt in half" as if the mere statement of such an effort will satisfy its fulfillment.

But where will the cut come? Let us take a look at the 1933 Budget, which calls for a total expenditure of $4,113,000,000. Three-fourths of this sum, the remainder goes to service on national debt and trust funds) is divided in the main among: Veterans' Relief, $983,000,000; Public Works, $893,000,000; Navy costs, $375,000,000; Army Costs, $320,000,000; and the remaining six hundred million for law enforcement, courts, tax collection, currency control, conservation of resources, administration overhead, outlays for education, public health, foreign relations, and civil pensions. Thus we see an expenditure of more than $2,070,000,000 for the items of Public Works, Navy costs, Veterans' Relief, and Army Costs. The administration has been balked at every turn to pair down these four items and will apparently continue to meet such reverses. So the six hundred millions remaining to be distributed among dozens of projects more pertinent to the public welfare, must, and will, take the cut.

Under the knife will fall such institutions as the Children's Bureau, which cost the government a mere $333,000 in 1930 and the Women's Bureau, which got but $115,000 in the same year. The Bureau of Agricultural Economics, which received $5,969,000 and the Cooperative Agricultural Extension recipient of $7,540,000 are also in line to fall before the predatory knife of destructive reduction.

If the promises of our present political candidates high office are carried forward such reductions must come in these divisions, for the powerful lobby backing the four major items of federal expense have demonstrated their ability to thwart any reduction attempted in that field.

No one has had the courage to declare for the drastic reduction and then back the statement by results or definition of the manner in which it would be attempted. Yet when our men of public affairs turn to expenditure slashing, they forget the fifty-one billion dollar cost of the last war to end wars and lend an ear to the military alarmist who would turn a billion dollars out of the federal treasury to give this nation military supremacy.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

Wants Humanism

Mr. Boethius' lecture was not a brilliant one. He is an authority in his field, no doubt, but his lecture was a failure, and the reason for that failure is very obvious. It can be well contributed to him that he knew his theme and might have made of it an absorbing topic of a very cultural (classical) nature, pertaining to the artistry of Roman architecture. But he didn't, and the reason is, again I say, obvious. Where was his witicism? Why didn't he make use of some mirthful remark? In brief, where was his joke? No American speaker would have dared face an American audience without his story. It need not have been a clever one for we Americans can see the point in a story even though it has none.

And now, a word in regard to that "middle way" of which Mr. E. R. H. refers to so indignantly. If we had been afforded some little insignificant joke to show that the speaker was at least human and in sympathy with his listeners we would have had the benefit of the cultural presentation and at the same time have received some entertainment from the situation. As it is few received anything. Finding it not worth while to stay, many left while the discourse was still in progress. True, they were not the type to desire the better things in life. But, as the prof teaches best who makes his teaching interesting, or the mother who deceives her young into taking medicine by making it think that it is good, by her act of deception succeeds in her purpose, just so could culture be taught those who have no cultural inclination. Perhaps I, myself, am not culturally inclined. However, I have interest enough in my own welfare to have read Shaw's The Road to Culture, not once, but repeatedly, and can cite a few passages now, even though it has been well over a year since I read the work. Culture is "a state of mind like happiness." Culture "emancipates us from ourselves." Culture is the "ability to admire wisely." "The pursuit of culture detracts us from our practical lives." Is there happiness? Are we emancipated? Can we admire wisely an exhibition of the bow, or the account of one's vocation in some far off place unless there is included in said exhibition some little phase of humanism? I leave it to your judgment.

For an Informal

There has recently been brought to my attention a condition which has, no doubt, existed on this campus for quite a while, but which has never provoked criticism from those involved and naturally remains. It is this. So-called class hops are not class hops at all, but are merely formal for those of the class who are lucky enough to own or borrow tuxedos, or for outsiders who procure their bids from the larger portion who are tuxedo-less. It is granted that formal are certainly colorful and enjoyable affairs and should not by any means be dispensed with. However I fail to see why a class informal can't be held also.

The sophomore executive committee seems to be functioning well enough, but I believe a ballot vote of the class would be a more desirable way of deciding the matter.

Lack of additional funds would be a likely and plausible excuse for no informal. To remedy this, I suggest that the lance be made script, to and only to members of the sophomore class. It is true that this proposed dance departs from the regular campus dance program, but outside of that I can see no reason for its failure to materialize.

Students Will See Coffman

Any student majoring in English who wishes to take the comprehensive examination in December should see the head of the English department, Dr. George R. Coffman, immediately. The examination will be more comprehensive than in the past and Professor Coffman wishes to make definite suggestions as to its nature.

Elegy Written After Ten-Thirty

The curfew tolls the knell of parting days,
The lingering ones rush quickly—
Mis' Lee;
The autos all disperse at frantic rates
And leave the world to solitude and fate.
Now fades the "riotous" Spenser from the sight
And in the air a solemn stillness grows, Save where the movie magnate ates warmth and light
And jazzy clinkings mark the night shows.
The great appeal of some unfinished yarn,
The pebbles glancing off the pane glass,
The ford's shrill clarion, or the deep horns
No more shall rouse the coast,
'prisoned fast.
For them no more the blazing light shall burn
Or drugstores present delicious fare,
No Packard's heavy-tired wheels shall turn
Or breezes briskly fan their flying hair.
Let not Fair Freedom mock them:
"little while,"
Their homely joys and destiny obscure,
Nor Grandeur hear with a disdainful smile
The drab, monotonous fate of the demure.
The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power,
All the gifts of beauty or of "jack"
Await alike the inevitable hour;
The paths of pleasure lead but to the Shack.

The University of North Carolina's football team defeated the Florida 'Gators yesterday, 18-13 before a crowd of 6,000 persons in Kenan stadium, giving the Tar Heels a two game winning streak.

Scarcely had the spectators seated themselves when the Tar Heels scored. Ferrazzi kicked off to the Carolina five yard line to Johnny Daniel, who lit out for the sidelines and behind perfect interference, traversed the ninety-five yards that separated him from the promised land.

After that first score the Colingmen settled down to holding the 'Gators from scoring, which they did for a while with the aid of the breaks. The visitors made two rallies, succeeding in crossing the last white line on the latter attempt.

'Gators Threaten

With the ball on their own forty-three yard line, Hughes made eight, McAnly eleven and a first down on Carolina's thirty-eight yard stripe. Of two more rushes McAnly made eleven yards, Moye made eight and followed that up with a beautiful run from the eighteen to Carolina's five. Here the Tar Heels held for three downs, and Florida passed over the goal line.

The 'Gators could not be denied and a little later, scored, after advancing the pigskin from Carolina's thirty-four yard line with McAnly and Moye carrying the ball. The latter plunged over from the one yard line.

Tar Heels' Second Score

Later in the second period the Tar Heels put over their second touchdown. After Burnett punted, the visitors were penalized for clipping and the ball given to them on their one yard line. Henderson, a sub for McAnly punted poorly, the ball going out of bounds on Florida's thirty yard stripe. Thompson made three through tackle, and then Croom passed to Thompson, who caught the ball on the twenty yard marker and ran the remaining distance to the goal line. On this play Thompson was aided no little by Burnett's blocking which took out the Florida safety man as he was about to make the tackle.

No sooner had the Tar Heels made their second score than Croom spliced his way through tackle, and aided by Walker ran forty-four yards for the Tar Heels' final score. The half ended with the score: Carolina 18, Florida 6.

High Spots

OF THE GAME
MORRIE LONG

Resembling Notre Dame in regalia but lacking any of the play that characterizes the Irish's attack, the Florida 'Gators failed to reach the promised land of victory yesterday when Carolina's up and coming grid juggernaut piled up 18 points on lengthy goal line jaunts while holding the Floridians to 13 counters. Florida outgained the Tar Heels by 100 yards and piled up 12 first downs to Carolina's 4, but the Collinsmen were too strong when their goal was threatened. Florida was a victim of a break in the first quarter when Hughes dropped a pass behind the Tar Heel goal line which would have eventually won the contest for the Gainesville aggregation.

If Johnny Daniels' 95 yard run for a touchdown on the first play of the game wasn't as pretty a run as has been seen in Kenan stadium this year, then Kate Smith is a ballet dancer. Memories of Red Grange and Johnny Branch floated out to the smallest crowd of the year when Daniels meandered down the side lines for his dash. Excellent blocking paved the way for the thrilling run.

Going through Florida's defense almost as fast as a pick pocket would in a subway crowd, Bill Croom tore off 44 yards for Carolina's second touchdown with Walker doing some herculean blocking for him... and with Walker and the rest of the team knocking down Florida's secondary Thompson snared the Tar Heels third six pointer when he took Croom's pass on the 15-yard and cavorted the rest of the way.

As slippery a back as has been seen in Kenan stadium this year was McAnly of the 'Gators who repeatedly squirmed through for ten to twenty yards at a (Continued on last page)

Jimmy Hughes, big Florida fullback, who led the Gainesville team's offense yesterday and was acting captain for the tussle. Hughes and McAnly were the main reasons the Tar Heels had trouble going places.

PLAYED BRILLIANTLY YESTERDAY

Johnny Daniel, left, and June Underwood, right, were two of the shining lights in yesterday's win over Florida. Daniel grabbed Ferrazzi's opening kickoff and skipped ninety-five yards for score. Underwood played one of his best games against the 'Gators, intercepting passes, and throwing opposing backs for losses time and again.

TWENTY TEAMS UNDEFEATED SO FAR THIS YEAR

Colgate and Auburn Lead Season's High Scoring With 195 Points Each.

Twenty teams entered the last lap of the football season still undefeated and untied. Notre Dame, Harvard, Johns Hopkins, and Catholic University suffered their first defeat last Saturday while Temple, St. Johns, and Wagner College were tied. Auburn, Tennessee, and V. P. I. are the undefeated and untied Southern Conference teams.

Colgate and Auburn led the year's scoring with 195 points each. Colgate also shared with Southern California the distinction of holding their opponents to no score. Southern California has counted only 84 points so far this season. Brown, however, with 64 points, had the low score among the undefeated clubs.

Brown May Be Killer

Brown faces the biggest problem of finishing the season without a loss. If they go through the year undefeated they will be marked as the giant-killers of 1932. Last Saturday Brown handed Harvard its first setback of this season and the rest of their schedule calls for Holy Cross, Columbia, and Colgate, all on the undefeated list. If Brown should down their first two opponents probably the biggest game in the country Thanksgiving will be the Brown-Colgate clash, as Colgate, playing Mississippi College and Syracuse, is almost sure to come out ahead in both contests.

Some of the undefeated teams and the points they have scored and the points scored against them follows:

| | Won | For | Ag't |
|----------------|-----|-----|------|
| Colgate | 6 | 195 | 0 |
| Auburn | 6 | 195 | 21 |
| Columbia | 6 | 186 | 19 |
| Tennessee | 6 | 149 | 23 |
| Virginia Poly | 6 | 108 | 19 |
| Holy Cross | 6 | 94 | 25 |
| Pennsylvania | 5 | 153 | 13 |
| Calif. (L.A.) | 5 | 108 | 13 |
| Michigan | 5 | 101 | 13 |
| So. California | 5 | 84 | 0 |
| Brown | 5 | 64 | 8 |

Upholds Football Passers

Coach Charles E. Dorais of the University of Detroit claims that it is harder to throw a football pass than it is to catch one. The Detroit mentor recently made a suggestion to the football rules committee that the man who throws the pass on a touchdown play should be given equal credit with the receiver who carries the ball over the goal-line when the official table of point-makers is drawn up.

Army-Harvard

Since last week this game has lost some of its attractiveness. Before the Harvard-Brown game, today's game was looked upon as the leading grid attraction in the East, but Brown's 14-0 victory over the Crimson dispelled that idea. Army by thirteen points.

Fordham-St. Mary's

Whenever a Pacific Coast team pits its forces against an Eastern club, the writer will take the Far Westerners. The Galloping Gaels are undefeated this season, while Fordham hasn't looked any too good losing its last two games to Michigan State and Boston College. The Gaels by twenty points.

Brown-Holy Cross

Late reports have the Bruins slated for a trip to the Rose Bowl, but Tuss McLaughry's men are not in that class yet. However, today they shouldn't have trouble defeating Holy Cross.

Columbia-Navy

Montgomery, Grenda, Matal, Lippoth and Co. are too strong for an exceptionally weak Tar squad. Columbia by two touchdowns.

Pitt-Pennsylvania

When two undefeated teams of the calibre of the Panthers and the Quakers meet, the fur is bound to fly. In the opinion of the writer, the winner of this game will be the East's representative in the Rose Bowl classic. One determined vote for the Panthers.

Kentucky-Duke

In the opinion of the writer the Colonels are a greatly overrated squad. They're good but they are certainly not what they are cracked up to be. In fact, V. P. I. and Alabama cracked them up plenty. On the other hand, the Devils are improving with every game, so we pick the Wademen to extend their victories over Kentucky to three straight.

Tulane-Georgia Tech

Both teams are plenty powerful, but by force of habit, one vote for Tulane.

Southern California-California The Bears haven't dazzled anybody this year while the Trojans are hot. Southern Cal by one touchdown.

Michigan-Indiana

The Wolverines are unbeatable this year and I look for them to repeat their triumph of last year over Indiana.

FLORIDA HARRIER TEAM BEATEN BY TAR HEELS, 22-38

Louis Sullivan Leads Pack by Fifty Yards to Win in Time of 17:35.

Adding insult to injury, Carolina's cross-country outfit defeated Florida harriers, 22-38, to chalk up the second Tar Heel victory over 'Gator teams tallied yesterday. The race was run over the regular course, the participants finishing in Kenan stadium.

Louis Sullivan, Carolina runner, led the procession by a good fifty yards over his nearest competitor. C. C. Calmes, star of the Gainesville club, trailed Sullivan for second place with the time of 17:42.

Clarence Jensen, winner of the Southern Conference meet last year, finished sixth; Jensen, however, has been confined to the infirmary a good part of the training season.

Seven U. N. C. men finished in the first ten—Louis Sullivan, Captain Bob Hubbard, Henry Sullivan, Clarence Jensen, Walter Groover, Lew Cordle, and Jerry Goldman.

Sully Grabs Lead Early

Louis Sullivan grabbed the front position at the very start, and he was never headed, setting a good, steady pace throughout the run of 3.3 miles.

Sullivan finished fourteenth last year in the Southern Conference, but cross-country coaches are expecting him to turn in a better performance this year. The southern meet will be pulled off here a fortnight from now, November 19.

Calmes, who trailed Sullivan for second place, was thirty-second in last year's meet; and the Florida boy also is expected to show Dixie harriers flying heels in this year's run. Calmes previously took first place in a Florida-Georgia meet in which Georgia lost.

Henry Sullivan, twin brother of the winner and victor of this year's Cake Race, kept up the tradition of Cake Race winners by doing very creditable work in today's run.

Meet Duke Next

Dale Ranson's boys clash with Duke's flying Blue Devils Saturday, and all indications point to a hard fought battle between the rival teams November 12 at Duke.

Ranson seemed fairly well satisfied with today's work, but he indicated that plenty of improvement should be evident before November 19, two weeks from now, at the southern meet.

Each team ran eight men instead of seven, as previously planned. Finishers with their times in the positions in which they crossed the goal line follows: Louis Sullivan (C), 17:35; C. C. Calmes (F), 17:42; Bob Hubbard (C), 18:02; Robert Turrill (F), 18:08; Henry Sullivan (C), 18:09; Clarence Jensen (C), 18:41; Walter Groover (C), 18:42; James Burnett (F), 18:52; Lew Cordle (C), 18:59; Gerry Goldman (C), 19:06; J. L. Atherton (F), 19:07; Tom Curlee (C), 19:08; Homer Wakefield (F), 19:11; Ralph Paige (F), 19:23; Edwin Crews (F), 19:43; and James Crews (F), 19:49.

Carolina men running unofficially finished in the following order, some of them finishing ahead of official 'Gator runners: Strat Donnell, Fabius Haywood, J. B. Farr, Don Kimrey, H. W. Gwynn, and Benny Rodin.

Unfortunately, the taxpayer never finds it so easy to raise his taxes as the legislature does.

UNIVERSITY PRESS COMMENDED FOR RECENT RELEASE

"Liberalism in the South" Called
Work of Permanent Value
To Historians.

The recent publication of the University of North Carolina Press, Liberalism in the South by Virginius Dabney, is receiving very favorable notices in the press of the nation. Leading editors and reviewers throughout the country, and especially those in the south, are speaking very highly of it in the columns of their papers.

The University Press has been commended on all sides for having published this work. H. J. Eckenrode, writing in the New York Sun, says of it: "The University of North Carolina Press is to be commended for the publication of a book of such literary charm and finish."

As to the book itself, praises run very high. Editors are almost uniform in their agreement with Ellen Glasgow who says, "Liberalism in the South is a work of permanent value to the historian, and should be placed in every library in the United States."

The New York Sun sums up: "It is able and, unlike the majority of college publications, most readable; Dabney is a brilliant Virginia journalist."

Stringfield To Lead National Orchestra

Lamar Stringfield, musical director of the North Carolina Symphony Society, and chairman of the orchestra divisions of the National Federation of Music Clubs, will conduct the second half of a concert to be presented Sunday, November 13, by the National Symphony Orchestra of Washington, at Washington, D. C.

The compositions that Stringfield is to conduct includes Moronic Danse, a number written by Herbert Hazelman, a sophomore in the University, and From the Southern Mountains, a suite with which Stringfield won the Pulitzer prize in 1928. He will also conduct Soliloquy, by Bernard Rogers, and Excalibur, by Louis Adolphe Coerne.

The orchestra, which is under the direction of Hans Kindler, consists of ninety-five musicians.

Concerts on Chimes to Be Given on Regular Schedule

The concerts on the carillon in the Morehead-Patterson memorial bell tower which have been played at intervals during the past few weeks, will be continued on a regular schedule, it has been announced. Walter B. Patterson, graduate student, who plays the organ in freshman assembly, will give concerts on the bells three times a week. They will take place late in the afternoon, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday of each week, and will consist of old, familiar selections.

Magazine to Be Published

Preparation is being made for the publication of an engineering magazine by the engineering school of the University. All articles which are to be written by local engineering students will be published to help undergraduates of the school. The magazine will be financed by subscriptions from students and others who are interested in the publication.

Challenge

Feeling that the editorial and business staffs of the University's semi-literary publications, the Yackety Yack and the Carolina Buccaneer, have too little opportunity for athletic diversion, the Daily Tar Heel and the Carolina Magazine do herein challenge the first named two to a game of touch football, subject to intramural rules and played under the approval of the intramural athletic association. The staffs of the Tar Heel and its Magazine supplement feel that their superiority over the annual and the humor staffs extend also far beyond the realm of literary superiority.

The visitors kicked off to North Carolina's six yard line where Thompson ran it back to the twenty-seven. Here the Tar Heels were penalized fifteen yards for holding. Burnett then got off a poor kick, the ball going out on his own twenty-three yard line. McAnly faked a pass and ran to the four yard line. McAnly carried the ball and fumbled, the ball landing in the end zone where Davis recovered for the 'Gators. Hughes kicked the extra point.

June Underwood was the defensive star for Carolina, intercepting passes and playing in the Florida backfield. Time after time June piled up the play. In the backfield the touchdown runs of Daniel, Thompson, and Croome were bright spots as was the defensive play of Phipps and Chandler.

McAnly Proves Florida Threat
For the 'Gators, Shearer, left tackle, made the great majority of the tackles, and in general proved a nuisance to the Tar Heel backs. Herb McAnly deserves mention. The tall Florida back is a great offensive and defensive player, and his play proved to be a great part of the 'Gator attack.

New Out-going Mail Schedule Inaugurated

Beginning next Sunday, November 6, a new out-going mail schedule will go into effect. The out-going mail will be closed one-half hour earlier, 9:30 instead of 10:00 o'clock in the morning. As there is only one out-going mail on Sundays, letters dropped in the box after 9:30 Sunday mornings will not get out until 7:00 o'clock the following morning.

The schedule for in-coming and out-going mails follows:

RED CROSS DRIVE TO BE BACKED BY FRATERNITY BODY

Fraternities to Be Canvassed in Attempt to Reach Goal of 1,000 Members Set by Chapter.

At a meeting of the interfraternity council Thursday night in Graham Memorial it was decided to bring to the attention of the members the Red Cross drive for membership which will begin next week. A canvass will be made of all the fraternity houses as part of the drive, and the council hopes that this branch of the campaign will do as much as possible to contribute to the goal of 1,000 new members set by the Red Cross association. Irvin Boyle, president of the council, reminded the members that the relief organization has carried on extensive work in Chapel Hill.

It was also decided at the meeting of the council to submit the books of the organization to the Student Audit Board for checking and auditing. This board was organized last year for the purpose of directing the auditing of the books of student activity organizations.

The rushing rules for the next rushing season will be submitted to the faculty next week for final decision of that body.

Strowd Exhibits Muskrat

A half grown muskrat is on display at Strowd Motor company where it has been given temporary residence. The animal is about 18 inches long, has a beautiful fur, and seems to be quite young. The toes are webbed, and the tail is flattened laterally. The species inhabits the banks of streams and constructs dwellings of sticks and mud somewhat resembling small haystacks. Their fur is so much like the color of the banks that they are often mistaken for lumps of mud till their movements betray them.

Bruce Strowd was driving out on a road from Carrboro, when his attention was caught by the appearance of a moving object across the road. With little difficulty he captured the rodent and brought it to town.

BAPTIST STUDENT GROUP CONVENES AT LOCAL CHURCH

Students From All Parts of State Gather Here; Meeting Will End Sunday.

The annual meeting of the Baptist student union convened last night at 7:30 in the local Baptist church, Miss Kate Allison, the state president presiding. A large number of students from different parts of the state attended this opening session.

The theme of this meeting was "Visualizing the Task and Opportunity," and the meeting was followed at 9:00 o'clock by an informal social gathering with refreshments.

This convention, which will last through Sunday, will have a full day today, with morning, afternoon, and evening sessions. The morning meeting, which will last from 9:00 o'clock until 12:30, will have for its theme "B. S. U. Projecting Christian Lives." The afternoon session will be from 2:00 to 4:30 o'clock, and the evening session will begin at 7:00 o'clock and end at 9:30. The keynote of the conference is "If I Be Lifted Up."

dancers, provided funds for the transportation of about thirty redskins to Chapel Hill from the Cherokee reservation can be provided for, committee officials announced.

Game Is Unusual Mixture

Committee workers said that the ball game, a mixture of hockey, lacrosse, basketball, and football, is of native Indian origin, and that it is still practiced by the Cherokees on their reservation in the mountains. It is played on a grassy field having about the same dimensions as a football gridiron, with goal posts at each end. The players, nine to the side, are naked save for a loin cloth, and each one carries a wire-netted racquet in each hand.

The two teams line up as in football or basketball, with their forwards, centers, and goal guards. The ball is scarcely larger than a golf ball, and it is caught and carried in the racquets. Though piling on is not permitted, the ball carrier may be tackled and held to prevent his throwing the ball.

Staab Returns After Studying Course In France

Professor Studied in Bordeaux During Past Summer While On Leave of Absence.

H. H. Staab of the Romance language department has returned to the University this quarter after a furlough during which he spent a great part of his time abroad.

Except for a short trip to the Balearic Islands he spent most of his time in Bordeaux. At Bordeaux he attended classes in commerce at the University as a visitor. He also visited classes at the Lisee Victor Hugo, and attended the public lectures of the University of Bordeaux. Since he is interested especially in commerce, he visited those classes very regularly. An interesting feature of the commerce course at Bordeaux are the visits every Saturday to large industrial plants.

Staab spent the summer at Saint Jean-de-Luz where the University of Bordeaux conducted its summer school. Saint Jean-de-Luz is a very beautiful town at the foot of the Pyrenees in the Basque country. As one of its attractions it has a beautiful beach. It is also historically important for it was there that Louis XIV was married to the Infante Marie Theresa. Staab was enrolled in the summer school of the University of Bordeaux at Saint Jean-de-Luz.

According to Staab, conditions in France do not seem to be as bad as he had read they were in other European countries.

PRESIDENT SAYS EDUCATION NEEDS MORE DEMOCRACY

Graham, in Speech at Columbia, Points Out Place of Education During Depression.

President Frank P. Graham gave his conception of the role of education in times of depression in an address to the district meeting of the Kiwanis clubs of the two Carolinas, in Columbia, S. C., Friday night. "Today," President Graham stated, "the new frontier and the chief economic and social factor in American life is public education. . . . If we fail there, we fail everywhere."

Place of Education

He further asserted that, "Basic as are the matters of deficits, debts, and the depression, there is something more fundamental at stake back of them all. In tightening up our budgets, we must not lose our democracy. One of the greatest needs in America is a reassertion, in the teeth of cynicism, in our faith in Americanism, in a deeper and a wider use of the ways and powers of democracy."

Equality Base of Democracy

Dictatorships, President Graham pointed out, encroach upon the ideas and processes of democracy throughout the world, whether as fascism in Italy, bolshevism in Russia or privileged interests in America. He stated further that the equality of our democracy and the future of our commonwealth rest in the opportunities open to the children in the public schools.

Evil of Cut Budget

He emphasized the danger of dropping hundreds of teachers in the Carolinas and the crowding of the increasing number of children in the room of the heavily loaded teacher, and the fact that it is the children who pay the costs necessitated by this wasteful economy.

"We stand for a budget of fairness, economy and excellence that will, as an expression of

cember 1, 2, and 3 in Knoxville, Tennessee.

The student branch of the southern district of the national society of American Institute of Electrical Engineers will meet in Knoxville, Tennessee, December 1, 2, and 3. F. S. Black, chairman of the local organization and William Miller, professor of electrical engineering will be the official representatives of the University.

All of the southeastern states will be represented including, North Carolina, Virginia, Louisiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, Florida, South Carolina, and Georgia.

Plans for the meeting include the reading of a number of papers written by students representing the various schools of electrical engineering. These papers will be on the general engineering of electricity or on specific experiments performed. Medals will be awarded to those students who present the best papers. Further plans include a discussion of suggestions for better conditions of education in the schools of electrical engineering.

Date Of Freshman Elections Changed

The date for the election of officers by the freshman class, originally set for November 16, has been changed to Friday, November 18, Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, announced yesterday.

This change was brought about because an assembly period could not be secured for the nominees to make campaign addresses before the freshman class.

The nominations will be made Thursday, November 10, while the addresses will be made November 17 and the election will take place November 18.

A. W. HAMILTON TO SPEAK TO SENIOR 'Y' CABINET GROUP

Episcopal Missionary Will Address Sophomore Meeting on
"Call to Foreign Missions."

The three Y. M. C. A. cabinets will convene tomorrow night at 7:00 o'clock in the Y. M. C. A. building. Interesting programs have been planned for all of the groups.

A. W. Hamilton, well known Charlotte engineer, will address the senior cabinet on the international question. Hamilton is well acquainted with the facts of the case, and his talk is slated to be one of the outstanding addresses of the year to this club. He will also speak at freshman assembly Monday morning.

Dr. Cameron McRae, Episcopal missionary to China, will address the sophomore cabinet on the "Call to Foreign Missions." Dr. McRae has had many years of experience in this field, and he is well equipped to speak on this phase of religious life. He was secured by Rev. Tom Wright, assistant pastor of the Chapel of the Cross. Wright is an advisor to "Y" groups.

The program of the freshman friendship council has not been announced as yet, but Mark Lynch, vice-president who will preside in place of Jesse Parker, and Jim Steere, chairman of freshmen work, promise a wide-awake program to all boys attending the gathering.

All three of the cabinets will be faced by important questions in their business meetings, and each member is urged to attend. Any boys interested in becoming affiliated with a "Y" cabinets are cordially invited to attend the meeting of the division under which they fall — freshman, sophomore, or junior-senior.

Seniors Majoring in English Are Wanted for Conferences

All seniors majoring in English who expect to take the comprehensive examination in December and who have not already made arrangements with some member of the departmental committee on the comprehensive examination have been asked to see either Dr. E. E. Ericson, chairman of the committee, or Dr. G. R. Coffman at some chapel hour within the next two weeks and make arrangements for such conferences.

Phi Mu Alpha Meet

There will be a meeting of Phi Mu Alpha, national honorary music fraternity, tonight at 9:00 o'clock in the music building.

WILL READ PLAY TONIGHT

Belford Forrest will read his latest play, "How It All Began," at the Playmakers theatre tonight at 8:30. This is the second number on the Playmakers' program of monthly Sunday night readings.

Various Faculty Members Advance Views On Presidential Candidates

Professors Interviewed in Daily Tar Heel Survey Give Enthusiastic Comment on Roosevelt While Republican Supporters Refrain From Making Public Announcement.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following are verbatim statements obtained from various members of the University faculty indicating personal reasons for their choice in the Presidential election next Tuesday. THE DAILY TAR HEEL regrets that the known Republican supporters were indisposed to public announcements of their views.)

William S. Bernard, classics department: "I am voting for Roosevelt, first, because I am a Democrat and believe that the doctrines of this party are for the interests of the people as a whole.

"I am voting against Hoover in particular because his constant policy has been to manipulate the functions of government in favor of special privilege of the five per cent, as against the ninety-five per cent.

"Again, I am voting as stated because Roosevelt seems to be intelligent and Hoover stupid."

Dr. English Ragby, psychology department: "I am voting for Mr. Roosevelt in this election principally because I believe that the Democratic tariff policy will establish more satisfactory economie relations with foreign countries."

J. E. Carroll, romance language department: "I will vote for Roosevelt, not because he is the better man, but because he is in a better position to choose a more able cabinet than is Hoover; because the president should be of the same party as his congress.

"I'm an old line Democrat from South Carolina."

Dr. James T. Dobbins, chemistry department: "Not believing in the high tariff, I am voting for Roosevelt."

Dr. E. E. Ericson, English department: "American politics have gone beyond the stage where substantial changes in our social and economic life can be accomplished by making a choice among presidential personalities. This is no apology for Norman Thomas; in straightforwardness, in political morality, in courage and fearlessness, he stands a head taller than the

Aptitude Tests Set For Medical Students

Aptitude tests for medical students will be given the afternoon of December 9, at 3:00 o'clock in room 206, Venable hall. These tests were prepared by the Association of American Medical Colleges.

The examination is a normal requirement for admission to the school of medicine. It is not necessary that all pre-medical requirements be complete at the time of the examinations, but by the fall of 1933.

Students intending to take the examinations should leave their names in Dean Bell's office not later than November 10. Further details will be given later.

Last year 9173 students in the United States took the tests at 537 different colleges.

Executive Committee

The junior class executive committee will meet tomorrow night at 7:00 o'clock in Graham Memorial.

Tryouts Announced For Georgia Debate

Tryouts for the debate with the University of Georgia will be conducted at the regular meeting of the debate group Monday night at 9:00 o'clock in room 214, Graham Memorial. The debate with Duke, scheduled for Monday night, was called off at the request of Duke.

Students who wish to tryout will be given five minutes to express themselves. B. C. Proctor has been selected as one of the speakers. The debate with the University of Georgia will be conducted here November 10. The subject is "Resolved: That the American Legion be condemned."

BAPTIST STUDENT CONVENTION ENDS SESSIONS TODAY

Over Two Hundred and Thirty Delegates Attend Programs
At Baptist Church.

The Baptist student convention, at the First Baptist church, continued its program yesterday after the opening sessions Friday night. The theme for the morning session was: "Baptist student union projecting Christian living," and the afternoon theme concerned itself with "Projecting the denominational program." Last night the student Baptists heard President Frank Graham speak on "The Power of Personal Convictions in Our Life Today."

The convention composed of Baptist students from various colleges and schools in North Carolina convened here Friday under the auspices of the North Carolina Baptist student union and the department of Southern Baptist student work. The program whose keynote is "If I Be Lifted Up" was composed of six sessions continuing from Friday through Sunday.

Today's Program

The program for today includes a morning watch service at 6:00 o'clock with a talk by Rev. Forrest Feezor of Raleigh and a morning session commencing at 9:00 o'clock with a talk by Frank Leavell entitled "And If I Be Lifted Up." This afternoon the closing session of the convention starts at 2:00 o'clock and has for its theme "Present Day Courageous Living."

The registration for the convention Saturday morning totaled 230 with fifty to a hundred more expected before the day was over. The three leading colleges in number of delegates attending the convention are U. N. C. with forty-one students, Campbell with thirty-eight, and Meredith with thirty-seven.

Four Cases Tried Before Recorder's Court Yesterday

In a lengthy session of recorder's court yesterday, four cases were tried before Judge C. P. Hinshaw.

Judgment in the case of W. F. Stroud, charged with giving worthless checks, was withheld and will be given at the next session.

Dewey Horner was fined $50 and costs for driving while under the influence of liquor.

Judgment in the case of Louise Farrington, accused of theft, was withheld until the next session of the court.

George Cole was fined $50 and costs for driving while under the influence of liquor.

FORREST TO READ HIS LATEST WORK AT PLAYMAKERS

"How It All Began" Will Be Read
Here at 8:30 Tonight in Playmakers Theatre.

Belford Forrest, playwright and theatre director who is reading his latest play, How It All Began, at the Playmakers theatre tonight at 8:30 o'clock promises his audience "a peppy evening, even if they don't like the play." The public is cordially invited to attend the reading.

Speaking of the play in a recent letter to Harry Davis, he says: "It's all about the swell bunch who built the first theatre, and they were all just as tricky as theatre managers today, the idea being that the theatre world has never been otherwise and out of a great smouldering heap uprose the priceless beauty of Romeo and Juliet, Hamlet, Othello, and such trifles.

The First Theatre

The first theatre was built by a butter and egg man (a grocer). The first deadheads crashed the gate before the first theatre was built—they started the free list in the lease. The partners fought, lied, stole, cheated—stopped just short of murdering each other. And so on and so on—the theatre is eternally the same. My opus tells the story of how old Burbage swindled his brother-in-law, a grocer, into building the theatre. It is a blasphemous, red-blooded, Elizabethan yarn, obscene and diverting."

Forrest motored up from Columbia, S. C., Saturday with a group of friends who are anxious to hear him read his play.

The visitors were also the guests of the Playmakers at the final performance of Uncle Tom's Cabin last night.

A theatre manager from New York who is very much interested in the play for a Broadway production will probably come down today to hear Mr. Forrest read his play and discuss the production with him.

'Y' CONTINUES TO AID FIRE VICTIMS

Local Y. M. C. A. Cabinets Active in Helping Colored Boys
Of Palmer Institute.

Contributions to the fire victims at the Palmer Memorial Institute are pouring in thick and fast, according to Harry F. Comer, general secretary of the campus Y. M. C. A., who, with "Y" cabinet officials, is in charge of the general relief program. Contributions will be received at the "Y" or a boy will be sent for them upon request.

In a letter appealing to the campus "Y" for aid, Dr. Charlotte Hawkins Brown, president of the institution, who appeared here with the Sedalia Singers last Sunday, said that socks, underwear, shorts, shoes, pants, vests, overcoats, and hats were needed by her boys.

The Palmer Institute is considered one of the most progressive and beneficial institutions to the negro in the south. Located at Sedalia, N. C., ten miles east of Greensboro, the influence of the school has radiated out all over the nation through the Sedalia Singers, a group organized there, which has appeared in concerts in many sections of the country.

In Old Shanty Town

There have been persistent rumors and counter rumors to the effect that the telephone on the various halls of Spencer, due to the complaints of persons unknown who wish to study, are to be taken out or the time for calling limited to a specific hour each day. Shades of our great grandmothers and crinoline, what a suggestion!

Those people who are trying hard to concentrate upon their work undoubtedly have every right, of course, to wish not to be disturbed, but the noise which is made by the telephone would be nothing in comparison with that of the sound of feet going up and down the stairs, in order that messages might be given and received on the ground floor. The din would far exceed in volume and in momentum a composite symphony of "Boots", "The Camels are Coming", and "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, The Boys are Marching."

As to a set time for 'phoning, woman is notorious as a creature of impulse, and the knowledge that only one period for conversation was allowed would so repress and depress her, as to make her a raving maniac. News of importance, such as that of life and death, does not wait for the correct moment and the resulting dissatisfaction with the proposed restrictions on communication would completely offset any of their compensations.

We advocate, as a rule of the new order, that those pupils who have reason to believe they are nearest to the phone, after it has rung six times, answer it; and the problem will be solved permanently and the increase in civilization and prevailing culture will be beyond imagination.

Last of all, let those young ladies who are so desirous of a change remember that if the telephones are taken out, the building will cease entirely to be a Shack and will become only a shanty.—P.A.H.

Autopsy

By Robert Berryman

Bah Jove!

"Convinced that the fighting spirit of Carolina is not dead... an effort to revive the Carolina pep of the past" is now being made, I see by Sunday's paper. An excellent idea, "prominent alumni, faculty members and students," an excellent idea. Carolina has long been too "stiff" and silent at its football games. An organization composed of enthusiastic, boosting students—with that form of school "spirit" that is not objectionable—will do much to end Carolina's sporting lethargy.

But gentlemen, don't, for the love of God and Carolina, call your group of pepsters: "Cheerios!" Such a name! Such a name! Why, you may as well call them "The Rollo Boys" or "The Pansy Club."

The very mention of the name "Cheerio" promptly evokes visions of moving-picture collegians, all raccoon-coated, all pennant-waving, all horn-rimmed-glassed, and all singing in a soprano voice that popular song of some years ago in which the refrain, "I scream, you scream, we all scream for Ice Cream" occurs.

As I take it, this new pep organization is to consist of red-blooded, raw-throated, spirit-urge-oners. It will be a dirty trick indeed to force those with such vibrant Carolina spirit to answer to a name that will, to many more people than you might think, stamp them as a bunch of sissies.

When the word "Cheerio" was first invented, its originator had reason to be proud. Then it was fresh, then it was expressive. It is now hackneyed. It has lost all originality it once had because of its use by thousands of high school and college cheering sections in the United States. It has fallen into disrepute since various radio cheerer-ups have used it in connection with twittering canary birds and sacharin poetry.

Carolina has never been in the habit of picking up the stale crumbs of others and I hope it will not begin now. To use the name "Cheerio" will be to show an alarming lack of originality. I suggest that the cheering section be called "The Pep Club" or the "Cheerleader's League"—or any other expressive name except the fa-de-la, tush-tush, one of "Cheerio."

Poolish

The price of pool in Graham Memorial's game room (of, for, by the students) often exceeds that of regular poolroom prices elsewhere. This is not so easily seen in the game of Rotation, although it may even be detected here, but in the game of Straight pool it becomes instantly apparent.

Often a game of twenty-five balls—played in almost every professional poolroom in these United States for the sum of two-bits—costs as much as forty-five cents when played by the five-cents-per-player-per-fifteen-minutes rate adopted by the Union.

I assume that it is not the Union's policy to squeeze all possible revenue from the students visiting the game room. Therefore, I suggest that the Union adopt that plan of payment used in poolrooms universally, that is to charge ten cents (10c) per game for Rotation pool and twenty-five (25c) per game for a Straight pool game of twenty-five balls.

The possibility of allowing other poolrooms to operate in Chapel Hill is being seriously considered by President Graham and a committee appointed by the board of aldermen. If another poolroom is opened in Chapel Hill at regular prices, the game room will be forced to lower its prices to retain trade. It would be far better for the Union to adjust its prices now and be considered magnanimous than to be forced to do so later and be thought undignified.

University of Florida falls before Tar Heel gridders 18-13, in battle replete with thrills. Daniels, University halfback, scores first touchdown on opening kickoff with ninety-five yard run. Croom and Thompson, other Tar Heel scores. Florida makes three times as many first downs and nearly twice as many yards from scrimmage but lacks scoring punch near goal line.

Louis Sullivan leads Carolina harriers in 22-38 win (lowest score wins) over University of Florida cross-country team in match between halves of gridiron contest. Seven University men finish in first ten to give Carolina low score.—D.C.S.

THOSE NEW BOOKS

LIBERALISM IN THE SOUTH, Virginius Dabney (The University of North Carolina Press) $3.50. Reviewed by Mary Dirnberger.

Here, in this book, a new view of southern history develops—history as it is generated by the interaction of the liberal and conservative forces. At the outset the south had the honor to present to the country at large some of its wisest and most liberal statesmen. In the last half century the history of the liberal movement has been largely that of recovery from ground lost during the thirty years preceding.

Religion, Politics, The Negro Problem, Woman's Rights, Education, Labor and the Economic Order, Literature and Journalism are comprehensively considered. Names of persons and institutions are supplied wherever they are a necessary part of the text. Liberalism, like almost everything else is a relative matter. Certain views held by the few are all the more significant and remarkable when considered against the background of majority opinion.

To outsiders this book affords an interesting study. But to those who intend to live their lives in Dixie it is an essential guide book. Mr. Dabney envisions the south again contributing to the cultural stream of the nation in matters of statesmanship as well as in literature. One of the most hopeful signs is that in spite of vast material development, present day southern people seeking careers, "are apt to be a bit more alive to human values, and a bit less willing to surrender completely to the pull of professional ambition at the expense of the amenities of life, than those who achieve careers in the north or west."

The author states that liberalism is not a creed or a program, "it is an open state of mind which welcomes the closest scrutiny of the existing order." The liberal chooses and combines from various schools of thought "Liberalism is not a complete system but the foundation upon which other systems may be erected." The south because of past tradition (if one goes back far enough) and present opportunity should be fertile ground for the continued advancement of the liberal point of view, and those endeavoring to hold to that view will welcome this volume as an excellent statement of how the matter stands up to now.

The Strange River, Julian Green (Harpers). The protagonist of this novel, although a product of the urban environment of Paris, discovers in himself the lack of that same quality that was so ironically missing in "Lord Jim's" make-up. Like Conrad's hero he broods long and torturous thereon. The knowledge that his worshipping sister-in-law believes him the paragon of all masculine virtue only adds a deeper stab to his knowledge of himself. Observes the author, "Middle-class life does comfortably without such a primitive virtue as courage, and never affords an opportunity for exhibiting it. Many cowards make their fortunes or obtain sordid triumphs in politics or letters, and treat a world more cowardly than themselves with the insolence of impunity, though a rifle pointed at them would drive them into hysterics. Success being no longer a question of courage, the two things are dissociated forever. One sees a coward patiently swallowing insults which other cowards, certain that they are risking nothing, heap wholeheartedly upon them. This is how business is transacted and careers molded."

A gala revival of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" with a "talented company", directed by Samuel Selden for the Playmaker stage. Reviewed by Jack Riley.

They're off! Now ladies, don't get excited; I mean the Carolina Playmakers are off to another season with a revival of that grand old classic, Uncle Tom's Cabin or The Death of Little Eva, Loker, Tom, St. Clare and Legree.

And it was the deaths that stood out unfortunately, since the livelier parts were played by the poorer actors. Despite the weak spots, however, the first three acts swung swiftly forward in a truly melodramatic spirit with few of the hitches expected in a first-night performance, thanks to the stage hands, who made the show a technical triumph.

The settings designed and executed by Mary Dirnberger and Marion Tatum and unified by Mr. Selden's experienced touch had all the gaudiness of the period and conformed strictly to it, except for an occasional spattering of the modern technique.

The ice scene on the river and Miss Tatum's rocky pass scene (at times precariously rocking) were effective and won applause. The scene somewhere in Heaven, to which Eva was allowed to ascend, by the grace of God and the flyman, left the audience gasping—a triumph indeed for the technicians.

The costumes by Mrs. Davis and Ellen Stewart were good. The divertissements directed by Mrs. Barr were entertaining and Thor Johnson's music pleasing.

Directing a cast of twenty-nine, including many character roles, is no small task in itself; and with the added responsibility of sets for twenty-seven scenes, all the director could possibly do was to concentrate on the major parts and leave a host of new actors to prove their inability to act, which many did. While a number of the actors in lighter roles fell down, Phineas Topsy and Ophelia were played excellently enough to sustain the brilliance of the show.

As the little black Imp, Topsy, Sue Southerland made her first appearance with the Playmakers and played the part with such freedom and abandon as endeared her to the audience for all time. Her interpretation of the impudent little slave girl was really marvelous for a high school girl.

As usual Bill Clifford was the warmest character in the show. Twice before he has stolen Playmaker shows, both times in old, pitiful, character parts. This time it was the swashbuckling fellow he played, and the change was apparently no obstacle for he won two personal ovations.

Peggy Hervey played the stern cousin Ophelia with a crispness that brought many hearty laughs from the audience. She is to be congratulated for her misinterpretation of the line, "His mind is wandering," which brought down the house during the death scene of St. Clare. The show was to laugh at and that line with Miss Hervey's particular delivery certainly released a gale of laughter.

Jack Lipka, playing opposite Miss Hervey in the part of Deacon Perry was obviously straining every line to get the laughs that should have come quite easily.

Betty Barnett made a convincing Liza, but got very little support from Furman James, as her husband. Little Monty Howell fitted the part of their son, Harry, very well.

The character of little Eva fairly dripped sweetness as played by Eugenia Rawls and when she reached Heaven, we felt she was better located than in a co-ed school.

The most courageous piece of work in the whole play was David McIlhenny's Uncle Tom. He felt the part throughout and tried difficult things with his voice. His biggest mistake was the athletic elasticity he allowed to creep into his drooped body.

Foster Fitz-Simmons exhibited an impressive stage mien and an excellent voice, but his interpretation of the kind and generous St. Clare was stiff and without depth. He delivered every line clearly but without warmth and sympathy necessary for the sad scenes in the play.

Among the minor characters, Jo Orendorff stood out. Her few lines in the cabin scene with Uncle Tom smacked with real depth of that old negro character, Chloe. Bob Reid was good as usual. His son, George Shelby, was done tolerably well by J. A. Barrett. Red Rankin played the villain, Tom Loker, so badly he was mistaken for Legree. He did well; he couldn't have done it worse without putting Hugh Wilson to shame as Legree. Wilson was the same villain we saw in Strike Song, a giant body that would strike terror in such innocents as Emmeline without speaking.

Eileen Ewart found playing Marie quite amusing and amused the audience thoroughly with the song in which her hands played the most important part. She found the character of Marie in the one line she spoke in Eva's death scene.

Mayne Albright failed to get the humor in Wilson's lines and swallowed the end of each sentence. The least said about Marks and Cute the better. The other minor roles were done modestly enough to be acceptable.

Democratic Committee At Work for Absentee Voters

A committee, recently appointed by Hamilton Hobgood, president of the Young Democratic club, has been trying to get the Democrats who live in Chapel Hill or nearby towns, to obtain absentee ballots and vote on election day.

Duke Blue Devils Overwhelm Heavy Kentucky Eleven 13-0

James and Laney Score for Methodists in Impressive Win Yesterday.

JOHNSON KENTUCKY STAR
Quarterback Plays Brilliantly Throughout Tussle; Kercheval Kept on Sidelines.

The Duke Blue Devils ran and passed their way to an impressive 13-0 victory over the howling Wildcats of Kentucky yesterday afternoon in the Duke stadium.

Led by the brilliant line play of its mommoth tackle, Freddie Crawford, who was ably assisted by Andrews, and Porreca, and the backfield play of Captain Mason, Hendrickson, Laney, and Rossiter, the Devils outplayed Kentucky throughout. The Wildcats were without the services of Ralph Kercheval, their famous fullback, but in Ellis Johnson, quarterback, they uncovered one of the cleverest, hardest running backs ever seen in the Duke pasture.

The work of Johnson was the chief reason the Devils were backed on their goal line several times only to take hold and drive the Wildcats from the door. The Duke line was a power of strength yesterday, opening up holes and smothering every Kentucky power play attempted. The 'Cats gained regularly on a lateral pass and a pass combination of Johnson to Darby or whoever Johnson saw clear.

James Scores on Pass

The first period ended with no score and the two teams opened up a little in the second quarter. The 'Cats had the ball and tried a long pass; Hendrickson, Methodist speed merchant, intercepted it and trotted some seventy yards, weaving and cutting, until he was downed on the Kentucky five yard line. The Wildcats held for three downs but then Rossiter tossed a beautiful pass right over the line to James and the score. Try for point failed.

The rest of the period was eventless, and Kentucky entered the third period determined to knot the count. Led by Johnson, the 'Cats made several dangerous advances on the Devil goal but each time were thwarted within the shadows of the promised land.

Laney Circles End

The last period saw the Blue Devils push over their second and final score. On an exchange of kicks Duke got the ball in midfield and drove the Kentuckians back being stopped momentarily on the five yard line. From here, Nick Laney swept around end for the score. The point was made from placement and the score stood 13-0. Here Johnson rallied his 'Cats for one final effort and opened up a dazzling passing attack which was cut short by the referee's whistle.

It was a defensive game throughout with State getting six first downs to the Kittens' four.

LOU BUSH LEADS IN GRID SCORING BY SLIM MARGIN

Diminutive Halfback on Massachusetts State Team Has Scored 105 Points.

It's about time that Lou Bush, the flashy little halfback from Massachusetts State College, be given credit for his work last season and this. At this writing Bush is the leading scorer in the collegiate football ranks. He has carried the ball across the goal line sixteen times, and has converted the extra point five times for a total of 105 points, and the season is only three-fourths over!

Last year Bush was the second highest scorer. He made twenty touchdowns and seven extra points for an aggregate score of 127 points. He is also credited with making the longest punt return of last year which was 92 yards. He holds this record jointly with Barron of Georgia Tech.

Bush weighs but 140 pounds and it is rumored that he buys his clothes in the boys' department of the town store.

The home town of this scoring flash is Turner Falls, Mass. When he was in high school Bush played on a real farmer boy team that averaged 190 pounds. He had to learn to be shifty in order to avoid being hurt. He slides away from a hard tackle just as a boxer rolls off a hard punch.

There is no doubt that Bush would have been overrun by scouts from large colleges had he gone to a prominent high or preparatory school. However Bush is not sorry that he does not go to some large school since he has a desire to become a good farmer, and therein lies the main reason why Massachusetts State College was blessed with this phenomenal football star.

Bush is a junior at school now and therefore has a full season of football to play after the current one. In the one and one-half years he has played college football he has amassed 216 points. He has an ambition to score 400 points before he leaves Massachusetts State.

NOTRE DAME WILL KEEP SAME COACH

Ramblers See No Reason to Let Hunk Anderson Go Because of Loss Of Pittsburgh Game.

Spiking rumors that a new Notre Dame grid coach would be hired for the next football season, Jesse Harper, Rambler athletic director, announced that Heartly (Hunk) Anderson would remain as head coach at the South Bend institution for another year.

"Rumors can fly where they will, but Anderson will be back at Notre Dame as head football coach," Harper emphasized. "The fact that he lost a game is no reason to fire him. Why, we at Notre Dame feel that he has done a fine job. He stepped into a tough job, and we like the way that he has handled it."

"Any reports to the contrary are mere propaganda and should be treated as such."

IMPORTANT TILTS SET IN TAG RACE

Grimes Meets Old East and Sigma Nu Tackles Chi Psi in Sixth Week's Play.

Leaders in the two intramural tag football races will have hard sledding in the next few days of play according to the schedule for the sixth week of the campaigns, released yesterday by Herman Schnell, director of intramural athletics.

Sigma Nu Meets Chi Psi

In the fraternity circuit the feature game of the week, and what promises to be one of the highlights of the season, will bring together Sigma Nu and Chi Psi on the first field at 4:30 tomorrow afternoon. Both teams have come through five games undefeated.

Alpha Tau Omega, which has won all its four games to date, is booked for two games this week, meeting Pi Kappa Phi Monday and Theta Kappa Nu Thursday. Both these opponents are second division clubs, however, and are expected to offer but little opposition to A. T. O.'s march to the playoffs.

Zeta Psi and Beta Theta Pi, the other teams in the Greek-letter circuit, will oppose Lambda Chi Alpha and Delta Tau Delta, respectively. Lambda Chi Alpha was, until recently, among the leaders, but has dropped its last two games. Delta Tau Delta has lost all four of its games to date.

Other promising contests listed for the week are the Sigma Chi vs. S. A. E. set for Tuesday and the Phi Sigma Kappa vs. T. E. P. tussle Wednesday.

Grimes and Old East Battle

In the dormitory race only two teams have kept their slates clean so far, and both are scheduled to see action during the coming week. Tuesday afternoon Grimes will meet Old East, which has shown marked improvement in its recent games. Lewis will oppose Steele earlier the same day.

Monday's schedule follows: 3:30 p. m.—(1) Phi Delta Theta vs. Delta Kappa Epsilon; (2) Alpha Tau Omega vs. Pi Kappa Phi; (3) Ruffin vs. New Dorms.

4:30 p. m.—(1) Chi Psi vs. Sigma Nu; (2) Everett vs. Manly; (3) Delta Tau Delta vs. Pi Kappa Alpha.

BALTIMORE PLANS TO STAGE ANNUAL NORTH-SOUTH TILT

Yearly Classic Will Be Played in Huge 60,000 Capacity Stadium in Baltimore.

The city of Baltimore will toss its hat in the football ring December 10 when it stages a north-south all-star football game at its huge municipal stadium seating more than 60,000 persons.

The north team will be recruited and coached by Jock Sutherland, of the University of Pittsburgh, while the southerners will have Dick Harlow, coach of the Western Maryland eleven, as mentor.

In order to insure a real football game played on its merits, the squads—each 22 strong—will be brought to Baltimore a week ahead of the game for frequent practices.

From the north it is expected that such colleges and universities as Pittsburgh, Colgate, Cornell, Columbia, Pennsylvania, Princeton, Fordham and a host of others will be recruited for outstanding players, and the pick of gridders from the smaller institutions will also be on the eligible list. The south has colleges like Alabama, V. P. I., Georgia, Tennessee, Western Maryland, Tulane and many others on which to draw.

Yackety Yack Accepts Tar-Mag's Challenge

If Buccaneer Agrees to Play, Traditional Publication Rivals Will Meet in Gridiron Game.

Spirits ran high in the Tar-Mag football camp yesterday afternoon when it was learned that the Yackety-Buc team had accepted the touch football challenge of the doughty grid combination from the DAILY TAR HEEL and the Carolina Magazine.

The answer to the challenge, received early yesterday morning from Editor Nutt Parsley stated: "Though it is admittedly the only gentleman's (not to say white collar) publication on the campus, the Yackety Yack accepts the bold (not to say ambitious) challenge of the TAR HEEL and Magazine with much anticipation. For an organization which has been in training for six months getting junior-senior pictures, a mere touch football game should be a pleasure."

No date has been set for the game as yet. The redoubtable Tar-Mags were said yesterday to be awaiting the response of Bobby Mason, editor of the Buccaneer, before the necessary field is hired and officials bribed.

Looking over his material yesterday, Coach "Pop" Albright, who comes to the Tar-Mag team from a successful season at the University of New Jersey (winners of the Little Two conference, 1904) remarked jubilantly, "I have nothing to say."

BULL CITY HIGHS BEAT GOLDSBORO TO LEAD LEAGUE

Durham Highs Go Into Undisputed Leadership of Class "A" Standing by Win.

Durham high school went into undisputed first place in the eastern North Carolina class "A" high school football conference by trouncing the Goldsboro eleven, 46-7. Raleigh, the only other undefeated team in the eastern section, was idle. In the western conference, Salisbury and Charlotte stayed neck and neck in the race by both winning, Salisbury beating Gastonia, 19-13, and Charlotte downing High Point, 40-0. Neither winning team has been defeated.

In the other class "A" game in the west, Winston-Salem downed Greensboro, 7-6. This was the first score registered by Greensboro in the current football conference.

In the western class "B" league, Thomasville defeated Spencer, 27-6, and Mount Airy beat Statesville, 18-6. These winning teams will play Reidsville and Shelby respectively next week in the western semi-finals.

Chapel Hill won the third eastern district of class "B" Friday by beating Apex, 25-0. Lumberton won the fourth district title, defeating Hamlet, 20-0.

A meeting of representatives of these winning teams will meet with E. R. Rankin in Raleigh tonight to arrange for the semi-final games next week. The finals will be played November 25 in Kenan stadium.

The standing of class "A" teams is as follows:

| Western Division | | | W | L | T |
|------------------|---|---|---|---|---|
| Salisbury | 3 | 0 | 0 | | |
| Charlotte | 2 | 0 | 0 | | |
| Winston-Salem | 1 | 1 | 1 | | |
| High Point | 1 | 2 | 0 | | |
| Gastonia | 0 | 1 | 2 | | |
| Greensboro | 0 | 3 | 1 | | |
| Eastern Division | | | W | L | T |
| Durham | 3 | 0 | 0 | | |
| Raleigh | 1 | 0 | 1 | | |
| Wilmington | 0 | 1 | 2 | | |
| Goldsboro | 0 | 1 | 1 | | |
| Rocky Mount | 0 | 2 | 0 | | |

CHAPEL HILL WINS APEX GAME, 25-0

Local Gridders Will Play Lumberton for Title in Eastern Class "B" Division.

Chapel Hill high school, chalked up a decisive win over Apex high, 25-0, Friday at Sanford in the quarter-finals of the Eastern class "B" high school division.

Both of these clubs had previously won in their respective divisions, but the boys from the seat of the state University were too much for their opponents.

Apex produced her lone threat of the entire contest when an off-side penalty nipped an apparent scoring maneuver; however the Wake county lads played a hard game, fighting Chapel Hill throughout the entire four stanzas.

Apex won the Eastern class "B" title last fall, but they lost to the Reidsville highs in the state finals at Chapel Hill. Several Apex stars were lost by graduation.

This win places the local high in the semi-finals of the Eastern class "B" division. They will meet Coach Bill Timberlake's Lumberton gridders who defeated Hamlet 20-0 Friday.

CANZONERI WINS FROM PETROLLE TO DEFEND TITLE

Tony Canzoneri, little Italian-American, held on to his lightweight championship of the World Friday night by outpointing Billy Petrolle in a hard-fought and exciting 15-round bout at Madison Square Garden.

The battle drew nearly 20,000 customers and not a one was disappointed. When Joe Humphries raised the champion's hand in victory a tremendous cheer rang out which was as much for the loser as for the victor.

CLEAN RECORDS ARE MAINTAINED BY SEVEN CLUBS

Five Fraternities and Two Dormitory Teams Remain Undeclared in Intramurals.

None of the seven intramural tag football teams which started the past week undefeated fell by the wayside during the four days of play since that time.

In the fraternity circuit, Beta Theta Pi, Chi Psi, Sigma Nu, Zeta Psi, and Alpha Tau Omega all came through their games last week victorious. Lewis and Grimes kept their dormitory league records clean by virtue of similar victories.

Beta Theta Pi gained its win of the week in a hard fought game, 18-6. Joe Eisner, of the losing outfit, scored his team's touchdown on an 85-yard run-back of the first kickoff of the second half.

Chi Psi overwhelmed Phi Alpha early in the week, 39-6. The game was played in poor light and the quarters were shortened to allow the game to be completed. Even under this handicap, Chi Psi showed a wealth of power and speed in rolling up six touchdowns. Don LaBorne and Bob Atwood led the winning outfit's attack. This is the first time that the Chi Psi goal was crossed this year.

Zeta Psi flashed a strong attack in the first half to score three touchdowns on Theta Chi. In the second half there was no scoring due to a decided bracing of the Theta Chi offense and defense. The losers held a commanding 7-3 lead in first downs at the end of the game as a result of their work in the second half.

Alpha Tau Omega advanced at the expense of Zeta Beta Tau, 33-0. The Z. B. T. eleven put up a stubborn defense but was outclassed throughout the contest.

'RED DUST' OPENS CAROLINA MOVIE BILL TOMORROW

Clark Gable and Jean Harlow
Appear in Screen Version Of Colossus's Play.

After being in preparation for nearly a year, the long-awaited screen version of Wilson Colossus's play, "Red Dust," comes to the Carolina theatre Monday and Tuesday with Clark Gable and Jean Harlow co-starred.

In one of the most powerful roles of his career, Gable is cast as Dennis Carson, brutal overseer of a rubber plantation in Indo-China, who becomes the center of a dramatic love triangle. Miss Harlow portrays the seductive Valentine, who makes regular trips up the river from Saigon to visit the rubber plantation.

Detective Thriller

"Sherlock Holmes," the new Fox picture based on one of Conan Doyle's most thrilling titles, comes to the Carolina Wednesday. Clive Brook, who plays the great detective, finds himself, in conjunction with Scotland Yard, pitted against the arch criminal, Moriarty, and a band of gangsters recruited from both sides of the Atlantic.

The romance of the tune fisheries, with all the wealth of dramatic highlight and perils, is portrayed with all the resources of a modern motion picture studio in First National's production, "Tiger Shark," which will be shown for the first time at the Carolina theatre next Thursday.

Stuart Erwin, bewildered-looking Hollywoodite, who is featured with Alison Skipworth in "He Learned About Women," comedy which comes here discovered that fact when he sharpened his pencil one day and plunged into a maze of statistical data concerning the working hours of the film colony.

In "Virtue," coming to the Carolina theatre Saturday, William O'Brien has a splendid characterization, that of a hard-boiled New York taxi driver who knows all about women, but who marries a girl with a past, only to discover that she has been convicted of immorality.

CLEAN RECORDS ARE MAINTAINED BY SEVEN CLUBS

Alan Smith's running and passing featured the game.

Lewis emerged victorious, 3-2 in first downs, over Best House in the closest game of the week, when "Snooks" Aitken snared a pass which was in the air as the final whistle sounded. The completion of the pass gave Lewis a first down and victory and enabled the winners to maintain their record of having won five games without scoring a touchdown.

Grimes won from Manly, 6-0, in a slow game played on a mud-soaked field.

The leaders in both leagues at the end of the fifth week of play are as follows:

| Fraternity League | | | |
|-------------------|----|----|-------|
| | W. | L. | Pct. |
| Beta Theta Pi | 5 | 0 | 1.000 |

SEVERAL FACULTY MEMBERS SPEAK AT RALEIGH MEET

Leaders in Various University Fields Lecture at Carolina Educational Association Meeting.

Several members of the University faculty were presented the various programs of the north central district meeting of the North Carolina educational association which convened in Raleigh Friday and Saturday.

Miss Irene Fussler, secretary of the Carolina dramatic association under the University extension department, addressed the department of dramatic teachers on "Suggested Programs for Dramatic Clubs." Lamar Stringfield spoke before the music division on "Carolina Symphony Society, Its Organization, and Its Future Plans." Miss Nora Beust spoke about "New Books of Real Interest" before the librarian division, and Dr. E. T. Browne addressed the mathematics department on "The Incommensurables of Geometry." Dr. Browne delivered a similar address last week at the district meeting held in Charlotte. Dr. E. W. Knight lectured on "Observation on Education in the Near East" before the educational department.

Professor H. F. Munch, of the University education faculty, heads the mathematics department of this district, Professor C. E. Preston of the same school is head of the science department, and Professor A. K. King leads the social science teachers department.

Erratum

THE DAILY TAR HEEL stated in an article Wednesday that the pastor of the colored Baptist church at the time the Franklin street improvement petition was being circulated used unfair means to obtain signatures to the petition. This statement was an error due to mis-information.

The petition was brought to the church by a white man interested in getting the assessment bill passed. It was he who deceived the congregation by saying that the church members would be eligible to vote if they would sign the petition. The pastor of the church, on the other hand, advised his people not to sign the paper and told them that it had nothing to do with the church roll or the eligibility to vote.

other candidates. The battle, however, is one of systems, of ways of life. The wisest, the most honest, the most capable man is powerless when tied to such a barbarous, inefficient, and unsocial system as Capitalism. Men like Woodrow Wilson, high-minded enough in themselves, are completely hamstrung by the nefarious system of which they are a part.

"Thus their political idealism, glorious from the platform, becomes the hollowest mockery in the midst of self-seeking politicians and the predatory financial barons whose tools they are. "Because I believe that the mass intelligence of the American people, expressed in a workers' party and animated by the vision of a new society, is the only thing that can extricate us from the jungle we are in, I intend to cast my vote for the Socialist party through its standard-bearer, Norman Thomas."

W. S. Jenkins, history department: "I'm going to vote for Roosevelt and Garner because I think the country needs a change. I thought we needed a change in 1928, and we need one now. We need a change because no party should stay in power too long.

"I will vote for Roosevelt because Hoover's Republican administration has been a complete failure, having fulfilled none of the promises.

"We also need a Democratic president to function with the Democratic congress which we are certain to have.

"The Democrats, I believe, will more speedily repeal the eighteenth amendment, which is vicious while in the constitution. And I believe the Democrats will fix a more favorable and profitable tariff."

Dr. William deB. MacNider, medical department: "I think I'll vote for Roosevelt because I haven't nerve enough to vote for Hoover."

Fred B. McCall, law department: "I shall vote for Roosevelt instead of Hoover because I think this country needs not only a new shuffle but also a new deal in the administration of its affairs. Four years of equivocation, false promises, and impotence ought to be enough. If one desires an immediate change, a vote for Norman Thomas will not help the situation; he has no chance of election."

W. M. McLeod, romance language department: "I am going to vote for Roosevelt because I think he is more progressive than Hoover and that he will be responsible for more social legislation favorable to the people."

Dr. Harold D. Meyer, sociology department: "I am not voting against Hoover, but for Roosevelt. The soundness of the Democratic platform, the possibilities of leadership within the party, and a desire to see the party in victory lead me to vote. Since 1860 the Democratic party has been in power only twice, covering sixteen years. In these times they gave the people of the country an honest and courageous administration. I believe the same will be true if the Democratic party comes in power this time."

Dr. C. T. Murchison, economics department: "I am going to vote for Roosevelt, because I feel that the Democratic party just now affords the only hope for economic liberalism. Worldwide business recovery is hardly possible until there has been a substantial scaling-down of tariff walls and of the heavy burdens of inter-government debts.

"The Republican administration has shown a total incapability to grasp the economic issues in these two questions, and has exhibited no vestige of qualifications for world-wide economic leadership."

Dr. E. K. Plyler, physics department: "I am voting for Roosevelt because I feel that his economic policies will be better for the country than those of the present administration. I feel, also, that he will represent the interests of the majority of the people instead of representing special interests."

C. B. Robson, history department: "I would vote for Roosevelt because I think he is more progressive than Hoover and would therefore do more for the lower economic class."

W. L. Wiley, romance language department: "I'm an old line Democrat who is about to jump out of the traces. The only reason I'm going to vote for Roosevelt is that he is the lesser of two evils. Roosevelt is decidedly not my choice."

Y. M. C. A. MAKES PLANS FOR THIRD DEPUTATION TRIP

Team Will Leave Here Today to Speak
At Woman's College and at High Point.

The third deputation group will be sent out by the Y. M. C. A. today when a team composed of a half dozen University students journeys to Greensboro to appear before the assembly of the Women's College of the University of North Carolina.

Billy McKee, president of the local association, together with Jack Poole, president of last year's Freshman Friendship Council, will give the main speeches at the gathering. A quartet, to be composed of John Briggs, Raymond Brietz, Charles Templeton, and Jesse Parker will accompany to furnish entertainment. These four met have been practicing for some time, and they promise a real program for their audience.

This same group will go to High Point Monday and appear before student groups at High Point and at High Point College. Previously deputation teams have been sent to Aberdeen, where they organized a J. Y. club, and to N. C. State College.

Union Forum Dance Group Will Meet Tomorrow Morning

The Student Forum dance committee will meet tomorrow morning at chapel period to formulate plans for the Thursday night entertainment series sponsored by the Student Forum.

Plans for the continuance of the series will be discussed, pending the decision of the Graham Memorial board of directors as to the further permitting of dances in the lounge of the union building.

SEGREGATION OF FRESHMEN TO BE DISCUSSED BY PHI

Di Senate Will Take Up Proposal Favoring Ruling of Secretary Doak.

The regular meeting of the Phi assembly tonight at 7:00 o'clock in New East will be of special interest to freshmen.

The first resolution to be discussed reads as follows: Resolved: That freshmen should be segregated in separate dormitories and should not be allowed to move out or be initiated into fraternities until their sophomore year. The floor will be open only to freshmen while this bill is being argued, since it is the purpose of this session to bring out more activity on the part of the new representatives.

The other resolution will be discussed by the entire assembly. They are: Resolved: That city-county consolidation be effected where it is possible in North Carolina. Resolved: That the low tariff advocated by the Democrats is a better policy for the United States than a high protective tariff as exemplified by the Smoot-Hawley bill which is sponsored by the Republicans.

Di Meeting

The Diectic senate at its regular meeting tonight at 7:00 o'clock in New West will discuss the following bills:

Resolved: That the Diectic senate go on record as favoring the ruling of Secretary of Labor Doak prohibiting foreign students in the country from working in vacation or part-time during the regular scholastic year.

Resolved: That the United States should adopt a minimum wage law.

At this meeting the formal initiation of new members is scheduled. New members are urged to attend.

Thirteen Institutions Send 275 Representatives to Meeting During Week-End.

The annual State Baptist Union convention, in session here over the week-end, closed Sunday afternoon with addresses by Reverend Eugene Olive, pastor of the Baptist church; Reverend E. N. Gardner of the Dunn Baptist church, and Frank H. Leavell of Nashville, Tenn., south-wide student secretary.

Olive stressed the importance of making Christianity vital for the nation and Gardner told of the importance of "lifting Christ up through vocational choice." Reports of committees featured the final session Sunday afternoon.

275 Attend

In attendance were 275 student representatives from thirteen institutions. The next meeting will take place at Wake Forest.

"We haven't lifted Christ up in the economic world," Leavell affirmed. "And the collapse of business has been due to the

There will be a meeting of the business staff of the Carolina Buccaneer tonight in the business office, 207 Graham Memorial, at 7:00 o'clock.

Holt Awards Will Be Granted Friday

The Holt scholarship committee, composed of several faculty members, will meet Friday afternoon to consider recommendations for the annual award of Holt scholarships.

Applications for these scholarships must be presented at Dean A. W. Hobbs' office in South building before Friday afternoon. Each must be accompanied by three recommendations, one of which must be from the applicant's home town.

The scholarships are awarded through a fund bequeathed to the University by Laurence S. Holt of the class of 1904. Four students who excel in scholarship and who need financial aid, will be awarded $100 according to the terms of the bequest.

Holt has also made available loan funds for needy and worthy students.

LOCAL VOTERS TO CAST BALLOTS IN LITTLE TIN CAN

Town, County, State, and National Candidates Will Be Chosen Today.

The public school athletic building, Little Tin Can, is the voting place for the Chapel Hill precinct. The polls will be open from 6:22 a. m. to 5:07 p. m.

This year there will be an extra unofficial ballot in Chapel Hill which will contain the names of the Democratic candidates for justice of the peace.

The Democratic candidates whose names appear on the county ballot are as follows: for the state senate, J. S. Hill and D. J. Walker; for the state house of representatives, S. M. Gattis; for county sheriff, W. T. Sloan; for register of deeds, S. W. Andrews; for county treasurer, G. G. Bivins; for coroner, S. A. Nathan; and for county commissioners, J. H. Hanner, W. P. Berry, and R. A. Eubanks.

The Republican candidates are listed as follows: for the state senate, J. C. McAdams; for the house of representatives, H. D. Carter; for county sheriff, H. G. Riley; for register of deeds, Frank Stowd; for treasurer, M. L. Cates; for coroner, B. B. Lloyd; for surveyor, J. R. Weaver; and for county commissioners, Lueco Lloyd, W. T. Roberts, and G. O. Reitzel.

The ballot for governor, other state officers, United States senator, and representatives in congress, will contain just two columns, Democratic and Republican.

UNION FORUM MEETING IS SET FOR TOMORROW

The Union Forum will conduct its second meeting of the year tomorrow night at 9:30 o'clock in room 215 Graham Memorial, to consider and discuss certain issues and proposals of the student council. The meeting will last an hour after which the members will have the privilege of using the game room until 11:00 o'clock. Cards will be sent to the members.

McRae Will Speak

Dr. Cameron McRae, Episcopal missionary to China, will address the freshmen assembly this morning at 10:30 o'clock. He was secured by Reverend Tom Wright, assistant pastor of the Chapel of the Cross.

Henderson's Biography Of Shaw Called History Of British Drama

Dr. Walter Prichard Eaton, Member of the Pulitzer Prize Committee, Lauds Biographer's Material and Method of Approach in Review in New York Herald-Tribune.

Not the portrait of Bernard Shaw, the man, but the literary and social history of the England of his time is the most significant result of Archibald Henderson's recently published biography, Bernard Shaw: Play-boy and Prophet. This view is advanced by Dr. Walter Prichard Eaton in a review of the volume in the latest edition of Books, literary supplement of the New York Herald-Tribune. Dr. Eaton, recognized as one of the foremost contemporary critics of the drama, is a member of the Pulitzer prize play committee and has written an authoritative history of the Theatre Guild.

Peers Over Shaw's Shoulder

"What he actually does," writes the critic in reference to Dr. Henderson's work, "is to write a history of modern English drama, and modern English social reform, and passions during the World War, peering over Shaw's shoulder, as he does so. His dragnet has been out in all directions, sometimes, into strange waters, exactly because he looked where Shaw looked."

As has been done before, Dr. Eaton compares the author of this official biography to James Boswell. "It is, in a sense, a Boswellian method, but has the advantage of supplying its own footnotes. Like Boswell's method, it builds up a portrait, builds up, rather an acquaintance with the subject just as we get to know and ultimately estimate anybody from observing his reactions to the world over a period of time. Is there any biographical method better?"

HAMILTON SPEAKS ON DEPRESSION AT ASSEMBLY PERIOD

Speaker Declares United States Is Despised Because It Did Not Tax Rich in World War.

The freshman and sophomore assembly was addressed yesterday by A. W. Hamilton of Charlotte, who is considered an authority on finance and debt. He has had fifteen years' experience with this problem.

Hamilton said that the real reason for the economic depression goes back to the time of the United States' entry into the World War. At that time we were the most respected nation in the world by virtue of our having been the melting pot of the world; now we are the most hated, most despised of all the nations. "The trouble was due," stated Hamilton, "to the fact that we did not conscript wealth and property instead of flesh and blood. We, our children and grandchildren must slave in order that the war profiteers might collect what is due them."

In conclusion Hamilton said that all men of the "Al Capone" type should be lined up against a stone wall and executed, thereby saving the people of the United States $400.00 per capita.

Freshmen Co-eds Meet

The freshmen co-eds had their regular monthly meeting last night in the woman's reception room of Graham Memorial at 7:00 o'clock. This was the second meeting of this group since its organization last month.

What Henderson thinks of Shaw as a dramatist, how high he ranks him, does not matter in this process. The biographer as a critic can have his say, and still leave us the picture, the acquaintance and we may do our own estimating."

Henderson's Collection Praised

Ample tribute is paid Dr. Henderson's use of his famous collection of Shaviana. Pictures, verbatim statements, information about first and subsequent performances of Shaw's plays in all foreign countries, and his letters are considered keenly interesting and valuable by Dr. Eaton.

"Here is the story of one of the alertest intellects of our time, ceaselessly at work for two generations," writes Dr. Eaton in reviewing the author's estimate of his subject, "one of the chief comic dramatists of our times fighting both an artistic and intellectual battle, one of the most puzzling personalities of our times, at once posing before the public as the most arrogant egotist, the most flippant jester, and at the same time over and over demonstrating himself a man of deep social passion."

Reasons for Writing Biography

The critic states his personal justification for a biography of Shaw in three points. "The story of Shaw's battle is the story of the modern drama in English, and of much other modern literature beside." The very conflict of opinion over his personality, which has caused him to be likened to everybody from

Ten Plays by Members of University Playwriting Class Will Be Produced This Week-End.

Ten plays written this quarter in the playwriting classes, English 55 and English 225, will be presented this week-end at the Playmakers theatre. The definite date will be announced later.

The plays and their authors are:

The Shadow for Davie, a play of the southwest frontier by Philip Milhous; And They Lived Happily, domestic comedy by Marion Tatum; Hell-bent for Honolulu, college comedy by W. A. L. Bonyon; Nothing Ever Happens, family comedy by Elmer Oettinger; Sour Fodder, a play of the Iowa small town by Burdette Kindig; Four on a Heath, a fantasy by Foster Fitz-Simmons; Old Ninety-Seven, tragedy of railroad life by Wilbur Dorsett; Gateway, an interlude by Eugenia Rawls; Creek Swamp Nigger, negro tragedy by Harry Coble; Stumbling in Dreams, a play of Tin Can Alley by George Brown.

Wilson Receives Degrees

Dr. Louis R. Wilson, former librarian of the University had the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters conferred on him at the University of Denver recently. He received this honor while he was there to make the dedication address for the new Denver library building that has just been completed.

Portrait Of Wilson Is Given To Library

A portrait of Dr. Louis R. Wilson, former librarian of the University, was presented last week at the University library by a member of the Friends of the Library of the University of North Carolina. Dr. Wilson is at present dean of the graduate library school at the University of Chicago.

The portrait was painted by William Steene, well known American artist. In recent years Steene has divided his time between Chapel Hill and New York City. During his visits to the south, he has painted portraits of a number of prominent Carolinians, among others Dr. Harry W. Chase, former president of the University and now president of Illinois University, Chief Justice Walter P. Stacy, and Dr. William P. Few, president of Duke University.

DEPUTATION TEAM VISITS HIGH POINT COLLEGE ON TRIP

Group Also Presents Program at N. C. C. W. and at High Point Public Schools.

After visiting the Women's College of the Greater University of North Carolina, High Point College, and High Point public schools, a half-dozen members of the latest deputation group sent out by the campus Y. M. C. A. returned last night to Chapel Hill reporting a very successful trip.

Billy McKee, president of the "Y," headed the delegation. McKee, together with Jack Poole, president of last year's Freshman Friendship Council, were the speech-makers on the trip. Amusement was furnished by a quartet composed of Jesse Parker, John Briggs, Raymond Brietz, and Charles Templeton.

Sunday evening the Tar Heel outfit had supper with the leaders in the Y. W. C. A. at the Women's College, after which they appeared at the regular Sunday night vespers of the Y. W. C. A. McKee and Poole were the speakers.

Visit at High Point

The Carolina group visited High Point College yesterday morning. They appeared at the chapel exercises in a thirty minute program with the same bill of entertainment that they had previously given Sunday night.

Throughout yesterday they appeared at the various public schools in High Point with their program. Each school was reported as having given the University delegation a fine hand at the end of each appearance.

MEETING OF A. S. M. E. IS PLANNED TONIGHT

The University Student's Branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers will convene at its second meeting of the year tonight at 8:00 o'clock in room 319 Phillips hall. The feature of the program will be the showing of two moving pictures loaned by the photographic section of the United States air service. The titles of the films are "Aerial Bombing of the U. S. S. New Jersey and Virginia" and "Material Division, U. S. Army Air Corps." All members of the A. S. M. E. are urged to be present, and anyone who is interested in military aviation is invited to attend.

MUNCH RELEASES SCORES ON FROSH PLACEMENT TEST

No Perfect Marks Registered on Mathematics Examination Given to 596 Students.

In the mathematics column of the November issue of The High School Journal, Professor H. F. Munch of the school of education has tabulated the results of the mathematics placement tests given to 596 freshmen when they entered the University in September.

Professor Munch precedes his report with a statement that for some time the mathematics department has been aware that many first year students were deficient in a knowledge of the fundamentals of mathematics which were prerequisite for college mathematics. It did not seem fair to those who did have adequate knowledge of mathematics and skill in the use of the same to place them in classes with those who were not thus prepared. As a result it was decided to give each incoming freshman a very simple test prepared by certain men in the department and composed of six arithmetic problems, six algebra problems, and six geometry problems. The problems were short and did not involve long, complicated arithmetical or algebraic computation.

No Perfect Marks

The summary of the results of the tests shows that no one received a score above sixteen from the eighteen problems, and only four received a mark as high as that. Eight received a score of zero which means that they did not solve correctly a single one of the problems. The median score was 6.99 while the average grade was 7.2. Fifty-two of this group solved less than three of

PICTURES OF ALL FRATERNITY MEN DUE NOVEMBER 15

No Pictures Will Be Admitted To Fraternity Section of Annual After This Date.

All fraternity pictures must be in the Yackety Yack office before November 15, the editor of the fraternity section announced yesterday. This will be the last and final chance for all classmen, this means freshmen and sophomores, to have their pictures in this year's annual.

The Yackety Yack feels under no obligation in getting these pictures in, because it is up to the individual fraternity. However, the Yackety Yack wants as complete a representation of the fraternities as possible. This is further important as the Yackety Yack is the only permanent record of the fraternal organizations.

All the pictures are being taken at Wootten-Moulton's downtown photographic studio at one dollar and a half a sitting.

Radio in Graham Memorial

Mayne Albright, manager of Graham Memorial, announced yesterday that a radio will be installed in the main lounge of the building tonight to afford everyone an opportunity to listen to the presidential election returns.

Dirge

On this day the people of our nation go to the polls. In the heart of the common man there is hope, on his lips a protest. He has been wronged and today is the day of vindication.

To whom will he turn for relief, to whom will he look for retribution, upon whom will he vent his vengeance? Whom will he choose for his champion?

The candidates for the crown have made their final appeals to the electoral mob. Roosevelt: "These unhappy times call for the building of plans that put their faith once more in the Forgotten Man at the bottom of the economic pyramid."

Hoover: "I ask to be kept in office for the country's sake, not my own."

Thomas: "It's not Washington but Wall Street that's ruined us. It's the breakdown of the capitalist system."

The captains of industry and the kings of politics are for a day reduced to the ranks and dethroned. The forces of democracy have mobilized and are clamoring for leadership.

At sundown the nation will hold its breath. And tomorrow the people will acclaim a new savior. In a week all signs of the democratic frenzy of today will have disappeared; the mob will be dispersed. The common cause of democracy will soon be forgotten.

The ordinary man will return to his machine or to his plow. The extraordinary man will sit down again, in reach of his push-button.

Every four years, 1928, 1932, 1936, the people of our nation go to the polls.—E.C.D.

The Eve

One of the distinguishing marks of intelligence is without doubt the liberal-minded viewpoint. In order to understand—in order to know—man must liberate himself as much as possible from stifling, customary habits of thought. The tolerant person, the true liberal, learns because he allows himself to see all points of view. He becomes better able to differentiate the shallow from the erudite, the interpretive from the factual; he becomes better able to resist meaningless catch-phrases and insidious propaganda—in short he becomes a freer man. In the examination of social and economic problems and the political issues arising therefrom, it is mandatory—if we are to arrive at points nearer the truth—that we consider these problems and issues in the tolerant spirit and in the light of all rules of fair play.

It has always been customary in the history of American politics for the rival parties to adopt characteristic high-pressure antagonism, dogmatic assertiveness and ostentatious "laying-of-cards-on-the-table." The continual practice of this sort of campaign, with all its weird "fuzziness," reminiscent of barbaric incantation and sideshow eloquence, has had its natural effect upon the small but powerful "thinking minority." An utter disgust for politics in general is a growing force among the electorate. And it is here—we must bear in mind—that danger lies. The incredible stupidity and shortsightedness of most of our public servants is undoubtedly the major cause for the opprobrious stigma attached to the whole political arena. But after all is it any wonder that the situation has come to such a pass? There are few if any efficacious attempts to train men and women for positions of public administration. Money-making is the primary consideration; public office is a mere sideline, a means of "cutting a figure" in the eyes of the humble crowd.

It is not that politicians are less honest than the average run of business men; they are just a little less informed, a little less fitted for their task.

Here it is that one of the fundamental considerations of our modern educational system lies. But even this is only one phase of the greater necessity of a conscious, willful plan for economic co-ordination and social betterment. To the few of the multitude of office-seekers in this November election who possess the social consciousness to see this fundamental need, and who possess the courage and will to advocate it—we unhesitatingly say: Here's a man!—V.J.L.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

"Underhanded Inconsistency"

When a few employees of the library displayed their zeal for a certain political party, a notice was posted demanding "that University employees do their appointed work and not confuse University working time and working places with non-University business such as partisan-political, propagandist, or private-commercial enterprises."

With this official policy so forcefully and so recently proclaimed, it was startling to see the head-waiter of the University dining hall, Saturday, amidst the turmoil created by the hundred or more "guests" from all parts of the state, distributing the official publication of another organization of young political enthusiasts.

Is this action in accord with the non-partisan policy of the University, or is it an example of the underhanded methods resorted to by some campus politicians?—W.C.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

Young America At the Polls

By this hour Wednesday the country will know to a high degree of certainty, the name of the thirty-first president of the United States. Thousands will be dissatisfied either way. Equally will thousands be little interested. Unfortunately for the cause of those who advocate the crying need for leadership in the ranks of Youth, the latter category claims many young Americans in its division.

Investigations on many university campuses reveal that a surprising slight number of students have taken advantage of the absentee voting privileges. On the University campus, where more than a thousand are said to be of voting age, an unofficial canvass of notary public offices revealed that hardly a comparative handful of students has complied with poll requirements. The majority of those who desired to exercise their prerogative were out-of-state students. Obviously, youth's journey to a place in the political scheme of things must start with its influence at the polls. Until the vote of Young America becomes sought after as a factor in swinging one candidate our desire for Youth Movements cannot be realized.

Vandals

Disappearances of public figures prominent in the affairs of government and politics seem almost unconceivable to the average citizen. That men of power and prestige can drop out of the public eye as if engulfed by an earthquake is hardly imaginable, yet greater disappearances occur every day that hardly attract such universal interest. One Halloween night in a little town in the middle-west, four huge telephone cable spools, twelve or so feet in diameter, vanished into thin air. No human strength could have lifted them onto trucks; no commotion of mechanical apparatus was heard in the neighborhood at the time, yet the impossible occurred. Perhaps the greatest steal of all time, though, was reported by the Rumanian government recently.

An entire railroad running from Cluj, Transylvania, to Jacobeni, Rumania, completely disappeared. The vandals did not stop at tracks and switches but got away with ties, spikes, rolling stock and signal systems. Nor has any of the missing material ever been found!

Carolina Begins Heavy Work For Davidson Tilt Saturday

Squad Realizes Over-Confidence Before Florida Game Nearly Proved Fatal Friday.

WHITE RETURNS TO TEAM

Injured Back Joins Squad Again After Long Absence Due To Broken Ankle.

The Tar Heels were out yesterday ready to start a week of hard preparation for the coming tussle with the Davidson Wildcats at Davidson this Saturday.

After their none too impressive win over Florida last Friday, the squad was hard at work to get back to peak form for their game with Davidson. The team seemed a little cocky over their one game winning streak last week against Florida and the players realize now that this cockiness almost cost them the ball game.

After a short signal drill yesterday afternoon, Coach Collins sent Underwood, Chandler, Walker, Kahn, Phipps, Daniels, Burnett, Lassiter, and Brandt in early and kept the rest of the squad out late running through plays.

Tom White Back at Half

He had a second team of Frankel and Cozart, ends; Collins and Hodges, tackles; Campbell and Newcombe, guards; and McIver, center, in the line; with a backfield of White and Croom, halfbacks; Shaffer, fullback; and Martin, quarterback. This team ran through signals and worked on new formations for Davidson. Tom White was back at his old halfback position and although still showing a slight limp will be ready for the fray Saturday.

Coach Bob Fetzer had another squad giving them Davidson plays to be run against the varsity tomorrow in a lengthy scrimmage.

SIGMA NU BADLY BEATEN BY FAST CHI PSI TEAM 20-7

A. T. O. Swamps Pi Kappa Phi By Score of 53-0, Largest Made This Season.

Chi Psi sprang the biggest upset of the intramural tag football season to date when it trounced Sigma Nu yesterday, 20-7. Chi Psi showed evidence of having drilled its attack to perfection and literally ran circles around the team which had been favored to take the fraternity league title.

Sigma Nu scored first early in the first period when Ken Byerly took a 50-yard pass from Joe Griffith and dashed an additional twenty yards for a touchdown. Byerly also accounted for the conversion when he took another pass over the goal line.

The score stood at 7-0 when the half-time whistle blew, but the Chi Psi attack had already started to amass a lead in first downs, having rolled up two to the Sigma Nu's one.

In the second half Chi Psi launched an unbeatable attack which rolled up three touchdowns, two by Wyant Wilday and one by Bob Yewens, and conversions by Yewens and Bob Atwood.

Other Games
Alpha Tau Omega crushed Pi Kappa Phi, 53-0 for the season's highest score. Alan Smith and Wally Kendall each scored three touchdowns, while Mel Thompson and DuBose Avery tallied the other six-pointers.

D. K. E. nosed out Phi Delta Theta, 4-2 in first downs, in a slow game. Joe Lineberger and Bob Gold played best for the winners while Chigger Moffit

AROUND the FIELD

By

CLAIBORN M. CARR

CAROLINA WON ITS SECOND straight game last Friday against Florida but the win was nothing to write home about. The Tar Heels scored three touchdowns, only one of which was really earned by the team. Coach Howard, who scouted Florida against Georgia, brought back a report as to the 'Gator kick-off and pass defense formations. From this information, Coach Collins devised the kick-off play Carolina used and also the passes the Tar Heels worked. Collins pinned everything on that opening play; he had Froneberger in there so he could slip Lassiter in to kick the point and then run Philpot in at guard. The pass plays devised were almost thwarted when Kay Thompson muffed the first thrown to him, but Florida failed to change its pass defense and luckily it was completed a few minutes later.

WHEN BILL CROOM SKIPPED the forty-four yards for a score behind perfect interference, the team carried out their assignments perfectly, but the heart-breaking part of it all was that Florida was using the same play against us and gaining such a terrific amount of ground. Our tackles, with the possible exception of Bill Collins, were weak Saturday, and Florida, with a little 147-pound guard, was opening up holes and cutting over our left tackles for enormous gains. In fact, the 130-odd yards McCannly gained was made mostly over that spot. Friday was the off day for our tackles who have heretofore been the stronghold of the big Blue wall.

LITTLE McCAMPBELL, THE tiny 'Gator guard, told the writer that the Georgia lineman had been lavish in praise of Carolina tackles and that he was terribly disappointed when he encountered "the huge wonders." THERE WAS SOME TALK among Florida players Friday night about that pass the umpires ruled incomplete over the goal line. Jimmy Hughes, the fullback who fumbled the ball, said he had caught the pigskin and gone down on one knee before he dropped the ball. Coach Bill Cerney, who was sitting in the stands opposite the goal line, said yesterday that he saw Hughes get his hands on the ball, lose it, and as he grabbed for it the ball hit his knee just as Chandler tackled him and the ball bounded away. Coach Cerney asked Umpire Hill about the decision and the umpire stated it was a hard one to rule but that he called it incomplete because Hughes never had control of the ball.

JOHNNY DANIEL'S RUN back of the opening kickoff was the play that will long be remembered by Carolina fans. The giggling little gods of fate willed Johnny our hero. Last year Daniel broke his ankle in the Florida game at Gainesville when he failed to score from close to the 'Gator goal line. That play was number forty-three in the Tar Heel repertoire, and Johnny now wears number "43" and the contented little gods sent him on his long jaunt as revenge for his fate last year.

JOE PARKER, AN INMATE of Old East, on the same floor and in the same section that Daniel and McCaskill abide, put the two backs on the spot the other day and neither has quite recovered. Parker said "If Daniel and McCaskill hit the line the way they pound the door to their room every morning dashing

FROSH GRIDDERS HANDICAPPED BY SEVERAL INJURIES

McCachren and Snyder in Backfield and Barwick, Hobgood, And Milaway Are Hurt.

As a result of injuries, Coaches Howard and Sapp may have to make a big change in the Tar Babies' first string backfield which starts against Virginia's yearlings Friday afternoon. The squad got down to some hard work yesterday afternoon which will continue through Wednesday.

McCachren, first string fullback, has not been able to practice since the State frosh battle, as a result of injuries, but Coach Howard said that he will probably be ready to go by Friday. Snyder, left halfback, who hurt his leg early in the season, had some more hard luck during scrimmage last week and broke a bone in his left hand. He will be out for at least ten days. It will be hard to replace McCachren if he is unable to start, as Sutton, second string fullback, is out with a bad leg which he received in the Oak Ridge tilt, and Leonard, third string fullback, is ineligible. Montgomery, the best ball-carrying back on the freshman squad has been shifted from right half to left half so that he will have a chance to do more ball toting now that Snyder is out.

The line will probably be the same that has played most of the past contests with the exception of right end. Arthur, star against State will likely replace Barwick. Hobgood, out with an infected leg for the past week, will be all ready to go. Milaway, second string tackle is on the bench with an injured hand received while scrimmaging the varsity.

AUBURN LEADING SOUTHERN TEAMS

Chet Wynne's Plainsmen Lead Scoring in South With Total Of 220 Markers.

Alabama rallied against V. P. I. in the fourth quarter to score a safety and touchdown after the Gobblers had scored in the first half to win 9-6 and diminish the undefeated teams of the Southern Conference by one.

Tennessee, L. S. U., and Vanderbilt, other threats to the southern title, licked conference foes while Auburn handed a 25-0 trouncing to Howard.

Tennessee continued to lead the way with five victories and no defeats, but Carolina registered the biggest advance of the week with an 18-13 win over Florida which jumped the Tar Heels from a tie for fifteenth place to twelfth.

Auburn continued to lead conference teams in the matter of scoring with 220 points, but Tennessee's 31 markers against Mississippi A. and M. served to advance the Vols from fourth place to second with 180 points, followed by Alabama with 174 and L. S. U. with 173. Other leading scorers were Duke 133, Vanderbilt 128, Kentucky and V. P. I. 114, Maryland 108, and Mississippi 101.

The standing of the leading teams follows:

| | W. | L. | T. | Pct. |
|----------------|----|----|----|-------|
| Tennessee | 5 | 0 | 0 | 1.000 |
| Auburn | 4 | 0 | 0 | 1.000 |
| L. S. U. | 3 | 0 | 0 | 1.000 |
| Vanderbilt | 4 | 0 | 1 | 1.000 |
| V. P. I. | 4 | 1 | 0 | .800 |
| Alabama | 4 | 1 | 0 | .800 |
| Tulane | 3 | 1 | 1 | .750 |
| N. C. State | 2 | 1 | 0 | .667 |
| Duke | 3 | 2 | 0 | .600 |
| Kentucky | 4 | 3 | 0 | .571 |
| South Carolina | 2 | 2 | 0 | .500 |
| North Carolina | 2 | 3 | 1 | .400 |

TWO DAVIDSON LUMINARIES

Charley Pearce, left, and Jack Wagner, right, are two of the reasons why the Tar Heels will have a hard time against the Wildcats this week in Davidson. Pearce is the left halfback whose running and kicking has been a feature of the 'Cats' attack. It was Pearce's quick-kicking and Wagner's brilliant tackle play that troubled Carolina here last year.

V. P. I., Dark Horse Of Conference, Overpowered By Red Elephants

Casey, Mills, and Holsclaw Tore Off Touchdown to Put Cadets in 6-0 Lead at Half, But Superior Strength of Alabama Team Decided Contest With 9-6 Score.

A touchdown by Howell of Alabama late in the fourth quarter earned the Crimson Tide a 9-6 victory over V. P. I. last Saturday and eliminated the Gobblers as the dark-horse team of the current Southern Conference campaign.

Last year V. P. I. won but a single conference game, but this season the Gobblers have upset the dope time after time, only to go down before the Red Elephants of Alabama in the crucial game of the season.

Had the Gobblers been able to overcome Frank Thomas' stalwarts last Saturday, V. P. I. would have been practically assured of a clear claim to the Southern Conference championship with only Virginia and V. M. I. left on the schedule.

Virginians Sink Leaders
V. P. I. has contributed more important upsets to the 1932 campaign than any other team, having beaten two teams that ranked as distinct favorites at the beginning of the season.

The Gobblers, with a newly arranged coaching staff and an up and coming bunch of sophomores, was not long in issuing a warning to conference teams who had scheduled them as good warming-up material. After trimming Roanoke easily in the season-opener, V. P. I. journeyed over to Athens and turned in its first major upset by winning from a highly favored Georgia team, 7-6.

The Georgia game put V. P. I. on the map, so to speak, but that wasn't the end. Maryland went down 23-0 as expected, and William and Mary, conqueror of Navy, was beaten 7-0.

Kentucky was upset 7-0 with Mills, Case, and Holsclaw starring, to keep the Gobbler record untarnished, and Washington and Lee was overpowered 32-6 with the reserves taking care of things during the latter stages of the game.

Then with only three games, two of them easy ones, left on the schedule, the Gobblers met Alabama, jumped off to a 6-0 lead in the first half by virtue of some brilliant work by Mills and Casey, and held their advantage until the fourth quarter when a safety, touchdown, and

BLUE DEVILS AND TAR HEELS MAY PLAY FOR TITLE

Carolina-Davidson and Duke-State Games This Week Not Expected to Effect Race.

With both Carolina and Duke favored to emerge victors in contests this week, the state championship should depend on the outcome of the Carolina-Duke contest November 19, but State has always been a tough foe for Duke and the Tar Heels have always had more than a little trouble downing Davidson. Both Carolina and Duke are undefeated in the Big Five as yet and, if they can get through their important tests this week, should face each other before one of the biggest crowds of the season.

The only development over the past week-end in individual scoring saw Laney of Duke jump from a tie for third to a tie with Rex of State for second place with 24 points. Cox of Duke continues to lead with 28 points, followed by Rex and Laney with 24 and Cumiskey of State and Mason of Duke with 18 each.

Duke remains the highest scoring team in the Big Five with 133 points, although Carolina's 18 counters was the high mark of the week. Duke's 13 points against Kentucky left the Blue Devils ahead with 133, followed by State with 77, Carolina with 65, Davidson 35, and Wake Forest 19.

Roosevelt or Hoover?

America's voting millions relaxed last night from a bedlam of political debate to await the writing of the final chapter of a precedent-shattering campaign—today's choice at the ballot box of the nation's next president. The campaign has been carried right up to the virtual hour of voting with Hoover hurrying home. Both parties are making the usual forecasts with Sanders claiming 333 electoral votes for Hoover and Farley predicting a ten million majority for Roosevelt.

Forecasts of the Leaders

President Hoover: "I have fixed my faith upon the logical conclusions of a thoughtful people."

Governor Roosevelt: "I believe that the best interests of this country require a change of administration. Every sign points to that change."

Norman Thomas: "The vote will go down in history as marking the first great definite trend to Socialism in this country."

Both Parties Claiming State

North Carolina's presidential votes were claimed by both the Republicans and the Democrats as final vote-getting efforts were under way for today's general election.

Hoover Speaks in Utah

Launching his semi-final campaign appeal, President Hoover yesterday asserted in the Mormon tabernacle, Salt Lake City, that the Democratic party has been "building up hate against me personally" with an eye upon today's polls.

Henderson's Book On Shaw Called History Of British Drama

Aristophanes to Santa Claus, makes for a fertile biographical subject. Finally, Dr. Eaton believes that the close contact the dramatist has with the intellectual and social life of his time is reason enough for the writing of his life.

In his concluding observations on the biography, he remarks, "Without doubt, Shaw emerges from this book as fundamentally a profoundly serious person, whose almost impish wit and humor give him a blended paradoxical personality and bring to his art that tragic-comedy ironic edge so disturbing. He emerges, too as a person of fastidiously clean mind, of the utmost kindness and courtesy, generous, tolerant, amiably vain, but amusingly aware of it, and one who would agree entirely with Emerson. 'Nothing can bring you peace but yourself; nothing can bring you peace but the triumph of principle.'"

"Pop" Albright Drives Charges For Battle

Tar-Mag Mentor Pleased With Form Shown by Proteges in Initial Practice Session.

The fast Tar-Mag grid combine, highly favored winners in their coming contest against the Yackety-Bucs, went through their first workout yesterday afternoon with several dozen candidates making definite bids for berths on the first squad. Coach "Pop" Albright, Tar-Mag mentor, ran the team through a series of setting-up exercises and limbering drills to offset the ravages of a hard week-end.

Consistent with his optimistic statement after his first glance at the Tar-Mag material Saturday, Coach Albright removed his tooth pick long enough to tell the press that his team was "not half bad, and on the other hand, not half good." Albright, who earned the cognomen "Silent Pop" when he coached Teabury Prep to a conference victory in '72, declined to give the names of those who would start against the Yackety-Bucs, but observers stated later that this was probably due to the fact that he didn't know any of the team anyhow.

Cheerios To Have Big Rally Thursday Night

Carolina's newly revived Cheerios will hold a mammoth rally Thursday night in Memorial hall at 7:00 o'clock in preparation for the Duke-Carolina football classic. Cheer leader Ernest Hunt requests all members of the cheering squad to be present, as Duke has issued a challenge in the form of a statement that their supporters will cheer louder and with more lust than Carolina's home crowd.

SPEAKING OF BEING PUT on the spot, reminds the writer of one Virgil Weathers. It seems that our all-southern forward has a young lady up the way whose picture he was anxiously awaiting. The other day a package slip was in Virge's mail box and he almost broke his legs rushing to the post office. There he found a package about the size of a shoe box, no picture after all. When he got back to his room Weathers opened his treasure to find to his utter dismay a shoe box full of twelve-inch corncobs. Fifteen of the things at least and so big. There has been some talk of Weathers having been in close communion with the "Specialist."

Casey Gobbler Star
In Al Casey, the Gobblers have one of the classiest young half-backs in the conference, and Holzelaw and Mills are not far behind him in ability. Early in the season, V. P. I.'s most apparent weakness was the lack of an effective punter, but Holzelaw has filled the bill superbly and has even done so much as to hold his own with Ralph Kercheval, Kentucky's great back who rates as one of the finest punters in the south.

Carl Robinson, another sophomore, has shown a world of stuff and his work has served to keep his varsity superiors on their toes. His work in some of the early season games was nothing less than sensational. Captain Bill Grinus, who reached top form for the Georgia game after being handicapped in pre-season workouts by injuries has been the most brilliant line performer, but he has been closely followed by Al Seamon, veteran end.

Harry Howard and Tris Hoffman, a pair of 200-pound sophomore tackles, have done some excellent work in reserve roles and will be ready for first string assignments next year. Henry Redd has charge of V. P. I.'s destinies this year and he has recruited two of Poly's best known alumni, Monk Younger and Tex Tilson, both of whom gained fame as mentors of the Fighting Wildcats of Davidson, to aid him. Younger ranks as assistant coach, and Tilson handles the line candidates as he did under Younger in former years.

No More Dances Scheduled For Thursdays in Union

No more dances will be scheduled for the Thursday evening receptions in Graham Memorial, as a number of entertainments of a varied nature will be tried for the time being.

The management of Graham Memorial is having three platforms built upon which these entertainments will take place. The first of the series will be in the main lounge Thursday night.

"RED DUST" SHOWS AT CAROLINA AGAIN TODAY

"Red Dust," showing for the second day at the Carolina theatre, presents the interesting combination of Clark Gable and Jean Harlow in a turbulent story at Cochise, China. The picture is based on the Wilson Collison stage hit of the same title, in which is depicted the dramatic triangle which results when the aristocratic wife of a French engineer visits a tropical rubber plantation and falls in love with its overseer, thus engendering the hatred of a defiant, plantation girl who has prior claims on the man.

Gable has the role of the overseer. Miss Harlow plays the plantation girl. Mary Astor is seen as the engineer's wife, and Gene Raymond as her husband who returns from a distant engineering job to find his wife and the overseer in a compromising situation.

Student Council To Present New Campus Government Plan

Resolution Will Be Brought Up Before Union Forum in Session Tonight.

HONOR GROUPS PLANNED
Campus Organizations to Enter Discussion of Measure in Meetings Next Week.

At its regular meeting last Monday night the student council, after three weeks of careful consideration and debate, decided upon a proposal to revamp the University honor system. The resolution, to be discussed by the student body during the coming week, is:

Resolved by the student council: That the following proposal be submitted to a vote of the entire student body at a special election to be called at the will of the student council:

That, at the beginning of each quarter, each classroom group shall elect a committee consisting of a chairman and additional representatives in proportion to the number of the students in the class. This committee shall have the following functions and powers: (1) To serve as an honor committee for that particular class by which it is elected. (2) To try cases involving breaches of the honor system. (3) To suspend persons from the University who are reported and admit their guilt. (4) To report all cases of controversy to the student council for action.

The professor of each class shall, at the request of the student council, act as temporary chairman for the election of the honor committee. The committees will consist of from three to seven members: three representatives in classes up to fifty in enrollment, five in classes

STUDENTS TO HEAR HENRY I. FERGER SPEAK ON ORIENT

Missionary Has Spent Past Twenty-Two Years in North India and Punjab.

Reverend Henry I. Ferger, of North India and the Punjab, will address social science students on Anglo-Indian political relations in the auditorium of Bingham hall at 7:15 o'clock tonight.

The graduate students in the economics department, who are having this speaker for their regular bi-weekly seminar, are extending an invitation to graduates in sociology and political science and to all other persons interested in this topic.

The speaker has spent twenty-two years in the Orient as an educational missionary of the Presbyterian board of foreign missions. During this time he has made a close study of native life and of the political attitudes of the people. He has prepared moving pictures with which to illustrate his lecture.

Reverend Ferger, who is the brother of Dr. W. E. Ferger, of the University, is to arrive at Chapel Hill Wednesday morning and to remain here until Friday night. He will then resume his lecture tour, speaking next at Atlanta.

ROYSTER AND PROCTOR WILL DEBATE GEORGIA

Vermont Royster and B. C. Proctor will represent the University in a debate with the University of Georgia in Gerrard hall Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock. The subject will be "Resolved: That the American Legion should be condemned." The University will meet Georgia at Georgia in the spring quarter or during the spring vacation. In the debate last year Don Seawell and Johnny Wilkinson won a decision over Georgia debating the negative of the question "That Roosevelt was the best candidate for president."

B. C. Proctor is well known for his socialist activities on the campus and throughout the state and won his debating monogram last year.

UNION FORUM TO CONDUCT SECOND MEETING TONIGHT

New Proposals of Council for Student Government Will Be Discussed.

The Union Forum will conduct its second meeting of the year tonight in room 214 Graham Memorial at 9:00 o'clock. All members are urged to attend, as matters of considerable importance will be discussed.

The sole purpose of this meeting is to discuss the new proposal of the student council concerning student government. The reason this issue is to be presented before the forum first is because the forum is the most representative group of the student body. It represents every geographical division of the campus, without discriminations or restrictions of any kind and has approximately one representative for every thirty students.

The student activities committee has similar functions to those of the Union Forum; but it is composed of the officers of the various important student groups and organizations and the faculty and administration officials, and therefore does not represent the entire campus.

One of the original purposes of the Union Forum was that it should serve as a means of determining student opinion on important pieces of campus legislation. It hears and discusses proposed legislation before it is put to a vote of the student body. It may also initiate and prepare legislation before it is presented to the student body. Any problem of student interest may be discussed before the forum. It is not a legislative group but, as the name implies, a forum in which conflicting elements of campus opinion may be heard and discussed.

Last year when certain proposals were made to revise the honor system, the Union Forum was the most active of all the groups participating in the discussion.

EXTENSION GROUP MEETS IN DURHAM EARLY TOMORROW

Representatives From Eight Institutions Will Convene at Washington Duke.

Eight institutions of higher learning will be represented at the short business session of the North Carolina association of college extension to take place tomorrow morning in the Washington Duke hotel. R. M. Grumman, director of the extension division of the University and chairman of the group, will preside.

This group of extension directors organized in September, 1930, has adopted for its purpose, "to promote co-operative relationships among the institutions of higher learning in the state in the conducting of extension teaching; to encourage the development of general adult education; and to provide for an exchange of ideas and discussions of all phases of college extension work."

The following institutions are now participating in the extension plans: Catawba College, Davidson College, High Point College, Lenoir-Rhyne College, N. C. State, Salem College, University of North Carolina, and the Woman's College of the University.

DR. McRAE TELLS ASSEMBLY ABOUT CHINESE DIALECTS

Episcopal Missionary From Shanghai Explains Difficulties of Language to Freshmen.

Dr. Cameron McRae, Episcopal missionary from China addressed the freshman assembly yesterday on the Chinese language. Dr. McRae is a native North Carolinian, but has been stationed in Shanghai, China, for the past thirty-three years.

Dr. McRae said that the first thing a missionary must do upon being sent to China is to learn the language, which is no easy task. Two entirely different languages must be learned, the written and the spoken dialect; these two have about the same relation that Latin and the modern Romance languages have to each other. The missionaries are taught the tongue by competent teachers in the various language schools.

McRae was brought to Chapel Hill through the endeavors of Rev. Tom Wright, assistant pastor of the Chapel of the Cross.

UNIVERSITY MEDICAL SCHOOL HAS STRUGGLED FOR CLINICAL COURSE

Opening With the Preceptorial System in 1879, the Medical School Has Considered as Late as 1925 a Plan for Adding Two Years to Present Course.

Financial difficulties and sectional influences have since 1908 prevented the University medical school from offering the last two years of clinical work in its curriculum. As late as 1925 plans were formulated to expand the present course to four years, but the attempt was vetoed by the state legislature.

The plan was conditioned upon the building of a hospital in Chapel Hill or on the use of some other hospital in a nearby town. When the matter was presented to the board of trustees, it was voted to build a hospital as a memorial to those who lost their lives in the World War.

Morrison Against Plan
Governor Cameron Morrison, the ex-officio chairman of the committee, wanted to have the clinical department established in Charlotte. Since the general sentiment was not in sympathy with this plan, he refused to appoint a committee to take action. Finally, the group of men who later comprised the committee were able to proceed by conceding that if they found that it would be impractical to have the clinical department here, they would consider some other place.

The committee was so composed that it was impossible to overcome the Charlotte plan or to forward the one in favor of Chapel Hill. There was also fear of interference with the five-year building plan for the University.

Weeks Explains Honor System Proposal

At the beginning of last year the student council started a movement to revive the spirit of our honor system which has lapsed in recent years. Throughout the year the council worked diligently discussing and considering plans that might bring about the desired result.

Continuing the work of last year, and after three weeks of concentrated discussion, the student council offers what it believes to be a solution to the problem.

The proposed plan will not take anything from our existing system; instead it will add greatly to it. Following the lines of democracy in government, it will decentralize our present honor system, to a certain extent, and will give the individual student more responsibility in it. It reserves the right of students to report, at all times, directly to the student council in preference to the honor committees if they wish to do so. On the other hand, it provides a means through which a student, wishing to make a report, can do so more easily to more intimate representatives.

The honor committees' functions will not be limited to quiz and examination hours. They will serve throughout the entire quarter, taking account of all breaches of the honor system arising in their classes at any time.

The student council requests every student in the University to consider this plan, and to attend all discussions of it so that when the vote is taken, every person can vote with accurate and adequate knowledge of it.

DR. POTEAT TO SPEAK ON ARMISTICE DAY PROGRAM

The faculty committee on the Armistice Day celebration announced today that it has secured Dr. W. L. Poteat, president emeritus of Wake Forest college, to deliver the annual address at the exercises which will be held Friday morning at 10:15 o'clock.

President Graham has authorized the committee to announce that there will be no assembly Friday, and that the 9:30 classes will be dismissed at 10:08 o'clock in order to give those who will attend the exercises ample time to get there. The 11:00 o'clock classes will not begin until 11:15 o'clock.

The full program of the exercises will be announced later.

BAGBY OUTLINES NEED OF SOUND THEOLOGY TO Y

Psychology Professor Says That Students Thrive Under Doctrines of Jesus Christ.

"Some educators in this state are saying that you won't be a success unless you have a thorough understanding of a very complex and confused theology; but if you adopt the fundamental principles of the teachings of Jesus Christ, your confusion will be gone," declared Dr. English Bagby of the psychology department Monday night before the freshman friendship council.

Dr. Bagby's subject dealt with the eradication of theological confusion by the psychological method of the successfully complete task.

Need of Successful Action
"When you're in religious confusion, you should employ the technique of the successfully completed action; that is, to go out and do some work with a social value attached to it, and one in which you will be thoroughly satisfied after having completed it," Dr. Bagby said, offering a solution to a problem confronting many University students.

The psychologist cited one of the best examples of this action as one where a Carolina student felt the need of a successfully completed action, and he proceeded to be a friend to a friendless man—one of the most beneficial tasks from a social standpoint that can be employed and one which at the same time rides a person of religious confusion, according to Dr. Bagby.

Dr. Bagby summed up the entire value of his speech with this Biblical quotation: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and thy neighbor as thyself."

"In this quotation," declared the speaker, "lies the entire obligation of mankind."

In the business meeting Jim Steere, chairman of the committee on freshman work, organized the members of the group into several squads to canvass the dormitories and to collect any articles of spare clothing they could find for the colored boys at the Palmer Institute.

Democratic Candidate Carries Thirty-Seven States in Late Returns Last Night.

Staunch Republican Papers Concede Defeat Upon Early Indications of Landslide.

LATE BULLETIN
At 12:07 o'clock (E.S.T.) an Associated Press bulletin from Palo Alto, Calif., stated that Herbert Hoover had conceded the election to his opponent.

By Don Shoemaker

Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Democratic candidate for the presidency, was apparently swept into the White House by the largest electoral vote for one candidate in recent history, according to returns from only 10,000 of about 125,000 election districts at press time (1:05 a. m.).

The last tabulation of popular vote gave at press time Roosevelt 7,567,820 and Hoover 5,260,981.

The electoral vote was said to approximate 51 for Hoover and 456 for Roosevelt.

It was apparent shortly before midnight that the only states that the Republican candidate was given a chance to carry were Delaware, Idaho, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Montana, and Pennsylvania.

Papers Concede Defeat

The battle was apparently won in the evening, according to Frederick William Wild, Columbia Broadcasting company election prophet, who stated that with New York in the bag, Franklin D. Roosevelt was certain to carry the election. William H. Hill, chairman of the

SONG COMMITTEE REPORTS ON NEW SCHOOL ANTHEM

Grail's Effort to Secure New Tar Heel Song Results in "Battle Song."

The committee under the direction of Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, took final action Monday night, toward accepting the melody and lyric submitted by Thornton W. Allen of New York City, for the new school song being sponsored by the Order of the Grail.

The song, entitled The Tar Heel Battle Song, contains a military rhythm for marching, an ideal for singing and playing. Allen has utilized a strain suggesting the melody of the famous Dixie. The well-known lines, "I'm a Tar Heel born, I'm a Tar Heel bred," will also be used.

Professor Dyer returned the manuscript and the draft of the words, submitted by the committee, to Allen Monday night, with instructions that the harmonized version of the song be sent immediately for final approval. Following this approval, the song will be published in New York, and 500 copies will be delivered to the Order of the Grail for distribution on the campus.

At the Cross-Roads

The most revolutionary change in student government and its component, the honor system, since the conception of "government by the students" shortly after 1868, is presented elsewhere in this issue of THE DAILY TAR HEEL as proposed by the University student council in session Monday night.

Renowned with Princeton and Virginia for its code of honor, Carolina has fallen in grace since the World War, when widespread moral laxity became paramount as a cause for "the decline of youth" as preached by moralists. Since 1920, when the student body population began to swell the system has gradually become more and more decadent, until today it is universally admitted that we possess the mere remnants of what was once the epitome of intellectual integrity. Last spring the student council, motivated by this publication and various campus organizations, sought for a change in the system that would return to the student body, a workable plan that would not depart too drastically from the honor code. Now it is before us.

In outlining this veritable "new deal," the council seeks not to foist the plan on the student body by engineering at the polls, but rather to elicit criticism both pro and con from a number of groups such as the "Y" cabinets, the Union Forum, and the Phi and Di which will reflect on student opinion at some future date.

Not until discussion has been thoroughly exhausted will the matter be brought to a vote by the student council, which retains that prerogative. The system may be immediately condoned, but it is doubtful that any universal opinion either way will be arrived at immediately by the student body. For this reason the council and interested observers of the new plan are desirous that the matter be fully discussed by every student.

It is the duty of every group and every individual to entertain the problem in a clear mind. The honor system has reached the cross-road. It must either go ahead under the impetus of student control or retrogress as it stands to strict faculty control and the monitor system.—D.C.S.

Land of Our Pilgrims' Pride

Perhaps the greatest delusion under which the people of this country labor today is the fondly cherished belief that they live in a democracy. Millions of Americans pride themselves on living in the "land of the free" and are very apt to point a contemptuous finger at England with its king though its government is far more democratic than ours has ever been.

In form and in theory this is a democracy and the constitution might lead one to believe that the majority indeed rules. This organ of government makes no mention, however, of the real forces that control our destinies—not the people through their chosen representatives but big interests through their handmaidens, the two major parties. America, the land of business, has been overcome by its idol and is now hand and foot, body and soul, the slave and vassal of the great interests.

To be sure the people may elect their president and their representatives—elect them from two candidates in whose selection they have no choice and who are given to us by our masters to satisfy our pride and vanity. What they have in reality is a choice of tyrants installed for four years regardless of how they may conduct affairs, and if not satisfied the other tyrant may be chosen at the end of the term.

This country has just undergone a terrible period in which the poor suffered most. Were they less industrious of late? No, the lords of finance in trying to manipulate the stock market for their own benefit plunged the innocent and helpless into our present misery. Our sons have been fighting in Nicaragua. Are the people at war with this little nation and have they expressed a desire for war? No, but the world must keep "safe for Standard Oil" and so our marines die in the jungles. Every step this government takes almost without exception is in the interest of big business while the lot of the farmer and laborer becomes harder and harder.

In this great country of, by, and for the people, the rich become richer and the poor poorer. An incredibly small percentage of our population controls the bulk of the nation's wealth. We are living a story that history has often repeated. The top dog gets fatter and greedier, the lean dog leaner and more desperate. One day hunger, resentment, and despair become too great, then guillotines fall and firing squads do their work. The increasing power of socialism is a handwriting on the wall. If our democracy will exist it must become one in fact as well as in word or else know the inevitable revolt of the downtrodden against their oppressors.—J.F.A.

At the Fountain

Those who went to the Playmakers theatre last Sunday evening were rewarded by a most entertaining reading given by Mr. Bedford Forrest, famous playwright. He promised "a peppy evening, even if they don't like the play." He certainly fulfilled the first guarantee, but the audience left no doubt but that they liked the play. His story of the planning and building of the first theatre was vividly and realistically told. The snappy dialogue in Shakespearean style, mixed generously with Elizabethan slang, did credit to Mr. Forrest's constructive imagination. It was a real treat to be allowed behind the scenes in such a golden age and to be allowed to hobnob with James Burbage and his famous company.

Mr. Forrest succeeded remarkably well in proving his point that "the theatre is eternally the same," for his representation of the actors of the first theatre, their temperamental outbursts and emotional actions and reactions was packed with verisimilitude. The play reeks the Elizabethan atmosphere, and we can but be eternally grateful to any man who can bring us back to the glories of that romantic time. Mr. Forrest is to be sincerely thanked for his entertainment and for allowing this University to have a "preview" of his excellent work. And again Mr. Forrest is to be congratulated for having the courage to choose a subject so pregnant with possibilities, yet so packed with dangerous snags for the ambitious dramatist.—B.B.P.

Stepping Stones

From the midst of chaotic disarmament conferences at Geneva comes a new plan for world peace. France presented Friday a plan, suggesting as one of its division "a general military staff to function when the peace of continental Europe is threatened."

Such a force would be composed of trained soldiers representing all those nations who would agree to the plan, and would function against any faction or factions threatening the peace of Europe.

It can be readily seen how such an international police force could function smoothly in collaboration with the World Court and League of Nations. This plan should work if given the support of world powers. Even so, at this early stage of international affairs, it is rather difficult to picture a nation which has heretofore been too timid to mingle in foreign affairs of a like nature, assigning trained soldiers to an international body.

World unification in the sometime distant future is something to dream about. In fact, that is the closest to realization of it that the present generation can hope to come. However, with the shriveling of the earth, due to efficient communication and transportation, that very thing is becoming more and more probable. Europe's problems have become our problems. Their imports are our exports and vice versa. Production and consumption difficulties are alike here and abroad.

Down through the lines of civilization man has been reaching out and joining hands with his neighbor when they came close enough together to have the same problems and desires. Families made up tribes, tribes states, states nations, and now one merger is left; international unification.—L.M.J.

Hawaii Bans Hazing

At the request of the student body officials, hazing has been prohibited at the University of Hawaii by an order of the president. This action was taken after several struggles had taken place between sophomores and freshmen in spite of the fact that the presidents of the respective classes had made an agreement outlawing the custom. In the two weeks following the official order no incidents of hazing have occurred.

Europeans apparently are willing to award us the honor permanently of being the chief creditor nation of the world.—Council Bluffs Nonpareil.

CHESSIANA

The A. M. Webb Chess Collection THE FIRST COLLEGIATE EXHIBIT in America of Chessiana is now being displayed in the main corridor of the general library of the University of North Carolina. Exhibit A consists of the Chess collection of Professor A. M. Webb of Durham, N. C.

The Webb collection was procured in France in 1912. Selected works in the collection are: Seven volumes (1911-1917 exclusive) of L' Italia Scacchistica, official organ of the famous Chess clubs of Bologna, Ferrara, Firenze, and Verona, Italy; Le Jeu des Echecs, translated from the Italian into the French by Gioachino-Greco; Manuel de L' Amateur du Jeu des Echecs by Stein; four volumes by Jean Preti—Choix des Parties, played by Paul Morphy in America, England, and France (Paris, 1859); Strategie Raisonnee des Parties a Avantage (Paris, 1863); Recueil D' Etude Progressives sur les Fins de Parties au Jeu des Echecs; Traite complete, Theorique et Pratique sur les Fins de Parties au Jeu des Echecs (Paris, 1858); anonymous work entitled, Strategie Raisonnee des Ouvertures du Jeu D' Echecs; La Regence Journal des Echecs (Paris, 1851). It was at Cafe La Regence that Napoleon I played at Chess.; Kleines Lehrbuch des Schachspiels by Jean Dufresne (Leipzig, 1887); Chess Studies on Endings of Games by Kling and Horwitz (London, 1851); The Chess Tournament of 1851 by Howard Staunton (London, 1852). It was in this tournament that the celebrated masters, Anderson, Kieseritzky, Bird, Horwitz, Lowenthal, and Staunton contested for national honors. The tournament was a battle of the giants and from it emerged Staunton as the acknowledged peer though never acclaimed as the world's champion player.; Congres International des Echecs, 1867, by Alphonse Fery D' Escalands (Paris, 1868); Nouvelle Notation des Parties et Coups D' Echecs (Paris, 1823); and The Theory of Pawn Promotion by Alain C. White (1912).

The red and white Chessmen contained in the Webb collection are not ivory but are cast designs of chemical composition that possesses unusual durability. The Chessboard that accompanies the beautiful Chessmen is of leather, alligator design, and tooled black and buff chequered squares present an attractive playing face. Both Chessmen and Chessboard were specially made in Europe by French artisans. The Intercollegiate Chess Association of America is indebted to Professor Webb for his kindness in exhibiting his Chess collection under its auspices.

THE WIZARDRY OF ALEKHIN Blindfold Chess

Irving Spero, formerly of Cleveland, Ohio, and a former state champion, in an interesting letter to David Robb, Chess editor, Cleveland Plain Dealer, tells of the blindfold exhibition given by Dr. Alekhin against 32 of the strongest Pacific coast players prior to the departure of the champion of the world for Mexico City. Here is what Irving Spero says and then marvel at the champion's skill:

"Before leaving Dr. Alekhin gave an exhibition of blindfold Chess against eight boards with four consulting players at each board, the result being five wins for the champion and three draws. It was a great treat, for the kind of Chess displayed by the doctor on some of the boards was of a superb nature aside from the fact that it was done blindfold. One announcement of mate in five, which came from the lips of the champion with such lightning rapidity that everyone held his breath for a moment. And it was mate, too! Startling also was the way Alekhin verbally corrected erroneous moves, setting the seeing players right."

Roosevelt Wins From Hoover In Landslide

eastern New York division of the Republican National committee, was of a similar opinion in conceding New York to the Democrats at the early hour of 8:07. Such staunch Republican newspapers as the Chicago Tribune and the New York Herald-Tribune admitted the Democratic cause shortly after 9:00 o'clock.

With but a few precincts reporting, it was evident that Roosevelt was carrying Hoover's own state, California, at a late hour (E.S.T.).

Pennsylvania Loyal

Pennsylvania, staunch Republican stronghold, remained in the party lists with a nearly one hundred thousand plurality through the night. Michigan, doubtful for both parties, gave Roosevelt a scarce handful over Hoover, while Illinois and Indiana in this sector apparently buried the Republican candidates under a veritable avalanche of votes.

The Associated Press was early optimistic, declaring at 11:00 o'clock New York time that the electoral vote would finally total about 454 for Roosevelt and 55 for Hoover, an unprecedented total in American political annals of late years.

Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate, aggregated 146,000 votes in the state of New York alone, more than half of his national total in 1928. It was unofficially estimated that he would poll at least four million votes.

North Carolina Vote

The vote in North Carolina was given at press time at about 240,000 for Roosevelt to about 50,000. This, however, was not a full report. All Democratic candidates in the state had substantial leads.

From reports on the election of fourteen governors, it was revealed that all of the Democrats were ahead of the Republican candidates.

SECOND GRADUATE CLUB DANCE NEXT SATURDAY

The Shirley Graves' graduate club will present the second of a series of dances next Saturday evening in the lounge room of Smith building from 8:00 o'clock until midnight. All members of the graduate schools in the University are invited to attend. The dance will be informal and the music is to be furnished by Freddie Koch and his Carolina Buccaneers dance orchestra.

Health Officer Reports

Communicable diseases in Orange county during the month of October, according to Dr. S. A. Nathan, city health officer, are as follows: two cases of diphtheria, one in Hillsboro and one in Chapel Hill; three cases of scarlet fever, all in Hillsboro; two cases of syphilis in Hillsboro.

Vital statistics for the city of Chapel Hill during October show four births, all in colored families, and three deaths, two colored and one white.

Rebuttal

A recent comment in this column pointed out that the Boethius lecture was a failure. With this we can agree, but not with the commentator's reasons, or, more accurately, reason. The latter, speaking of as a person who is striving for culture, as many of us are, stated that the lecture failed because it was lacking in humor, and demanded to know where the lecturer's joke was, however feeble.

It is admitted that the lecture failed, but is my opinion that it failed for two reasons, neither of which the writer of the recent comment advanced. In the first place, the topic was ill-advised. It is readily understood that an average college audience is uninterested in tenement dwellings of the Imperial era of Rome. There is much Roman architecture that is interesting—the temples, the magnificent homes of the wealthy, the great baths—to mention a few, just as there is much in modern architecture that is interesting, but in neither era have tenement houses been outstanding in general attractiveness to any but specialized students of architecture. Like the first few selections on the program of Spalding, the general subject of the lecture failed to appeal to the majority of the audience present.

The second cause was no fault of the speaker's, but it rendered the lecture no more agreeable to the audience. I refer, of course, to the speaker's accent, which made complete comprehension of the talk almost impossible. No student or Norwegian, I, for one, felt as though I was listening to an address in a foreign tongue, during the course of which a word here and there in that language sounded remarkably like certain familiar words in English. I remember only one similar experience, that of listening to Nobile, the Italian arctic explorer, shortly after he returned from a flight over the North Pole. The man, however, was a popular hero, and the movies and slides of the flight were practically self-explanatory so that, however little of the talk was understood, the general effect was an agreeable one.

I know that this is an age of inanity, exemplified nowhere better than in the radio, bellowing political accusations and extravagant promises of many sorts, sandwiched by maddening jazz, but it does seem that a supposedly intellectual audience of college students and faculty should not go to a lecture on archaeology with any expectation of getting the general effect of a musical comedy with a setting in ancient times.

And may I add that culture, as Shaw defines it, is not "the ability to admire wisely," but "largely the ability to admire wisely." Between the first and second definitions lies the difference between superficial and genuine culture.—H.N.L.

CAROLINA

Second Team Battles Reserves In Snappy Scrimmage Yesterday

Long Session of Tackling and Blocking Is Ended With Peppy Scrimmage.

SHAFFER MOVED TO HALF

Carolina topped a long drill at tackling and charging yesterday with a snappy scrimmage in which Coach Collins trotted out a second string line and a new backfield with Ed Martin at quarter, Tom White and Charlie Shaffer, at half, and Bill Croom at fullback.

The work of Charlie Shaffer was particularly impressive, the sophomore fullback who was shifted to right halfback got loose for a seventy-five yard sprint and touchdown in the scrimmage. Coach Collins said that if he continued to show improvement until the Davidson game that he might start the tussle.

White, who has been injured for five weeks, looked good enough in his first scrimmage, but the second string line fell down and let Alan MacDonald and Frank Kenan, sophomore backs on the reserve team run through them repeatedly. MacDonald faked a punt and streaked some eighty-five yards for a score.

The punting of Ed Martin also featured the workout, the quarter rifling off one for seventy yards.

The reserve team which ran Davidson plays included Lozowick and Singleterry, ends; Moser and Folger, tackles; Stephens and Douglas, guards; and Blythe, center; with Jones, quarter. Bell, fullback, and Kenan and MacDonald, at the halves.

RING SUCCESS NOT DEPENDENT UPON MITT EXPERIENCE

Noah Goodridge and Archie Allen Never Boxed Before Coming to Carolina.

Boys who hesitate to come out for boxing because of their inexperience might do well to reflect upon the careers of Noah Goodridge and Archie Allen, two of the greatest boxers Carolina ever had. Neither of these boys had ever laced on a glove before they fought here.

Goodridge, a New York boy, fought as a lightweight and was undefeated in his freshman year. The next year he won nine bouts in dual meets, but dropped a decision to Phil O'Connell of Florida in his tournament bid.

But the classy Goodridge could not be denied and the following winter he earned nine victories, no defeats, and in his swan song to the padded arena, he won the lightweight championship of the Southern Conference.

From Raleigh came Archie Allen, now freshman mitt coach, and he did not go out for the team until his sophomore year. He then proceeded to remain unbeaten in all his dual meets, but dropped a decision to Red Curry of Florida in the tournament.

He fought as a welter in his junior year and won six, losing one to the same Curry who had tripped him the winter before. This defeat came in a dual meet and it did not stop him in the tournament, for, fighting once more as a lightweight, he won the conference title of this division.

As a senior, he was undefeated in all his bouts in dual meets, but in his attempt at welterweight honors in the tournament, he bowed to Bob Rainey of Virginia.

CAROLINA CROSS COUNTRY MEN TO RUN BLUE DEVILS

Varsity Team and Tar Baby Squad Will Compete With Devils and Imps.

Carolina's defending Southern conference cross-country champions clash with the powerful Duke harrier outfit Saturday morning on the Devils' home grounds.

Bob Tuttle's boys swamped Davidson a fortnight ago with a quartet of Dukemen finishing in the initial five. Among the outstanding Duke stars thus far have been Bray, Lewis, Bird, and Heritage. Bray finished fourth in last year's Southern conference run while Lewis was thirty-first.

Coach Ranson Pleased

Coach Ranson seemed fairly well satisfied with the showing of the Carolina team against the 'Gators, but he indicated that his boys would have to show plenty of improvement before they could hope to rival the record of the harrier teams here in past years.

Frosh Teams to Meet

The Carolina freshman cross-country club will clash with the Blue Imps to add a bit of extra color to Saturday morning's program. The frosh have been making brilliant progress since their training season started, and some good material is expected to develop from them.

Coach Ranson named eight men as outstanding thus far; however, he said that there would be plenty of room for development before next Saturday, and the starting club would not be picked until just before the run.

Boys showing up best thus far are R. Y. McPhail, L. B. Conte, O. H. Garrison, W. W. Carraway, J. J. Sullivan, Barnaby Keeney, A. Mark, and H. L. Umstead.

Both meets will be run off with eight men to the team. The varsity distance will be five miles, while the freshmen will negotiate a three-mile course.

TWO TEAMS WIN TO LEAD CIRCUIT

Grimes and Lewis Win Yesterday to Tie for Lead in Dormitory Race.

Grimes and Lewis, co-leaders in the dormitory circuit of the intramural tag football competition, had trouble in gaining victories yesterday, but both came through successfully to keep their records unblemished.

Lewis Wins

Lewis overcame a fighting Steele eleven which threatened to drop its opponents from the undefeated class. After Bill Monte had intercepted a Steele pass and scampered sixty-odd yards for Lewis' first touchdown of the season, Steele braced and put on an attack which threw the leaders completely off.

Joe Cole and Bunny Williams scored in quick succession on stellar catches of long forward passes. Cole added the conversion after the first to give Steele a 13-6 lead.

Snooks Aitken soon scored on a long run, however, but failed in his attempt for the point after. Jack Lowe scored his team's third six-pointer near the end of the half.

Other Games

Grimes won its victory at the expense of a stubborn Old East outfit, which led in first downs at the close, 8-6. Grimes was on the long end of a 13-0 score, (Continued on last page)

CALL ISSUED FOR WRESTLING MEET

November 16 Set as Date for Annual Fall Intramural Mat Tourney.

First call has been sounded to candidates for intramural honors in wrestling. Workouts commence today.

Herman Schnell of the intramural department announced yesterday that he was expecting one of the largest entry lists in years, judging by the interest shown in the mat sport by intramural athletes in the past and the enthusiasm that has been evidenced thus far this year.

The wrestling tournament, conducted annually by the intramural department, will begin Wednesday, November 16, and wrestling coaches will be at the Tin Can each afternoon. Entries will be accepted by the wrestling managers and these entries will find the coaches willing to assist contestants in preparing for the matches.

Only those men who take at least five regular workouts under the supervision of the coaches will be eligible to enter the tournament. The weight divisions will be the same as in intercollegiate wrestling.

Sports Staff Meets Today

There will be an important meeting of the sports staff today in the Tar Heel office at 1:30 o'clock. The meeting will be over in time for 2:00 o'clock classes and it is urgent that all members be present.

Guide Wildcat Destinies On Gridiron

"Doc" Newton and Gene McEver, the two new football mentors at Davidson, are rounding out their first year at the Presbyterian school. Newton is head coach and McEver is his assistant. Both coaches, formerly connected with Coach Neyland at Tennessee, have instituted the Vol system of attack at Davidson this year.

CAROLINA NETMEN TO PLAY VIRGINIA

The varsity tennis team, last year's national champions, will play its only fall match Wednesday, November 23 with the University of Virginia at Charlottesville.

The probable line-up for Carolina will have Wilmer Hines number one, with Lenoir Wright, Dave Morgan, and John Dillard and Bill Minor in that order, with others undecided. Virginia will furnish serious opposition with such stars as Donald Morrison, Bowen, and Taylor.

During the last five years the Tar Heels have won three of these annual Thanksgiving matches.

LOCAL HIGHS WILL MEET LUMBERTON

By virtue of its 25-0 victory over the Apex high eleven, Friday, the Chapel Hill high school football team will enter the semi-finals of the class B high school teams in the state. The next game scheduled is with the Elizabeth City eleven.

During the interim, Lumberton is carded to meet Whiteville high school; and the winners of this contest will play for the title to this division in a final round game.

Then the winner of this game will have the right to meet the winner of the western class B high school conference. This game will be played here.

STRONG CAVALIER FROSH TEAM TO MEET TAR BABIES

Cavalets Have Defeated V. P. I., V. M. I., and Maryland Frosh And Tied Navy Plebes.

With Virginia's yearling team on the schedule for this Friday afternoon in Kenan stadium, the Tar Baby football team will have a tough time keeping their undefeated record clean.

Virginia boasts the strongest first-year team that they have put out in many a year. So far this season they have downed V. M. I., V. P. I., and Maryland's freshman teams and got a 13-13 deadlock with the Navy Plebes, who usually win with ease over Virginia frosh teams.

Tuesday afternoon the coaches put the Tar Babies through a long hard workout in order to get them in the best possible shape for the battle. After a fast blocking drill with the backs opposing the ends, a long scrimmage was carried on with almost the entire squad seeing action.

McCachren was back out and worked with the first string backfield of Cox, at quarter, and Montgomery and Pendleton, at left and right halfbacks respectively. The first forward wall was made up of Elisberg, Evins, Moore, Kanner, Joyce, Hobgood, and Barwick. The second team, however, had many new faces which was expected after their poor showing against State.

SCOUT LEADERS MEET IN SEMINAR FIRST OF MONTH

University Professors Will Address Meeting Beginning December 1.

Fifteen Boy Scout leaders of North Carolina will attend the Boy Scout executive seminar to take place in Chapel Hill, December 1, 2, and 3. Professor H. D. Meyer, of the sociology department of the University, is director of the seminar.

The program consists of addresses by prominent educators, and is aimed to broaden the viewpoint of the scout executives so that they can more ably direct their various charges. A diversification of subjects has been chosen for the speeches.

President Frank Graham will welcome the delegates at a luncheon Thursday. Kenneth G. Bentz, regional director of the Boy Scouts of America for region six, which comprises North and South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida, will give an address on "Organization and Administration." Bentz, incidentally, will be presented at the freshman assembly Friday, December 2. Professor Frederick Koch will give an address at dinner on "Dramatization and Pageantry," and Rev. Douglas Rights will present "Indians and Indian Life in North Carolina."

L. D. Harrill, North Carolina state leader, will speak on "The 4-H Club Plan" Friday morning, and Dr. Howard W. Odum will speak on his An American Epoch, one of his most famous writings. Each executive is expected to read this book before the opening session. Dr. Ernest R. Groves will address the meeting on "Modern Trends of the Family" and Dr. Charles H. Mangum will speak on "Anatomy." Dr. Samuel H. Hobbs, Jr., will continue the program with a lecture on "North Carolina, Economically and Socially." At the banquet Friday night, an address will be given by Harry F. Comer, director of the Y. M. C. A., and the Bentz lecture on "Organization and Administration" will be continued.

Saturday morning after a business breakfast, Dr. English Bagby will lecture on "Psychology of Personality," and Dr. Harry W. Crane will speak on "Abnormal Psychology." The session ends at luncheon with the conclusion of the address on "Organization and Administration."

All delegates will be lodged in Steele dormitory during the three-day session. All meetings will take place in room 209, Graham Memorial.

Americana Magazine To Sponsor Contest

According to a notice recently received by the DAILY TAR HEEL, students of this University are to have the privilege of entering a contest sponsored by The Americana Magazine. This publication is offering $1,000 for the best satiric contribution, whether it be literary or artistic, submitted by an American university undergraduate student on or before March 10, 1933.

Literary contributions are not to exceed one thousand words. Meritorious works, which are non prize-winning, will be purchased at regular rates. The address of The Americana is 1280 Lexington Avenue, New York City.

University Medical School Has Fought For Clinical Course

versity, which required a $5,000,000 appropriation. Should the hospital project be adopted, there was a strong possibility of a reduction in the revenue for building.

Union With Trinity Rejected
A counter proposal was made which entailed the uniting of the University and Trinity College medical resources. At this time, prior to the Duke grant to that institution, it was suggested that both schools contribute $4,000,000 toward a combined medical school. The first two years were to be given in Chapel Hill, while the last two would be taught in Durham. The state, however, rejected this offer because of its long-standing policy of avoiding official inter-relations with sectarian institutions.

The result of the work of the committee was a final plan to erect a hospital in Chapel Hill, but again the state government refused to make the appropriation. After another suggestion to give the first two years' work here and the last two at Watts hospital in Durham had been voted down, the issue was concluded with a decision to provide the University with only a two-year pre-clinical course.

The final preparation was to be obtained at another medical school. This is the present method of operation in the University department of medicine.

Opened Under Preceptorial System

When the school of medicine was established in 1879 by Thomas W. Harris, the preceptorial system was in practice. Under this method the prerequisite of an A.B. degree was non-existent; the student did most of his theoretical studying in a doctor's office and obtained his practical knowledge by accompanying the physician on his daily rounds; and the M.D. degree could be obtained in one year.

The goal of the supporters of a four-year course at the University appeared to be realized in 1902 when a clinical department was established in Raleigh. However, as so many of the progressive moves of the University, the advance had to be abandoned because of the lack of funds.

Large Saving Possible

It has been estimated that a student can save at least $1,000 by attending the University medical school, since the tuition is considerably lower than that of most other schools and most of the apparatus is supplied by the department. The average cost of a year of medical work here is $700; last year, however, one man went through the course on $500. A major saving arises from the fact that, unlike most institutions, the local school does not require the purchase of a microscope, valued at no less than $100.

Despite the lack of a four-year course, the school was admitted in 1908 to the Association of American Medical Colleges and has been ranked in the class "A" division by the American Medical Association. Students who take their first two years here, have little difficulty in gaining admittance to the leading medical schools of the country.

Yackety-Buc And Tar-Mags Stage Verbal Workout

No Date Set But Hope to Play Sometime Before End Of Season.

Though there was little activity in either the Tar-Mag or Yackety-Buc camps yesterday afternoon, the invectives flew fast and furious as the potential gridiron abilities of the two teams were hotly argued by both contingents.

It was understood that a tentative date for the clash had been agreed upon by the Tar-Mags and the Yackety-Yack wing of the Yackety-Bucs, but it was rumored that the playing date will be withheld from the press until the Buccaneer staff has agreed to be on hand at the scheduled hour. Daily Tar Heel reporters failed to locate Editor Mason and his staff yesterday afternoon, but assumed that they were roaming around for inspiration in obtaining puns for the presidential election. It is darkly rumored that this division of the Yackety-Bucs favors either Thanksgiving or Christmas day as a suitable date for the big battle.

It was rumored late last night that the Yackety-Bucs have been unsuccessful in obtaining a coach to head their aggregation, though the name of "Boss" Hill has been suggested. Editor Parsley of the Yackety Yack stated yesterday that the team would "probably not need a coach for such a minor engagement."

Always equal to the situation, the Buccaneer enthusiasts state that "although the Tar Heel is the campus organ, they will make it pipe down" when the game is played.

"Silent Pop" Albright, aged Tar-Mag mentor, continued to be optimistic yesterday, and when queried on the potency of his team in such weather as we now experience stated officially "that if the turf is well soaked by frequent rainfall this week, the playing field will be wet."

"Likewise," agreed the Yackety-Bucs, "is Coach Albright."

however, and so kept itself undefeated. McGovern and Levitt stood out for the winners. Hinson and Alfred played well for Old East.

Kappa Sigs Lose

Sigma Phi Epsilon downed Kappa Sigma, 13-0, and led in first downs, 3-1, after having trailed 1-0 in the latter department at the end of the first half. Jack Frazier and Roger Harper tallied for the winners, while Bill Walcott was outstanding on the defense. May and Hedgepath stood out for the losers.

Phi Kappa Sigma overcame Phi Alpha, 14-6, in spite of the excellent play of Jack Bessen and Sam Samson for the losers. Dossenbach and Reid excelled for the victors, who led in first downs, 8-5.

S. A. E. surprised Sigma Chi, downing the latter by a score of nine first downs to three. Wilmer Hines' star work was of no avail before the determined attack of the winners, whose best players were Buck Harris and Nutt Parsley.

Red Cross Arranges Roll Call Programs

The American National Red Cross has announced through its publicity department that there will be two national hook-ups for Roll Call programs which will be as impressive as those arranged during the draught relief campaign in 1931.

The first of these programs will be from 10:00 to 11:00 p. m. eastern standard time, Monday, November 14, on a coast-to-coast hook-up of the National Broadcasting company. The second will be a nation-wide program over the Columbia Broadcasting System from 11:00 to 11:30 p. m. eastern standard time, Tuesday, November 15.

David Lawrence, radio speaker for the United States Daily, will devote his talk at 9:00 p. m. eastern standard time, November 13, to the work of the Red Cross.

A record of the song in dance orchestra form, with vocal refrain, is being contemplated by Warnings Pennsylvanians, and the committee is being guaranteed the use of the number on at least two radio programs, to be given over a national network, between now and June 1, 1933, as an advertising feature.

A picture of Davie Popular will occupy the predominant position on the cover of the song which will include a panel of campus scenes, the stadium and the old well.

Grail Finances Song

The Order of the Grail recently voted to finance the cost of producing a new school song which would bear the University copyright, and Haywood Weeks appointed a committee, representing the students and the faculty, to study the matter of such a song. The committee was composed of C. T. Woollen, Claude Sawyer, Wofford Humphries, Thor Johnson, R. H. Mason, Claiborn Carr, J. Maryon Saunders, representing the alumni, R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, Dean Francis Bradshaw, and Professors McCorkle and Dyer, of the music department. This committee met and considered a number of songs submitted by Allen, who has recently written and published many successful college and university songs.

The song, which is expected to find immediate campus favor, after accepted and used at the University, will be sent to the various high schools throughout the state for use on occasions of public performance.

Tar Heel Staff Meeting

Meetings for three divisions of the editorial staff of the DAILY TAR HEEL have been scheduled for this afternoon in Graham Memorial.

The editorial board will convene at 2:30 o'clock; the city editors will gather at 3:00; while all reporters will meet at 3:30 o'clock.

Alpha Kappa Delta Meeting

There will be a special short meeting of Alpha Kappa Delta, national sociology fraternity, Thursday morning, November 10, at 10:20. This will be a special business meeting, and important matters are to be discussed. All members are urged to be present.

Junior Smoker

At a meeting of the executive committee of the junior class held Monday night, it was planned to hold a junior smoker in Swain hall, November 17, at 9:00 o'clock. The program for the evening's activities will be announced later.

DETECTIVE STORY COMES TO THEATRE

Clive Brook Takes Part of Sherlock Holmes in Silver Screen Criminal Drama.

"Sherlock Holmes," the new Fox picture, based on one of Conan Doyle's stories, comes to the Carolina theatre today. Clive Brook, who plays the great detective, finds himself, in conjunction with Scotland Yard, pitted against the arch criminal, Moriarty, and a band of gangsters recruited from both sides of the Atlantic.

How Moriarty sets his traps, which are quickly sprung by Holmes, and how the detective exterminates the gang and sends Moriarty to the death cell, form the basis of one of the best of screen dramas of this type.

Miriam Jordan, English star, who made her film debut in "Six Hours to Live," opposite Warner Baxter and John Boles, enacts the leading feminine part. Ernest Torrence portrays the role of Moriarty. Reginald Owen, distinguished English actor, well known on both stage and screen, appears as Dr. Watson, devoted friend and ally of Holmes.

Moss Is Praised In "The Sanatorium Sun"

A tribute to the late Reverend W. D. Moss, pastor of the Presbyterian church in Chapel Hill, was given in an editorial in the November issue of The Sanatorium Sun, the publication of the tuberculosis sanatorium of North Carolina. It emphasized his interest in the welfare of tuberculosis patients throughout the state.

It said in conclusion: "Ministers have many opportunities for helpful kindness, and a Christian soldier of a type which Parson Moss personified seizes these opportunities and makes his own life richer and more fruitful because of them."

MacNider Goes to Philadelphia

Dr. William deB. MacNider of the medical school leaves on Saturday to attend a meeting of the National Board of Medical Examiners of which he is a member. The meeting will be in Philadelphia Sunday, November 13.

Senior Executives Meet

There will be a meeting of the executive committee of the senior class Thursday night at 7:00 o'clock in the student government office on the second floor of Graham Memorial.

Symphony Tickets

Tickets to the concert by the North Carolina State Symphony Orchestra to be presented in Memorial hall, December 2, will be remitted each student holding a student entertainment committee booklet in exchange for one of the tickets in the book. The exchange will take place in the Y. M. C. A. building beginning next Monday, November 14, and will last until Friday of that week.

These concert tickets will allow the student to occupy any seat in the auditorium except the 800 reserve seats in the middle section. Reserve seats can be purchased by students for fifty cents and by outsiders and townspeople for one dollar. Over one thousand seats will be available besides the reserved section.

FORMER HEAD OF WAKE FOREST TO TALK TOMORROW

Poteat to Deliver Main Address In Armistice Day Program Announced by Booker.

The full program for the Armistice Day exercises which will take place tomorrow morning from 10:15 to 11:15 in Memorial hall, was announced yesterday by Dr. J. M. Booker, head of the faculty committee for the exercises.

The exercises will begin promptly at 10:15 o'clock. In order that everyone who wishes to attend may arrive at Memorial hall in time, the 9:30 classes will be dismissed at 10:08 o'clock. The usual freshman assembly period will be suspended, and there is no compulsion to anyone to attend. The committee feels that this is not necessary because from past experience Chapel Hill audiences know that Dr. Poteat, president emeritus of Wake Forest College, who will be the principal speaker, is one of the best orators who has ever appeared here.

Will Make Roll Call of Dead

The program will begin with the invocation by the Reverend Ronald T. Tamblin. This will be followed by one verse of the national anthem played on the organ by Walter Patterson. The University roll call of World War dead and the Legion roll call of World War dead will appear on the printed program. After the playing of the national anthem, George Lawrence will blow "Taps." This will be followed by the main part of the exercises, the oration by Dr.

UNIVERSITY DEBATERS MEET GEORGIA TONIGHT

The University debate group will meet the University of Georgia in Gerrard hall tonight at 7:30 o'clock. The subject will be, Resolved: That the American Legion be condemned. Vermont Royster and B. C. Proctor will represent the University taking the affirmative side of the debate.

The debate will consist of two twelve minute speeches and one six minute rebuttal for each side. In the debate last year Don Seawell and Johnny Wilkinson won a decision over Georgia debating the negative side of the question "That Roosevelt is the best candidate for president."

DR. PIERSON SENT AS DELEGATE TO MEETING IN IOWA

Association of American Universities Will Convene at University of Iowa for Annual Meeting.

Dean W. W. Pierson of the graduate school will represent the University of North Carolina today at the 34th annual meeting of the Association of American Universities. Delegates will convene in Iowa City, Iowa, at a three-day session as guests of the University of Iowa. Dean Pierson left last Saturday in order to attend a pre-convention meeting of the committee on classification of colleges and universities, the business of which committee is one of the most important functions of the convention.

The University of North Carolina was admitted into the association in 1922. At present, the organization consists of the twenty-nine outstanding universities of the United States and is generally considered the foremost of the world.

MANY UNIVERSITY ALUMNI ELECTED TO STATE POSTS

Landslide Sweeps Ehringhaus Into Governor's Position and Elects Graham Lieutenant-Governor.

Many prominent alumni of the University of North Carolina were the choice of North Carolina voters in Tuesday's Democratic sweep of the state. J. C. B. Ehringhaus, of the class of 1901, was elected governor of the state of North Carolina, and A. H. Graham, a member of the class of 1912, was elected lieutenant-governor. J. P. Stedman, an alumnus from the class of 1916, was victorious in the race for state treasurer, and A. T. Allen, of the class of 1897, was accorded the popular majority for the position of superintendent of public instruction. William A. Graham, of the class of 1901, was elected commissioner of agriculture, and A. L. Fletcher, a student of law in the University in 1904-05, was chosen commissioner of labor. The office of corporation commissioner was filled by Stanley Winborne, of the class of 1907, and the new insurance commissioner of the state will be Daniel C. Boney, of the class of 1923.

Robert R. Reynolds, of the class of 1906, was elected to the United States senate from North Carolina. Reynolds is the first

DI SENATE VOTES UNFAVORABLY ON RULING OF DOAK

Literary Society Inducts Fourteen New Members at Meeting Tuesday Night.

Fourteen new members were formally initiated into the Di-allectic senate at its weekly meeting held Tuesday night.

A report of the committee on the Mary D. Wright debate was given by Chairman Eddleman. Try-outs will take place Tuesday, November 22. The committee deemed it wise to have these trials before the holidays in order to allow the chosen debaters ample time to revise and perfect their addresses.

Only one bill was discussed by the senate due to the initiation ceremonies. The bill, "Resolved: That the Di senate go on record as favoring the ruling of Secretary of Labor Doak prohibiting foreign students in the country from working in vacation or part-time during the regular scholastic year" was enthusiastically debated, but was defeated by a close vote. Senator McMichael acted as critic in the absence of Senator McKee.

Those new members who were inducted are Phil Hammer, David Scott, James Keel, Wyatt Armfield, Bill Weaver, E. R. Ottinger, J. S. Gentry, Albert MacMillan, Thomas Crowell, Eugene Brooks, Paul McKee, George Fountain, Chase Idol, and Irwin Coffield.

DEAN W. C. JACKSON TO TALK AT CHATHAM HALL

Dean W. C. Jackson of the school of public administration has accepted an invitation tendered by Reverend Edmond J. Lee, rector of the school, to address the students of Chatham Hall. Chatham Hall, a girls' denominational school and junior college, is in Chatham, Virginia. His subject will be "Racial Relations in the United States."

LUTHER HODGES NAMED CHAIRMAN FOR COMMITTEE

Leaksville Man Will Head Group to Suggest Officers of Alumni Association.

Luther H. Hodges of Leaksville was named yesterday by Kemp B. Lewis, president of the University's Alumni association, as chairman of a committee to recommend candidates for officers of the association for 1933 to the Alumni General Assembly, annual business meeting of the association, which will convene in Chapel Hill, December 9.

Henry M. London, Raleigh, and Francis O. Clarkson, Charlotte, were other members of the committee.

Officers to be elected for the new year includes the president, two vice-presidents, and an alumni representative on the University athletic council. Two candidates for each of these offices will be nominated at the December 9 meeting, election to be determined by a mail ballot among members of the University alumni organization.

Present incumbents of the offices to be filled in addition to Lewis are R. G. Stockton, Winston-Salem, and Hugh Dortch, Goldsboro, vice-presidents; and Dr. Foy Roberson, Durham, one of three alumni representatives of the athletic council.

SEGREGATION OF FROSH DISCUSSED BY PHI ASSEMBLY

Literary Society Decides Against Republican Method of Tariff Arrangement.

The regular weekly meeting of the Phi assembly last Tuesday night featured a very thorough discussion on the bill favoring freshmen segregation. The freshmen representatives were well prepared on the subject and good arguments were presented on both sides. Although the majority of the arguments were against the issue, when the actual vote was taken the house was deadlocked.

The next bill that was brought up for discussion at the session was, Resolved: That the Phi assembly go on record as favoring city-county consolidation where it is possible in North Carolina. After a short discussion by the entire assembly this bill was placed on the table indefinitely.

The third and final bill that was discussed read as follows, Resolved: That the low tariff advocated by the Democrats is a better policy for the United States than a high protective tariff as exemplified by the Smoot-Hawley bill which is sponsored by the Republicans. This bill was passed by the assembly with few dissenting votes.

At its meeting next week the Phi will discuss the recent proposal made to the student body by the student council.

JUNIOR SMOKER WILL TAKE PLACE NEXT WEEK

According to plans made at a meeting of the junior class executive committee Monday evening, the class will give a smoker Thursday, November 17, at 9:00 p. m. in Swain hall.

The committee is making an attempt to secure coaches Wade of Duke and Collins of Carolina as principal speakers for the smoker.

INITIAL SENIOR SMOKER SCHEDULED FOR TONIGHT

The first meeting of the senior class of the University is scheduled for 9:00 o'clock tonight in Swain hall. The affair will be in the form of a smoker for all members of the class.

Though officials of the class would not give the name of the speaker last night, they promised a very popular University orator for the event. Arrangements have been made for refreshments and for a short program of entertainment. All members of the class are expected to attend as several important matters concerning the class will be brought up.

PRESENTATION BY STATE SYMPHONY TO BE GIVEN HERE

Percy Grainger Will Participate in Concert and Lamar Stringfield Will Act as Conductor.

The North Carolina Symphony society will officially open its fall and winter season with concerts in Durham December 1 and Chapel Hill December 2, according to an announcement made yesterday by Felix A. Grisette, secretary and treasurer of the society. A third concert in the first series for Greensboro on December 3 is pending.

The Durham concert, which will be given in the junior high school auditorium, is being sponsored by the Durham Charity League. The Chapel Hill concert will be one of the series of artistic attractions which is sponsored each year by the Student Entertainment Committee. Stringfield Is Conductor

It has been announced that entirely different programs will be played, thus making it possible to have a new program each year.

CONFERENCE OF COLLEGES MEETS TODAY AT NOON

Twelfth Annual Convention of North Carolina Colleges Convened in Durham.

The twelfth annual North Carolina college conference meets today and tomorrow at the Washington Duke hotel in Durham. Dean N. W. Walker of the school of education, secretary of the conference this year, announced the program for the two days yesterday.

The central theme of the conference is "A More Effective Use of Objective Data in the Solution of Current Problems of Higher Education." The conference convenes at 12:00 o'clock with a meeting of the executive committee, followed by a meeting of the North Carolina Registrars' association at 2:00 o'clock.

Dean Walker will present his report as secretary-treasurer at 3:00 o'clock. A discussion by Dr. M. C. S. Noble, Jr., of the N. C. state department of education, and E. C. Hunter, of the University bureau of educational research, will follow this report. Dr. Charles E. Brewer of Meredith College, president of the conference, will speak at 8:00 o'clock.

Other Speakers

Other speakers will be Clyde A. Erwin, president of the North Carolina education association; Dr. A. T. Allen, state superintendent of public instruction; and Dr. A. Monroe Stowe of Randolph-Macon Woman's College. After the election of officers tomorrow morning, the conference will adjourn at 12:00 o'clock.

Voting In Chapel Hill Shows Various Amusing Incidents

Absentee Voters Forgetting to Sign Names, Naive Remark by Small Boy, Woman Wishing to Pay for Voting Privileges Furnish Humor for Officials.

"Daddy, why's that old fool running in Chapel Hill, anyway?" one small boy asked his Democratic father at the village poll Tuesday when he was told that Hoover was suffering defeat in North Carolina by an immense plurality.

The young man's ignorance of political affairs is almost paralleled by the failure of at least two prominent absent citizens to remember the rules of absentee voting. One, a former registrar here, forgot to sign his name to his absentee ballot. The ballot was thrown out by the challengers. Another incident occurred to L. C. Owens, known locally as "Judge," who is now a prohibition operator for the department of justice out of this state. When Owens applied by mail for registration last month, he was denied. He applied again, and, after a wrangle because of his failure to vote anywhere in 1928, his ballot was sent to him.

Roosevelt Loses Vote During his Chapel Hill residence he was a staunch Democrat. Accordingly, when his vote was entered Tuesday, it was promptly challenged by a Republican who discovered that Owens, after all his many difficulties proving his right to vote, had failed to sign his ballot. The cast-out vote was examined, and lo!—it contained a straight Republican ticket.

Very few negroes voted this year in Chapel Hill. The total negro vote, states L. J. Phipps, chairman of the Young Democrats, was not more than eight or a dozen. The oldest registered negro this year was again old Green McDade, who has passed all of eighty-six years.

So far as is known, McBride Fleming-Jones, Republican by admission, is the only student voter who was challenged during challenge period last week. Fleming-Jones, a law student, this year claims residence in Chapel Hill. He was permitted to vote after proving residence for the required time.

Would Pay to Vote

One story tells of an elderly lady who, ignorant of the registration laws, did not have her name registered upon the voter's books. Discovering that she would be unprivileged to cast her ballot for Franklin D. Roosevelt, she gave way to a terrible weeping in the polling rooms. "I'd give five dollars to vote for our Roosevelt," she wailed extravagantly.

It was noted by the poll holders that a large number of faculty members were unregistered. This however is accountable by the fact that many of the faculty have recently been out of the state or country. It is possible that some voters who are registered failed to vote thinking that their names had been removed from the books during their absence.

Inoculation

Arguments against the proposal of the student council to have each classroom elect an honor committee can be anticipated. The principal objection will be that it will not work, that it is impractical.

In the first place, the objectors will say, nobody will want to serve on one of these committees. Secondly, very few of the committeemen will be willing to report their fellow students. And lastly, many of the committeemen would be incompetent to judge cases of cheating, this being especially true of freshmen unfamiliar with the honor system.

These criticisms of the proposed plan, however, are based on a false conception of the purpose of the honor system itself. It was never intended and should not now be construed as a policing program with the primary purpose of apprehending violators of the system. Rather, it is a plan to propagate and to inculcate the principles of honor. Successful operation of the honor system would not result in many, but few reports of violations.

Confidential statistics compiled by reliable foundations and responsible corporations show that the graduates of honor system schools are more trustworthy workers than the graduates of monitor system schools. They have a highly developed sense of responsibility; they are accustomed to being trusted; they can be relied upon to do assigned jobs without constant and irksome supervision.

It is that consciousness of responsibility and trustworthiness independence which distinguishes the good citizen from the poor, the faithful worker from the shiftless. The honor system purposes to develop these qualities. An education which makes no contribution to character is indeed incomplete.

Punishment is an ineffectual means, in most cases, of developing moral stamina. To ship a man from college is only to remove a single evil influence. By impressing that same man with the contemptible weakness of cheating and the moral value of honesty, campus society might save him from his own folly, and ten more like him.

The honor system should be conceived as a method of nourishing the growth of moral tissue; punishment for violations of honor is an operation to remove tissue that is decayed beyond recovery. This operation may cure the patient, but there is also the possibility of killing him. Surely inoculation against the disease is preferable to a dangerous operation of doubtful effectiveness.

If this conception of the honor system is understood, it is simple to answer the arguments of the practical-minded objectors to the student council's new system. Actually, it is not the primary purpose of the proposed plan to have more students reported for cheating; that is a secondary motive; the apprehension and punishment of offenders is a last resort, an emergency operation.

The new system is merely an educational program. By bringing the new students into closer touch with student government, it would make them aware of the presence of the honor system and of the consequences of dishonesty. By electing their own honor committees and from seeing these men every day, they would come to realize some individual responsibility for student government.

It matters little that some spineless student might be reluctant to act as a classroom committeeman or to report his friends or that the committeemen might be incompetent to judge the guilt of offenders.

If these committees never report a case, and yet a stronger sense of responsibility and moral integrity is imparted by their presence, the system will have admirably performed its purpose.—E.C.D.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

Calculator

It was Ted Husing, we believe, who insisted on referring to Dr. Sol Finklestein, the "Lightning calculator," as "Dr. Frankenstein" as Columbia broadcasted the election returns Tuesday night. Finklestein was hired by C. B. S. to calculate the popular vote as it came in over the wires, figure out percentages and electoral vote etc., and in general make himself useful as a human adding machine. This, Mr. Finklestein does without the aid of any mechanical contrivance—even a pencil and paper. Figures it all out in his head.

He first got his fame when it was revealed that he could survey a passing freight train and total the box car numbers with lightning rapidity. Then he began to appear on the lecture platform and before various university groups. You could shout numbers of five digits at him and he'd come back with the total in something over a second. Never much at the mathematics game ourselves, we agree with Mr. Husing that Finklestein is something of a monstrosity after all.

All Quiet

Now that it's all over, we can rest in our favorite arm chair and offer thanks every hour that elections come once in every four years. In 1930, when we were covering the board of elections headquarters for a morning newspaper and dispatching copy boys every ten minutes with totals of precincts, we turned up at about three-thirty that morning with two precincts missing. Luckily, it was a Democratic landslide, so those two precincts didn't matter. Never found them anyway and had to toss a coin to choose the figures and keep from losing our job. Tuesday night, with the first four of the seven Roosevelt digits recorded in the press time totals, somebody blew a fuse controlling our radio, and we must confess that we had to fake about twenty votes here and there, but in the long run it didn't matter. Anyhow, a good reporter is always impartial, unless of course, he works for the News and Observer or the Christian Science Monitor.

With Contemporaries

Editorials printed in this column are selected weekly by the editorial board on the basis of pertinency and style from the exchange list of college and national dailies and weeklies.

Not So Different

The new experimental plan being sponsored within the school of journalism should at least yield some very interesting results in the long run. Professor Lawrence W. Murphy, director of the school of journalism, reports five men and five women, for this plan are not much different from those selected by the normal run of students.

The plan is based upon the scholarship ranking during the first two years in what is now a pre-journalism curriculum incorporated within the college of liberal arts and sciences. Those who have the highest ranking scholarship records are permitted to register in whatever courses they choose during their last two years of school before getting their degree. The plan thus far is revealed to the students, and the ultimate value of the plan to the students and consequently to the school is not to be told lest the desired results be held in mind by the journalistic guinea pigs.

Up to this time the programs selected by the group are somewhat depressingly normal. Perhaps those who planned the normal program do not believe that the program is depressing, but it seems that there should be some among these students who would select courses outside the regular outlined curriculum. To hear the students talk in everyday conversation you would think that they were horribly held down by the requirements and outlined courses within a school or college on the campus, but the actions of these ten chosen students in selecting their programs for the semester indicate that the new found freedom wasn't exactly as liberating as they once thought.

Perhaps the students are not as yet fully aware of the fact that they have the privilege of taking any sort of course within the University for which they have the pre-requisites. Of course, the old gag of pre-requisites within a school being used on account of the major and minor requirements prevents many of these courses from being utilized on account of needless pre-requisites.

For any experiment of this nature no definite results will be obtained until after graduation of the first group. The scholastic results will be available at that time, and the practical value of the experiment will be forthcoming after graduation. If this experiment works in the school of journalism it might be a good idea for having a similar plan made elective for the upper group of students in other colleges within the University.—Daily Illini.

If Youth Goes Red

Solid citizens in North Carolina who have been troubled by the fear of radicalism growing in the colleges and universities may shiver with renewed vigor at learning that not only they are troubled but all the world.

There is growing in the educated youth of the world an "educated proletariat," according to the annual report of the Institute of International Education, an organization of leanings capitalistic enough to have a partner in the House of Morgan on its board of trustees.

In practically all of the European countries, the report says, the universities have graduated annually since the war highly educated young men and women for whom there is no apparent future, and "the accumulation has become so great as to menace the existence of the present social order." They believe that the existing regime has nothing in store for them and that nothing can be lost by a change.

In the United States, the report goes on, down to the commencement of 1930, it was a pretty poor college graduate who could not find profitable work within a few months of graduation. During the past two years such happy conditions have not existed and "there is no evidence that they will exist again in the immediate future."

Today the Institute finds of American college youth:

They have little faith in the political and economic leadership of the period since the World War, even of today. They have many questionings concerning the pillars upon which our present social order exists, capitalism, democracy, and the organization of our political life under the Constitution.

If this report, endorsed by a list of notable names, can be given credence, the radicalism rising in the colleges is not caused by the ravings of a few irresponsible professors but by the present failures in the capitalistic system. Viewed from this light, there is nothing very strange about the manifestation of radicalism. If economic conditions better themselves, the probability is that the radicalism will pass with the depression, but a youth facing a world and a system which have nothing to offer him is not apt to be deeply impressed with the sacred institutions through which his elders shaped their future in happier times.

Not the colleges but the world outside them is responsible if youth is radical, communistic or given in any manner to say, "Oh Yeah?" to the sacred vows of his parents and people.—News and Observer.

Alienating Students From Religion

We should not be at all surprised if the recent address which Dr. William C. Covert (official of the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education) made to the students of Princeton Theological seminary has seriously shaken the religious faith of many thoughtful young men, not only at Princeton but wherever his rather unsound and unwise address was reported.

We know, of course, that there are large numbers of religious leaders who would prefer to do all the thinking for students in matters of religion, morals, and life philosophies generally. Fortunately there are many more who realize that religious faith of any sort is invalid unless it has been tested by doubt and competition with other points of view.

Dr. Covert is not of this latter school, evidently. He would warn students to beware coming into any sort of contact with the thoughts and views of non-orthodox thinkers. On his particular black-list occur these brilliant names: Prof. Max C. Otto, Bertrand Russell, Walter Lippmann, Dr. A. Eustace Haydon, H. L. Mencken, Prof. John Dewey.

Now, you simply cannot, among intelligent men, advance any point of view by opening your campaign with an attack on the good faith, judgment, and honesty of men who hold opinions opposite your own; more especially is this true when these same men have by their force of character and intellect become warmly dear to your listeners.

It would be rather difficult to make a happier choice of modern thinkers to whom thoughtful young men and women give their allegiance of beloved respect, than the group Dr. Covert has singled out for attack as being "responsible more than anything else for the belief that culture and theistic faith are mutually antagonistic."

Prof. Max Otto, brave teacher of brave ideals at Wisconsin. Bertrand Russell, the British nobleman who crusades indefatigably for individual liberty and courageous thinking; Dr. Eustace Haydon, professor of comparative religion at Chicago, author of the beautiful "bible" of humanism, "The Quest of the Ages"; H. L. Mencken, joyous smasher of ugly idols and last-ditch individualist; Walter Lippmann, who would see moral codes brought to harmony with our time; Prof. John Dewey, who would connect philosophy with life.

If Dr. Covert thinks that intelligent young men and women will be held or led back to the arms of the church by inveighing against these men, he is in gross error. If there is no place in religion for the idealism and

Carolina Prepares For 'Cats In Tin Can Yesterday Due To Rain

Squad Runs Through Plays and Maps Out Defense for Davidson Attack.

COLLINS ON FIRST TEAM

Tackle Runs With First Team
In Dummy Scrimmage and May Start Saturday.

Rain and a soggy field caused the Tar Heels to hold their yesterday's workout in the Tin Can. Coach Collins had the squad in tennis shoes running new plays and also dummy scrimmaging against Davidson plays.

The coach was perturbed at the generous amount of rain we have had recently as he had planned a strenuous scrimmage for the first and second string teams.

Davidson Has Scrappy Team
Coaches Howard and Sapp, who scouted the Wildcats against State brought back reports that they have a fast and heavy line which tackles viciously, and a backfield of clever, fast, and deceptive runners.

With this in mind, Coach Collins has been working hard this week to prepare a defense for Davidson, and at the same time pep up the play of the Tar Heel linemen both offensively and defensively.

The first team in dummy scrimmage yesterday showed Walker and Brandt, ends; Collins and Hodges, tackles; Philpot and Kahn, guards; Underwood, center; with a backfield of Burnett, quarter; Phipps and Daniel, halfbacks; and Chandler, fullback.

Cheerio Meeting Tonight

There will be a Cheerio meeting at 7:00 o'clock tonight in Memorial hall for the purpose of preparing for the Carolina-Duke game. All members are urged to be present as Duke has issued a challenge in the form of a statement declaring their cheering will overshadow ours next week.

sible for music lovers to attend both concerts without hearing the same program twice. Lamar Stringfield will be the conductor for both concerts. An added feature will be the presence of Percy Grainger, internationally famous pianist and composer, who will play one of his compositions, and who will direct the orchestra in another.

The concerts, in keeping with the policy of the North Carolina Symphony society, will represent the artistic endeavors of expert native musicians drawn from all walks of life and from all parts of the state. They will resemble in this respect the original concert which was given in Chapel Hill last May and which evoked such universally favorable comment throughout the state.

Injured 'Cat Leader

Buddy Gardner, Davidson captain and star pivot man, may be back in the lineup to face the Tar Heels. Gardner was injured in the first game of the season against Duke and has not seen action since. Word from Davidson has it that he will be right for the Homecoming tilt Saturday.

I Only Heard

By Morrie Long

Setting the stage for the impending Duke-Carolina battle a short ways off are the all-important Carolina-Davidson, and Duke-State fracas of this weekend. If these grid dramas are incorporated into Tar Heel and Blue Devil victories, which is expected, then the oncoming clash with the Wademen will not only have the intense rivalry element in it but also the title of the Big Five will be at stake. State has always been a pain in the neck to Duke's winning aspirants while Davidson hasn't been very appetizing to Carolina in the way of presenting victories.

Plans for Rose Bowl itineraries are filling the eastern gridiron atmosphere and already Brown, Pittsburgh, and Colgate have their eyes cast on the west coast sport classic. Not since 1930 when Pitt was swamped 43 to 13 by Southern California has an eastern aggregation made the continental jaunt. Since Big Ten teams aren't allowed to enter the Rose Bowl as participants and the south doesn't seem to have the teams it had last year, the eastern team probably will get the trip.

Did you know that St. Mary tried to high-hat Fordham last week when she presented the prettiest uniform the football haberdashers had to offer—her quarterback had white silk pants, her line wore scarlet silk pants, while the other backs did their cavorting in baby blue silk—Ralph Kercheval, Kentucky's kicking pride, in a high school game punted from his 20-yard line and the ball hit the cross bar of his enemy's goal post—the smartest play Bill Ingram, Navy's coach ever saw was in the Michigan-Navy game of 1925 when Oosterbaan of Michigan broke through the line and instead of blocking the kick of a Navy punter, took the ball away from him as he threw it up to kick, then gallavanted the 50 yards to the goal—Dan McGugin of Vanderbilt has been coaching the longest of any southern coach, having been at Nashville for 28 years; Curly Byrd of Maryland is another old timer with 21 seasons to look back at—Tennessee has never won a conference title in football outright though she has been a serious contender for many years—Sixty-three years ago the first college football was

WINNERS OF RACE WITH FLORIDA TO MEET DUKE TEAM

Ranson Says That Same Eight Men Will Run Against Blue Devils.

A dozen men were indicated by Dale Ranson, local harrier mentor, as possible starters against Duke in Saturday morning's cross-country meet at Durham with the Devils.

Ranson said that probably the same eight men who ran against Florida last Friday would be used against Duke. Louis Sullivan was the individual winner of the race with the 'Gators, while the remainder of the Tar Heel procession crossed the finish line in the following order: Captain Bob Hubbard, Henry Sullivan, Clarence Jensen, Walter Groover, T. L. Cordle, Gerry Goldman, and T. H. Curlee.

The cross-country coach also named a quartet of other lads who might possibly be used. They were: G. Stratford Donnell, H. W. Gwynn, Fabius Haywood, and Donald Kimrey.

The Tar Heels got off to a fast start last Friday against the Gainesville boys, winning the meet, 22-38; but Coach Ranson indicated that a whole lot of improvement would have to be evidenced before his boys would be fit to clash with the crack teams of Dixie in the Southern Conference meet here a week from Saturday.

MANY UNIVERSITY ALUMNI ELECTED TO STATE POSTS

alumnus of the University to win this honor for over a quarter of a century. In the race for the United States house of representatives, alumni were conspicuous. In the first district, Lindsey C. Warren, of Washington was elected. He was a member of the class of 1910. Charles L. Abernethy, of New Bern, a student of law here in 1894-95, was elected representative from the third district. Edward E. Pou, North Carolina's "grand old man" in the house, was re-elected from the fourth district. Mr. Pou has been in the house of representatives since 1901 and in the last house was lead in years of active service as a representative by only Speaker Garner and Representative Hoggan. Pou was a graduate of the University in 1894.

In the fifth district, Frank W. Hancock, Jr., of Oxford, a member of the class of 1916, was elected. William B. Umstead, also of the 1916 class, was elected from the sixth district. His home is in Durham. In the seventh district, J. Bayard Clark, a law student in the University in 1905-06, was chosen. A. L. Bulwinkle, of Gastonia, a student in 1903-04, won the election in the tenth district, and Zebulon Weaver, a law student in 1894-95, won the race in the eleventh district.

played; Rutgers and Princeton battled in the opener. Four years ago this week-end Carolina licked South Carolina 40 to 0. Hope we can run up a score on Davidson like that this week-end.

With a possible Southern conference in the balance for the winner, Tennessee and Vanderbilt will meet this Saturday at Nashville to settle their annual dispute of football supremacy. With Dixie Roberts of Vanderbilt and Feathers of Tennessee, both almost sure cinches for all-southern berths, doing the heavy work fans in that proximity should see plenty of cagey football. Auburn encounters Florida and should win easily, while Tulane's Green Wave hopes to swamp Kentucky's fine club.

'Chuck' Quinlan Possesses Career As Coach In Eastern Universities

University Wrestling Coach Successful With Team Which He Has Headed.

H. P. "Chuck" Quinlan, coach of varsity wrestling and trainer for all varsity teams, has had a brilliant record as a mat coach, not only here but at the other schools he has been affiliated with in the past twelve years.

Coach Quinlan started his college career at Springfield College of physical education, Springfield, Mass., and was there when "Doc" Sermon, N. C. State trainer, was making all-American football history.

"Chuck" began his coaching career at Pennsylvania State where he served in the capacity of assistant wrestling coach during the 1919-20 interim. He got a call to go south to Virginia Military Institute where he remained until 1926.

While in Lexington, Quinlan turned out real mat teams which won national recognition. For three years, the cadets were coached through undefeated seasons, and their schedules included big boys, Army and other high rollers. During the entire five years at V. M. I., the cadets lost only three meets.

Quinlan having made such a fine reputation, the Carolina athletic officials called on him to take over the coaching of wrestling at Carolina.

Back to the record which "Chuck" has hung high at Carolina. In 1926, his first year on the Hill, Quinlan coached the wrestlers to a state title. He repeated the next year with another state title hanging in his belt. Then the boys got ambitious, Princeton was added to the schedule card. In their first intercollegiate meet, the Tar Heels lost a very close meet to the Princeton Tigers 15-13. It was a different story the following year, the Tar Heels nosed out the Tigers by a 16-14 count. Last year, the Carolina wrestlers could not get the Princeton boys on their card, but they did meet Army there. The cadets were held to a 16-16 score while Brooklyn Poly, the other new comer on the schedule, was beaten 24-8. So in all the intersectional meets, Carolina has lost only one. And last year, the Tar Heels were undefeated in the south giving them the right to be claimants of the title.

The Carolina wrestling coach in 1929 was the mentor to both the boxing and wrestling squads, bringing home a southern boxing title. In all the Tar Heel history, Quinlan has had two southern crowns, four state titles, two intersectional victories, one tie, and one loss.

Incidentally, "Chuck" has gained a reputation of spouting medical terms and lingo, as long as his short body, at the unexpected moment. Somebody asked what was the real nature of Tom White's bad leg injury. Quinlan beamed, and said, "Oh, it is just a hair line astragulus bone." Seeing the evident perplexity, he explained, "In just ordinary words, it is a simple fracture or the so-called 'green stick' fracture."

RUMOR SMASHING CONTRACT SIGNED

Negotiations for Settlement of Dispute Between Publication
Teams Are Completed.

Smashing the rumor that the long awaited Yackety-Buc vs. Tar-Mag grid encounter is a mere farcical space filler, editors of the four campus publications involved met in the shade of the Franklin street traffic light late yesterday afternoon and signed a contract calling for a game next Tuesday afternoon. Editor Barnett, of the Carolina Magazine of the Tar-Mags, highly favored victors, announced five minutes after he had signed the contract that the whole business was news to him. Nevertheless it was expected that his aggregation would fall in line. Business Manager Solomon of the Buccaneer announced that Editor Mason of the same publication would be east this week-end Yale-Princeton game. Anyway, that was his story.

Both squads waived practice yesterday afternoon since the coaches of the two teams were missing.

Contrary to rumors to the contrary, the management of the Tar-Mags announced that there would be no dress rehearsal for inebriated alumni, though it was stated that a cheerio section led by E. C. Daniel, Jr., would be formed. The Tar-Mag cheerios will rehearse two new cheers "Hold that Linotype" and "Yackety-Yack boo, boo, . . . Yackety-Yack boo, boo . . . Buccaneer Varsity sss, sss, sss."

ALL INTRAMURAL TILTS POSTPONED

Play-off for Interleague Championship Will Take Place
November 22.

Yesterday's continued down-pour drenched the intramural football field so thoroughly that Herman Schnell, director of intramural athletics, was forced to postpone all games on the day's schedule.

Three Teams Forfeit

Since Chi Phi, Mangum, and Independence have not appeared for any of their games thus far in the campaign, the intramural department has declared their remaining contests forfeited. Kappa Alpha and Sigma Phi Epsilon register wins over Chi Phi by these forfeits, while Swain Hall and Old West win from Mangum and Aycock from the Independents in the same way.

Next week will bring the regular schedule of the two leagues to a close. Games will be played the first part of the week in the regular list, while the latter part of the week will be given over to play-offs for the championships of each circuit.

Tuesday, November 22, will mark the interleague playoff for the campus championship.

Intramural Schedule

3:30 p. m.—(1) Swain Hall vs. Ruffin; (2) Phi Delta Theta vs. Sigma Phi Sigma; (3) Pi Kappa Alpha vs. Phi Gamma Delta.
4:30 p. m.—(1) Zeta Psi vs. Lambda Chi Alpha; (2) Theta Kappa Nu vs. Alpha Tau Omega; (3) Manly vs. New Dorms.

DAVIDSON SQUAD TO FIGHT TOUGH GAME SATURDAY

Era of "Small Team" for Wildcats Passed; Line Averages 190 Pounds.

The time when Davidson could be called a "small team" has passed; for the Wildcat team Carolina is to meet in Davidson Saturday will present a line averaging something like 190 pounds and a backfield proportionately husky.

But Davidson's line average will fall noticeably if Tubby Hand, 250-pound guard, does not recover from an injury in time to line up against the Tar Heels. However, Hand expects to be right in the midst of the things when the opening kick-off comes.

Davidson's season to date has been far from brilliant, but the 'Cats, starting the season under the handicap of learning an entirely new football system and meeting one of their toughest opponents in the first game, have come along well and shown flashes of real ability on a number of occasions.

Gardner May Be Ready

The loss of Captain Buddy Gardner, in the Duke game, has hurt the Wildcats considerably, but Gardner's injured knee has been responding nicely to treatment, and he expects to face the Tar Heels against whom he played so well a year ago.

Davidson's offense this year hasn't been particularly strong, but Charley Pearce and Johnny Mackorell, a sophomore, have turned in several exceptional performances which indicate potential scoring power at least.

Mackorell, Sophomore Star

Mackorell can easily be classed as one of the finest sophomores backs uncovered in the Big Five this year. His play has been consistently good and even brilliant in one or two instances. Pearce has not been the offensive threat he was a year ago, but his punting has in no wise fallen off, and Pearce, a left-footer, punted eleven times for an average of over forty-four yards last year.

Out of the Big Five race as a result of lickings received from Duke and State, Davidson is nevertheless dangerous. Carolina has always found the Wildcats troublesome and especially so when the game is held in the Wildcats' lair. Two years ago a highly favored Carolina eleven moved into Davidson's back yard and came out on the short end of a 7-6 score.

Helping out Pearce and Mackorell in the backfield will be West, Wingfield, Willson, and Peabody. A drop kick by Peabody all but won the State game for the Wildcats, and Willson has come forth in the last few games with exhibitions that mark him as one of the best full-backs in the state. He was particularly effective backing up the line against State last Saturday.

At tackle Davidson will have a pair of 190-pound veterans, Dick Whitfield and Jack Wagner, with two flashy young sophs, Jim Morgan and Joe Morris, holding down the end posts. Charley Rives looks good and may get the call as Hand's running mate at guard.

If Captain Gardner finds it impossible to get in the game, the center position will be taken care of by Percy McElrath, a converted tackle. McElrath was injured twice during the State game but will probably be in good shape by Saturday.

A review of Davidson's season shows that the Wildcats have met five Southern Conference teams, have tied one, and broken even in the other four games. Washington and Lee

DEMOCRATS WIN EVERY OFFICE IN LOCAL ELECTIONS

Norman Thomas, Socialist Standard-Bearer, Came Third in Choice of Chapel Hill Voters.

Local voters went Democratic in the election Tuesday and swept their candidates into every office without trouble. The Republicans were swamped, not making a strong bid for a single office.

Contrary to rumor yesterday on the campus Norman Thomas Socialist candidate did not fare as well numerically as President Hoover, who ran second.

The presidential vote was 737 for Roosevelt, 220 for Hoover, and 115 for Thomas. For United States' senator Robert R. Reynolds, Democrat, received 800 votes to 237 for his Republican opponent, Jake F. Newell. The new congressman from the sixth district will be William B. Umstead, Democrat, who polled 870 votes against the 176 polled by the Republican William I. Ward.

J. C. B. Ehringhaus, Democrat candidate for governor received 886 local votes to Clifford Frazier's 176. For lieutenant-governor the Democrat A. H. Graham defeated Boone D. Tillet, Republican, 905 to 156.

For state senator: J. S. Hill, Democrat, 843 votes; D. J. Walker, Democrat, 788 votes; J. C. McAdams, Republican, 161 votes.

For state representative: S. M. Gattis, Democrat, 782 votes; H. D. Carter, Republican, 268. In the county for sheriff: W. T. Sloan, Democrat, 915 votes; H. G. Riley, Republican, 146 votes.

For treasurer: G. G. Bivens, Democrat, 854 votes; M. L. Cates, Republican, 156 votes.

For register of deeds: S. W. Andrews, Democrat, 905 votes; Frank Strowd, Republican, 150 votes.

For coroner: S. A. Nathan, Democrat, 836 votes; B. B. Lloyd, Republican, 215 votes.

In the township for magistrate: M. W. Sparrow, 224 votes; W. H. Boger, 157 votes.

For constable: U. M. Rackley, 408 votes; G. A. Hearn, 184 votes; C. C. Suggs, 113 votes.

For county commissioners the Democrats, John Hanner, 832 votes, W. P. Berry, 849 votes, and R. A. Eubanks, 919 votes, defeated the Republicans, Luceo Lloyd, 214 votes, W. T. Roberts, 146 votes, and G. O. Retzel, 133 votes.

SELECTION COMMITTEE EXAMINES APPLICANTS

Applicants for the Holt scholarships will appear before the committee on selection Saturday morning, according to an announcement from Dean A. W. Hobbs' office yesterday. This is a change from the originally scheduled meeting on Friday afternoon. Notices have been sent from Dean Hobbs' office to the applicants advising the exact hour for their appearance, each student being compelled to appear personally for several minutes before the committee. In previous years, applicants appeared in a body at a certain time.

The selection committee is as follows: Dean A. W. Hobbs, chairman; Deans N. W. Walker, D. D. Carroll, F. F. Bradshaw, M. C. S. Noble, H. G. Baity, and J. M. Bell; R. B. House, executive secretary of the University; and H. F. Comer, secretary of the Y. M. C. A.

Erratum

The local post office dispatches outgoing mail at 9:30 a. m., and receives incoming mail at 10:15 a. m. on Sundays. These items were reversed in the schedule announced by THE DAILY TAR HEEL Saturday.

Committees to Suspend

These committees will have the power to suspend from the University those students who are admittedly guilty, and will bring before the council those cases which are doubtful. The committees will be elected by the classes according to a graduated scale, three representatives in classes numbering up to fifty, five in classes from fifty to seventy, and seven for those above seventy.

It is the intention of the council that this resolution be placed before the campus for discussion by the various organizations. The Union Forum last night opened a series of discussions, which will be followed by bills to be introduced to the Di and Phi. In this way the student body will receive ample opportunity to grasp the relative merits of the bill and express a rational opinion at the special election to be held sometime in the future.

DEMOCRATS LEAD OPPOSING PARTIES IN STATE VOTING

Reports Thus Far Give Roosevelt 386,886 Votes; Hoover 132,658; And Thomas 3,216.

The Democrats are supreme. Forty-two of our forty-eight states say so. The president is a Democrat; thirty-three states have elected Democratic governors; yesterday the Democrats were in complete control of the seventy-third congress.

Following is a tabulation of the latest reports of the national election: in electoral votes, Roosevelt leads Hoover 427 to 59; in popular votes, Roosevelt leads 13,415,681 to 9,662,989 for Hoover.

Democrats Take State Offices

The Democratic party maintained its overwhelming lead in North Carolina as late returns were assembled yesterday from Tuesday's election. With 1,333 of the state's voting precincts accounted for, the standing was: Roosevelt, 386,886; Hoover, 132,658; Norman Thomas, Socialist, 3,216; William D. Upshaw, Prohibitionist party, 6; William Z. Foster, Communist, 2.

In the state elections results were: in the senatorial race, Robert R. Reynolds, anti-prohibition Democratic candidate, 333,800; Jake F. Newell, Republican, 128,169; for governor, J. C. B. Ehringhaus, Democrat, 351,805; Clifford Frazier, Republican, 116,752. The other Democratic candidates for state officers matched the lead of the ticket stride for stride.

Clothing Collection Is Sent To Sedalia

Contributions from a large number of students to the fire victims at the Palmer Institute were dispatched Tuesday from the campus Y. M. C. A.

The three Y. M. C. A. cabinets, in charge of collecting spare wearing apparel from Carolina men, for the colored boys at Sedalia, reported most gratifying results in the drive which lasted a week.

Nathaniel Sellars, head of the local colored quartet, took the collection to Sedalia. Sellars has a daughter in the Palmer Institute.

Robinson And Arlen Billed At Carolina

Two famous screen names are at the head of the cast of "Tiger Shark," the First National picture featuring today's program at the Carolina theatre.

Edward G. Robinson, star of the picture, and Richard Arlen, long a screen favorite, play together for the first time in this epic of the seas. It is a story of love among the fishermen who risk their lives practically every time they go to sea.

FRESHMEN NAME CANDIDATES FOR CLASS ELECTION

Presidential Candidates to Make Speeches November 17; Election Is Set for Next Day.

The chapel period yesterday morning was devoted to the nomination of the officers for the freshman class. In the absence of the president of the student body, Haywood Weeks, the meeting was in charge of E. C. Daniel, Jr., vice-president. The nominations were received with applause and cheers by the assembly.

The presidential nominees were: Frank Rogers of Rome, Ga.; David McLenny, of Mineola, N. Y.; Billy Yandell, of Charlotte; and William Hobbard, of Durham.

Those nominated for vice-president are: Van Webb, of Raleigh, and Bill Moore, of Wheeling, W. Va. There were two students nominated for secretary, Sam Clark, of Tarboro, and Scott Holman, of Rocky Mount; but Scott Holman withdrew from the race, thereby unanimously electing Sam Clark to the office. John Bost, of Raleigh; Mortimer Ellisberg, of Raleigh; and Jesse Parker, of Wilmington were those nominated for the office of treasurer.

The presidential nominees will deliver speeches in which they will set forth their plans and policies before the freshman assembly next Thursday morning; the election will take place the following day.

If any of the candidates wish to withdraw they are asked to come to the student government office, 202 Graham Memorial this afternoon between 2:00 and 3:00 o'clock and see E. C. Daniel, Jr., vice-president of the student body.

DORMITORY CLUB AIDS RED CROSS

Several Suggestions Acted Upon At Meeting of Dormitory Presidents Yesterday.

At the second meeting of the Dormitory club for this year, Colonel Joseph H. Pratt, of the local Red Cross, asked the dormitory presidents for support of the local organization in its membership drive, and P. L. Burch, of the buildings department, announced that his department would co-operate with the club in making several changes that have been suggested by students.

The members of the club agreed to aid the Red Cross, and it was decided that the president of each dormitory would canvass his building for contributions Monday night.

The complaints sent to Burch were from the dormitories in the old quadrangle, asking for brighter lights in the lavatories and hooks for towels.

In connection with social activities, the club decided that each dormitory should have a social at sometime during the winter quarter, and it advocated that a room on the first floor be set aside for a common social room. E. C. Smith has promised to furnish passes for each of these social events.

At the close of the meeting the members of the organization attended a complimentary show for them at the Carolina theatre.

McKee Heads Junior Senior Dance Group

A committee for arranging plans for the senior-junior dance, which will close senior week next spring, has been appointed by A. S. Cate, president of the senior class. Headed by W. W. McKee, the committee will include also Francis Anderson, Sparks Griffin, T. S. White, and Lenoir Wright. The group will meet from time to time to draw up plans for the dance.

There will be a new system of delivering invitations for the dance which will be inaugurated by the committee. The bids will be delivered to each person directly instead of requiring each person to go to the "Y" to secure them.

WAYS OF HELPING BUSINESS SHOWN BY DR. MURCHISON

University Professor Tells Rotary Club That Bottom of Depression Is Passed.

"There is reason to believe the bottom of the depression has now passed, but the improvement has not in any sense reached levels that we could call general business recovery," Dr. C. T. Murchison, director of research in the University school of commerce, told the Chapel Hill Rotary club in an address at its regular meeting Wednesday night.

"Regardless of the change of administrations, our economic problems cannot be solved unless public opinion is mobilized as never before," Dr. Murchison asserted. "Our current operating expenses can be reduced some, but the principal item that absorbs our revenue, a fact which many seem to overlook, is the debt service."

One solution of the nation's economic problem, Dr. Murchison thought, would be a shortening of working hours, which would result immediately in increased employment. There must be, he said, an adjustment to the machine age which is here to stay.

Another solution, he suggested, would be for the country to put an end to financial buccaneering, such as Samuel Insull and many others have been allowed to engage in.

As one way of helping the international situation, Dr. Murchison recommended that America cancel debts due her by European nations.

"The only way we can collect now," he asserted, "is by taking goods from the nations who owe us or by reinvesting the proceeds of those debts in foreign countries."

"The new administration would be wise to cancel debts, and along with debts should go cancellations of reparations. This would do more to help bring back prosperity than any other one thing, I believe, for we have only begun to tap the possibilities of our economic life."

"In one year we could make up in income from increased trade any losses incurred by cancellation of debts, for our debt problem is now costing us more than twenty billion a year."

Herbert Hazelman Receives Wide Recognition For Musical Ability

"Danse Moronique," Work of University Sophomore, Inspired by Statement of Professor, Will Be Played This Week by National Symphony Orchestra in Washington.

Herbert Hazelman may be an answer to the frequent plea for significant American composers. While neither an infant prodigy nor a seasoned artist, the University sophomore has already witnessed national recognition of his musical ability. The latest indication of his importance as a promising composer is manifested by the fact that late this week the National Symphony orchestra will play his composition Danse Moronique in a concert at Washington, D. C.

The piece is to be conducted by Lamar Stringfield, director of the North Carolina Symphony orchestra, who will direct the latter half of the program, which will be given over to the works of American composers. Hazelman is to leave for the capital sometime today.

Inspired by Statement
His work is a genuine symphony composition, in no respect jazz. However, it has a rather jerky, modernistic movement. The theme was inspired by the widely publicized statement of a New York University professor, "Only morons whistle." With this idea in mind, Hazelman composed the piece with a movement somewhat similar to that of the tunes that are most often whistled. Thus arose the title, Danse Moronique.

It was written last fall between the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays. According to the composer, the better part of a month was consumed in its composition and preparation for performance. It was originally written for a woodwind quartet of flute, oboe, bassoon, and horn and was played at the second

LEGIONAIRES TO BE PRESENT AT CHAPEL PROGRAM

Local Organization Plans Full Program for Armistice Day Celebration

The local post of the American Legion will have a full program today in its celebration of the signing of the Armistice.

The events will begin at 10:15 o'clock in the morning and will continue all day. The members, wearing caps and emblems, will gather in front of Memorial hall at 10:15 o'clock and will attend the University Armistice day exercises at which Dr. W. L. Poteat, president-emeritus of Wake Forest College, will speak.

Following this, there will be a Dutch luncheon at Gooch's cafe at 12:30 o'clock. At this time plans for forming a weekly luncheon club will be discussed.

There will be a Dutch supper at the Episcopal parish house for the Legion and auxiliary. At this time reports on the membership drive will be made and a social hour and entertainment will follow.

"Y" Officers Will Meet

All officers of the three Y. M. C. A. cabinets will gather today at the "Y" building during freshman assembly period. Quite a few "Y" projects are on tap for the period between now and the Christmas holidays. Another important feature will be the discussing of the programs of the trio of cabinets for their next meeting Monday night.

Hickman Will Preach At Methodist Church

Dr. Franklin S. Hickman, professor of the psychology of religion at Duke University, will preach Sunday morning, at 11:00 o'clock at the University Methodist church.

Dr. Hickman is generally recognized as one of the ablest preachers in North Carolina. His commencement sermon at the University last June, was well received. One professor who had heard the baccalaureate sermons for forty years said it was one of the three best in that long period.

Dr. Hickman is preaching every other Sunday in the new Duke chapel to audiences of 1,500 to 2,000 people.

FORUM DISCUSSES PROPOSED CHANGE IN HONOR SYSTEM

Daniel and Weeks Outline Plan; Forum Will Meet Next Week for Discussion.

At its regular meeting last Wednesday in Graham Memorial, the Union Forum engaged in a heated discussion on the proposal made by the student council in regard to the new additions to the present honor system.

Other business brought up in the forum was the reports of the two forum committees. The first, the committee to discourage walking on the grass, reported that their program had been completed and would go into effect as soon as the University grounds committee decided whether or not they would build new walks, or continue to use the old ones. The other, the entertainment committee, reported that the dances in Graham Memorial would be discontinued for the present and that other types of entertainment, namely, negro singers, well known speakers, and other entertainers would be substituted.

Proposal Outlined

The student council proposal was outlined by the ex-officio chairman, E. C. Daniel, Jr., and Haywood Weeks gave a brief explanation. A motion was passed to limit the speakers to a two-minute talk. After an exhaustive criticism was made by the members, a motion was made that the forum go on record as opposing the issue. This motion was tabled, and it was voted to continue the discussion at the meeting next week. The chairman announced that it was not the intention of the forum to take a vote, but to give the members an opportunity for discussion, and added that unless other plans were made the forum would meet next Wednesday.

Carolina-Davidson Tickets

Tickets for the Carolina-Davidson football game at Davidson are on sale today only at the local Book Exchange. Student and faculty tickets will sell for $1.10 and regular admission tickets for $1.65. Students must present their athletic passbooks at the gate tomorrow with their tickets, and faculty members must show their season tickets for admission.

Infirmity List

Yesterday the following were on the infirmity sick list: J. W. Kirkpatrick, P. L. Nash, J. T. Welsh, J. R. Lothian, and Frank Hennis.

DR. W. L. POTEAT TO MAKE SPEECH AT CELEBRATION

Classes Dismissed From 10:08 To 11:15 So That Students Can Attend Program.

Dr. William L. Poteat, president emeritus of Wake Forest College and one of the outstanding educators in the state, will deliver the main address for the Armistice day exercises, in Memorial hall this morning at 10:15. Plans have been made for the local post of the American Legion to march to the exercises in a body.

Since the program begins at 10:15, classes will be dismissed at 10:08 and will not be resumed until 11:15, in order that the students will be given an opportunity to attend. The usual freshman chapel will be suspended.

Dr. Poteat served Wake Forest as president for twenty-two years; and in the same institution, has been a professor since 1878. Education is not the only field in which Dr. Poteat has served the state. He has been an active member of the North Carolina board of examiners and the North Carolina conference for social service.

He has likewise won recognition as an author. His most recent and well known books are: Can a Man Be a Christian Today? and The Way of Victory.

Reverend Ronald Tamblin, pastor of the Presbyterian church, will open the program with the invocation. Following this, Walter Patterson will play the national anthem on the organ, and Taps will be blown by George Lawrence. The oration by Dr. Poteat follows. At the conclusion of the exercises the audience will sing a verse of the national anthem and the benediction will be given by Tamblin.

PRATT OPENS RED CROSS ROLL CALL

Talks at Carolina Theatre During Week to Urge Realization of Goal Set for Village.

Red Cross Roll Call week was begun last night by talks by Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt, chairman of the local chapter of Red Cross, in the Carolina theatre and in Spencer hall. "Prospects for our goal of 750 members in the community and at least 300 members in the University at present seem very bright," was Colonel Hyde's statement.

Beginning with the talk last night, short talks will be made between shows in the Carolina theatre throughout the week. Among the speakers will be a representative of the University student body and a representative of the local Kiwanis club, according to present plans.

On next Sunday, which is Red Cross Sunday, requests for new members for the organization will be made in the various churches of Chapel Hill, either by the pastors or by prominent members of the community. A brief talk at the Episcopal church will be made by Pratt.

Attendance Required

Contrary to announcement made in THE DAILY TAR HEEL yesterday, freshmen will be required to attend the assembly period today. The attendance will be taken.

A Red Letter Day For Duke-Carolina

For the past three years there has been growing up between the student bodies of Duke and Carolina a much-desired friendly rivalry, the like of which has never before been seen during the history of the two institutions. Before this time each of the student groups was savagely jealous of the other's advancement in academic circles or success in athletic contests. And on every occasion that presented itself the students took it upon themselves to throw mud on the good name of their rival university.

But no longer does this condition exist. The students have become educated to the fact that two universities the size of Duke and Carolina, enjoying such prominent places in educational circles in the country and holding the position of leaders in education in the South, should no longer be troubled by dissensions among the student bodies. They have apparently come to realize the advantages of having these two large institutions on friendly terms with each other. And as a consequence there is little, if any, jealousy now existing between the two student groups.

The development of this friendly relationship has now come to such a past that the attitude this year will be largely instrumental in shaping the policy for years to come. If the good feeling is continued this year, hereafter the friendship between the two student bodies will be taken merely as a matter of course.

The student leaders of both Duke and Carolina first began their attempt to realize this ideal in 1930, when through the influence of John A. Lang, first president of the North Carolina Student Federation, these men were brought together in a co-operative drive to stamp out all of the then existing jealousies and rivalries on the two campuses. This present year of 1932 should mark the achievement of the goal towards which this drive has been working. No longer should the question of Duke-Carolina relationships be a subject of enumerable editorials. No longer should there even be any doubt as to the existence of anything other than the closest feeling between the two student bodies. The existence of this friendly attitude should be taken for granted.

The day of the Duke-Carolina game, November 19th, will long be considered as a red letter day in the history of Duke-Carolina relationships. For then it will be that the now existing friendly rivalry will either become a permanent reality or else it will lapse into its position of several years ago and become only a cherished ideal. And the Carolina student body as host to the occasion of that day will be largely responsible for the turn this rivalry shall take.

On the Brink

There's no use in shutting our eyes to the fact that the honor system at the University of North Carolina within the past decade has failed miserably. When but few students were enrolled in the University, the honor system was capable of being enforced, for each student, by direct contact with the Student Council, was impressed with his double responsibility—not to cheat and to report those that did. Still today its ideal is commendable, but the actual enforcement of its principles has become a farce.

Nor is it any wonder. Over two thousand students responsible for its maintenance are headed by a distant committee of nine, known as the Student Council. And a close connection between the individual and this small committee is impossible; he no longer feels the presence of an honor system. Reports of violations are few and far between; and cheating, as flagrant as it is in our class-rooms, is ignored. Only one case of this kind, in fact, has been reported since the beginning of the winter quarter and that by a faculty member, not by a student. Yet cheating continues to thrive with no promise of punishment for the offender.

Can we blame a student for not reporting his fellow classmate? Obviously not, when two thousand others not only wink at the offense but think it cowardly to report it. These are the conditions which handicap the effective working of the honor system, and its ideals are degenerating year by year with the incoming of new men, who feel about them the prevalent spirit of laxity in upholding them. Something must be done to check this lapse, or our honor system will fade out of existence.

With this purpose in mind, the Student Council has proposed a plan subject to ratification by the student body. Each classroom will elect an honor committee, whose main function will be to receive reports of cheating on quizzes or examinations. But in no way are these committee members to act as monitors. The plan will bring our class-rooms in closer contact with the Student Council; it will impress each student with the responsibility that is his; and it will serve as a reminder that an honor system still exists at the University of North Carolina, whether or not it is at present in working order.

This proposal will be voted on by the student body. If it is rejected, this University will continue to have an honor system that is a disgrace to its ideals. —A.T.D.

Good Sportsmanship In Political Circles

There is certainly one good thing, at least, that can be said for this government of ours. It may be justly attacked for its graft, its corruption, and its inefficiency. Its utter lack of true democracy is obvious. Political elections become questions of whether we are to be governed by Republican steel magnates, oil kings, and bank barons or Democratic steel magnates, oil kings, and bank barons. But there is this to be said: The American politician is a good sport.

If you don't believe it, see Mr. Hoover's telegram to Mr. Roosevelt, sent the night of the election, when the trend of affairs was known: "I congratulate you on the opportunity that has come to you to be of service to the country, and I wish for you a most successful administration. In the common purpose of all of us, I shall dedicate myself to every possible effort." This from the defeated candidate was no mere gesture. It was a sincere statement of an honest and hard-working man, weary with the toil of this country's highest and most responsible position held during the hardest economic crisis we have ever known. In sending this telegram Hoover closed his public career with honor. He should have the deepest respect of every American citizen.

And thus we see the two major personalities of the 1928 presidential campaign, Mr. Smith and Mr. Hoover, politically out of the picture. It is a strange commentary on political life that both men should have been eliminated by Mr. Roosevelt. But such was the case, and both took their medicine with the highest and best of sportsmanship.

Mr. Smith, rejected at the Chicago Democratic convention by the shrewdness of Mr. McAdoo, kept an honorable silence and, in due time, rallied to his party. Even those who called Mr. Smith after the convention "a Democrat still,—very still" must have realized the restraint which Mr. Smith was required to exercise.

Mr. Hoover, defeated in his ambition to hold office for two terms, was the first to congratulate his victorious opponent. Let us be thankful that our country is not Mexico, Chile, or Peru, and that the completion of voting is not the signal to fire. Let us be thankful that we know enough to play the game, obey the rules, and stop at the referee's whistle.—B.B.P.

New Hope

The King is dead! Long live the King! The depression is over! Seniors may once more sleep the sleep of serenity and peace, for the worries of unemployment shall pass with the tyrannical Republican administration. Students who have been loafing away the years, waiting for the return of prosperity, may dust off the covers of their now ancient books and prepare to graduate into a world of plenty.

Next autumn we may expect to find our beautiful campus edifices surrounded by shining Cadillacs, Packards, and LaSalles, with at least a new Ford in every man's name. Ash trays will no longer be the prey of unsuccessful raids. Co-eds will again be seen in the vicinity of the theatre accompanied by various males. From the distant wheat regions of the west shall come stalwart youths to swell our fast diminishing ranks.

Pale haggard faces of prohibition days will grow round and bright from the legalized beer and wines of the new era. The saloon will not return, but it is a safe guess that the now popular filling stations will be able to offer more tonsil pleasing beverages than the kill-me-quick varieties of the dark years of the Volstead Act.

Once more the government will be in the hands of the people. No more shall big business be the dictator. The common people, pardon me, "the forgotten man," will have his say in making this land of ours once more the ideal of foreign nations. His tax burdened days will be only a memory. Economists will cease to strive, scheme and confer, for that notorious budget of ours will at last be balanced. A new hope will have sprung up in the hearts of the people.—L.M.J.

In The Main

By MAYNE ALBRIGHT

Our Chapel Hill in this year 1932 seems to be enjoying an unusually sane and sober existence. Even after we had the first football game in six years, the bell tower instead of ringing "There'll be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight" pealed "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow."

Rushing season, always strenuous period, went along this year with some illegal rushing, some throat-cutting, and a few frantic last-minute decisions, but much less than usual. Fraternities and clubs of every kind have found that students are actually considering such trivial things as time and money before joining everything offered them.

Chapel Hill's "Reds," always a small if somewhat offensive group, made famous by the Clark-Kurfrees editorials, have left us altogether, or, tired of being ignored, have ceased to worry about the illiberalism of the University and the wrongs of Scottsboro. The campus showed not a single vote for the Communist Foster. The Socialists have been conscientious workers in an idealistic but fully small minority. Young Democrats and Young Republicans

THIS picture will bring back memories to a lot of people of the days when the boys went marching away with flags flying and bands playing.

Chesterfields were very popular with those men who went overseas. They were "rookies" then. They're "old vets" today. And that milder, satisfying Chesterfield flavor is still their steady choice... after fifteen years!

It was mildness that first attracted smokers to Chesterfield. And it's mildness and better taste that is winning new friends for Chesterfield today... all over the country.

Tar Babies Set For Big Tilt With Virginia Frosh Today In Kenan Stadium

Will Seek to Gain Third Victory Of Season Over Strong Virginia Eleven.

INJURIES HURT TAR BABIES

Several First String Players May Not Be Able to Play in Important Game Today.

With two wins and one tie in three starts the Tar Baby football team will be out to keep its slate clean when it takes on Virginia's freshman eleven this afternoon at 3:00 o'clock on Kenan field.

Virginia's first year team will come to Chapel Hill with almost as good a record as the Tar Babies and as this is its final contest of the year—it will be trying hard to stop the Carolina frosh. The young Cavaliers have three victories, one tie, and one defeat. They won from the freshman teams of Maryland 6 to 0, V. M. I. 27 to 0, and Washington and Lee 28 to 25. They tied the strong Navy Plebes 13-13 and lost to V. P. I. 14-16. The Virginia attack is built around Harry Martin, who gives promise of becoming one of the south's greatest triple threat men if he continues at his present rate. He has been the outstanding player in all Virginia's battles so far this year.

The Tar Babies will be minus two of their best backs and will be handicapped by injuries which two of the starting men will have. Herman Snyder, star halfback, who has suffered with a bad leg all year, will be out with a broken bone in his left hand. Charles Sutton, second string fullback, still has a bad ankle which will keep him out of competition for another week. Jim McCachren and Hobgood, starting fullback and tackle respectively, have bad legs which have kept them out of practice most of the time since the State frosh battle.

Yesterday the Carolina yearlings took only a light workout in their last preparation before today's game. Most of the time was taken up with a defense drill against the young Cavaliers' various formations and passing attack. The Tar Babies finished the afternoon with a snappy signal drill, going through all their formations and plays.

CHAPEL HILL HIGH PLAYS FOR CRACK AT TITLE TODAY

Local Team Plays Elizabeth City in Semi-Final of Class "B" Championship There Today.

A finalist's position in the eastern high school class "B" pennant chase will be at stake today when Chapel Hill high's eleven meets Elizabeth City in the eastern Carolina city.

Chapel Hill was defeated by Apex, last year's state champs, early in the eastern title go-round; but the locals got revenge this year and earned the privilege of meeting Elizabeth City in the semi-finals. Elizabeth City was defeated last year by Apex in the eastern finals.

The winner of this tilt will meet the winner of the Lumberton-Whiteville game, also today, at Lumberton.

Golf Practice Tickets

Varsity and freshman golf candidates may secure tickets for practice time on the course of the Hope Valley club today and daily hereafter. These tickets will be available through Coach John F. Kenfield who will be at Emerson field between 10:30 and 12:00 o'clock every day.

A. T. O. DEFEATS THETA KAPPA NU BY LARGE SCORE

Zeta Psi Also Keeps Slate Clean By Virtue of Victory Over Lambda Chi Alpha.

Two forfeits and a postponement reduced the actual contests in yesterday's intramural tag football program to three. In these games Alpha Tau Omega and Zeta Psi continued undefeated and Phi Gamma Delta nosed out Pi Kappa Alpha, all on mud-soaked fields which slowed up the games.

A. T. O. gained its second high-powered victory of the week when it crushed Theta Kappa Nu under a barrage of eight touchdowns for a 50-0 triumph.

Alan Smith led the A. T. O. attack, ably assisted by Wally Kendall, Mel Thompson and the rest of his red-shirted outfit.

Longest and Perry led the losing eleven in its vain attempt to keep the score down. Near the end of the game Longest resorted to the practice of returning kickoffs with an immediate punt, hoping to keep the ball in A. T. O. territory. Alan Smith's brilliant runbacks of these punts, however, continued the relentless scoring spree which has amassed over one hundred points for his team this week.

Zeta Psi Scores

Zeta Psi experienced little difficulty in downing Lambda Chi Alpha, 26-0. Phil Sasser and his cohorts ran roughshod over the losers to tally four times. There would have been more scoring, doubtless, except for the mud which rendered cutback plays useless.

Sparks Griffin led his team's defense, but failed to hold the Zeta eleven with any degree of success. The first down totals favored the victors, 7-2.

Phi Gams Win

After gaining a 5-0 lead in first downs at half-time, the Phi Gamma Delta eleven had to brace to hold its lead against a revived Pi Kappa Alpha attack in the second half. The Pika team threatened constantly in the last part of the game, having the ball on the seven-yard line at the last whistle.

The final score favored Phi Gamma Delta, 5-3, with Jimmy Johnston and June Bateman standing out for the winners.

Other Results

Phi Delta-Theta and Swain Hall won from Sigma Phi Sigma and Ruffin, respectively, by the forfeit route. The Manly-New Dorms contest was put off until next week.

May Be Kicking Duel

A battle of portside punters is on tap for tomorrow's Carolina-Davidson clash.

Both Henry Burnett, local kicker, and Charlie Pearce, 'Cat booter, propel their spirals from the portside. Also, each of the two lads are old masters at getting 'em just outside at the "coffin corner."

LEADERS RETAIN POSITIONS IN HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL

Semi-Finals of State Class "A" and "B" Tournament Will Be Run Off This Week.

Leaders in the North Carolina state class "A" football race seem fairly sure of keeping their positions as the season draws to a close. With only one more game, Durham high school, undefeated and untied, looks like the certain eastern district winner.

The Bull City team meets Raleigh next Friday. In the western section, Charlotte will play Winston-Salem tomorrow, and comparative records point to a Charlotte victory. The team from the Queen City is also undefeated. The west's other undefeated eleven is Salisbury, which drew a bye this week-end. Other games scheduled in class "A" this week-end are the High Point-Gastonia struggle this afternoon at Gastonia and the Raleigh-Goldsboro tilt in Raleigh, also to be played this afternoon. Class "A" football is run on the percentage system of tabulation. In class "B" elimination (Continued on last page)

FROSH HARRIERS WILL RACE DUKE

Tar Babies to Get First Test Tomorrow Against Blue Imps in Durham.

Carolina freshmen cross-country runners will receive their initial baptism of fire tomorrow morning when the Tar Baby harriers clash with the Duke yearlings at Durham.

The frosh meet will be a supplement to a varsity tilt between the two schools, also Saturday morning. The freshman race, however, will be but half the distance run by the varsity.

As usual, practically all of the material for this year's frosh club has been drawn from cake race winners. Most of the tentative starters were in the initial ten men to finish in the cake run two weeks ago today.

Starters Uncertain

Coach Dale Ranson indicated eight probable starters, but he said that there were about a half dozen outsiders who had a good chance to set a starting position. Boys who are tentatively slated to await the starting gun are: W. W. Caraway, L. B. Conte, O. H. Garrison, A. Mark, Barnaby C. Keeney, R. Y. McPhail, J. Sullivan, and H. L. Umstead. Seven men who have as yet a good chance to be among the starters are Bennett, Deaton, Neal, Lynch, Hunt, Macon, and Napier.

MAY CAUSE TAR HEELS TROUBLE

Johnny Mackorell, left, and Charley Rives, right, two Davidson stars who are playing their first year on the varsity. Mackorell is the star sophomore quarterback who runs, kicks, and passes, and has been the big gun in the 'Cat attack this year. Rives is a junior playing his first year on the team. He transferred from Carolina his freshman year and has been playing a steady game at end.

Varsity Runners TO MEET STRONG BLUE DEVIL TEAM

Coach Ranson Will Start Same Eight Men That Swamped Florida Tomorrow.

Intensive training for tomorrow's cross-country meet at Durham with Duke's powerful Blue Devil harrier outfit ends today for Carolina varsity tracksters.

Carolina mentors seemed well pleased with the showing of much improvement that has been evidenced by the Tar Heel club ever since last week's win over Florida's 'Gators, 22-38. Clarence Jensen, who won last year's Southern Conference run, and Walter Groover have both turned in good work during the week's practice. Jensen finished fourth and Groover fifth among the Carolina men in the Florida meet.

It was indicated that the same eight men—Louis Sullivan, Henry Sullivan, Walter Groover, Clarence Jensen, Captain Bob Hubbard, Gerry Goldman, T. L. Cordle, and T. H. Curlee—would start against Duke tomorrow.

This meet will be run over a five-mile course, while the Florida dash was over a course only 3.3 miles long.

Comparative Records

Bob Tuttle's outfit holds victories over Davidson and St. Johns, both by decisive scores. Such stars as Bray, Heritage, Lewis, and Bird will try to upset the Tar Heel stars.

In Carolina's only start, the team took a 22-38 victory from Florida with Louis Sullivan, Captain Bob Hubbard, and Henry Sullivan showing the way for the Tar Heels.

TAR HEELS TAPER OFF WITH PEPPY DRILL YESTERDAY

Caldwell, Manley, and Shaffer Stand Out in Last Heavy Workout Before Game.

Several new stars strove to outshine the veterans and looked distinctly good as Carolina primed offense and defense for Davidson with a long and thorough practice yesterday.

Caldwell at guard, Manley at end, and Shaffer at half were the youngsters looking up particularly. Coach Collins noted their improvement with satisfaction and indicated they would all get their chance Saturday.

Shaffer took part in the punters' drill, featuring with Woolen and Burnett, while the other backs worked to lay a defense for Davidson's tricky aerial attack, and the linemen strove to perfect their blocking in line scrimmage.

Afterwards Coach Collins tried three backfields with good results behind varsity forwards in additional line scrimmage, and the practice was topped with drills at which backs blocked ends, tackles hit the bucker, and other linemen worked on the tackling dummy.

The coaches are striving to bring the Tar Heels to their peak in every department of play for Davidson.

The line-blocking looked much better most of the way yesterday, but Coach Collins still found frequent errors and let-downs to criticize.

Several veterans were flashing real form. Thompson's pass-defense work, Daniel's driving, Walker's blocking, and the way Phipps was picking his holes stood out.

OR TO put it another way—"How you feel depends on what you eat." Just try a bowl of Kellogg's Rice Krispies for breakfast or lunch and see if you don't feel keener and fitter. That's because Rice Krispies are rich in energy and so easy to digest. How much better than heavy, hot dishes.

Try Rice Krispies for a late snack. Extra good with sliced bananas or other fruit. Delicious, toasted rice bubbles that actually crackle in milk or cream. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

STUDENT MEETING WILL MAKE FIGHT AGAINST R. O. T. C.

Norman Thomas to Head Speakers as Students Gather in Anti-War Conference.

Approximately sixty colleges in the United States will send delegates to the student convention in New York City during the Thanksgiving holidays, at which time an organized students' opposition to war preparations will be inaugurated. Norman Thomas, Socialist presidential candidate in the recent election, will be among the principal speakers for the occasion.

Promoted by the United Youth Conference Against War, and backed by a score of national student organizations, the movement will adopt, as one of its chief motives, the abolition of the R. O. T. C. units from all colleges.

Paul Porter, conference executive secretary, explained that the suspension of students from the University of Maryland and the University of Missouri because of their refusal to enroll in compulsory military training courses was the leading factor in the decision to hold the national conference.

Fenner Brockway, chairman of the Independent Labor Party of Great Britain, will deliver the keynote address Friday evening, November 25. In the remaining days of the convention, Norman Thomas' address will be supplemented by several student speakers. Registration officials, headed by Andrew S. Gray, of Princeton University, with offices at 112 East 19th street, New York City, are preparing accommodations for 1,000 delegates.

A. P. HUDSON WILL SPEAK TO ROCKY MOUNT GROUP

Dr. A. P. Hudson, of the University English department, will go to Rocky Mount this afternoon to deliver an address tomorrow morning to the Northeastern English council on the use of folk-lore and native superstition in English written work. The English council is a federation of teachers of English in colleges and high schools throughout the state which meets to discuss the problems and work of the English departments in the various schools.

It is separated into divisions, the northeastern section of which Dr. Hudson will address tomorrow. Dr. Hudson has done a great deal of study along the lines of folk-lore in Mississippi, and is expected to urge that students use similar familiar material in their English written work as the subject of themes and personal reminiscences.

P. W. Wager Will Speak To North Carolina Club

The North Carolina club will meet for the second time of the year Monday, November 14 at 7:30, in the library room of the department of rural social economics.

Dr. Paul W. Wager is scheduled to speak to the club on the subject "The County Consolidation Movement." He is recognized as an authority on county government, a field in which he has specialized for some years.

French Club to Meet

Members of the French club will convene tonight at 7:30 o'clock in room 213 Graham Memorial building for their second meeting of the year. All students of French, and especially those persons registered in French 3, 4, or 21, will be expected to attend. A special program has been arranged.

cans have preached their gospels to themselves but never very loudly.

The first issue of the Buccaneer, edited by the President of the Grail, (can you imagine the secretary of state editing Ballyhoo?) failed to shock, and the DAILY TAR HEEL has so far avoided sensationalism of any kind. No flagrant abuses of student honor or decorum have been uncovered by conscientious student councilmen or ambitious editorialists. No bandits, no boycotts, no bandwagons! What are colymists to do but quarrel among themselves and write poems about each other?

The only description of Chapel Hill that really gives you Chapel Hill whether you've known the place or not, is Dr. Edgar Knight's "Heaven's Blessings Attend Her" in School and Society, Vol. 36, No. 929, October 15, 1932.

Mary Dirnberger's sketch maps of Chapel Hill are covering a lot of wall and desk space around the campus nowadays. Now, of course, l'art pour l'art, and all that sort of thing, but it strikes me that if she would try a solution of fly-catcher the same color as the shellac she now uses, these maps would not only be useful but would give a truer picture of the village during this season.

The caustic critic, Jack Riley, may not be such a dangerous chap after all. At any rate I found him the day before the opening of Uncle Tom's Cabin sitting demurely behind a sewing machine in the Playmaker Scene Shop, doing some delicate needle-work or what might have been Little Eva's panties.

Hazelman's compositions, especially written for the ensemble, were played in order to raise money to send one of the musicians to the national high school orchestra camp at Interlochen, Michigan.

At present enrolled in the University school of music, Hazelman intends to enter the field of public school music after his graduation. His plans, however, go considerably further, for he aims to public school work as a means to making possible the continuance of his musical training at the Eastman school of music in Rochester. His ultimate ambition, he admits, is the director's baton of some large symphony orchestra.

North Carolina Artist Will Exhibit Works at Duke

Lindsey Gudger, artist of Asheville, will exhibit several of his oils and water colors at the Duke University woman's college library for four days beginning Saturday, November 12. North Carolina mountain landscapes feature among the oil paintings.

DONATION MAKES POSSIBLE WAKE FOREST BUILDING

Family of Dr. W. A. Johnson Gives College $60,000 to Erect Medical Building.

Wake Forest College has been given a new $60,000 medical building by the family of the late Dr. William Amos Johnson, according to an announcement made recently by the trustees of the Johnson Memorial Trust fund. These trustees are: Dr. J. Clyde Turner of Greensboro, and J. H. Johnson, of Raleigh.

The structure will be named the William Amos Johnson medical building as a memorial to the former professor of anatomy who was killed in an automobile accident on Thanksgiving 1927. The contract has been awarded to George W. Kane of Durham and the architect is William H. Dietrich of Raleigh. Construction on the building will begin this week and it will be ready for occupancy in the spring.

HARRY DAVIS WILL READ "OF THEE I SING" SUNDAY

Harry Davis, business manager and assistant director of the Carolina Playmakers, will read George Kaufman's Pulitzer prize winning play of last year, Of Thee I Sing. The reading will take place Sunday night at 8:30 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre.

This is a special performance celebrating the presidential election. Of Thee I Sing ran all last year in New York and is still a big hit there.

PLAYMAKERS ANNOUNCE TRYOUTS NOVEMBER 15

Tryouts for the second Playmaker presentation, a bill of three original one-act plays, will take place Tuesday, November 15, at 4:00 and 7:30 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre. Each of the plays requires at least six characters, so there will be about twenty parts available.

These three original plays are to be chosen from the ten experimental plays selected from the playwriting classes, English 55 and English 225.

Carolina Theatre To Show German Film

Dr. Meno Spann of the German department will show films on Germany tomorrow morning at 11:00 o'clock in the Carolina theatre. The films are loaned to the German department by courtesy of the German Tourist Information Office and give an excellent impression of the physiognomie of Germany as far as it is shown.

The reels will show the Romantic splendor of thousand-year old cities which stood through the centuries unspoiled in their architectural beauty. There will be a reel dedicated to Berlin, the most modern city on the European continent. The Mosel and the Rhine, Germany's most beautiful rivers, their vineyards, charming little towns and big towns like Cologne, Duesseldorf, Aachen, where Charlemagne resided, will be shown in pictures taken by Germany's best film photographers.

In order to pay handling and shipment expenses the public is asked to contribute to silver offering.

Kiwanis Clubs Will Meet Here Next Week

Seven neighboring Kiwanis clubs will join with the Chapel Hill Kiwanis club, November 15, in an inter-club meeting and ladies' night. At a dinner meeting at the Methodist church, the members will be entertained by Jules Brazil, famous entertainer of the National Broadcasting Company and chairman of the committee of music of Kiwanis International.

The Durham, Raleigh, Henderson, Mebane, Burlington, Graham, and Sanford Kiwanis clubs will attend. The Chapel Hill Rotary club will also collaborate with the Kiwanis in the meeting.

"Y" DELEGATION GOES TO MISSION INSTITUTE TODAY

Annual Conference of Student Volunteer Union Convened for Two-Day Session in Raleigh.

The North Carolina Student Volunteer Union convenes in Raleigh tomorrow and Sunday for its annual Mission Institute. About a half dozen delegates from the University Y. M. C. A. will attend the conference, but it has not yet been announced as to who will be included in the personnel of this group.

A trio of the most popular speakers at student conferences in this section will address the group during its two-day session. They are Dr. Darby Fulton, Dr. E. McNeil Poteat, and Dr. C. N. Weems. The general theme of the gathering will be: "Youth's Crusade to the Sleeping Church."

All meetings are to convene in the West Raleigh Presbyterian church.

Former University Student Locates in Chapel Hill

Dr. John S. Hooker, of the class of '18, has recently begun practicing medicine here at Chapel Hill and is now located in the Tankersley building.

APPROVAL SOUGHT FOR NEW TUNE TO UNIVERSITY HYMN

Rob Roy Peery Composes New Melody to Cornelia Phillips
Spencer's Song.

A new tune has been composed for the time-honored University Hymn. This tune will be submitted to the student body during a student assembly period sometime next week by Walter Patterson, the University organist. If it proves to be popular with Carolina men, it will be substituted for the tune of America, the one to which the University Hymn is now sung. Patterson has been playing this tune throughout the series of concerts that he has been giving during this quarter on the Chimes.

Written by Peery

Rob Roy Peery, friend of one of the faculty members of the University, wrote the composition some time ago, and it has been recently secured by THE DAILY TAR HEEL for publication. The music and the picture of the composer will be found elsewhere in today's issue of the paper.

The writer of the new tune is one of the foremost of the younger group of composers in the nation. He composed the football songs of Middleton College, in Nebraska, his own alma mater, and the one of Oberlin College in Ohio, and also Dartmouth's song.

Peery won a prize of a thousand dollars for writing the song of Dartmouth University, in Hanover, N. H. This composition is well known all over the nation as a college song.

ENSEMBLE WILL OFFER CONCERT

Thor Johnson and Carolina Ensemble Will Present Program
For Children Wednesday.

The Carolina Ensemble, under the direction of Thor Johnson, will present a concert of specially selected music for children in the Hill Music hall Wednesday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock. This is the first children's concert sponsored by the music department of the community club of Chapel Hill, and the public is invited to attend.

Before the program begins every member of the orchestra will show his individual instrument to the audience and display its range and tone quality by playing a short solo. Another feature of the program will be the illustration of the conductor's motions in various rhythms. A group of American folk songs will be used to show these movements. Herbert Hazelman has orchestrated a special number for the concert, entitled "Grandfather's Wooden Leg."

The program is as follows:
Minuet in E. Flat (Mozart), from the Symphony in E-flat.

A group of American folk songs, arranged by Stringfield; (a) Old Smoky, (b) The Wedding of Miss Duck, (c) Lord Thomas and Fair Eleanor, (d) Pretty Polly.

Japanese Sunset (Deppen).
Grandfather's Wooden Leg (Clokey), arranged by Hazelman.

Rondino (Beethoven).
Ballet music from "Rosa-munde" (Schubert).

Composes New Tune

Here's Rob Roy Peery, composer of the new tune for the University Hymn. Peery has written the songs of Middleton College, Oberlin College, and Dartmouth, and he has gained considerable renown for his work in making arrangements for male voices.

ANNUAL MISSIONS INSTITUTE MEETS TODAY IN RALEIGH

Delegates of Local Y Will Attend
Meeting of N. C. Student Volunteer Union.

The North Carolina Student Volunteer Union convenes in Raleigh today and Sunday for the annual Mission Institute.

Five delegates and an advisor will be dispatched from the University Y. M. C. A. to the gathering, it was announced yesterday by Bill McKee, president of the campus association. Making the trip will be Julian D. Winslow, Locke Sloope, Claude Freeman, Roy McMillan, Jim Steere, and Harry F. Comer.

Several of the foremost religious leaders in North Carolina will address the conference. All the speakers will talk on subjects revolving around the general theme of the Institute: "A Youth's Crusade to the Sleeping Church." Dr. Darby Fulton, the executive secretary of the Southern Presbyterian Mission Board and for seven years a missionary in Japan, will speak this afternoon in the West Raleigh Presbyterian Church. Dr. Fulton is one of the most popular speakers in the nation for student conferences. Dr. E. McNeill Poteat, pastor of the Pullen Memorial Baptist Church and for several years a missionary in China, will speak tomorrow night. Dr. C. N. Weems, who has just returned from a Korean mission on his sabbatical year, will also speak this afternoon. For twenty-three years Dr. Weems has been very active in the mission field.

Purpose Explained

The purpose of the institute is to give North Carolina students interested in missions an opportunity of hearing men who have had actual vital experience on the foreign mission field, and to prepare them to arouse more interest in missions on their respective campuses and churches.

The initial afternoon of the institute will be taken up with addresses, discussions, socials, and the morning of the second day will be the period for practical problems to be taken up. A model deputation will be staged, following which discussion groups will give opportunity for the delegates to consider some of the practical things that groups can do on the campus and in the churches to arouse a more sincere interest in missions.

DRAMA STUDENTS PRODUCE BILL OF TEN SHORT PLAYS

Year's First Experimental Production Work of Playmakers Will Be Staged Today.

The first experimental production of original one-act plays this quarter will be presented this afternoon and tonight at 3:00 and 7:30 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre. From this group of ten new plays, written, cast, and directed by students in the courses in Playwriting English 55 and English 225, the staff of the Carolina Playmakers will select three to be produced by the Playmakers as their second public presentation December 8, 9, and 10.

Five plays will be given on this afternoon's program. Gateway, an interlude, written and directed by Eugenia Rawls is acted by the author and Bob Reid. Old Ninety-Seven, by Wilbur Dorsett, directed by the author and Jack Riley, is a tragedy of railroad life. The cast includes the author, Forney Rankin, Eugenia Rawls, Myrtle Godwin, Lawrence Cheek, Howard Dennis, and Elmer Oettinger.

Nothing Ever Happens, a domestic tragedy-comedy by Elmer Oettinger, is directed by Betty Barnett. The author, Carolina Ward, Jo Orendorff, Foster Fitz-Simmons, Henry Page, and Bill Bonyun. Four On A Heath, a fantasy by Foster Fitz-Simmons, is directed by the author. The

POLITICAL CLUB PLANS PROGRAM

Year's Plans of Young Democrats Includes Representation at Jackson Day Dinner.

The local Young Democratic club is planning to maintain an organization of young Democrats on the campus. It will be an official representative of the Young Democrats of America and will conduct its meetings at regular intervals throughout the year. The purpose of this organization is to keep its student members informed on all national and state political affairs.

In its organization the Young Democratic club will include at least one student representative from each of the 100 counties in this state and a chairman will be elected from each congressional district. Each student representative will have the responsibility of representing his own county in each of the meetings. The young women on the campus will be invited to become members of this club. The

Graham Will Attend Southeastern Meet

President Frank P. Graham will attend the meeting of the Southeastern council, of which he has been unanimously elected vice-president for North Carolina, in Charlotte Wednesday.

Several hundred of the leading business men, manufacturers, civic workers, and publicists of the southeastern states are expected to attend the Charlotte conference, which will begin at 9:30 Wednesday morning at Hotel Charlotte.

The Southeastern council was formed several years ago to promote the business and economic advancement of the southeastern states.

HENDERSON WILL ADDRESS SIGMA XI SOCIETY TUESDAY

Mathematics Head Will Speak
Of Expanding Universe and Age of Earth.

Dr. Archibald Henderson will lecture at the first meeting of the North Carolina chapter of the society of Sigma Xi to take place Tuesday night in Graham Memorial. Dr. Henderson's subject will be "Modern Theories of the Conception of an Expanding Universe and the Age of the Earth." A supper will precede the address.

There are forty-two active and twenty-one non-participating members of the local chapter, which was established here in May, 1920. The first chapter of the national association was founded at Cornell University in 1886. There are now over sixty chapters in the leading universities of the United States. The society was formed for the purpose of promoting research in pure science and is strictly honorary, membership being restricted entirely to those who have made some definite contribution in a particular science.

The officers of the N. C. chapter for this year are Dr. A. S. Wheeler, president; Dr. E. T. Browne, vice-president; and Dr. E. L. Mackie, secretary and treasurer. The executive committee is composed of the above officers and Dr. A. M. White, elected by the members, and Dr. J. N. Couch, president of the chapter last year.

LOCAL SOCIALISTS CONTINUE EFFORT

Party to Organize Committees to Investigate Various Phases of Economic and Political Ills.

The local branch of the national Socialist party, in addition to its regular business, will carry on several additional functions this year. GERMAN CLUB TO GIVE FALL DANCES NEXT WEEK-END

Charlie Boulanger and His Orchestra Will Furnish Music for the Four Dances.

Next week-end the German club will give the first of its series of dances with music by Charlie Boulanger and his orchestra. Also planned as an additional feature to accompany the orchestra the German club will have the services of Miss Virginia Lee and Mr. Cole Coleman, soloists. The initial dance will be Friday from 4:30 until 6:15 o'clock followed by a dance in the evening from 10:00 until 1:00 o'clock. Saturday's dances are scheduled from 11:30 until 1:15 o'clock and from 9:30 until 12:00 o'clock.

The leaders for the fall German, who were elected last week, are L. C. Skinner, leader, Bob Mebane, first assistant, Bill O'Brien, second assistant.

DR. POTEAT SEES CHRISTIANITY AS PEACE PROMOTER

Armistice Day Speaker Cites Horror of Great War to Warn Against Another.

Dr. William Louis Poteat, president-emeritus of Wake Forest College, delivered the principal address at the Armistice Day exercises yesterday. The address, which was the principal one of a well-balanced program, was well received by the audience.

After the invocation by Reverend Ronald Tamblin, an organ solo by Walter B. Patterson, and the roll-call of the dead of the University and the Chapel Hill Post of the American Legion, Dr. Poteat delivered his address on the theme of Christian principles and peace.

He said that this day is set aside for the thousands of young Americans who sailed east in 1917 and forgot to sail west in 1918. It is necessary to recall the horror of those days lest we forget and slide back into these same horrors at some future time.

Tender Recollections
"We recall," he continued, tender memories of those who lie sleeping beneath the wheat fields in France; dreadful memories of ghastly blood-shed in the fields of Flanders; indignant memories because nothing definite was settled by this terrible maelstrom."

"There is still one great obstacle," he went on, "remaining in the road for peace. Unless nations can be made to surrender some of their national sovereignty, we can entertain little hope for permanent peace. War may make men glorious, but war itself is never glorious."

In conclusion, Dr. Poteat appealed to the men, women, and children of the world to accept Christianity as the first and most important step toward world peace. "The only way out," concluded Poteat, "is Christianity. Christian methods of living will settle our national, international, and social problems."

TRUSTEES GATHER MONDAY TO ELECT UNIVERSITY HEAD

Board Also to Consider Tatum
Petition and Consummate
Plans for University.

Selection of the president of the Greater University of North Carolina, consideration of the Tatum petition, and decisions completing the formation of the Greater University are matters slated to be the focus of state-wide and national attention when the University board of trustees meets in Governor O. Max Gardner's office in Raleigh Monday.

The group will take up these matters as well as other considerations concerned with the welfare of the Greater University in its second meeting since the consolidation of three state-supported institutions this year. The last meeting of the board was in June.

Graham Likely Choice

According to all indications, President Frank P. Graham, head of the University here, will be president of the Greater University. He was recommended unanimously for this post at the meeting of the executive committee of the board September 28.

The Tatum petition, declaring against alleged subversive teaching at the University, is slated for consideration. What action will be taken is considered problematical.

The board is also scheduled to take up matters concerning the organization of the Greater University. The group will act on concluding steps of the consolidation program with the view of

MEN APPLY TODAY FOR HOLT AWARDS

Students Seeking Scholarships
Will Appear Before Selection Committee.

Students who have expressed a desire to benefit from the Holt scholarships will appear before the committee on selection this morning in Dean Hobbs' office. The applying students have received notices advising them of the exact hour of their appearance before the committee. The old custom was to have all the applicants appear before the committee in a body.

The scholarships are available from the interest of a fund of $10,000 bequeathed in the University's favor by Lawrence S. Holt, Jr., of the class of 1904. The amount of $125 is awarded to each of four students, who have shown aptitude in their work and who show need of financial assistance in order to continue their education. One student from each of the four classes is awarded the scholarship.

Committee on Selection

The committee of selection is headed by Dean A. W. Hobbs. The other members are: Dean N. W. Walker, Dean D. D. Carroll, Dean F. F. Bradshaw, Dean M. C. S. Noble, Dean H. G. Baity, Dean J. M. Bell, R. B. House, and H. F. Comer.

Holt has also provided funds for needy and worthy students. These funds are not to exceed $400 per student and are to cover such necessary expenses as tuition, board, and other University fees.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official newspaper of the Publications Union Board of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill where it is printed daily except Mondays, and the Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Spring Holidays. Entered as second class matter at the post office of Chapel Hill, N. C., under act of March 3, 1879. Subscription price, $4.00 for the college year.

Just a Matter Of Coloring

It was with a lack of economic foresight as well as political discrimination that the Charlotte News published in its Wednesday's edition a map of the United States showing the results of the national election with all Democratic states in black, and those claimed by the Republicans in white. Not only was this a considerable waste of printer's ink, but more especially was it a stab at these Roosevelt states to insinuate that they should be thus blemished because of their pronounced decision at the polls Tuesday.

Had the editors of the News been definitely set upon their plan of printing the Democratically-inclined states in colors, it would have been far more appropriate had they selected colors with some actual significance.

They could have used the colors of the rainbow to signify the calm after the storm. Or in keeping with the beliefs of David Clark and L. A. Tatum they might have distinguished Chapel Hill by a large "Red" dot. And if the financial condition of the nation was taken into account, the entire forty-eight states might have been printed in red.

But to stain those states in black that had been instrumental in electing the next president of this great nation of ours was an insult, Mr. Editor of the Charlotte News, which requires an explanation.

Laugh Parade

Once again the University is about to witness that annual farce of farces, the freshman election. Imagine, if you can, the ridiculousness of it. Freshmen, scarcely here two months, hardly knowing each other, and, certainly not knowing and understanding University traditions, are to meet and elect class officers. The fact that the captain of the freshman football team is often chosen as president of the class gives one a fair idea as to the discerning powers, at least in this respect, of the electors. The fact that a man is a good football player (imagine that), was a prominent high school student (and that), and has the right fraternities in back of him (and that), more than suffices to enable him to acquire this eminent and coveted office. Could anything be more ridiculous?

The situation would be bad enough if the freshman class had need of president and officers, but the truth of the matter is that the men who are elected are mere figureheads and their positions no-nentities. They accomplish practically nothing except to spend precious money which could be used far more wisely in these days of frugality. Of course, the election of these men brings honor and prestige to the fraternities which they represent—a very doubtful honor to say the least.

Let us once and for all abolish this example of collegiate idiocy. Let us not continue to tolerate this foolish practice and to pass it off with unconcerned complaisance. It will be a fine beginning of the movement to rid ourselves of every unnecessary parasitical growth which movement in time to come will have, we hope, far greater scope and compass.—M.K.K.

Here's a Hand

One of the most important developments in southern intercollegiate circles is the growing feeling of friendship between Carolina and Duke. Two of the leading schools in the south, equal in size and importance, and situated very near one another, the relation between the two schools has long been of great interest to many and doubtless will continue to be so.

There was a time not long past when the Lux Libertas on the Carolina seal was translated "to hell with Duke" and the student body did its best to carry out that slogan. There can be no denying that feeling ran very high and at times was a cause for genuine alarm. That period fortunately is rapidly giving way to one of mutual admiration and respect that will eventually make relations between Duke and Carolina a valuable part of the lives of both. The sharing of educational, social, and athletic phases of college life has tremendous possibilities that are greatly enhanced by the close proximity of Durham to Chapel Hill.

The fast fading era of bad feeling had its roots in the sudden transformation of little Trinity College into mighty Duke University. Carolina who for a century or more had been the monarch of the state in education and athletics now found herself with an equal and has been long in accustoming herself to the change. During the process of adapting herself to the new condition many regrettable statements, incidents, and attitudes were engendered—but that is a cloud that is nearly passed and the radiant sun of accord and cooperation peeps forth to the great satisfaction of every sane and mature person on both campuses.

Carolina and Duke may soon welcome the day when each will rejoice in the triumphs of the other and applaud warmly one another's teams in action even against their own. That is not far distant and it is our duty to foster a mature and sportsmanlike spirit that offers so much, and to work away from the sinister possibilities of hostile rivalry.

It is superfluous to point out the merits of the schools, each is worthy of esteem in the eyes of the other and is well on the way to enjoying it. In a week Duke plays Carolina here. This will afford an excellent opportunity for both student bodies to behave as childish school boys, or an opportunity for the students of venerable Carolina to extend Duke the cordial hospitality of Carolina gentlemen.—J. F. A.

Another Hand

In the present order of things labor would seem to be secluded and discussed in terms of mass production—devoid of realization that American people still like something besides hard philosophy. What chance has individualism?—self-expression? We no longer speak of freedom because we have lost it—opportunity is lacking, burdened by the oppressive weight of government or economic organization. Have we not a right to the conception in which our nation was realized? Why is it that middle age and old age have such sure faith in their own wisdom and such doubt of the young? They perpetrate all this mechanizing to make us stronger and happier as human specimens, but not as thinking individuals. How broad a future does the American Adding Machine hold for its people? To what end is the creation of nations headed but to broaden the scope of self-expression—idealism if you like?

People feel as well as think and it is difficult to distinguish between their feelings and what we call human intelligence. However, human capacity far exceeds any form of book-keeping yet devised.

The ledger represented prohibition as a financial success, but it was not. By the ledger the present depression was interpreted and evaluated on paper. The taxes authorized by congress should have balanced the budget. For the past three years the administration has placed its faith in the ledger—what now?

Faith in the people to give them inspiration would evoke the necessary effort to arouse human capacity. They can not attain this enthusiasm unless they feel their welfare—the concern of the government. This faith must be brought to them, conceived not as beggars standing in the headline, but as individuals who want nothing so much as an opportunity.

Roosevelt here's a hand!—F.A.N.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

All Washed Up About It

Yesterday I received notice that until $1.01 was forthcoming my laundry would remain in the custody of God's vicars out toward Carrboro. Although I belong to the cleanliness-is-next-to-godliness cult, I am not willing to have the dean of the cathedral of Columbia avenue poke his hand into my lean wallet just yet—about seven weeks after registration. As a kindly alma maternal monopoly, the laundry strikes me as being somewhat greedy, particularly since prices in at least four commercial laundries I know are considerably lower than those here. Certainly, if there is an excuse for this, it is difficult to understand. The expense of "doing up" shirts without starch should be lower than fixing them nicely, and the expense of delivery—quite large in cities—is small here on account of the concentration of students in dormitories and elsewhere. Of course, we must pay for the rare shirt-ripping and button-grabbing machines installed in the local plant; but if rates continue at their present level, it would appear sensible to discard these two admirable but, really, unnecessary juggernauts.

Since my purpose is to make this well-meant suggestion and not to brag about my $9.51 laundry bill in seven weeks, I request that you sign only the initials.

C. L. Y.

Mr. Proctor Settles It

If the plan which represents three weeks' work of the student council and five hours discussion by the entire TAR HEEL staff is to represent the brand of thinking of the "leaders of tomorrow" then the two major parties need have no fear of running shy of numbskull politicians, for I have not seen such a brain child given birth to since I have been out of the Boy Scouts.

The causes of cheating are probably three, namely:

a. Hangover of the prep school idea of education as a game between the teacher and the student in which the major indoor sport was cheating.

b. False evaluation of a degree. c. False emphasis on high grades.

1. As an end in themselves.

2. As a means to honor societies. The new proposal of the student council will eliminate these causes by doing just this: Replacing the customary teacher with an elected policeman, taking the false emphasis off the degree by constantly reminding the student that he is on his honor and will be suspended if caught cheating, and taking the false emphasis off the grade by the fact that he elected the policeman. Thus eliminating all the causes, one gathers that the system must be very nearly perfect, but that's not the half of it. It goes beyond perfection. Not only does it eliminate the causes (as we see), but it brings the student to the realization of his responsibility under an honor system by placing his responsibility in the hands of specific members of the class (note: these members are to be elected). It even goes farther than that, mind you, by extending the student council, which seems to feel that since it has very little to do, it should find cases to try. As we see this has no tendency whatsoever of becoming a monitorial system, the assumption being that students who haven't the "intestinal fortitude" to report violations of the honor system will suddenly develop character enough to squeal to the back door of the student council.

Another proponent says that the honor system does not work because no one reports violation, the assumption being the more cases caught, the more efficient the system works. The same proponent says that the committee (which merely has the power to suspend, try, and report to the formal student council any violations) will be a constant reminder to the class that they are on their honor. Even though the committees are elected wouldn't it be a more impartial plan to furnish each class with a neon flash lamp with this inscription: "Remember the honor system." Although this is a bit kindergartenish, it would serve the purpose much better than three people who represent three people.

In conclusion I would say that the plan needs to be placed in the ship that is to bear all the saxophone players to the North Pole. If this plan represents three weeks' deliberation, then every member who contributed should be given an honorary degree and a free pass to see the Marx Brothers. Yours for more honor and less system. —B. C. PROCTOR.

Now that the struggle is over, amidst the carnage on the field of battle is uncovered tid-bits of election humor that drift into the public eye after every conflict for the presidency.

Tar Heels Will Seek to Continue March on State Title at Wildcats' Expense.

THE STAGE was set for the Homecoming game at the Davidson lair between the Wildcats and the Tar Heels today and all indications pointed to a fiercely fought battle.

On paper, the two teams are very evenly matched with Carolina given a slight advantage by virtue of their decisive victory over the State Wolfpack. Davidson has shown vast improvement all season and its game with State last Saturday showed that the Wildcats were coming to their top form and would be ready to shoot the works against the Tar Heels.

It was Carolina that last year stopped the brilliant McEver at Tennessee and the former star, now coaching at Davidson would like nothing better than to trip the Tar Heels in their bid for the State title.

The Wildcats will present three dangerous backs in Mackorell, Pearce, and Willson, running behind a powerful and deadly tackling line, led by Captain Buddy Gardner, center.

Tar Heels Sleep at Salisbury

After a short, snappy drill yesterday the Tar Heel squad, thirty-five strong, left by bus for Salisbury where they passed the night at the Yaddin hotel. Coach Collins seemed encouraged over the improvement the team had shown this week and said that several new faces would be seen in action today. Manley and Shaffer, two sophomores, were his references and both may get their chance today.

GRID-GRAPH WILL REPORT CONTEST

The story of the Carolina-Davidson game will be given this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock via the grid-graph in Memorial Hall.

The graph has proved popular with all students who have not been able to follow the team on its football trips, and this afternoon should draw a large crowd of enthusiasts.

All Carolina-Davidson games have been worth watching, and this one today should not prove an exception. The Davidson supporters contend that they have a team which will give the Tar Heels a real battle.

CHAPEL HILL H. S. LOSES

The Chapel Hill gridders went down in defeat before the onslaught of Elizabeth City's football warriors in the semi-finals of the eastern North Carolina class "B" league. The game was close and hard fought throughout with the Elizabeth City boys coming out on the long end of a 21 to 14 score.

THIS BACKFIELD MAY GET TOGETHER AGAINST 'CATS TODAY

The above quartet may see action as a unit for the first time since the Vanderbilt game. Left to right: Bill Croom, Hanes Lassiter, Stuart Chandler, and Tom White. Croom and White have been out with injuries but both should be right today in Davidson. Croom served notice last week against Florida when he stepped out for a touchdown and White has been showing his old form in this week's workouts.

Tar Babies Wallop Virginia Invaders In One-Sided Fray

Carolina Freshmen Take Well Earned Victory Over Cavalier Yearlings by 33-14 Score.

PLAY SUPERIOR FOOTBALL

Kenner, at Centre, Is Bulwark of Defense for Carolina, Intercepting Two Passes.

Playing head-ups ball and taking advantage of all the breaks, Carolina's Tar Babies easily downed a highly touted Virginia yearling team, 33 to 14. Carolina's freshman had twelve first downs to the young Cavaliers eight.

The Tar Babies blocking was beautiful, especially when the first team was in. The backs clipped down the opposition perfectly and the majority of the plays went for gains. Montgomery, with Pendleton leading the interference got loose for several fine runs, one being thirty-five yards and another thirty. The first two markers were also on runs longer than thirty yards.

Team Starts Fast

Carolina's yearlings started fast and were never headed. The score at the half was 26 to 0. The highly advertised Virginia team was knocked down a notch on the very first play they tried. Kanner, Tar Baby center, got off a pretty kick-off which was brought back by Virginia to the twenty-five yard line. The young Cavaliers tried a pass which Kanner intercepted on the thirty-five yard line. The big center then followed his interference straight down the field for a marker. Kanner, topped things off by kicking the extra point.

The Tar Baby's next marker was on another spectacular play. After Virginia had stopped a Carolina drive, the young Cavaliers counted two straight first downs and drove to Carolina's forty-three yard line. The Tar Babies braced and Virginia was forced to punt. Barwick, Carolina end, however, blocked the kick which bounded into the

It is extremely doubtful whether the fans in the various football sectors will have a better program than that which is offered this week. The south will probably grab the best games with the east and middle west right at its heels. In Dixie-land such games as Tennessee-Vanderbilt, Tulane-Kentucky, and Georgia Tech-Alabama head the list, while Yale-Princeton, Fordham-N. Y. U., and Columbia-Brown lead the classics in the east. Notre Dame-Northwestern, Ohio State-Penn., and Michigan-Chicago head the bill of fare west of the Mississippi.

Davidson-North Carolina
Everybody knows that the Wildcats are hard to beat in their own backyard, and that game they played against State last Saturday is just a sample of what the Tar Heels can expect today. But we'll string along with Coach Collins in his bid to win three straight.

Duke-State

The Blue Devils will be out for blood today. That 14-0 upset registered by State, which cost them the state title last year, still rankles in the minds of Duke supporters. On paper it looks like a Duke victory, but on Riddick field anything can happen and probably will. One determined vote for the Wademen.

Tech-Alabama

The Tide will be favored to take this game but that power that the Tornado displayed in Kenan stadium classes them as one of the most powerful teams in the south. If Coach Alexander's players show the attack of which they are capable, it'll be good night Alabama, but we'll Coach Orders Varsity Tennis Squad Through Practices as Virginia Tilt Nears.

Coach John Kenfield's varsity tennis team staged another hard workout yesterday in preparation for their annual match with the University of Virginia; this year the meet will be in Charlottesville, Wednesday, November 23, prior to the Thanksgiving game.

Although the line-up for this match is still undetermined, the following will most likely compose it: Wilmer Hines, number one ranking player in the absence of Captain Bryan Grant; Lenoir Wright, number two; David Morgan, number three; Johnny Dillard, number four.

A real scrap, however, is going on among members of the reserves of last year's team and the former freshman stars, Minor, Harris, Levitan, Willis, and Jones.

The usual entries in the southern tourney at Southern Pines were called off.

string along with the favorite, Alabama by the closest of margins.

Tennessee-Vanderbilt

The Southern Conference championship will be born out of this game. Both teams are undefeated although the Commodores have a 6-6 game with Tulane to mar their record. Tennessee has made a habit of beating Vandy, so one tearful vote for the Vols.

Kentucky-Tulane

These Wildcats are not so wild these days. The Wave will drown the Wildcats.

Freshman Cross-Country Teams Of Two Universities To Run at Same Time.

cast includes David McIlhenny, Irving Katz, Red Rankin, and James Thompson.

The last play on the program for the afternoon is Sour Fodder, written and directed by Burdette Kindig. This is a story of an Iowa small town. Parts are played by the author, Jo Orendorff, and Irene Fussler.

Five plays given tonight at 7:30 include Creek Swamp Nigger, a negro tragedy written by Harry Coble and directed by Sarah M. W. Huntley. In the cast of this play are David McIlhenny, Ellen Stewart, and the author. A college comedy, Hell-Bent for Honolulu, written by Bill Bonynun and directed by Ellen Stewart, is devoid of women. The cast includes the author, Red Rankin, Philip Stein, Elmer Oettinger, and Henry Page.

And They Lived Happily, a domestic comedy by Marion Tatum, is directed by Philip Milhous and acted by the author, Phoebe Barr, and Foster Fitz-Simmons. Stumbling in Dreams, a comedy of Tin Pan Alley, written and directed by George Brown, has Robert Novins, Walter Rosenthal, Joseph Eisner, George Brown, and Joseph Patterson in its cast.

The last play on the program is a drama of the southwest frontier, Davy Crockett, by John Philip Milhous. Assisting the author in the direction of his play are Phoebe Barr and Marion Tatum. In the cast are Foster Fitz-Simmons, Marion Tatum, Eugenia Rawls, Tom Johnson, Bill Bonynun, Newbern Pyland, Mary Byrd Perrow, Betty Barnett, Phil Stein, and David McIlhenny.

Tickets to these two entertainments, which are not open to the general public, may be secured from the playwrights themselves, from Professor F. H. Koch, or Harry Davis.

Cheerios Not Going To Davidson Game Today

The cheerios were not able to attend the Davidson game in a body today because enough students have not been attending practices. The cheer leaders want about 300 men to come out and join this organization but so far only about 150 have given their support.

It has been talked about the campus that the cheerios will go to Virginia for the Thanksgiving game. Whether or not this will be done depends on how the students show their support at the Duke game, it was announced yesterday. With this in view, everyone interested is requested to be present at the next cheerio practice, which will be conducted next week.

arms of Nelson, fullback. Nelson headed for the sidelines and the Virginia goal line. The extra point was no good.

Third Score

Pendleton counted the third Tar Baby marker on a pass from Phelps who was on the twenty yard line. Montgomery put the ball in scoring position when he intercepted a pass on Virginia's thirty yard line. A blocked kick resulted in the Tar Babies' last score of the first half. After Arthur, Carolina, end had thrown Virginia for a ten yard loss on their own twenty yard line they attempted to punt. The whole team rushed the kicker downing the ball on the fifteen yard line. Virginia was then forced to get off a quick kick which Womble took on the forty yard line and brought back to the five. Phelps crossed the goal line, and Arthur made the kick good.

Carolina started the second half still playing in great style. The Tar Babies received the ball on their own thirty. Montgomery then ran and passed the ball to the two yard line where Bullock ran it over for the last Tar Baby marker.

The rest of the game was all Virginia's. The third Tar Baby team was sent in. After a blocked kick, Virginia passed and ran the ball to the three yard line where Quarles ran it over for their first touchdown. The last marker came over the Tar Baby second team with Blanton leading the way. Leys scored on a ten yard pass from Blanton.

APPROVAL SOUGHT FOR NEW TUNE TO UNIVERSITY HYMN

For some time he was the choir director of the St. Johns Lutheran Church in Salisbury, and he is at present attached to the staff of Theodore Presser and Co., musical publishers in Philadelphia.

The composer of the new tune for the University Hymn is also very well known for his many arrangements for male voices. This work was done for Oliver Ditson and Co. and G. Schirmer and Co., two of the foremost musical houses in America.

Lacked Original Tune

Up to this time the University Hymn has not had an original tune, being sung since its composition to the tune of America. The hymn was written in 1885 by Cornelia Phillips Spencer, for whom Spencer hall was named. Since that year it has been the official hymn of the University, and it has been sung at all official functions to this day.

For almost a half century there has been a crying need for a new tune for the work so dear to all University graduates and students. This dream has now been realized with the advent of Rob Roy Peery's composition.

University Hymn in Full

The complete work as composed by Miss Spencer follows:

Thy sons right loyally
Thy praises sing.
For thee, our Mother dear,
May every coming year
Fresh-crowned with joy appear,
Fresh honors bring.
Heaven blessed the genial ray
Of that October day,
When at thy shrine,
Under the poplar shade,
Their vows our fathers paid,
Thy cornerstone they laid
With rites divine.

Executives Choose Graham

Acting on the power conferred it by the full board, the executive committee recommended President Graham as head of the Greater University September 28. The board will in all probability endorse this recommendation and select Dr. Graham.

Under the plan of consolidation of the University, State College, and Woman's College adopted by the board, in addition to the president of the whole group, there are three vice-presidents, each directing one of the three institutions.

The selection of President Graham will make it necessary for the board to select a vice-president who will be head of the institution here. Though several men have been prominently mentioned, it is not expected that the board will take action at this meeting.

Take Up Tatum Petition

National attention, which has been drawn to the presentation of the Tatum petition against alleged subversive teaching at the University, will be focused on the board upon consideration of the petition. This document, condemning radical tendencies, which it claims exist at the University, was signed by over two hundred citizens of the state and calls for a purging of the University.

Local persons have refused to comment on the petition or on the probable action of the board; but editorial comment and personal opinion in the state generally have been unfavorable to the petition. It seems improbable that any action will be taken along the lines suggested by the petition.

Among other matters will be the filling of vacancies, acting on several resignations and other routine matters which the executive committee did not consider in its meeting last September.

Frosh Nominees Withdraw

Billy Yandell of Charlotte, nominee for president of the freshman class, has withdrawn from the race. Jesse Parker of Wilmington, who was nominated for treasurer of the freshman class, has also withdrawn his name as a candidate for office.

Betting Odds.

Coach "Silent Pop" Albright announced yesterday that the Tar-Mag vs. Yackety-Buc grid-iron game, scheduled for Tuesday, would be postponed until later in the week, probably Thursday, since the intramural football finals would conflict with this most important clash. It is rumored that Albright, who says that he is continually misquoted or mis-rumored is playing for time so that he can whip his squad into better shape.

Meanwhile the betting odds in favor of the Tar-Mags have been reduced from 15 to 1 to about 14 to 1, in view of the recent announcement of Editor Mason of the Buccaneer regarding training. The Buc chief has demanded that all his charges sign a pledge agreeing to refrain from any sort of dissipation during the training period. It was also revealed that the Buccaneer staff has added twenty men to the business department in an effort to make them eligible for the game.

"Black-board drill," said Mason in an interview, "is being conducted every evening from 6:30 until 12:00 o'clock." The Yackety-Buc battle cry will be "Buc that line," he also stated. It is expected that the names of those who comprise the coaching staff of the Yackety-Bucs will soon be revealed, much it is thought, to the opposition of the Carnegie Foundation.

HARRIERS TO RACE DUKE TEAM TODAY IN SECOND MATCH

lina took a fairly good Florida outfit for a 22-38 ride last Friday.

Both clubs boast of a brilliant array of individual runners. The Tar Heel list is headed by Clarence Jensen, winner of last year's Southern Conference-run; Louis G. Sullivan, winner of the Florida meet; and Captain Bob Hubbard. Duke's powerhouse is topped by Bray, fourth in last year's conference race with a time of 27:49; Lewis, thirty-first in the run; Heritage, and Bird. Bray pushed Jensen hard during the entire length of the course up to the laundry where the Tar Heel hit his stride.

Freshman Clash

Freshmen clubs of both schools will receive their initial baptism of fire in a meet to be run along with the varsity set-to.

Eight men—W. W. Caraway, L. B. Conte, O. H. Garrison, A. Mark, Barnaby C. Keeney, R. Y. McPhail, J. Sullivan, and H. L. Umstead—were indicated as the Carolina frosh slated to have their noses at the wire when the starting gun is sounded.

The freshman course will be around three miles, while the varsity men will negotiate the regulation conference five-mile course.

officers of the organization will be elected each year. The officials will include president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, to be elected from the assembly at large. The plan of meeting will follow that of the state general assembly.

Official delegates of the Young Democratic club will go to the state Democratic Jackson-Day dinner, which is a meeting of all the prominent Democratic leaders throughout this state held in Raleigh each year.

This organization will have, from time to time, various Democratic leaders of this and other states to speak at its meetings.

German Film Shows At Carolina Theatre

A German film will be shown at the Carolina theatre this morning at 11:00 o'clock. This film was secured by Dr. Meno Spann of the German department and is being lent to the department through the courtesy of the German Tourist Information Office.

A silver offering will be taken in order to pay the cost of shipping and handling. The public is invited to attend.

Lombard Plays Lead In Today's Attraction

O'Brien has a splendid characterization, that of a hardboiled New York taxi driver who knows all about women, but who marries a girl with a past only to discover on his bridal night that she has been convicted of immorality. How he courageously protects the girl he has married from the influence of her past makes one of the most appealing screen romances shown here this season.

MacNider Attends Meeting

Dr. William deB. MacNider of the medical school is leaving today for Philadelphia to attend a meeting of the National Board of Medical Examiners. This organization of which Dr. MacNider is a member will have its first meeting Sunday.

HARRY DAVIS TO READ SATIRE BY GEORGE KAUFMAN

Pulitzer Prize Winning Play to Be Read in Playmakers
Theatre Tonight.

Of Thee I Sing, George Kaufman's Pulitzer prize winning play, will be read tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre by Harry Davis, business manager of the Playmakers.

Kaufman's play was the first musical comedy ever to receive the Pulitzer prize, and in presenting it, the Pulitzer committee said: "This award may seem unusual but the play is unusual... it is a biting and true satire on American politics and the public attitude toward them." Calling the spirit and style of the play "topical and popular," the committee said further that "the work is all the more spontaneous for that, and has a freshness and vitality which are both unusual and admirable."

Comments on Play
The New York Times reviewer comments: "Funnier than the government and not nearly so dangerous." The New York Herald-Tribune says of this musical satire of our government: "It says the most outrageous things in the most outrageous and funniest way."

From the opening scene with banners bearing slogans "A vote for Wintergreen is a vote for Wintergreen," and "Wintergreen—A Man's Man's Man" to the final scene when the company sings Of Thee I Sing, Baby gathered around the bed. (Continued on last page)

Class Will First Be Photographed Together and Then
In Alphabetical Units.

Arrangements have been made for the members of the sophomore class to have their pictures taken for the annual, during the assembly period next Monday morning. Four group pictures of this class, to be printed in this year's Yackety Yack, will be made on the steps of the Law building at that time.

Sophomores will be required to meet at Memorial hall as usual at assembly period. After this short meeting, the class will adjourn to the front of Manning hall where the pictures will be made. There will be no freshman assembly that day.

Class to Divide in Groups
The first picture to be taken at the law building will be a group picture of the whole class. After this, every one will leave the steps except those sophomores whose names begin with the letters A to H and a picture of them will be taken. Then this group will be excused and the next group consisting of those whose names begin with I to O will take their places on the steps for their picture, followed by the group whose names begin with P to Z.

On the following Friday it is planned to take the Freshman pictures in the same way.

Newman Club Meeting

A meeting of the Newman club is scheduled for 7:30 o'clock tomorrow in room 210 Graham Memorial.

FILM WILL BE SHOWN AT A. I. E. E. MEETING

The A. I. E. E. will gather for its regular meeting tomorrow night at 8:00 o'clock in 206 Phillips hall. A special of this meeting will be a picture brought here by E. F. Baesel of the General Electric Company. The picture is "Mazda Lamps Preferred," and an extra reel will be shown devoted to the description of the origin of Edison's first lamp. All members are urged to be present at this meeting.

SYMPHONY WILL OFFER PREMIER OF COMPOSITION

Orchestra to Present Symphonic
Ballad by Lamar Stringfield
For First Time in America.

North Carolinians will have an opportunity of hearing the American premier of a new symphonic composition at the opening concert of the winter series of the North Carolina Symphony Society, according to an announcement made by Col. Joseph Hyde Pratt, president. The musical entertainment will take place Friday, December 2.

In announcing the program for the concert, Col. Pratt revealed that the final number will be a symphonic ballad, The Legend of John Henry, by Lamar Stringfield. The composition is based on the proverbial John Henry, the "steel-driving man," so familiar in American folk legends. The number was only recently completed and consequently has never been played to any American audience.

In addition to the Stringfield number, others included in the Chapel Hill concert will be Marriage of Figaro Overture, Mozart; Symphony No. 2, Beethoven; and the following three compositions by Percy Grainger, famous pianist and composer: Handel in the Strand; To a Nordic Princess; Spoon River, American Folk Dance. Grainger will conduct the orchestra in the second of his compositions and will accompany the orchestra at the piano in the other two.

Concert in Durham
A part of the same series will include a concert by the same orchestra in Durham, December 1. The program for the Durham concert was also announced by Col. Pratt, as follows: Hansel and Gretel Overture, Humperdinck; Peer Gynt Suite No. 1, Greig; Overture 1812, Tchaikovsky; and the following numbers by Grainger, who will also be present in person: Lord Peter's Stable Boy, The Nightingale and The Two Sisters; and Jutish Medley.

Out of town music lovers may secure tickets in advance by writing Felix A. Grisette, secretary, Chapel Hill.

Debating Team Will Prepare For Contest With Dublin

At the regular meeting of the debate group tomorrow night the discussion will be directed to the preparation for the debate with the University of Dublin which will take place early in December. The question is to be, "Resolved: That nationalism is a bar to peace and progress."

Some member of the faculty will lead the discussion which will center around "Nationalism." This a part of the preparation for the tryouts and the debate which will follow. Tryouts are scheduled soon.

PICTURES OF ALL FRATERNITY MEN DUE BY TUESDAY

Last Day Set for Freshmen and Sophomores to Have Pictures Taken for Yackety Yack.

Monday and Tuesday of this week are the last two days for freshmen and sophomores to have their pictures taken for the fraternity section of the Yackety Yack, the editor of the publication announced yesterday.

These pictures must be in the Yackety Yack November 15, and the editor urges that fraternity men get their pictures in by that time to give their organization complete representation in the year-book.

All of the photographs are being taken in the studios of Wootten-Moulton.

The Yackety Yack urges that the fraternities co-operate with the staff so that the fraternity pages will be complete and accurate.

JITNEY PLAYERS WILL GIVE PLAYS HERE THIS MONTH

Famous Professional Company Will Offer Comedy and Satire Here
November 29.

The Carolina Playmakers have again engaged the Jitney Players, famous professional touring company, for two special performances Tuesday, November 29.

These players will present two dramas new in Chapel Hill, at the matinee, at 4:00 o'clock, Tom Robertson's romantic, mid-victorian comedy, Caste; and in the evening at 8:30 o'clock George Bernard Shaw's romantic satire, Arms and The Man.

The tickets for the matinee are fifty cents, and for the night performance seventy-five cents with a special price of one dollar for both performances.

This is the third time that the Jitney Players have appeared at the Playmakers theatre.

HENDERSON TO SPEAK AT SIGMA XI MEETING

Immediately following a supper which will be given by the North Carolina Society of Sigma Xi Tuesday night at 6:30 o'clock in Graham Memorial, Dr. Archibald Henderson will give an address on "Modern Theories of the Conception of an Expanding Universe and the Age of the Earth."

Membership in the society is limited to those who have made some contribution to science.

GOAL IS SET FOR LOCAL RED CROSS DRIVE THIS YEAR

Two Hundred Mark Is Being Neared in Campaign for 750 New Members.

Unofficial tabulations last night showed that the two hundred mark was already being neared by the local chapter of the Red Cross in its annual membership drive.

The initial contribution of the year came from Spencer hall, amounting to five dollars. Many other large donations to the Red Cross coffers have also been reported.

The Carolina theatre is co-operating with Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt, head of the local organization in the drive. A regular schedule of speakers has been arranged to address theatre goers.

Tonight will find Manager E. Carrington Smith as speaker to the audience in the theatre; Monday night, R. B. House, executive secretary of the University; Tuesday night (tentative), Haywood Weeks, president of the student body; Wednesday night, Professor Millard Sheridan Breckenridge of the law department; Thursday night, Professor E. J. Woodhouse, former mayor of Northampton; Friday night, Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt, former state geologist. A special Red Cross film is being shown twice daily also at the theatre.

Today is Red Cross Sunday throughout the nation. Local churches will join in the observance of the day. Dr. George McKie will speak at the Presbyterian church; and Colonel Pratt will be at the Episcopal church. Other churches of the village will also join with the Presbyterians and Episcopalians in the event.

Hope to Get 750

A goal of 750 has been set for the total Chapel Hill membership of the Red Cross for this year. Colonel Pratt said: "Despite prevalent hard times, we are almost sure of going over the top with colors flying."

Monday the campaign in Carrboro commences. This additional momentum to the movement is slated to augment considerably the returns to organization coffers.

Dean Pierson to Return From Annual Convention

Dean W. W. Pierson will return tomorrow or Tuesday from Iowa City, Iowa, where he has represented the University at the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the Association of American Universities. Dean Pierson left last Saturday to attend a pre-convention meeting of the committee on classification of colleges and universities, before attending the three-day session which opened Thursday.

FOUR MEN GIVEN HOLT AWARDS BY SELECTION GROUP

A. W. Lowe, H. A. Hartgrove,
R. L. Holt, and W. G. Miller
Awarded Scholarships.

Four students, one from each class in the University, were awarded Holt scholarships yesterday after a prolonged session by the scholarship committee. They were A. W. Lowe, freshman, of Robersonville; Herbert A. Hartgrove, sophomore, of Hamlet; R. L. Holt, junior, of Pink Hill; and W. G. Miller, senior, Rockwell. Scholarships were given students whose character and work merited their receiving financial aid while in school.

Funds Given by Alumnus
These scholarships are available from the interest of a fund of $10,000 given in the University's favor by Lawrence S. Holt, Jr., of the class of 1904. The amount of $125 is awarded to each of four students who have shown aptitude in their work and who show need of financial assistance in order to continue their education. Holt has also provided other funds for worthy and needy students. These funds are not to exceed $400 per student and are to cover such necessary expenses as tuition, board, and other University fees.

The committee of selection which convened yesterday was headed by Dean A. W. Hobbs. The other members were Dean N. W. Walker, Dean D. D. Carroll, Dean F. F. Bradshaw, Dean M. C. S. Noble, Dean H. G. Baity, Dean J. M. Bell, R. B. House, and H. F. Comer.

NORTH CAROLINA CLUB WILL MEET TOMORROW NIGHT

Dr. Paul W. Wager Will Discuss
County Consolidation Movement at Meeting.

The North Carolina club will meet tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock in the library room of the department of rural social economics. At the meeting Dr. Paul W. Wager, secretary of the club, will discuss the county consolidation movement.

In his address Dr. Wager will show the extent of the movement throughout the United States, and especially in North Carolina. He will also explain why counties should be consolidated, and show the economies that will be achieved, and the efficiencies in government which will result from this movement.

Wager Is Authority

Dr. Wager is recognized as an authority on county government, a field in which he has specialized for ten years. He has done extensive research in the field of county government in North Carolina and his volume on that subject has been widely and favorably received.

The North Carolina club, composed of students and faculty members, is now in its nineteenth year. The purpose of its members is to secure intimate and accurate acquaintance with North Carolina and its problems. At each meeting a paper prepared by a member is read.

No Freshman Assembly

There will be no assembly tomorrow as the period will be devoted to taking sophomore pictures for the Yackety Yack.

University Professors Approve Of Nobel Award To Galsworthy

Views of Faculty Members Confirm General Impression That Englishman's Novel, "The Forsyte Saga," Is Regarded as One of Most Important Contributions to World Literature.

Despite striking dissenting opinions, statements from members of the University faculty secured yesterday indicate warm approbation of the Nobel literature award to John Galsworthy, distinguished English man of letters. The views, which were obtained from professors closely associated with the criticism of novels, confirmed the general impression that Galsworthy's novel, The Forsyte Saga, is regarded as one of the most important works in world literature.

Notable variance with the award to the Englishman was displayed by two faculty members. One of these charged Galsworthy with a lack of significant originality, while Theodore Dreiser was considered a more deserving recipient by the other professor.

The verbatim statements are as follows:

Dr. N. B. Adams, Spanish department: "I think that Galsworthy is richly deserving of the award, and it is highly appropriate that the award be made to him. As for the candidacy of Pio Baroja, the great Spanish novelist, I think that the achievement of Galsworthy is more artistic than his, and therefore more deserving of such a prize."

Concert Tickets Will Go On Sale Tomorrow

Students are reminded that tickets to the concert to be presented by the North Carolina State Symphony Orchestra in Memorial hall, December 2, can be obtained by remitting a ticket from their Student Entertainment Committee booklet. This exchange will take place all week beginning tomorrow in the Y. M. C. A. The musical entertainment is given under the auspices of the Phi Mu Alpha musical fraternity and for the benefit of music scholarships.

These concert tickets will allow students to occupy any seat in the auditorium except the 800 reserved seats in the front of the middle section. Reserve seats can be purchased by students for fifty cents and by outsiders for townspeople for one dollar. Over one thousand seats besides the reserved section will be available.

Dr. Franklin Hickman To Speak Here Today

Dr. Franklin S. Hickman, of the Duke University school of religion, is scheduled to occupy the pulpit this morning in the University Methodist church.

Dr. Hickman has gained considerable reputation as a speaker at young people's conferences, at commencement services, and as a teacher at the Durham institution.

He preached the commencement sermon of the University of North Carolina last June, and he aroused much favorable comment on his masterful handling of his subject and his forceful style. A local professor, who had heard the baccalaureate sermons for forty years, said that Dr. Hickman's address was one of the three best during that long period.

Hickman preaches every other Sunday in the new Duke chapel to large audiences.

At the Portals

With four per cent beer, one hundred per cent prosperity and Democracy just around the corner, the three political parties have already begun to wipe the slate, as of last Tuesday, quite as clean as your grandmother's kitchen floor. Now they point to 1936.

Republican headquarters announces a complete shake up of the party, and profiting by the de-centralized campaign work of the Democrats in the last four years, which must be given its just due in the landslide of 1932, seeks to re-organize immediately in every section of the country. The party's stock, they say, must begin to show an immediate upturn. Nor are the Socialists and the Democrats tardy in organization toward the next presidential marathon. The country will not be allowed to forget the Democratic victory and the fact that a repetition of such is the order of the day in March, 1936. Whatever dissatisfaction the Socialists may recognize in their late efforts they will dispel with a vigorous program in behalf of their creed over the next four years.

In the midst of the battle, which must be termed so if it retains the same proportions later in the period which it assumes now, youth has become more and more embroiled. In the past, the politicians have leaned toward the younger and more ardent members of their factions for campaign ballyho and fanfare. Today, their undemonstrative berth at the helm is being gradually usurped by the youngsters, whose rising knowledge of the finer points of political science has put them on an equal footing with their elders.

Says F. Vinton Lindley, chairman of the Yale Literary Magazine in a recent article for the New Outlook: "... the answer (in reference to youth in politics) is complex. It is, in part, the answer which has been so much discussed in college papers and in the general press throughout the country. 'Young man, go into politics'... He is going in. He really is... There has never been anything like it before in the history of the country, unless it was in the days of the Revolution. We are going into politics 50,000 strong... University trained men, not everyone a Lincoln perhaps, but all intelligent and sincere..."

With this new era, youth must be given its chance. America, like Great Britain, has come to the realization that the field must be open to the young aspiring college graduate. Our British cousins, however, have become reconciled to this fact already, and today we find vast numbers of English political science colleges turning out young men for the service of their country. The will is with us, we turn now to a new era which must fling wide the gates to the clamor of youth.—D.C.S.

More Anarchy And Less System

The critics of the recent proposal of the student council to establish classroom honor committees are evidently honest in their objections to the plan. They contend that it would establish a monitor system. And, as they say, this would be contrary to the spirit of the honor system.

Their conception of the honor system is an ideal, one which disregards historical fact. According to their notion, the system means putting every student on his honor not to cheat, leaving the matter wholly to the individual. Then, if he is determined to cheat, the loss is his own; the disapproval of his own conscience will be a sufficient punishment for him.

Certainly, that is the ideal of an anarchical society. It is strange that a prominent campus Socialist, an advocate of complete subordination of the individual to society as a whole, should be a proponent of anarchy, which is the extreme opposite of socialism, in student government.

These critics apparently ignore three important principles of student government. First, the original success of the system depended upon the idea that honor meant being honest yourself and helping to keep your fellow student honest. In the days when the University was small and contacts between students were intimate, this idea was generally accepted and carried into practice. The proposed plan of the student council is intended to revive that idea by making out of each class a unit that will correspond in its intimacy of contacts and in its form of government to the smaller University of a former day.

Secondly, the critics of the plan seem to have forgotten that the honor system also includes lying and stealing, as well as cheating. A man who resents being called a liar will cheat with no qualms of conscience; yet, the only difference between lying and cheating is that, in the latter case, he writes his lie in a quiz book and swears at the end that it is the truth.

Likewise, no student shows hesitancy in reporting the common thief who stole his last five dollars. But he declares that he could not report the same man for stealing five of his best ideas from an examination paper. In other words, he doesn't give a particular damn about what the other fellow does, so long as it takes nothing out of his own hide. That attitude is irresponsible and anti-social.

Finally, if these critics would prevent the establishment of local honor groups, they would also abolish the student council. Their conception of the honor system denies the need for any ultimate control or final judicial authority.

The classroom honor committees would have the same powers as the council in determining the guilt of offenders; always, however, the right of final judgment and the power of imposing sentence would be reserved for the supreme council of the whole campus.

The student council is not a monitorial group. It makes no effort to apprehend offenders by snooping, spying, or detective methods. If, in the course of his regular campus duties, a councilman comes upon evidences of dishonesty, he reports them to his tribunal. The classroom honor committees, being elected just as the student council is, would work in an identical manner. They would not be stationed at vantage points in the classroom; they would not police the aisles; nor would they make an effort to apprehend cheaters except as they happened to see them, or as they were reported by other students.

Apparently, what the critics of this plan want is anarchy in campus government. They would have the group deny all responsibility for the individual. They would deny the responsibility of the individual to the group. While not contributing one iota to deter the individual from cheating or to educate him in the principles of honor, they would expect him automatically, by instinct, to become a good citizen of the campus and of the state.

Actually, they are not arguing for a system, but for the absence of a system: for anarchy.—E.C.D.

The Week

Sunday, Nov. 6

THE DAILY TAR HEEL, in a canvass of faculty members on their views of the several presidential candidates, tallies: Democrats, thirteen; Socialists, one; Republicans, none. Others solicited unable to give views, thus possibility of Republicans in faculty ranks darkly hinted.

Belford Forrest, prominent English playwright, reads his new "How It All Began," a chronicle of the early English theatre and its sidelights. Result: audience unanimously charmed.

Monday, Nov. 7

A. W. Hamilton, finance and debt authority, Charlotte, tells freshmen in chapel service that the real reason for the economic depression "goes back to the time of the United States' entry into the World War." Further: "The trouble was due to the fact that we did not conscript wealth and property instead of flesh and blood. We, our children and grandchildren must slave in order that the war profiteers might collect what is due them." And stereotyped Mr. Hamilton in conclusion: "All men of the Al Capone type should be lined up against a stone wall and executed, thereby saving the people of the United States $400.00 per capita."

Tuesday, Nov. 8

Abdication of Herbert the first hailed over campus and state as early returns indicate Democratic landslide. All North Carolina Democrats victorious in state campaigns.

Student council presents new honor system to student body for discussion and vote when pros and cons have been exhausted. Tar Heel's President Weeks: "The proposed plan will not take anything from our existing system; instead it will add greatly to it... and will give the individual student more responsibility in it..."

Phi Assembly deadlocks on bill favoring freshmen segregation. "Resolved: That the low tariff advocated by the Democrats is a better policy for the United States than a high protective tariff as exemplified by the Smoot-Hawley bill which is sponsored by the Republicans," results? guess?

Wednesday, Nov. 9

Final state election returns indicate University alumni have clean sweep. J. C. B. Ehringhaus (1904), governor; A. H. Graham (1912) lieutenant-governor; J. P. Stedman (1916) state treasurer; A. T. Allen (1897) superintendent of public instruction; W. A. Graham (1901) commissioner of agriculture; A. L. Fletcher (1905) commissioner of labor; Stanley Windborne (1917) insurance commissioner; Daniel C. Boney (1923) commissioner of insurance; Robert R. Reynolds (1906) United States senate; Lindsey C. Warren (1910), Charles L. Abernathy (1895) Edward E. Pou (1894) the "grand old man of the house" all elected to the House of Representatives as well as; Frank W. Hancock (1916), William B. Umstead (1916), J. Bayard Clark (1906), A. L. Bulwinkle (1903) and Zebulon Weaver (1895).

National Symphony Orchestra announces audition of Danse Morisque this week in Washington, D. C., written by University student, Herbert Hazleman, who got his inspiration for his work from "whistling morons" theory as advanced by Columbia professor last year.

Dr. W. L. Poteat, president emeritus of Wake Forest College, delivers Armistice day address before faculty and students in Memorial hall.

Saturday, Nov. 12

New University Hymn presented to student body, composed by Rob Roy Peery, who wrote Dartmouth and Oberlin College songs.

Playmakers present initial bill of ten short plays written by students in playwriting courses. Young Socialists and Young Democrats inhale sharply and launch programs leading to election of 1936.

DON SHOEMAKER

The Ink Well

By Nelson Robbins

This department gives its wholehearted approval to the plan debated by the Phi Assembly for the segregation of freshmen and suggests that either Hillsboro or Pittsboro be accepted as being sufficiently removed from the campus to serve as a suitable location for said segregation. And while we are about it, we might, also, try to swap Spencer hall and a few dozen fraternities to the state game department for a pair of little white rabbits with pink eyes.

Another great and momentous and much needed reform that should make Carolina hearts beat loyally in crusading harmony 'neath the blue sweaters and chiffon brassieres, and gather strength for the fray in the interests of freedom and world

THOSE NEW BOOKS

During the past week many new books were added to the rental library in the Bill's Head. May we offer a brief description of those we recommend.

THE FLOWERING WILDERNESS, John Galsworthy (Scribner's) $2.50. The novel lately appearing in Scribner's Magazine. Much superior to Maid In Waiting. Incidentally did you know that the author has just been awarded the Nobel Prize in literature, a fitting recognition for his fine work in The Forsyte Saga.

OUR STREET, Compton McKensie (Doubleday-Doran) $2.50. Written in the "modern-Victorian"; that is, a novel combining nineteenth century setting and "quaintness," with a working knowledge of popular psychology as a basis for character delineation.

THE NARROW CORNER, W. Somerset Maugham (Doubleday-Doran) $2.50. "Short therefore, is man's life, and narrow is the corner of the earth wherein he dwells." The particular corner referred to is that portion of the east known as Malaysia. A novel said to rank with Human Bondage.

NIGHT FLIGHT, a novel with a South American locale, which according to Dundas Leavitt, "is the story of a man who

Tar Heels Tame Davidson Wildcats By 12-0 Score

Carolina's Win Puts Tar Heels In Lead In Big Five

Woollen Returns Wildcat Punt Sixty Yards for Score in Initial Period.

UNDERWOOD IS HIGH LIGHT

Center's Brilliant Play Factor in Victory; Shaffer, Walker, Kahn, Phipps Star.

Carolina's Tar Heels downed Davidson 12-0, at Richardson Field in Davidson, before a homecoming crowd of more than 12,000 people. This, the Tar Heels' third consecutive win on as many week-ends, put them in the lead for the Big Five title as Duke lost to State.

The game was played throughout a driving, southeast wind which was reported to have been one of the coldest in many decades.

Charlie Woollen, Tar Heel quarterback, counted for the initial tally when he returned Pearce's punt sixty yards in the first period for a touchdown. The attempted kick by Lassiter was not good. Charlie Shaffer scored the second marker when he dashed around end ten yards in the fourth period for the final tally. Lassiter's kick was blocked by Cannon.

Underwood Stars

June Underwood played a fine game at center making more than half the tackles in the Tar Heel line. Other bulwarks in the Carolina forward wall were Walker, the acting captain, and Kahn. The backfield luminaries for the victors were many, in that the whole Tar Heel backfield worked well; but Phipps, Shaffer, Martin, and Chandler looked best. The Wildcat line looked well on the defense, but the work of Captain Buddy Gardner, Wagner, and Morgan stood out. In the backfield, Pearce and Mills shone brightly.

The Statistics

The ground attack for the Carolina team was much better than that of the Davidson eleven, making twelve first downs to Davidson's seven. However, the usual fine passing attack of the Tar Heels was decidedly lacking; they tried only four passes, completing only one, one being intercepted, and two being grounded. The Wildcats' aerial efforts were not so good as the averages show, but the passes that were completed were very costly for the Carolina team. Carolina was frequently penalized, losing a total of sixty yards while Davidson lost only fifteen.

First Quarter

Davidson won the toss and elected to receive. Underwood kicked off; Davidson put the ball in play on the twenty-five yard line. A punting duel followed in which the Tar Heels had the advantage. Carolina then started a drive from her own forty yard stripe to the fifteen, Lassiter and McCaskill bearing the brunt of the attack. A penalty of fifteen yards set the Tar Heels back forcing them to punt over the goal. Davidson could not gain, and Pearce kicked to Woollen who returned the ball from his own forty for a touchdown. Lassiter's kick was not good.

Second Quarter

This period was featured by a Davidson drive from the twenty-six yard line deep into the Tar Heels' territory. It was during this quarter that they amassed a total of five consecutive first downs. Fumbles proved to be costly to Carolina when the Tar Heels got the ball. The half

SIX TEAMS HAVE PERFECT RECORD IN GRID CONTESTS

A. T. O. Scores 153 Points During Week; Grimes and Lewis Lead Dormitory League.

Rain and forfeits struck out eleven of the scheduled twenty-three contests planned for last week's intramural tag football teams. In the games which were played, however, most of the leading elevens managed to continue the pace which has kept them at the top thus far in the campaign.

Chi Psi was responsible for the only defeat of a previously unbeaten team. Sigma Nu went down before the brilliant deceptive attack of the Chi Psi outfit, 20-7.

After Sigma Nu had gained a 7-0 lead at half time, Chi Psi opened its bag of tricks and brought forth a startling array of lateral passes, reverse plays, and even the old "statue of liberty" stunt to roll up three touchdowns.

A. T. O. Runs Wild

Alpha Tau Omega went on a scoring spree last week, amassing over one hundred points in its two victories. Monday afternoon Alan Smith and his fleet-footed team downed Pi Kappa Phi, 53-0, for the season's highest score, and followed this with a 50-0 triumph over Theta Kappa Nu Thursday. The latter game was fought on a muddy field which slowed up the A. T. O. onslaught.

Zeta Phi beat Lambda Chi Alpha, 26-0, in another muddy game, while Wednesday's downpour washed out the Beta Theta Pi-Delta Tau Delta setto.

In the dormitory circuit, Grimes and Lewis, continued their winning ways with victories over Steele and Old East, respectively.

Lewis was forced to come from behind to win its game, having trailed at one time, 13-6. Snooks Aitken and his aides, however, overcame the opposition to win, 18-13.

Grimes trailed Old East in first downs, 8-6, but scored two touchdowns to win, 13-0.

DUKE TAKES WIN FROM TAR HEELS IN CROSS-COUNTRY

Varsity Men Lose by 17-41 Score; Tar Babies Win From Blue Imps by 23-34 Score.

Duke University's cross country powerhouse automatically installed itself as favorites to cop the Southern Conference harrier title race yesterday by handing Carolina runners their second defeat in a dual meet in almost a decade. The count was 17-41.

The University's only other defeat in a hill and dale event also came at the hands of the Devils in 1928. This humiliation, however, was by far the worst ever suffered by a Chapel Hill harrier club in either a dual or multiple meet.

The initial four men to breast the tape were Devils. Red Lewis, star Duke runner who was thirty-first in last year's conference meet, led the procession. Braving the cold and wind, Lewis negotiated the five mile course with the time of 29:02.7. He was closely, very closely, followed by two mates—Bray and Bird—who tied for third position with a clocking of 29:03. Heritage of Duke was fourth.

Evidently runners in yesterday's event were bent on setting new records. A second draw came when Louis Sullivan and Captain Bob Hubbard knotted for fifth place with a time of 29:34. They led the Tar Heel procession. Clarence Jensen, winner last year of the Southern Conference run, could do no better than ninth place with a time of 30:44. Henry Sullivan was the only other U. N. C. man to finish in the initial ten. Henry was clocked for 31:44.

Summary

Participants in the meet are given with their school, and time in their finishing order as follows: Lewis, Duke, 29:02.7; Bray, Duke, 29:03; Bird, Duke, 29:03; Heritage, Duke, 29:17; L. Sullivan, Carolina, 29:34; Hubbard, Carolina, 29:34; Erickson, Duke, 29:49; Jester, Duke, 30:27; Jensen, Carolina, 30:44; H. Sullivan, Carolina, 31:44; Groover, Carolina, 31:59; Curlee, Carolina, 32:04; Gold- man, Carolina, 32:20; Cordle, Carolina, 32:22; Harris, Duke, 32:24; and Nitche, Duke, 32:25.

Tar Babies Win

Carolina freshmen cross-country runners took Duke's Blue Imps for a 23-34 ride yesterday morning in a harrier meet at the Durham institution.

W. W. Caraway, who was second in the Cake Race this year, led the procession. Caraway negotiated the three mile course with a time of 16:23.5. The Carolina runner barely managed to finish ahead of Ford of Duke, who had a time of 16:28.

The other Tar Babies finished in the initial five—R. Y. McPhail with a time of 16:36, who was third, and Louis B. Conte, fifth man in, with a time of 16:49.

The freshmen are given with their-times in the order in which they finished as follows: Caraway, Carolina, 16:23.5; Ford, Duke, 16:28; McPhail, Carolina, 16:36; McQuarrie, Duke, 16:37; Conte, Carolina, 16:49; Umstead, Carolina, 16:52; Doerk, Duke, 16:53; Keeney, Carolina, 16:54; Withe- rell, Duke, 17:08; Napier, Carolina, 17:22; Garrison, Carolina, 17:36; Everhart, Duke, 17:37; Eberly, Duke, 17:52; Hollings- worth, Duke, 17:54; Caset, Duke, 18:12; and Sullivan, Carolina, 18:27.

TAMED THE WILDCATS

COMING WEEK TO END INTRAMURAL FOOTBALL GAMES

Beta and Chi Psi Meet Tomorrow to Determine Who Will Enter Fraternity Playoffs.

The coming week marks the last of the regular intramural tag football campaign, with only the campus championship contest scheduled for next week. By Friday night the winner of each circuit will have been found and the final standings will have been arrived at.

Tomorrow will be the biggest day of the season as far as number of leading teams in competition goes. In the feature game of the afternoon, Beta Theta Pi and Chi Psi, conqueror of Sigma Nu, will fight it out to determine which is to enter the fraternity league playoffs.

Both leaders in the dormitory loop will see action, with each facing an outfit which may well drop its opponent from the undefeated class. Grimes faces Aycock, which has won five of its six games, while Lewis will oppose Carr, which holds fourth place in the dormitory league at present.

Tuesday afternoon will find Alpha Tau Omega, the fourth member of the group of fraternity league leaders, opposing the fast Tau Epsilon Phi team. T. E. P. has won only three of its five games.

Schedule for Tomorrow
3:30 p. m.—Delta Tau Delta vs. Phi Sigma Kappa; (2) Zeta Psi vs. Sigma Chi; (3) Theta Chi vs. Pi Kappa Phi.

4:30 p. m.—(1) Chi Psi vs. Beta Theta Pi; (2) Carr vs. Lewis; (3) Grimes vs. Aycock.

STATE HUMBLER BLUE DEVILS BY CLOSE SCORE, 6-0

Cumiskey Crashes Over Duke Line in Third Quarter as Blue Devils Fail to Click.

In the most startling upset of the North Carolina football season, the State Technicians sent the Duke Blue Devils back to their lair by a score of 6-0 before a capacity crowd yesterday in Raleigh.

Greason outpunted Rossiter and Laney, Mason fumbled at a critical moment in the third quarter, and State cracked the Duke line that had been impregnable so far.

First Quarter

Neither team was able to score in the first quarter, both teams playing cautious ball, punting on first downs practically every time. Near the close of the quarter, State advanced the ball to its own 44-yard line, with the aid of line jabs of six and seven yards by Cumiskey, but there the Blue Devils held them.

Second Quarter

In the second quarter, State made several attempts at scoring, but lacked the necessary punch to put it across. State mixed passes with a fast line attack to march to the Duke 11-yard line, but on first down, after he had picked up about five yards, Cumiskey fumbled, and Laney recovered for Duke. The Wolfpack drive began again on their 30-yard line. McAdams and Roy carried the ball to Duke's 11-yard line. Cumiskey then misued, and Rossiter punted out. State made one more drive during the quarter, carrying the ball to the Blue Devils' 20-yard line, where Duke held and took the ball.

Third Quarter

In the third quarter, Greason's kicks forced Duke back, and Rossiter's punt to the Duke 44-yard line was returned 11 yards by Wilson. Roy got 11 yards, and Duke stiffened its defense. Cumiskey fumbled on fourth down, and Rogers recovered for Duke. On the first down, Mason fumbled, and Cumiskey recovered for State. Roy got almost to the goal line in two line smashes, and Cumiskey carried the ball over for the winning touchdown. McQuage, substituting for Wilson missed

JOHN BARRYMORE PICTURE STARTS BILL FOR WEEK

Attractions at Carolina for Week
Present Varied Program
Of Entertainment.

John Barrymore, who has a long series of screen triumphs, notable among them being "Grand Hotel," "State's Attorney," "Arsene Lupin," "Sven-gali," "Moby Dick," "The Man From Blankley's" and others vivid in screen history, stars in "A Bill of Divorcement," which opens the week's bill at the Carolina theatre tomorrow.

George Brent, who takes the leading masculine role in "They Call It Sin," Tuesday's production, will appear opposite Loretta Young for the second time during the current movie season.

Fairbanks Plays Wednesday

Acting as technical director on Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.'s latest Warner Bros. picture, "Scarlet Dawn," coming Wednesday, Nicholas Kobliansky relives in make-believe the lively and grim realities of life, as it was for him just fifteen years ago. Prior to the final, devastating revolution of October, 1917, he was a member of the upper class of Russian society.

Thursday, Miriam Hopkins, Kay Francis, Herbert Marshall, and Edward Everett Horton head the cast of "Trouble in Paradise," an Ernst Lubitsch production.

Warren William's three leading ladies in the First National picture, "Three on a Match," coming here next Friday, provide that picture with three separate stories which weave themselves together into a thrilling and intriguing plot. Ann Dvorak, Joan Blondell, and Bette Davis have the parts of the three female characters.

Bert Wheeler, Robert Woolsey, Edna May Oliver, and Rescoe Ates provide the majority of the comedy in "Hold 'Em Jail," Saturday's feature. Wheeler is presented as the "world's greatest athlete, the man who invented athlete's foot."

"Y" CABINET MEETINGS SCHEDULED TOMORROW

The three Young Men's Christian Association cabinets will gather Monday night at 7:00 o'clock.

No programs have been announced as yet for the organizations, but plans are under way for an interesting round of entertainment at the meeting of each cabinet.

Important business sessions are on tap, and all members are urged to be there. Any boys desirous of becoming members of any of the three cabinets—freshman friendship council, sophomore or junior-senior cabinets—are cordially invited to attend the meeting of the group under which they are classified.

Williams Receives Award

At the Armistice Day program Friday in Memorial hall, the Cross of Military Service was given by the Leonidas Polk chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy to Winslow E. Williams. This award is made each year by chapters of the United Daughters of the Confederacy throughout the nation to members of the American Legion who are of Confederate descent.

Chemistry Seminar Meeting

At the regular meeting of the chemistry seminar Monday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, J. A. Addestone will present a paper on "The Structure Method of Crystal Analyses."

Hurricane Deaths Number 2,000

Caribbean storm deaths approached the 2,000 mark yesterday, most of them in Cuba, as the hurricane that harassed the West Indies for ten days moved northeastward, 500 miles off the Atlantic seaboard. Santa Cruz del Sur in Camaguey province of Cuba has been wiped out completely and will probably not be rebuilt. The dead are being burned to speed rehabilitation in the devastated areas.

Who Will the Next Speaker Be?

The nation in general and the Democratic party in particular are wondering who will be the next speaker of the House of Representatives, succeeding vice-President elect John N. Garner in one of the ranking offices of the government. The choice is expected to be made from the following five men: Edward W. Pou of North Carolina, Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee, John McDuffie of Alabama, John E. Rankin of Mississippi, and Henry T. Rainey of Illinois.

The Ink Well

peace, has to do with the matter of coat hangers in class rooms. Of course, it really doesn't matter much to those of us who have to sling our twelve-fifty hand-me-downs carelessly across the back of a bench. But it is the principle of the thing. To see a camel's hair overcoat losing all its crease or sliding in a limp and dusty heap to the floor, is enough to bring tears to the bloodshot eyes of the most rabid communist. There has been enough persecution of the poor little rich boys of this country, what with the income and inheritance taxes and all, without this great and noble institution of alleged higher education taking any part in the movement. Now is the time to show our great nobleness of spirit. A few rows of hangers stuck at random in the plastering across the back of the room or in the window sills would only cost a few cents and would save millions every year in cleaners' bills. And think of the aesthetic effect.

Now, having disposed of those few frivolous trifles, let's pass around the sun cured and get down to a more serious consideration of student life in its broader and more sacred aspects.

The bells chimeth. . . . Tutors tootheth, and students yawneath. . . . Columnists tweedleth, and life moves along the even tenor of its ways. . . . The woodbine twineth around picturesque old class buildings, and the wild whangdoodle, as usual, mourneth for its mate. . . . The feet-ball players teameth, and the coeds gigglet and placidly cheweth the cud. . . . Down in the arboretum, the chipmunks chippeeth and the courting couples coupleth. . . . The home brew breweth, and the whifflesniff sniffeth for a sniffer. . . . While the pifflepooth poofeth a great big poofh. . . . Isn't it a grand and glorious and sort of silly feeling just to be alive and be in collitch?

University Professors Approve Nobel Award to be drawn from the passing of an outgoing generation. They constitute the stage for that memorable character—Soames Forsyte.

"In his treatment of sex, Galsworthy offers a model of cleanliness without prudery. His avoidance of the traps of naturalism, realism, and other prevailing 'isms' is one of the best evidences of his greatness."

Dr. George R. Coffman, English department: "I think the character of Soames Forsyte the greatest creation in the literature of the last two centuries. The award was certainly a much-deserved one. At present I can think of no one who would merit the prize more than Galsworthy. The high quality of the prose in his essays, plays, and novels maintained over so long a period makes him the logical recipient."

"Undoubtedly he has done mediocre work, but his superior efforts surpass contemporary writing. His fame will probably rest upon The Forsyte Saga, a great contribution to international literature, while much of his other work will be forgotten."

Dr. Archibald Henderson, mathematics department: "I think the Nobel prize committee made no mistake in awarding the prize to John Galsworthy, not because of his poetry, but on the score of his essays and the score of his short stories. His greatest work comes in the chain of long stories. The Forsyte Saga is sufficient to lift him to literary immortality. 'I have always felt that Galsworthy was not qualified to be a dramatist, but that he had better devote his entire talent to long fiction.'

"I might say that The Forsyte Saga is truly Balzacian. It is a sort of modern equivalent in English family life to the Balzac stories."

Frederick H. Koch, English department: "I certainly think it is a fine award. He seems to me the logical person to receive the award at this time because of his remarkable achievements in the novel and the drama. To me, The Forsyte Saga is the most important novel of our time. 'Certainly Galsworthy's plays Strife, Justice, and The Silver Box have done much to stimulate thought and action in the reforms of labor conditions and English court procedure and prison situations."

Dr. J. C. Lyons, French department: "From a casual observation and from having read the most popular of his works, I believe that the chief reason Galsworthy received the award was that they had to get somebody who writes in English. Personally, I did not see a significant, permanent contribution to the trend of literature in his writing. He has not created a new literary type, nor is he proposing any significant new philosophy."

"I should say that there are three people who have prior claims to the award: the Frenchman, Andre Maurois, the German, Emil Ludwig, and the Italian, Luigi Pirandello. The first two have so developed the ideas of Lytton Strachey as to present a literary form which threatens the universal popularity of the novel—and that form is the romanticized biography. Pirandello has given the fantasy drama, a new dramatic form popularized in this country by Eugene O'Neill."

Phillips Russell, English department: "Two years ago when the Nobel literary prize was awarded, it was given to Sinclair Lewis, and I thought it should have been given to Theo-

Many Attend A.A.U.W. Annual Bridge Supper

A bridge supper took place at the home Dr. and Mrs. Frank P. Graham Friday night, under the auspices of the Chapel Hill branch of the American Association of University Women. This has become an annual affair, and is devoted to the raising of money for the group's loan fund.

Every year a hundred dollars is added to this student loan fund which is to be used eventually as a fellowship for the work of some graduate student. All the money which has been lent to needy students so far, has been returned in full at the date of maturity.

The supper was under the direction of Mrs. Harry F. Comer and was attended by more than 140 persons.

Last Quarter

In the last quarter, Duke took to the air in a desperate attempt to keep the Wolfpack from their goal. McAdams intercepted one of the Duke passes, and the Technicians advanced to the Duke 20-yard line where McQuage attempted a field goal, but failed. State outclassed the Blue Devils in every department, and the Wolfpack goal was never even closely threatened. State made eight first downs to Duke's four. Final score: Duke 0; State 6.

Y. M. C. A. Cabinets Discuss Plans for Coming Week

Plans and programs for the forthcoming week were discussed Friday morning at a meeting of the Y. M. C. A. cabinet officers.

An extensive program of activities has been planned for the campus association between now and the Christmas holidays. A colored football game sponsored by the "Y" is scheduled for the first Friday after Thanksgiving. The Orange County Training school is slated to meet an opponent yet to be picked.

Chi Omega Entertains

The Chi Omega sorority entertained at a leap year pledge dance Friday night from 10:00 until 1:00 o'clock at the chapter house. Jack Wardlaw's orchestra furnished the music for the occasion. The house was decorated in cardinal and straw, the sorority colors. Guests included Chi Omega pledges with their dates and the stray Greek co-eds on the campus.

TAR HEELS TAME DAVIDSON BY 12-0

ended with the Wildcats on the forty yard stripe of Carolina's territory. Score: Carolina 6, Davidson 0.

Third Quarter

The quarter started with Davidson punting over the Tar Heels' goal. An exchange of punts favored the Carolina team with a slight advantage. The Tar Heels by virtue of a pass from Phipps to Brandt placed the ball deep into the Wildcats' territory. Although Burnett's kick went outside on the Davidson five yard line, a Carolina pass was intercepted. After an exchange of punts, Davidson had the ball on the forty yard line.

Fourth Quarter

Hostilities were resumed with both clubs still trying to find a break in their punting duel. Martin kicked outside on the Davidson fifteen yard marker. The Wildcats kicked out to midfield where the Tar Heels started their final scoring drive. Phipps and Shaffer alternated at making large dents in the Davidson line. The ball rested on the fifteen yard line when Phipps made about five through the line; then Shaffer made his ten yard touchdown jaunt. Lassiter's kick was blocked by Cannon. A desperate effort of the Wildcats was thwarted at the ten yard line and White, back in the line-up, was leading a drive out of Carolina territory as the game ended. Score: Carolina 12, Davidson 0.

President Graham Made Head Of Greater University

DR. HICKMAN SAYS MEN NEED NEW IDEA OF RELIGIONHead of Duke School of Religion
Speaks to Students on Moses
And Burning Bush.

"If there ever was a time for God to reincarnate himself in men's hearts, it is now!" declared Dr. Franklin S. Hickman, dean of the Duke University school of religion, last Sunday in the University Methodist church.

Taking his text from Exodus III, verses one through five, the Methodist preacher told the oft-repeated tale of Moses and the burning bush. Citing the new spiritual conception that Moses received from this highly emotional experience, Dr. Hickman declared that the only way for God to reincarnate himself in human hearts is for men to see the burning bush and derive the same experience that Moses got from it.

Need Spiritual Rebirth

"We need a rebirth of spiritual vision, passion, and power in our education so that we may see things in the burning bush that we may not see under a microscope," Dr. Hickman said. Continuing: "Our boys and girls at the University are bringing home new theological ideas, just as Moses got his new conception of a greater social order from the burning bush."

Giving an explanation as to the origin of confused theological ideas in men, Dr. Hickman told his audience that the reason for many "modern thinkers" going astray is that their conception of the universe has changed much more rapidly than their corresponding idea of God.

LATE FIRE CHIEF
EXPIRES AT HOMEJ. W. Foister, for Twenty Years
Head of Local Fire Department, Dies After Illness.

Chief J. W. Foister, aged 50, of the Chapel Hill fire department, died Sunday night at his residence on Pittsboro street, following three years of impaired health. His condition had become steadily worse after sustaining a broken hip in August.

For the past twenty-nine years Foister had acted as chief of the local fire department—faithful and conscientious in execution of his duty, respected and loved by the firemen under him and by his fellow-citizens. In addition to his service in this community, he was once president of the State fireman's association.

Foister was for three years prior to his death under treatment at the Duke hospital in Durham, and since attending a fireman's convention in August he had been confined to his bed.

Foister is survived by his wife; one son, James Foister; three brothers, Duke, Tom, and R. W. Foister; and two sisters, Mrs. H. D. Lee of Chapel Hill and Mrs. Bill Wiggins of Raleigh.

Funeral services will take place at the Chapel Hill cemetery this afternoon at 3:00 o'clock.

WAR DEBT CANCELLATION WILL BE ARGUED BY PHI

The Phi assembly will conduct its regular meeting tonight at 7:00 o'clock in the assembly hall in New East to discuss the following bills:

Resolved: That the Phi assembly go on record as favoring the proposal of the student council effecting the honor system.

Resolved: That the United States should discard the policy exemplified by the Monroe Doctrine.

Resolved: That the United States cancel the war debts owed her by the European nations.

UNIVERSITY PRESS
TO RELEASE BOOK
ABOUT DEPRESSIONJ. M. Williams' Volume Will Concern Itself With Causes and Cures for Unemployment.

The University of North Carolina Press has made preliminary announcements concerning a timely new volume about the depression and unemployment. This new book, the title of which has not yet been officially chosen, is by J. M. Williams, professor at Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y. It is a comprehensive discussion of the causes, cures, and remedies for unemployment.

The expressed purpose of the book is "to show the immediate need for social insurance, and the conditions necessary for its successful operation." In the discussion of these problems the author makes use of figures obtained by an investigation of the effects of the work of unemployment and welfare organizations in seven cities of upstate New York where conditions are better than anywhere else in the country.

Unaware of Serious Problems

He states that in the majority of communities, the citizens are not aware of the seriousness of their unemployment problems. In one community where the "solid" citizens expressed the opinion that "only po' white trash and 'niggers'" applied for relief, an investigation showed that one family out of ten was eating only now and then.

The author believes that while we are learning how to control our economic world, "we must insure ourselves against the ravages of unemployment and depression." While no civilized state is without laws to take care of the old, infirm, insane or feeble-minded, a large number of people are of the opinion that no public relief is necessary.

This book to be released by the University Press, "written as part of the record of these times," is an attempt to prove that legislation to enforce unemployment insurance is necessary.

Faculty Professors' Book Will Be Published Soon

Dr. J. W. Lasley and Dr. E. T. Browne are busy revising and correcting the proofs for their freshman mathematics book, Introductory Mathematics, which will soon be published by McGraw-Hill, book publishers. The book, which was first used last year by University freshmen, was then in a pamphlet form.

FIRST GREATER UNIVERSITY HEAD

Dr. Frank Porter Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, yesterday was unanimously selected by the University board of trustees to head the Greater University. President Graham has been prominent in state and national educational circles since his graduation from this institution in 1909. His appointment will necessitate the choosing of another man to head this branch of the Greater University.

KIWANIS CLUBS TO HAVE JULES BRAZIL
AS GUEST TONIGHTNoted Radio Entertainer and Master Of Ceremonies Will Speak at Meeting Here.

Jules Brazil, noted radio entertainer of the National Broadcasting company, will be the guest of the Kiwanis club tonight at 7:00 o'clock at a meeting in the basement of the Methodist church. A supper is to be served by the women of the church.

The Kiwanis clubs of Chapel Hill, Durham, Burlington, Greensboro, Graham, Henderson, and Oxford, as well as the local Rotary club, are to meet for an inter-club gathering. A number of citizens, who are members of neither of the local organizations, have been invited to attend the meeting.

The guest of the occasion, Brazil, is widely known as the chairman of the music committee of Kiwanis International as well as a radio entertainer. He also serves in the capacity of official entertainer at yearly conventions of the organization.

DIALECTIC SENATE WILL DISCUSS HONOR SYSTEM

The Dialectic senate will discuss the following bills at its regular meeting tonight at 7:00 o'clock in New West:

Resolved: That the Dialectic senate go on record as favoring the proposal effecting the honor system which is being sponsored by the student council.

Resolved: That the United States should adopt a minimum wage law.

Resolved: That the Di senate go on record as opposing the Grundy tariff.

NEXT PLAYMAKER
BILL CONSISTS OF SELECTED PLAYSFour Original One-Act Productions Chosen From Saturday's Experimental Performance.

For their second presentation this season, the Carolina Playmakers offer a bill of four original one-act plays to be given December 8, 9, and 10.

These plays were chosen from the ten experimental performances given Saturday afternoon and night in the theatre, and selected by the Playmaker staff as the best productions of the playwriting classes.

Davy Crockett, a drama of the Southwest frontier, by John Philip Milhous; Stumbling in Dreams, a comedy of Tin Pan Alley, by George Brown of New York City; Creek Swamp Nigger, a negro tragedy by Harry W. Coble of Douglas, Georgia; and Four On a Heath, a fantasy by Foster Fitz-Simons of Atlanta are the four plays to be presented, and work on these dramas will start this week.

Try-outs for parts in the plays will take place this afternoon at 3:00 o'clock and tonight at 7:30 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre. There are about twenty-five parts to be cast and all who are interested are urged to come and try out.

PHI BETA KAPPA MEN TO SELECT OFFICERS

Active members of the local chapter of Phi Beta Kappa will meet tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock in 215 Graham Memorial for the initiation of those members who are now eligible and for the election of a secretary and other officers for the coming year.

Dr. Foust And Dr. Brooks Chosen Vice-PresidentsCOLLINS AND WADE WILL SPEAK AT JUNIOR SMOKER

Coach "Chuck" Collins of Carolina and Coach Wallace Wade of Duke will be the principal speakers at the junior class smoker to take place at Swain hall Thursday night at 9:00 o'clock. It has been announced that an orchestra will play for the entertainment, but arrangements have not as yet been made.

MRS. WILLIS GIVES HUSBAND'S BOOKS
TO LAW LIBRARYCollection Also Contains Volumes
Belonging to Late Judge
Charles R. Thomas.

The law school announced yesterday that Mrs. George T. Willis of New Bern had presented her husband's library to the school as a memorial. Her husband was the late Judge George T. Willis of New Bern.

"Because my husband believed in the University and would want his books well cared for while they are giving wide service, I am presenting his library to the law school as a memorial to him and to Judge Charles Thomas, who originally owned a large number of these books." In this way Mrs. Willis presented to the University of North Carolina law school on October 31, 1932, the library belonging to her husband, Judge George Thomas Willis, who died early in September.

Contains N. C. Material

The gift of 757 volumes brings to the law library rare North Carolina material, usable United States reports and statutes and a number of legal texts new to the present law collection. The most valuable part of the memorial is the 200-volume set of North Carolina supreme court reports in the original edition, now procurable only in old private collections. The nucleus of the library—the North Carolina items—first belonged to Judge Charles R. Thomas of New Bern, who died in 1931. At his death the books were given to Judge Willis, who used them for a year before his death.

The lives of these two close friends so parallel each other as to be related at one time. Both graduated from the University, Judge Thomas receiving his A.B. degree in 1881, Judge Willis his LL.B. degree in 1912. Both were lawyers; both men were prominent in public affairs in their community and in their state; both became judges—the older man, a superior court judge; the younger, judge of the county recorder's court.

New Song to Be Published

The tune and melody of the new school song, written by Thornton Allen, has been submitted to the committee for consideration, but it probably will not be ready for weeks.

The song is to be called the Tar Heel Battle Song and sheet music will be put on sale immediately after its completion.

moting Rank of Any Institution to Junior College.

TATUM BILL IS "RECEIVED"

Group Will Meet Before January
To Consider Election of Vice-President for University.

Dr. Frank Porter Graham, head of the University, was yesterday elevated into the position of president of the Greater University of North Carolina by an unanimous vote of the board of trustees in its semi-annual meeting in Raleigh.

Dr. E. C. Brooks, for many years head of State College, and Dr. J. I. Foust, head of Woman's College, were elected vice-presidents of the Greater University. Each will have charge of the schools they head at present.

The selection of a vice-president who will head the division of the Greater University in Chapel Hill and of a comptroller to direct the business end of the consolidated institution was deferred to the executive committee. A committee was appointed to confer with the faculty here in regard to the selection of the third vice-president.

Tatum Petition Received

The board selected a special committee to consider the petition which created a great sensation last September when the document, presented to Governor O. Max Gardner by L. A. Tatum, retired Belmont textile manufacturer, charged the state supported schools with condoning radical teachings. The board adopted a resolution that it "receive" the Tatum petition and then

DR. ADAMS SPEAKS
AT RED SPRINGSSays Scott's Writings Influenced Past and Present Southern Life and Opinions.

Dr. Raymond Adams, of the University English department, delivered the Founder's Day address at Flora MacDonald College, Red Springs, Saturday, November 12. He spoke on the influence of Sir Walter Scott on southern life.

When Scott's work became widely known in the south, "the very plantation life, and the training of the younger generation on the plantations, shifted from the classical villa model to the feudal manor."

To Scott largely is due the fact that the southern woman was put on a pedestal, "thereby making them helpless, and creating the fiction that they must not soil their lily-white hands with work, nor their lily-white minds with thought, but must simmer in society."

Scott's romanticism offered an escape from the drab facts of ante-bellum existence in the south, and a romantic pre-war south was created by writers who imitated Scott. The northern idea of the present-day south is no more erroneous than the southern idea of the pre-bellum south, and both can be attributed, almost directly, to Scott's influence.

En Avant

With the unanimous choice of Frank Porter Graham by the executive board of the trustees of the Greater University of North Carolina to serve as president of the newly consolidated university, a new era in education is opened to the people of the state.

Reluctant to accept the position as head of the University after the resignation of Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, now president of the University of Illinois, Dr. Graham with broad vision and dynamic personality set to work to advance still further the cause of education in the south and in the state through the means of this institution. Last year when the very life of the University was threatened by a budget slashing legislature, President Graham hastened to Raleigh and there delivered an address of so sparkling clarity and scintillating brilliance that further cutting of the University appropriation was halted.

President Graham is respected and loved by all who come in contact with him. Faculty, students, townspeople, and even the hostile legislature have been brought under the spell of his warm smile and beautiful personality. Harold J. Laski, of the University of London, in an article published in the Atlantic Monthly cited Dr. Graham as an example of the ideal college president who has close contact with his faculty and is at all times available to the youngest instructor or the oldest and most highly respected professor.

The University if not having progressed thus far during his incumbency has at least not retrogressed. Such a declaration at times when the greatest universities of the land are retrenching is a compliment worthy of the man who has guided this institution through the perils of depression.

Now that the three branches of the state schools of higher education have been consolidated and the depression is every day lightening, it requires no great prophet to foresee that a university will be moulded under the hands of President Graham which will become the toast of the south, a leader in the nation, and a light of intellectuality abroad.—O.S.S.

The Good Samaritan

Jacta est alea; The people have spoken, and a new political epoch has been ushered in, all in a very short time.

A week ago, the president of our nation was working with the knowledge that he was the nation's head by the enthusiastic consent of the people, and with the hope that this sentiment would again be registered. Today, he is a political outcast, and the exponent of a cause that is lost, for the time being.

The president awoke Wednesday morning to find himself just as much a "lame duck" as any member of the Congress which is soon to convene; a situation which holds nothing in store but embarrassment, for him. Besides the humiliation of knowing that the nation has lost confidence in him and his policies, Mr. Hoover faces a militantly hostile session of congress, whose purpose it will, no doubt, be to block any proposal which he may make, on partisan grounds. And, not only that, but also the almost certain knowledge that any bill of his which might be successful in getting by is very likely to be repealed by his successor.

In the face of these facts, in accordance with the fine spirit of sportsmanship and cooperation so far exhibited, the president might institute a plan whereby the present Secretary of State would resign his portfolio, and President-elect Roosevelt given the vacated place. Next, the Vice-President would be asked to resign, then the President himself would resign; by law of succession, the Secretary of State would become President; the new policies could be immediately put into effect; party harmony would be assured, and the will of the people would be speedily effected, while the loss to the administration would be slight, if any.—W.A.S.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

Here's Your Chance, C. L. Y.

Mr. C. L. Y. writing in yesterday's TAR HEEL showed a remarkable amount of ignorance about laundries. If he will go out of his home town or his state, he will find that the local laundry surpasses almost any he might see in having lower prices and doing better quality work.

Mr. C. L. Y. is also lacking in information about our local prices. He states that shirts starched or not are the same price. The difference is exactly five cents. He says that the expense of delivery in large cities is great but here very small due to concentration of students in dormitories. Perhaps he doesn't know that students live on the Durham road four miles from the laundry, on the airport road more than two miles away, on the Pittsboro road more than two miles away, and in Carrboro. There is not quite as much concentration in dormitories as he thinks.

Mr. C. L. Y. knows so much about the different machines for pulling off buttons he should "cash in" on some of his ideas. We predict a great future for him.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

Offer

Fingering through an old office letter file several months ago, we were not a little chagrined to find a letter to the editor from Mark Sullivan in which he alibied his lack of contribution to a symposium on the grounds that he was "putting all of the work of which I am capable into the fourth volume of my Our Times, to be published this Fall." Hoping selfishly that his printers might become the target for a political heckler's bomb, we kept the dark secret to ourselves, but nevertheless must disclose it now that the press has revealed the forthcoming volume. With three tomes from Mr. Sullivan's historical pageant already literary history it is evident that we could make no case against the political commentator on the grounds of plagiarism of our own pet column name. To avoid having this tri-weekly contribution mistaken therefore as the work of Mr. Sullivan, it is evident that we make some change in our name. We'll let the one who makes the best suggestion take us to a free show.

Siwash

Despite the proud cries in some quarters that the American college man is "going conservative," the present football season has brought out again the everlasting "die for dear old Siwash" spirit that once made the American college rooting sections something more than a mere collection of bored and frozen individuals. Princeton, up in New Jersey, it would seem leads the way. "After a parade around the campus, a crowd of roaring, cheering undergraduates poured into Alexander Hall and listened to talks by Captain Josh Billings and Coach Fritz Crisler in one of the most enthusiastic rallies that Princeton has witnessed in recent years. . . . Captain Billings was then introduced, and after receiving a tremendous ovation, thanked the students for their support and declared that, 'We'll give every last thing we have and we'll take that game if we have to die in the attempt,'" said the Princetonian in chronicling the festivities preceding the Yale-Princeton game last Saturday.

Texas, never particularly conservative along such lines, shouts forth anew over the Texas-Texas Christian University encounter, "Then beneath the vast arched roof of Gregory Gym will thunder the voice of a crowd of 5,000 students, asking for victory. . . . After the Cowboys, the freshmen, and the Longhorn Band will march into the gymnasium, Jack Boyett will take the rally over with several yells, after which a speaker, whose name has not yet been announced, will talk about the Armistice Day football war. . . in its Daily Texan."

Southern California's Daily Trojan gets all worked up about the football business also, and after drubbing the state university in a gridiron contest, editorially slaps a few wrists down Los Angeles way over a breach of rooting etiquette. "But the action last Saturday of the California rooting section in leaving the stadium almost en masse while Trojan rooters were in the midst of their victory celebration cannot be overlooked. . . . It was as bad an example of poor sportsmanship as has ever been seen at a major game and was entirely incompatible with what should be expected of a school behind a losing team," says the Trojan.

School spirit of the two institutions invariably waxes increasingly hot after such an outburst from one or the other rivals. The spirit is willing and the Trojan does its bit toward keeping the flesh in collegiate robustity.

Siwash, then must still be with us. Here at home and in Durham we note the growth of this spirit in increasingly pronounced measures. Many will welcome the revived rooting sections, which shall cry to us that college spirit is not dead, and that boys, even big-ones must be boys.

"Nature in the Raw is seldom MILD"

THE SEA WOLF
"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by the noted artist, N. C. Wyeth. . . inspired by the infamous Captain Kidd's fierce raids on the gold-laden Spanish galleons (1696), which made him the scourge of the Spanish Main. "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes.

No raw tobaccos in Luckies —that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

Varsity Squad Put Through Fast Session Getting Ready For Duke

Both Teams to Be Primed for Game in Kenan Stadium Next Saturday.

TAR HEELS SHOW CHANGES

Froneberger, Guard, and Shaffer, Half, Take Signal Drill With First Team.

The Carolina squad fresh from their 12-0 victory over Davidson were out on Emerson field showing new fight and determination as they began their preparation for the coming Duke battle.

The session yesterday was full of the same spirit the team had after the game in Davidson Saturday when Coach Collins announced that the squad was to leave immediately for Chapel Hill; they were willing to hold a workout then if they thought it would help them get ready for the Blue Devils. With the spirit of the squad at such a high ebb, Coach Collins plans to work hard this week on speed, drive, and deception and put a speedy, heady, and determined team on Kenan field next Saturday.

Blue Devils Get Surprise

The Blue Devils are doing just the same thing. They are more determined than ever to beat the Tar Heels since State handed them such a lacing in Raleigh Saturday last. Duke will be just that much harder to beat over here since they were shaken up spiritually by State.

The squad was put through a lengthy tackling and charging practice yesterday. The linemen hit the bucker and tackled the dummy and the backs and ends also went through a long drill in tackling. Coach Collins had Woollen, Burnett, and Martin practicing their kicking and ended the day with a long sig-

CAROLINA LEADS BIG FIVE CONTEST

Duke Leads Scoring With 135 Points; Saturday's Engagement Will Decide Winner.

State's upset victory over Duke Saturday dragged the Blue Devils from the top of Big Five standings and gave added importance to the Carolina-Duke game here Saturday.

Tar Heels Advance

By winning over Davidson 12-0, Carolina jumped from second place to a clear claim on first with only a scoreless tie with Wake Forest to mar its record within the state.

Wake Forest downed Carson-Newman, 20-6, and ran its total number of points for the year to 39 and pass Davidson which has scored but 35. Duke continues to hold the lead with 133 points, while State with 90 and Carolina with 77 take second and third respectively.

Cox Still Leads Scorers

Mope Cumiskey's touchdown against Duke served to throw him into a four-way tie for second place in individual scoring with Mason and Laney of Duke and Rex of State. Bob Cox of Duke continues to lead the procession with 28 points.

AROUND the FIELD

By CLAIRBORN M. CARR

THOUGH THE TAR HEELS won their game in Davidson Saturday the team showed a rather indifferent attack against the Wildcats. At times Carolina looked better than ever this year and then again the drive and speed of both linemen and backs seemed to lag. The drive to the last touchdown was something beautiful to watch with Charlie Shaffer finally driving over for a score in a brilliant twenty yard jaunt. Coach Collins was pleased with the score but said after the game that certain individuals on the team so far had failed to develop that "killing instinct" and that they would certainly have to develop that psychological trait if Carolina was to hit Duke hard enough to win.

DOC NEWTON, HEAD COACH of the Wildcats, told the writer after the game that he thought Carolina had an even chance against the Blue Devils next Saturday. "At times," Coach Newton said, "those Carolina backs were running like steam engines today, and if they do that against Duke, I think they will come out on top." Newton was disappointed with the outcome and said that his team was just not up to the ball they showed against State.

SAT RIGHT BEHIND JOHNNY Branch at the game and the diminutive star was intent on the play throughout. It seems Johnny was out getting some plays for his Charlotte Bantams to add to their repertoire. Branch's eyes opened wide as he saw Shaffer cut over the weak side for twenty yards and a score. This weak side play was one Coach Collins devised especially for the Wildcats as they had a defense which shifted the guards and tackles way over on a strong side shift. "Boy, that's going to be some ball game next Saturday, you can count me in and I hope to see Carolina win," said Johnny as he scrambled out of the crowd.

PROBABLY THE FUNNIEST incident of the game was one which involved our own "Zeke" Cozart. Zeke is admittedly punch drunk from too many courses in rural economics and therefore has taken on some rather weird antics. It happened that Cozart had a little trouble getting around Tubby Hand, 256-pound Davidson guard. It may be that "Zeke" used his hands, anyway Hand claimed Cozart was holding and opened up a ferocious line of oaths. Now Zeke won't stand for that and with the same instinct that caused him to open up against Tom White, the man of might, the other day, he threw up his guard to cut loose on the pudgy one. The battle was ended by Coach Newton who sensed a massacre and took Hand out of the game.

CABELL PHILPOT TURNED in one of the best games at guard seen this year Saturday. Cabell is always in there tending to his business and giving all he has. The stumpy little guard with the chorus girl legs

DURHAM STILL IN LEAD FOR STATE GRIDIRON HONORS

Charlotte and Salisbury Highs Running Even for Title of Western Division.

Raleigh high school was eliminated Friday as a potential contender for the eastern North Carolina class "A" football title when Goldsboro's fast eleven took it into camp, 6-0. A long run by Evans brought the game's lone marker.

Durham, which plays Raleigh next Friday in the last game of the season, has virtually clinched the championship with three victories and no defeats, and is not expected to be troubled much with Raleigh's attack. Goldsboro has no chance for the title, but will fight for second place next Friday against Rocky Mount.

In the western section, a spirited fight for the crown is ensuing. Charlotte won its third straight victory Friday to tie with Salisbury for the lead with three wins and no losses. Salisbury, however, plays Winston-Salem next week-end, while Charlotte completed its schedule with its 38-0 win over the same team. In the event of the probable tie, Charlotte and Salisbury will play the following week for the western title. In the other game in that section this week, Gastonia beat High Point, 6-0.

Charlotte is unscored-on in the present campaign and has amassed 82 points. Salisbury, with another game left to play, has scored 57 points to the opposition's 13. Durham has rolled

CRIPPLED FROSH GET READY FOR DUKE BLUE IMPS

Duke Yearlings Have Wins Over Oak Ridge, Wake Forest Davidson, and State.

After their one-sided victory Friday over Virginia's yearlings, Coaches Howard and Sapp gave their freshman eleven only a light workout yesterday in the first preparation for the Duke-Carolina frosh game on Thanksgiving in Durham.

The Blue Imps are undefeated and untied so far this year, having wins over Oak Ridge and the first-year teams of Davidson, Wake Forest, and State. And as the Tar Babies have a tie, with State's yearling club, in their only start against Big Five teams, this game will decide the Big Five champion among freshman elevens.

McCachren Injured

Jim McCachren, star fullback, received a serious injury to his shoulder in Friday's contest and will probably be out for the rest of the season. Charles Sutton, second string fullback who was unable to play against Virginia because of a sprained ankle, will be back out for practice this week and will likely be in the starting lineup Thanksgiving. Harry Montgomery, back, was removed from Friday's battle as a result of water on the elbow, but will be in shape to start against the Blue Imps. Herman Snyder, another back, out with a broken hand, is also rounding into shape.

Betas, Zeta Psis, and Aycok Win Other Games in Exciting Play Yesterday.

Beta Theta Psi's intramural tag football team advanced into a virtually assured place in the fraternity league playoffs yesterday when it downed the highly touted Chi Psi outfit, 13-0.

After playing each other to a standstill in the first half, which ended with the score 2-2 in first downs, both aggregations opened up in desperate attempts to capture this all-important contest.

Receiving the kickoff which started the second half, Bob Barnett and Bill Coan, of the Betas, worked a reverse which brought the ball to their own forty-yard line. Passes carried the ball to the Chi Psi forty-yard line for two first downs, after which Charlie Rose took an aerial from Henry Anderson and crossed the goal line for his team's first score. The attempted conversion was broken up.

Beta scored again late in the game when Barnett tallied on a forty-yard dash after receiving a pass from Anderson on the old "sleeper" play. Anderson's dropkick was good for the extra point.

Chi Psi trailed, 5-3, in first downs at the end of the game in spite of the stellar play of Don LaBorne, Bob Atwood, and Wyant Wilday.

For the winners, Wade Olive's work in the line stood out, while Henry Anderson turned in some

VOLS' TIE LEAVES AUBURN AHEAD IN CONFERENCE RACE

L. S. U. Twice Defeated Out of Conference While Auburn Has Five Victories.

Tennessee's scoreless tie with Vanderbilt practically eliminated the Vols as contenders for the Southern Conference crown this fall and left Auburn as the outstanding threat to finish the season without a defeat. L. S. U. has an unblemished conference record, but has one tie and two defeats in non-conference games. Tech's 6-0 win over Alabama and State's triumph over Duke by the same score were the big surprises of the day.

Auburn increased its lead in team scoring with 21 points against Florida while Tennessee, Alabama, and L. S. U. went scoreless.

Other leading scorers are Duke 133, Vanderbilt and Mississippi 128, V. P. I. 127, Kentucky 117, and Maryland and Georgia 115.

Duke And Tennessee Favored For Dixie Cross-Country Race

Yackety-Bucs Use Unethical Means To Brace Squad

Whirlwind Weeks Inveigled Into Joining Enemy; Tar-Mags Thrive on Workout.

The Yackety-Bucs, ill-favored challengers of the strong Tar-Mag grid combine, spent the week-end propositioning all-Americans to augment their squad in the coming game, scouts report. It was revealed last night that perhaps their salary scale is too small, for at a late hour their only addition to the squad was "Whirlwind Weeks," better known as the "Swansboro Swashbucker."

It was hinted that Weeks was captain of the memorable Stanford team of '88, which defeated Custer at the Rapidan. Interviewed, Weeks pulled his blanket about him and said nothing but, "Weeks, him all time catchem pass," and no more.

The Tar-Mag outfit, satisfied with a good workout in the stands at the Davidson game and the Raleigh pledge dances, had little to say about the coming encounter. Both aggregations still stick resolutely to the Thursday playing date, though it is possible that the Yackety-Bucs may ask for more time.

Only startling news from the Tar-Mag camp was the rumor that Coach "Silent Pop" Albright has suspended several of his squad for breaking training rules, about which the grizzled mentor is very touchy. "Spinach, and plenty of it," is the training recommendation of the coach, who insists that his squad be temperate in diet.

Defeat of Carolina Saturday Marked Fall From Decade Of Victories.

JENSEN LED LAST YEAR

Sullivan, Jensen, Hubbard, Goldman, Cordle, and Curlee Will Represent Tar Heels.

The cream of Dixie's cross-country luminaries clash here next Saturday in the ninth annual Southern Conference cross-country run.

Duke University's potent Blue Devils are on the long end of the betting odds at present. Bob Tuttle's Bull City powerhouse holds straight triumphs over Davidson, St. Johns, and Carolina. Last Saturday saw the end of almost a decade of supremacy for the Tar Heels in the hill and dale department when Duke beat the locals, 17-41.

Tennessee's hard-running Volunteers are co-favorites with Duke for the team championship. Last year the Knoxville lads ran third in the conference meet behind V. P. I. and Carolina.

Carolina Won Last Year

Last year Carolina's victory came by a wide margin, the Tar Heels tallying 25 points and other contestants finishing in this order with their points: V. P. I., 77; Tennessee, 100; Florida, 116; Duke, 120; Georgia Tech, 121; Maryland, 128; and Georgia, 176. Clarence Jensen, last year's captain of the U. N. C. outfit, clinched the individual championship in 1931 with a time of 27:10.2. Ed McRae, Mark Jones, and Bob Hubbard, this year's captain, also placed in the initial five.

Louis Sullivan, one of the year's outstanding stars thus far, was fourteenth last year with 28:29; Walter Groover, another of the 1932 luminaries, was thirty-fifth with 29:34; and Joe Pratt was forty-third, being clocked at 30:18.

Of this group Clarence Jensen, Captain Bob Hubbard, Louis Sullivan, and Walter Groover will most likely appear again in the run for Carolina.

Several other Carolina men—Henry Sullivan, winner of the Cake Race, Gerry Goldman, T. L. Cordle, and T. H. Curlee—will most likely run for Carolina.

How To Avoid BONERS

AND still they let him live! Even after he said a refugee was a man who took charge of prize fights!

There's just one thing to do—and high time somebody did it. Introduce Bill Boner to a good pipe and good tobacco. A pipe helps a man get down to straight thinking. College men know, too, that there's one smoking tobacco without a rival. That's Edgeworth.

Here's an idea. Fill your pipe with Edgeworth Smoking Tobacco and light up. Now—take a good long puff. Ever try anything like that before? Of course not, for Edgeworth is a distinctive and different blend of fine old burleys.

Debt Revision May Be Up to Roosevelt

The latest developments on war debts and armaments are: France and England asked extension of the present moratorium, and suggested conferences with the United States looking to further revision. President Hoover invited President-elect Roosevelt to confer with him on the problem. Governor Roosevelt at Albany prepared to reply yesterday. A committee, headed by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., and including Alfred E. Smith and Nicholas Murray Butler, advocated moratorium and readjustment of debts.

HENDERSON WILL SPEAK AT SIGMA XI MEETING

The first meeting for this year of the Sigma Xi Society will take place tonight at 7:00 o'clock in the banquet hall of Graham Memorial. There will be a supper and immediately following this, Dr. Archibald Henderson will speak on "Modern Theories of the Conception of an Expanding Universe and the Age of the Earth."

The Society has an honorary membership and is entirely restricted to those who have made a definite contribution to science. The officers of the North Carolina chapter are Dr. A. S. Wheeler, president; Dr. E. T. Browne, vice-president; and Dr. E. L. Mackie, secretary and treasurer.

ALUMNUS DONATES COPY OF FRESCOES TO LIBRARY

A rare reproduction in colors and monochrome of frescoes in the caves at Adjunta, India, was presented to the University library this week by W. P. Jacobs, an alumnus of the University.

This copy given by Jacobs is a valuable one since there were only three in Ceylon at the time this one was purchased, and it is in unusually good condition. This is the second contribution to the library by Jacobs. A few years ago, he gave a collection of palm leaf books from India, which are now in the Hanes collection of rare books.

GERMAN CLUB DANCE TICKETS AVAILABLE

Tickets to the first of the series of German club dances which will take place next Friday and Saturday are now available and may be obtained from Milton Barber at the Zeta Psi fraternity house. It is requested that all those who are to attend these dances secure their tickets before the dances to avoid confusion and delay.

A number of freshmen have taken advantage of the arrangement whereby a limited number of first-year men may secure membership to the German club, but there are still a few more vacancies. All freshmen interested are urged to see Milton Barber, secretary of the club, at the Zeta Psi house.

Debate Over State College

The question over the status of State College in the consolidation whereby it was joined with the University and North Carolina College for Women brought forth a long discussion and a committee was appointed to draft resolutions recording the board's attitude toward State in the future. This resolution, adopted by the full board, declared that "there is no intention to demote any of the institutions to the rank of a junior college or to discontinue the schools of engineering at Chapel Hill or Raleigh."

It is reported that the debate over the status of State grew warm and that there was an unsuccessful effort made in the meeting to move the engineering school at Chapel Hill to Raleigh. The group decided to meet in Raleigh again before the convening of the state legislature in January to consider the election of the third vice-president to head the University and to name the comptroller.

Graham Honored

The selection of President Graham is another link in the long chain of honors he has received as an educator and scholar. Born October 14, 1887, of a family of educators, he left a notable record as a student of the University. After his graduation in 1909, he taught in the Raleigh schools for two years, returning to the University in 1912 as secretary of the University Y. M. C. A. Two years later he was appointed instructor in history, leaving in 1915 to do graduate work at Columbia University.

He enlisted in the Marine corps at America's entrance into the World War and became a first lieutenant.

From 1919 to 1921 he was assistant professor of history, serving also as dean of students. He was next appointed associate professor of history in the latter part of 1921 and took leave of absence the same year to study at the University of Chicago. There he won a fellowship that entitled him to two years of study, one in the United States and one in Europe.

In 1927, he returned to the University as professor of history and three years later succeeded Dr. Harry W. Chase as president of the University. His appointment to the present position was recommended by the executive committee of the trustees in its meeting September 28, and the full board gave a unanimous vote of confidence in his ability yesterday.

Another Guess

Can you recall the title of the cinema production in which the famous film actress in the above picture was starred? It was one of the milestones in motion picture progress, and was produced by Paramount in 1912. If you can remember this name, bring your answer to the editorial office of THE DAILY TAR HEEL after 10:30 this morning. The first three persons bringing in the correct solution will receive guest tickets to the Carolina theatre.

This is the first picture in a series of three photographs that will appear consecutively in this latest contest suggested by the newest milestone in cinema industry, Ernst Lubitsch's "Trouble in Paradise," which will play at the Carolina theatre Thursday.

IRWIN WALKER and GEORGE Brandt turned in two brilliant performances at end against the 'Cats. Brandt hit his stride in the game and turned back every attempt around his end. Johnson has been around Chapel Hill a long while and has seen fifteen Carolina teams play but has yet to see the Tar Heels go down in defeat. Every game he has seen the Tar Heels have won and this year the first one he witnessed was the State tussle. Boy, John Johnson ought to have a seat in the guest box, but then we would hear rumbles from Charlotte and David Clark, better just slip him in.

excellent defensive work against Chi Psi passes and Frank Hargrave blocked well.

Zeta Psi Scores

Phil Sasser scored a touchdown early in the Zeta Psi-Sigma Chi game to give his team its winning margin. Sigma Chi staged a powerful offensive in the second half which carried it to a touchdown on the last play, when Wilmer Hines caught a pass over the goal. His attempted conversion was blocked, however, and the game ended with Zeta Psi ahead, 7-6.

The winners led in first downs, 6-5, in spite of the Sigma Chi rally which gave it a 5-2 advantage in this department in the second half.

Dormitory Games

Aycock crushed Grimes' hopes of a dormitory league championship when Overstreet fell on a blocked Grimes punt behind the goal line, to give his team a 6-0 win over the league-leaders.

Grimes outplayed the winners throughout, having an 8-2 advantage in first downs. Watson excelled for the losers.

Lewis became the only undefeated team in the dormitory circuit when it downed Carr, 7-0, on a touchdown by Snooks Aitken. Dave McCachren and Sid Unger played well for the winners, who trailed in first downs, 6-5.

Forfeits

Pi Kappa Phi and Phi Sigma Kappa won from Theta Chi and Delta Tau Delta respectively by forfeits.

GRAHAM LEAVES FOR MEETING OF ECONOMIC GROUP

Local Professors Sponsor Southeastern Council Which Convenes in Charlotte Today.

President Frank P. Graham left yesterday afternoon to attend the Charlotte meeting of the Southeastern council, of which he is vice-president for North Carolina. The council will convene this morning at Hotel Charlotte at 9:30 o'clock.

Among the sponsors for the meeting are Drs. E. C. Branson and S. H. Hobbs, Jr., of the department of rural social economics; Dr. Francis F. Bradshaw, dean of students; Dean D. D. Carroll, of the school of commerce; and Dr. W. C. Jackson, of the department of public administration.

Purpose of Council

The council was formed for several purposes related to the progress of the southeastern states, Tennessee, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Kentucky, Alabama, Mississippi, and Florida. It hopes to strengthen the economic positions of these states, to popularize the great variety of manufactured and agricultural products of the southeastern states among their own people as well as among those outside the area, to utilize the highly valuable but undeveloped markets at their doors, to serve as a clearing house for successful methods or policies in commerce, agriculture, forestry, transportation, industry, public utility and social service, and to find and give publicity to facts that will make these purposes possible of accomplishment.

A statement prepared by officials of the council points out

N. C. CLUB HEARS WAGER SPEAK ON COUNTY REFORMS

Improvements Suggested for Economy in County Government and Administration.

The North Carolina club, at its second regular meeting of the year, last night heard an address by Dr. Paul W. Wager, on the subject of improvement in county government and administration in North Carolina. Dr. Wager outlined for the club a comprehensive scheme of reforms depending to a large extent on the consolidation of many of the weaker counties.

He showed a map of North Carolina on which he had eliminated the weaker counties of the state by combining them with neighboring stronger ones, thereby reducing the number of counties to fifty-three. While admitting that such a program of consolidation would be very difficult to carry out because of the reluctance of the inhabitants of counties to see theirs combined with another county, he pointed out a great many improvements in government and economies in administration which would result.

Dr. Wager gave a list of twelve different reforms that he recommends for adoption by the counties of this state. Among these were: (1) discontinuance of the office of county treasurer who merely duplicates the work of the county accountant; (2)

Forum To Meet

All Clubs and Organizations Urged To Send Representatives to Meetings.

The Union Forum will conduct its regular meeting tonight in room 214 Graham Memorial, at 9:00 o'clock. All the clubs and organizations which were not represented at last week's meeting are urged to send their representatives to this meeting.

The purpose of this meeting of the forum is to continue the discussion on the proposal which is being sponsored by the student council, affecting the honor system. At the last meeting, the proposal was read by E. C. Daniel, Jr., and a brief explanation was given by Haywood Weeks. Due to the fact that the meeting was limited to one hour, it was voted by the forum that the discussion be carried over to this week.

Cards will be sent to the members by W. T. Minor, Jr., secretary of the Union Forum.

SALON ENSEMBLE PLANS TO OFFER CHILD'S CONCERT

School Children of Chapel Hill and Carrboro Will Hear Orchestra This Afternoon.

The Carolina Ensemble, directed by Thor Johnson, will present a concert this afternoon under the auspices of the music department of the Chapel Hill community club to the school children of Chapel Hill and Carrboro. For the past month Miss Juanita Honeycutt and Mrs. J. I. Mann, teachers of music in the Chapel Hill and Carrboro schools respectively, have been preparing their pupils for the concert.

The complete program is as follows: Rondino (Beethoven), arranged by Fritz Kreisler; Ballet Music No. 2, Schubert; Japanese Sunset, Deppen; American Patrol, Meacham; Minuet in E Flat, Mozart; Pretty Polly, arranged by Lamar Stringfield; The Wedding of Mrs. Duck, arranged by Stringfield; Old Smoky, arranged by Stringfield; Lord Thomas and Fair Eleanor, arranged by Stringfield; and Grandfathers Wooden Leg, arranged by Herbert Hazelman.

Red Cross Membership Drive Bringing Success

Gratifying returns are pouring daily into the coffers of the local chapter of the Red Cross in their drive for new members in Chapel Hill and the University.

Talks are being made daily to audiences at the Carolina theatre by prominent local students and citizens. Last Saturday night the audience was addressed by Manager E. Carrington Smith; Monday by R. B. House, executive secretary of the University; last night by Haywood Weeks, president of the student body; this evening by Professor Millard Sheridan Breckenridge of the law department; tomorrow night, Professor E. J. Woodhouse, former mayor of Northampton; and Friday night the drive will be summed up by Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt, head of the local organization.

Last Sunday was Red Cross Sunday. Practically all local churches joined in observing the day.

Sentiment In Regard To Change In Honor System Greatly Varied

General Impression Is That Honor System Is Not Being Adhered To, But That Proposed Change Would Not Effect Any Appreciable Increase in Efficiency.

By Don Shoemaker

Influenced by no partisan opinion on the part of the reporter, it is herein endeavored to record the opinions of students selected at random from all classes and schools in an effort to analyze student opinion on the recently proposed revised honor system as introduced by the student council. This is the first of a series of commentary articles on the new system and the opinions of any students not included in this introductory article are heartily solicited. THE DAILY TAR HEEL is interested in printing both sides of the issue in an effort to bring opinion pro and con to the front so that the system, when voted upon by the student body, may have had ample discussion in both the classroom and college press.

Sophomore, Commerce: "I believe that the old system is shot to pieces from a standpoint of fairness to students who are desirous of doing honest work on examinations and quizzes. The main virtue in the new system is that it would give the individual access to the student council through his classroom honor committee, and would not require him to go before the student council and accuse the individual publicly."

Junior, Liberal Arts: "If the student body is of the opinion that cheating would be abolished under the proposed system, it cannot and will not work. I believe, however, that the fundamental values of the original system would be brought home to the classroom as a group, by a committee, the presence of which would instill in the class a certain measure of respect for the old system."

Senior, Commerce: "The new system can not be adopted in such a large school as this, for it would fail as utterly as did the old system. The responsibility for carrying out honor must depend wholly upon the personal integrity of the individual, for it is he who is most affected by cheating and stealing."

Sophomore, Liberal Arts: "I am of the opinion, and I am sure that a large portion of the student body backs me up in this, that the new system would encourage espionage, or to put it crassly, stool-pigeon practice. I agree that there is more cheating in the freshman and sophomore classes, though there is a noticeable decrease of it in the latter division. Freshmen should be given closer student government education the first week on the Hill to change their initial views on honor. But if the system must be adopted, I think it would be more applicable to the

COMER TALKS AT WEEKLY MEETING OF SOPH CABINET

Proposed Changes in University Honor System Discussed by Second Year Men.

Harry F. Comer, general secretary of the University "Y," spoke on the proposed new addition to the honor system, at the regular weekly meeting of the sophomore cabinet last Monday night. At an open forum discussion held later, a majority of the members of the group expressed their approval of such a step, but considered proposals for modifications in the present plan.

The program was concluded with a report by Julian D. Winslow on the Mission Institute held last week in Raleigh. This institute was promoted by the North Carolina student volunteer union.

LEE'S PORTRAIT GIVEN TO OFFSET LINCOLN'S

A portrait of General Robert E. Lee was yesterday presented to Graham Memorial by the Leonidas Polk chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

A few days ago, an active member of the chapter was in the manager's office and saw, to her disgust, a large picture of Abraham Lincoln occupying a prominent place on the wall. Yesterday, she returned, and, with an amused expression, left the picture of Lee on the desk and walked out.

ORATORIO SOCIETY TO GIVE PROGRAM ON DECEMBER 14

Christmas Concert Featuring Sacred Cantata and Foreign Music Will Be Presented.

The Oratorio Society, under the direction of Professor Harold S. Dyer, will present a Christmas program in the Hill Music auditorium Wednesday, December 14. The concert will feature a sacred cantata, When the Christ-Child Came, by Professor Cokey, the dean of music at Pomona College, and traditional Christmas carols selected from the music of six European countries, which will be sung in the native language.

The soloists for the occasion will be Mrs. R. H. Wettach, Mrs. L. C. MacKenney, Mrs. G. A. Harter, and Professor Harter. In addition to these, a tenor from out of town will be engaged. Mrs. A. S. Wheeler will be the accompanist for the evening.

The society, which is composed of students, townspeople, and faculty members, has rehearsals each Monday evening.

Industrial Democracy League To Give Plans

Representing the League of Industrial Democracy, Mary W. Hillyer, manager of the society's lecture series, will deliver an outline of the organization's policies and plans in Gerrard hall tomorrow night.

It is the object of this society to provide education for a new social order based on production for use and not for profit. With this end in mind, it has sponsored a lecture series which Miss Hillyer will describe tomorrow evening. If the plan succeeds, the series of lectures are to be given to audiences composed of students and faculty members from the University, Duke, and the Women's College.

Among the subjects treated in the lecture circuit program are: the literature of revolt, America in an interdependent world, socialization of credit, and public utilities and public ownership. Chief among the speakers on these topics is Norman Thomas, recent candidate for president on the Socialist ticket.

Co-ed Tea

The Woman's association of the University will entertain at another of their weekly teas this afternoon from 4:30 to 6:00 o'clock in Spencer hall.

DEPARTMENT OF GEOLOGY HEADED BY W. F. PROUTY

Dr. Collier Cobb Resigns to Allow Himself More Time For Writings.

Dr. William Frederick Prouty has been appointed acting head of the department of geology, following the authorization by the board of trustees of the part-time leave for one year of Dr. Collier Cobb. The board of trustees approved this arrangement Monday, subject to study by a committee of the trustees of the whole question of length of service and part-time leave.

Excerpts from a letter from Dr. Cobb to President Graham voicing his request are as follows: "I have served the University of North Carolina as head of the department of geology for forty years, and have reached the age of seventy still mentally and physically in good condition. I now desire to give up a portion of my burden in order that I may put in form for publication much of the work on which I have been engaged during my entire connection with the University—work relating directly to what we have done in science and along other lines of endeavor. . . . It has been a great pleasure to me during the past forty years to have the direction of a department which has played an important part in building up the scientific strength of the University—particularly in the direction of helping men to earn a living out of the earth and its resources."

"I shall be glad to serve the department and the University through the rest of my days. I hope, by giving up some of my duties now, to do writing that I

STATE LITERARY AND HISTORICAL SOCIETY TO MEET

Dr. G. W. Paschal of Wake Forest Will Deliver Presidential Address in December.

According to an announcement by Dr. A. R. Newsome, secretary of the State Literary and Historical association of North Carolina, the association will meet for its thirty-second session in Raleigh Thursday and Friday, December 1-2.

Dr. G. W. Paschal, Wake Forest professor, president of the association, and author of the History of the North Carolina Baptists, will deliver the presidential address on Thursday evening. Struthers Burt, noted poet and novelist of Southern Pines, author of several novels, will address the association on an interesting literary subject.

Other speakers of prominence who will address the assembly are Dr. H. A. Garfield who will deliver the principal address in the Hugh Morson auditorium on Friday evening, December 2, Miss Mary Thornton of Chapel Hill, Professor W. A. Mabry of Duke University, Colonel J. H. Pratt of Chapel Hill, and Professor D. J. Whitener of the Appalachian State Teachers College at Boone, at the Friday morning session.

Make Room For the Ladies

Considering the rather feeble support that our student cheering section has given the team this year, our treatment of the fair rooters from our Women's College seems ingratitude of the grossest sort. These girls are now members of the University and as such are presumably entitled to the rights we enjoy. They are ladies and hence in the chivalrous south should be accorded a gallant and courteous reception. They have evinced spirit and interest enough to sacrifice the time and expense of a hundred mile trip to see their team play and this should make warmer still their welcome.

Reason, gratitude, and courtesy, however, do not seem to move the powers that regulate athletics here. The Athletic Association whose actions are unfortunately imputed to the entire school, has rewarded the spirit of these girls by relegating them to inferior seats on the side of the visiting school. Nothing could be done more destined to discourage their support than refusing them a place on the side they came to root for. Few girls come to a game to watch the tactics of the two elevens. They come rather to enjoy the crowd and the music and more than that for the thrill of cheering their own team and joining in the spirit of the competition. This is to them far more exciting than witnessing the success of off-tackle plays and rival punters. This thrill of cheering their own team is one that they can hardly enjoy in isolation amidst the cohorts of Duke or Georgia Tech.

It is a lamentable state of things when the gentlemen of Carolina have been so completely overcome by the desire for money that we permit our ladies to be slighted for the sake of some slight increase in gate receipts. When this happens the spirit that gave birth to intercollegiate athletics is dead. At first the commercial phase did not exist, later it became a helpful side feature, now it has dominated the entire procedure at the expense of every other consideration.

ated the entire procedure at the expense of every other consideration.

To be sure the affair in itself is of no great import. But behind it lies the unpleasant realization that a sordid desire for gain has so overpowered the spirit of college athletics that courtesy and fair dealing have gone by the boards. Seating our girls in the Carolina student section would increase the enjoyment for all. It would be the just reward for their support and would be a polite gesture demonstrating that a spark of the amateur spirit is yet alive sufficient to guarantee courtesy and fair dealing to the weaker sex.—J.F.A.

Cooperation as An Investment

The Bank of Chapel Hill has been charging one dollar per month to maintain checking accounts which fall short of one hundred dollars, and there is a general feeling among University students that this rate is too high. Of course, small checking accounts and large numbers of drawings on them require an unusual book-keeping expense, and this should be taken into consideration. But it does not completely justify the charge of a dollar, which in addition to the federal tax on checks is more of an expense than most students can afford.

In pursuing its policy, the Bank does not seem to realize that it is dependent on the University, on faculty members and students alike, for the business which keeps it going. Much less does it realize that students attending the University are dependent upon it for the service and convenience that it can render by handling money. They give the Bank no small amount of business, and it should be grateful for their patronage, instead of trying to discourage it. Realizing the business which our student body affords them, most Chapel Hill merchants contribute in some way, directly or indirectly, to the benefit of the University. The Bank alone does not think it good business.

Most students' means do not allow them a checking account of over one hundred dollars, and those in this category do not feel it worth the expense to pay a dollar per month for such a convenience throughout the college year. Few students can afford the cost of maintaining a checking account for nine months in these times when every penny counts. One undergraduate paid the Bank of Chapel Hill two dollars and forty cents between the beginning of this quarter and November 1—forty cents federal tax on checks and two dollars for one and a half months. He paid a two months' rate because Bank officials refused to recognize his account, which, although diminished to less than a dollar, nevertheless was still legally in existence. Students will hardly respond to any such lack of cooperative spirit.

Whether or not it's good business at present, the Bank should change its attitude toward patronage. A dollar per month is an unwarranted rate which exaggerates bookkeeping expense. Its continuance may prove costly in the long run, but cooperation is always a good investment.—A.T.D.

DURHAM MASSEUR HAS OFFICE IN CHAPEL HILL

Dr. E. Berger, masseur from Durham, has an office in the Tankersley building here; and he will have office hours from 2:00 to 5:00 o'clock each Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday afternoon.

Dr. Berger is a graduate of Stockholm University, Sweden, and he has been practicing in Durham for the past decade.

In The Main

By MAYNE ALBRIGHT

If any place has a reason to complain about the election of the new president of the Greater University of North Carolina, it should be Chapel Hill. We have seen all too little of Mr. Frank Graham here during the last two years as it is, without sharing him with two other institutions. And if any place has a thought of partiality in his administration it again should be Chapel Hill, for it is a common saying here that if there is a question between you and Mr. Graham, just lay the facts before him and you will be better pleased with his settlement than if you had made the terms yourself.

About this season, three years ago, there was a great rush to get the Duke-Carolina Trophy ready, but with two tie games it hasn't been presented yet. At the time it was a great idea, letting the winning team carry off not the actual goalposts amid intercollegiate warfare, but a nice pair of mounted silver posts to the accompaniment of school songs. But in spite of the keen rivalry, these three years have brought about an understanding which makes this presentation an unnecessary precaution if still a pleasant feature of the games. Besides the idea of tearing iron goals from cement bases reminds me somehow of presidential predictions of grass growing in paved streets.

The Pika's have the Zazu Pitts complex. Their phone rang insistently the other day and a voice cried: "Hey, isn't your house burning down?" The cool reply was: "Just a minute please, I'll see." Then Don Shoemaker, in on the joke, rang them up and yelled: "This is Shoemaker—I hear our house is on fire!" The same quiet voice said: "Just a minute, I'll find out for you." Don't they like their house? Or do they just understand Shoemaker.

Next to fires, without which no social season is complete, the most enjoyable impromptu social gatherings are held whenever the burglar alarm in the bank begins one of its periodical false alarms.

On the subject of fires, the Sigma Nu's deserve commendation for having their last inside their house. The Dekes, on the other hand, deserve condemnation for disappointing their guests twice with false alarms.

Depression has caused many of the fraternities to abandon this rather lavish form of entertaining, and if you don't think we've got a Depression you should have seen the fellow Saturday who was having one shoe half-soled and explaining that the other had at least another week's wear left in it.

Some time ago I remarked that our picture of Lincoln might cause a U. D. C. investigation. Since then the U. D. C.'s have investigated and acted. The Leonidas Polk Chapter has generously presented the building with a handsome picture of Lee.

Junior Dance Committee

The chairman of the junior dance committee, appointed last Monday by Clyde E. Boyles, junior class president, is Kirk Swann. Other newly appointed members are: Brodie Nalle, Bernard Solomon, Jack Hammer, W. T. Minor, Jr., and Cornelius Bretsch.

This group of students will cooperate with the senior dance committee for the junior-senior dances to be given this year.

Experimental Productions of Original Plays written, cast, and directed by students in English 55 and 225, given November 12, reviewed by Ben Napier.

As a preface, and in a spirit of forgiveness and charity, this department is forced to admit that, after all, the magna opera presented on the Playmaker boards Saturday afternoon and evening were studio productions. In the same vein, it must admit that in at least one of these plays, the effectiveness was greatly diminished, if not totally ruined by those difficulties that attend studio productions.

Nevertheless, in spite of the charming and numerous apologies, of the respective authors, one realizes that in all except three cases, the attempts of our new crop of embryonic playwrights were worth of no more than studio production. It is consoling to think that it will go no farther than the studio if we must have a get-together in the name of Art.

A note of kindness having crept into this review, your reviewer will continue it by treating of the earlier plays of Saturday afternoon in as few words as possible. In Old Ninety-Seven by Wilbur Dorsett and Nothing Ever Happens by Elmer Oettinger and Gateway by Eugenia Rawls, the guiding genius of the studio was either trying to test the stamina of the audience or else was preparing the way for the ultima finale of the evening by the time honored method of contrast. To put it boldly, these first three barely got by the generalization of at least being worthy of the studio.

After Foster Fitz-Simons' Four On a Heath, however, the mercurial temperament of at least one of the audience took a rise. This estimable playwright (who, by the way, is not an actor) had an unusual idea, integrated it well, and succeeded in being interesting. The next opus Sour Fodder by Burdette Kindig marked a new low however.

After several hours respite, the comparatively large audience was treated to the most delightful spectacle of the day. It was regaled with Creek Swamp Nigger by Harry W. Coble, a play resembling those of the roaring days of the Playmakers, during which for a play to be a play, there must be at least one murder. For further amusement, it had a glance at what results when an actress (a certain Miss Ellen Stewart) attempts a melange of the Lenore ("Passion") Ulric and Lady Vere de Vere schools of acting. If Miss Stewart advances any further in her art, she should be sent to Hollywood to replace the lost Miss Bow.

The next play Hell Bent For Honolulu by W. A. L. Bonnyon suffered greatly from miscasting and woefully poor direction. However, it was distinguished in being good straight comedy without any of the usual Playmaker artiness. It was a straightforward college comedy and deserves regular production.

The production And They Lived Happily by Marion Tatum is more difficult to criticize. One hesitates to criticize anything of Miss Tatum's on account of her really high ability as an actress. It is regrettable that Miss Barr's burlesques of the role of Anne sufficed to balance Miss Tatum's excellent characterization and bring the production down to mediocrity.

The comedy Stumbling In Dreams by George Brown was worse than mediocre. A fairly good play with a nice lyric was ruined by the author's, as Donald, coy attempts to be over personable.

John Milhous' drama Davy Crockett was the "piece de resistance" of the evening. If this play were re-written as a three act play and done so with any regard for the A.B.C.'s of dramatic construction, it would be deserving of note of any stage. Even despite these defects the emotional intensity captured in the scene between Crockett and Mary and the intermittently lovely lines combined to make one look forward to its regular production. Here again Miss Tatum distinguished herself. She combined restraint with intensity and played with fine technique and sincerity. Foster Fitz-Simmons, as Crockett, was poor.

Though disagreeing with the more radical plan of doing away with counties entirely, he was of the opinion that instead of continuing with so many weak counties, we should, by consolidation, build strong counties, financially able to support themselves. He would have each county built around some trade center which should be its capital, utilizing the local high school district as a necessary social unit to build upon.

Second Team Scrimmages Frosh In Effort To Meet Duke Attack

Folger and Ogburn Work Out As Guards With Second Team Yesterday.

TEAM GOOD ON DEFENSE

Stop Duke Running Attack as Portrayed by Strong Frosh Eleven.

Coach Collins put his second team through a lengthy scrimmage with a freshman team yesterday in an effort to build up a defense against the formidable Duke attack.

Defensively, the second team was able to stop the running plays of the Blue Devils and the frosh were smothered time and again by Folger and Ogburn, both guards who were promoted to the second team for the session. It seems extremely doubtful as to whether or not George Barclay will be able to do battle Saturday and Coach Collins is seeking more guard material.

Shaffer Still Delivering

In the scrimmage Charlie Shaffer continued to show nice drive and power, ripping off several nice gains from the line. Hanes Lassiter and Tom White also looked good. White, who saw his first action Saturday against Davidson since the Vanderbilt game, still has a slight limp but his ankle is getting stronger every day.

The varsity second team showed Frankel and Cozart, ends; Collins and Tatum, tackles; Folger and Ogburn, guards; and Melver, center. In the backfield Martin was at quarterback; White and Shaffer, halfbacks; and Lassiter, fullback. Norman McCaskill ran at half for White the last few minutes of the scrimmage.

A. T. O. DEFEATS FAST T. E. P. CLUB

Everett Wins From Old East in Only Dormitory League Game Played.

Alpha Tau Omega conquered a hard-fighting Tau Epsilon Phi team yesterday, 21-0, to gain a place in the playoffs for the fraternity league championship of the intramural tag football race.

The game was played almost entirely in T. E. P. territory, where only the stellar defense work of Leonard Eisenberg, Arnold Jacobs, Joe Eisner, and the rest of the losing outfit kept the score as low as it was.

A. T. O. scored twice in the first half, Alan Smith and Bill Kingdon crossing the goal line, the former on a ten-yard run around left end and the latter on a brilliant catch of a pass from Smith. Both conversions were negotiated successfully.

In the second half the teams battled on almost even terms until the last minute of play, when Alan Smith ran forty yards after intercepting a T. E. P. aerial. This play was followed by a pass over the goal to Jones Pollard for the final touchdown of the game.

Sigma Nu Wins

Sigma Nu won its sixth game in seven starts at the expense of Phi Gamma Delta, 7-6. The Phi Gams started off strongly and, after receiving the opening kickoff, marched down the field on a series of short passes.

The march was climaxed when John Hoggard took a toss from Henry Hodges and dashed fifteen yards for a score. The conversion was broken up.

Sigma Nu started a counter attack at this point which ended in a touchdown on a pass from Joe Griffith to Ed Hamer over the goal line. Jack Glace scored the extra point on another pass from Griffith.

Everett Scores

Everett won the only dormitory game.

Calls Basketeers

Coach Sandy Dameron who issued a call for freshman basketball aspirants to meet in the Tin Can tonight at 7:15.

DAMERON ISSUES CALL FOR FROSH BASKETBALL MEN

Friedman, McCachren, and Arthur Come From Prep Schools Highly Recommended.

All men interested in going out for freshman basketball, and who are not at present out for any other sport, are asked to report to Coach Sandy Dameron in the Tin Can at 7:15 o'clock tonight.

The squad will be divided into groups and each group will be asked to report for practice on the nights of the days that they do not have gym classes. Candidates should report in tennis or gym shoes and sweat clothes or old clothing, since no equipment will be issued for the time being.

Coach Dameron took over the freshman coaching last year, when Bo Shepard, who had been coaching the yearlings, was promoted to the varsity coaching position. Dameron led the first year men through a very successful season, winning the Big Five freshman championship.

Little is known about the material available for this year's yearling team except for reputations that a few of the freshmen made in the high schools and prep schools they attended. Jim McCachren, fullback on the Tar Baby eleven, was named on the all-state hardwood team for prep schools last year; Buss Arthur, end on the yearling football club, received mention for his basketball ability at Asheville school last year; Bernie Friedman, No. 1 man on the first year tennis team, has a good reputation for his play at Philadelphia; and Morris Rhodes made a name for himself by his all-around play at Blue Ridge prep school.

Carolina-Duke Bands Preparing For Game

The University band under the direction of Professor T. S. McCorkle, and the band of Duke University under the direction of G. E. Leftwich, are preparing for the Duke-Carolina game this Saturday. Before the game, the two bands will enter the field in single formation, led by their famous drum-majors.

At the half, the Duke band will enter from the field-house and march to the Carolina stands, where they will form the letters "U. N. C." The Carolina band will enter from the opposite side of the field, and form "Hello Duke" in front of the Duke assemblage.

Professor McCorkle will lead both bands in the Duke song, while Leftwich will lead the bands in the Carolina song.

MAT TOURNAMENT WILL TAKE PLACE IN TIN CAN TODAY

Intramural Wrestling Tourney Will Be Conducted Under Direction of Quinlan.

The annual intramural wrestling tournament will get under way this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in the Tin Can. All the matches will be under the supervision of H. P. Quinlan, wrestling coach, and Herman Schnell, assistant intramural director.

Since there is no complete list of the entries, all boys interested in wrestling should come by Emerson field after 10:00 o'clock this morning to consult Coach Quinlan who will weigh in all eligible candidates.

There will be seven minute bouts with one-half minute time advantage to win a decision or fall. All men are eligible to wrestle who have not won their wrestling monograms or freshman numerals or are on the varsity mat squad. The men who weigh in will be allowed three pounds leeway in either division. Further announcements will be given during the matches.

Here is a list of the winners from last year: 115 pound division, Mathewson, wrestling for Mangum, who later won his varsity letter; 125 pound class, Lawson, wearing the colors of Best House; 135 pound Devereaux, of Old East; 145 Hiller, Lewis wrestler, who won his varsity letter; Higdon, another one of the Best House wrestlers, won the 155 pound title; 165 division title went to Hargraves, Beta Theta Pi, who won his freshman numeral; 175 pound honors were carried off by Audman, Question Marks, who won his varsity letter; the unlimited title was won by Dalzell, another Mangum representative.

LEWIS REISS IS STELLAR LEADER OF VIRGINIA TEAM

New York City Lad Plays Fine Game at Pivot Position For Cavaliers.

Lewis Reiss, Virginia's center and captain has been performing as a stellar player in the last few games in which he will wear the Orange and Blue uniform. He is to close his football play for the Cavaliers against North Carolina in Scott stadium on Thanksgiving.

Against V. P. I. he had one of his best days. Ten times he broke into the Tech backfield to tackle runners for losses and on many other occasions he brought them down just as they were reaching the scrimmage line or an instant after.

He caused a V. P. I. 75-yard drive in the first quarter to go for nothing when he split through and caught Mills for a loss within five yards of the Cavalier goal. Later on he checked Holtsclaw, Morgan, Robinson, and other Gobbler backs before they could get started.

Reiss has played every minute of every game except the first one this season. He has been in action in competition for more than seven hours so far this fall, making his presence felt both on offense and on defense.

Football is not the only sport in which Reiss is a performer of first rank. He is light-heavyweight boxing champion of the Southern Conference on Virginia's title-holding ring team.

Netmen Prepare for Match

Coach Kenfield's netmen are getting in shape for their annual match with the University of Virginia, Thanksgiving.

As the players are ranked now, Hines is one, Morgan two, Dillard three, Harris four, Levitan five, Minor six, Lovell seven, Willis eight, and McGinn nine.

Cavaliers' Captain

Lewis Reiss, this year's captain at Virginia who has made quite a name for himself at center for the Cavaliers this year. Carolina will remember Reiss' fierce play in Kenan last year.

Freshman Harriers To Run Duke Again

Carolina and Duke freshman cross-country outfits clash Saturday morning in a return meet between the two schools.

Last Saturday the local team chalked up a 23-34 victory over the Blue Imps, but this weekend, Bob Tuttle's yearlings will be out for revenge.

All indications point to the same Carolina men to start this time as started in the last meet. They are: Carraway, McPhail, Conte, Umstead, Keeney, Napier, Garrison, and Sullivan.

RED RAIDERS OF COLGATE SWEEP OVER OPPOSITION

Andy Kerr's Gridders Pile Up 243 Points and Keep Own Goal Line Uncrossed.

The great team that represents Colgate University is not only facing another undefeated season but it is also approaching a record that has not been equaled by any major team within the last ten years.

Colgate Goal Unblemished

In eight games this year the Colgate team has succeeded in piling up 243 points, and has also managed to keep its own goal line uncrossed. The Red Raiders have amassed this huge total against such teams as St. Lawrence, Case, Niagara, Lafayette, N. Y. U., Penn State, Mississippi College, and Syracuse.

However, Colgate faces its hardest test Thanksgiving when it faces Brown, the only other undefeated team in the east. The Colgate mentors are sure their line can keep up its good work and finish up with a shutout win. Their confidence is based on the fact that Brown has scored but 81 points in winning its seven games. Yet, Brown has faced stiffer opposition than Colgate, and has beaten Rhode Island, Springfield, Yale, Tufts, Harvard, Holy Cross, and Columbia on successive Saturdays.

In beating Syracuse last week Colgate seemed to be holding its main power under wraps in order to conceal as much information as possible from the eyes of Brown scouts.

SCHOLARSHIPS TO FOREIGN SCHOOLS ARE ANNOUNCED

Overseas Educational Institute Has Made Available Several Full Scholarships.

Announcement of a number of full scholarship awards for study abroad during 1933-34, has been made by the Overseas Educational Institute. These facilities are for secondary school, undergraduate and graduate college students for study in connection with its schools in France, Germany, and England. The methods to be employed in determining the candidates are: review of previous academic record, responsible references, examination in either a modern language or American history and civics, and personal interview.

The scholarship awards provide for the students' living and travel expenses as well as for university study. They are financed by private contributions and by funds diverted for this purpose from the operating budget of the institute. The services of a number of noted professors at the Sorbonne in Paris, at Bonn University in Germany, and at Oxford and Cambridge Universities in England have been secured.

He was made professor of stratigraphical geology at the University in 1919. Monday he was made head of the department of geology by the action of the trustees. He has published a number of articles in the Alabama Geological Survey bulletins, combined with reports and maps of geological interest of Maryland, Alabama, and West Virginia. Besides the articles he has published many others in scientific journals and papers.

COUCH WRITES ARTICLE FOR BOTANY JOURNAL

Dr. Couch of the botany department, recently wrote an article on plant reproduction for the American Journal of Botany.

In this article, an active study was made of water fungi, which grows on aquatic animals. These fungi, though lowly plants, have a very complex method of reproduction.

The influence of environmental factors was reported. Reproduction takes place at a very low temperature, but at a high temperature no reproduction was found. Although light had no effect on the plants, the acid concentration was a vital factor—they reproduce in acidity, but not in alkalinity. Dr. Couch also discussed the actual process of fertilization.

Publications To Revel In Bloody Battle Tuesday

Teams Expected To Be in Prime Shape After Second Postponement of Fracas.

The now widely ballyhooed Yackety-Buc vs. Tar-Mag football game, postponed three times, has again been moved back several days. In view of the fact that this grid contest extraordinary, if played this week, would draw hundreds from the intramural finals, it has been agreed upon by the four editors to postpone the contest until Monday or Tuesday of next week.

Meanwhile negotiations are being carried forward by Coach Albright to obtain either Riddick field or Duke stadium to seat the cheering thousands for the memorable grid classic. If these fail, an effort to secure the Yankee stadium will be made, and if this fails, somebody is sure to be pretty sore.

The game will be played on one of the intramural athletic fields at 4:00 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

University Will Open Bowling Alleys Soon

The bowling alleys that have been in the process of building since the beginning of the current school year will be ready for play Monday. This form of recreation has been wanted for the University for some time, but lacked the space until President Graham, suggested the store room under the porch of Graham Memorial.

Bids from several manufacturers of bowling equipment were received and rejected because of the expensiveness of the buildings department became interested and made a thorough study of bowling alleys, resulting in the two well-constructed alleys in the basement of Graham Memorial.

For the present only rubber banded duck pins will be used on the alleys. These pins have proved very popular wherever they have been used.

The alleys will be formally opened soon after the Thanksgiving holidays with a short program. It is planned to have Dr. and Mrs. Frank Graham open one alley and have the president of the student body, Haywood Weeks, and president of the woman's association, Mary Frances Parker, to open the other.

The alleys will be in charge of three self-help students who have, as yet, not been selected. The cost of the use of the alleys will be ten cents per game.

SPANN ADDRESSES DEBATING GROUP

Dr. Meno Spann, of the German department, spoke on "Nationalism," at the regular meeting of the debate group last Monday night.

Dr. Spann outlined two conceptions of nationalism. These were the chauvinistic conception, characterized by France, Italy, and the United States, and the German conception, which seeks growth and advancement.

Professor W. A. Olsen presided during the period of discussion which followed Dr. Spann's talk. This was a part of the preparation for the tryouts for the debate with the University of Dublin, on the subject, "Resolved: That nationalism is a bar to peace and progress." Tryouts will be conducted after the Thanksgiving holidays.

COMMITTEE ON DOGWOOD FESTIVAL MAKES PLANS

The committee for arranging the first annual Dogwood Festival here April 22, 1933, met yesterday in Gerrard hall.

The program committee presented a tentative program which provided for festivities to last one day. A scale of admissions to the festival was also proposed. No direct action was taken on the report. Means of raising the necessary funds to underwrite the festival were also discussed.

The main features of the program will be various industrial exhibitions, demonstrations of Cherokee Indian games and dances, and an exhibition of English folk dancing.

FROSH COUNCIL HEARS NEW HONOR PROPOSAL

Almost four score freshmen turned out last Monday night for the freshman friendship council meeting in Gerrard hall.

The meeting was featured by a discussion on the honor system, as recently proposed. E. C. Daniel, Jr., led the group. No definite conclusions were reached, but the majority of the group got it pretty well settled in their minds as to the purpose of the proposed project. Jesse Parker, president of the organization, led the devotionals.

DYER GOES TO SALISBURY TO ORGANIZE FESTIVAL

Professor Harold S. Dyer, of the music department, will leave for Salisbury this afternoon to organize an inter-choir choral festival which is being sponsored by the Mozart music club. Preparations for the Christmas festival will be begun.

Professor Dyer will attempt to interest the organization in joining the annual state festival which will take place in Raleigh early in the spring, under his direction.

LEADERS OF FALL GERMANS CHOSEN

Charlie Boulanger's Orchestra Here for Four Dances During Week-End.

At the sophomore German dance Friday night in the Tin Can, the figure will be led by Jack May, who will have as his partner Miss Louise Galloway of Winston-Salem, while his two assistants will be Frank Hargrave with Miss Sarah Elizabeth Phillips, of Lincolnton; and J. C. Steele with Miss Nancy O'Hanlon, of Winston-Salem. The fall German on Saturday night will be led by Louis Skinner, who is having as his partner Miss Corinne Mosley, of Farmville, Va. The first assistant is Bob Mebane who is having Miss Dorothy Harper of Wilson, as his partner, while Miss Ruth O'Brien of Durham will accompany the second assistant, William O'Brien.

The set of dances for the coming week-end includes two on Friday and two on Saturday, with Charlie Boulanger and his orchestra playing at the complete set. This orchestra is only able to make this engagement for the German club by coming directly from Bridgeport, Conn., where they are at present busy making records.

Members of the German club and all those interested in joining the club should see Milton Barber at the Zeta Psi house to secure tickets for the dances. The series opens Friday with an afternoon dance from 4:30 until 6:15 followed by a dance that evening from 9:30 until 1:00. Saturday's dances include one preceding the Duke game from 11:30 until 1:15 and the dance Saturday night from 9:00 until 12:00.

upper classes."

Junior, Commerce: "I think that the student who cheats invariably busts the course, but if he is able to reach the sophomore and junior years, his courses become more diverse and individual. Then he has no incentive to cheat. In fact he could not cheat in some specialized commerce and accounting courses."

Senior, Pharmacy: "The major portion of cheating in the pharmacy school is done by freshmen. Here, I believe the student council has its most efficient arm, for cheating is reported (as far as I know) by the professors to the student councilman from the school. There is a lack of honor among the freshmen of the school, but this is replaced by fear of detection that in most cases becomes of great importance before the sophomore year. I favor more of a faculty proctor system."

Freshman, Liberal Arts: "The frequent accusation made that the violation of the honor system is a 'hang-over' from prep school is untrue. I believe that prep schools where the honor system is in force send men to college ready to uphold the spirit of the system wherever they find it. The appeal must be made to group spirit coordinated by individual honor. The new honor code, as I see it, merely typifies the old system more expressly in the class room and does not seek to force monitorship upon the committee."

SCHOLARSHIPS TO FOREIGN SCHOOLS ARE ANNOUNCED

Overseas Educational Institute Has Made Available Several Full Scholarships.

Announcement of a number of full scholarship awards for study abroad during 1933-34, has been made by the Overseas Educational Institute. These facilities are for secondary school, undergraduate and graduate college students for study in connection with its schools in France, Germany, and England.

The methods to be employed in determining the candidates are: review of previous academic record, responsible references, examination in either a modern language or American history and civics, and personal interview.

The scholarship awards provide for the students' living and travel expenses as well as for university study. They are financed by private contributions and by funds diverted for this purpose from the operating budget of the institute. The services of a number of noted professors at the Sorbonne in Paris, at Bonn University in Germany, and at Oxford and Cambridge Universities in England have been secured.

Dr. Collier Cobb will continue his lectures on human geography and will teach one graduate class in geology.

Dr. Prouty, having received his B.S. and M.S. degrees from the University of Syracuse, and his doctor's degree at Johns Hopkins, was associate professor of geology at the University of Alabama from 1908 to 1911, and professor of geology and head of the department of geology from 1911 to 1919. He was made professor of stratigraphical geology at the University in 1919. Monday he was made head of the department of geology by the action of the trustees. He has published a number of articles in the Alabama Geological Survey bulletins, combined with reports and maps of geological interest of Maryland, Alabama, and West Virginia. Besides the articles he has published many others in scientific journals and papers.

COUCH WRITES ARTICLE FOR BOTANY JOURNAL

Dr. Couch of the botany department, recently wrote an article on plant reproduction for the American Journal of Botany.

In this article, an active study was made of water fungi, which grows on aquatic animals. These fungi, though lowly plants, have a very complex method of reproduction.

The influence of environmental factors was reported. Reproduction takes place at a very low temperature, but at a high temperature no reproduction was found. Although light had no effect on the plants, the acid concentration was a vital factor—they reproduce in acidity, but not in alkalinity. Dr. Couch also discussed the actual process of fertilization.

FIRST YEAR MEN WILL HEAR THEIR CANDIDATES TALK

Rogers, McIlhenny and Hobgood, Candidates for Presidency, to Address Assembly Today.

Frank Rogers of Rome, Georgia, David McIlhenny of Mineola, New York, and William Hobgood of Durham, candidates for president of the freshman class, will present their platforms before the first year students in assembly this morning.

Since the time of nomination, November 10, a number of the candidates have withdrawn their names from the ballot. The present nominees for subordinate offices are: Van Webb of Raleigh, and Bill Moore of Wheeling, W. Va., for vice-president; Sam Clark of Tarboro, for secretary; John Bost of Raleigh, and Mortimer Ellisberg of Raleigh, for treasurer. Scott Holman of Rocky Mount, and Jesse Parker of Wilmington, were nominated for the offices of secretary and treasurer, respectively, but withdrew from the race.

Election Tomorrow

Tomorrow, November 18, the polls will be open from 9:00 in the morning to 5:00 o'clock in the afternoon in Graham Memorial. The balloting which will be supervised by student councilmen will be done secretly. Immediately after the closing of the polls the ballots will be counted by the members of the student council and the results announced.

E. C. Daniels, Jr., vice-president of the student body, will preside over the meeting today.

PRESS INSTITUTE TO CONVENE FOR ANNUAL MEETING

Opening Session Scheduled to Take Place in Chapel Hill
January 11.

January 11 through 13 has been selected as the date for the Annual Newspaper Institute meeting in Chapel Hill. The details of the program are to be arranged by an executive committee composed of the Press Association, members of the University, and Henry Dwire of Duke University. This committee has planned to meet at Chapel Hill on November 19th to make further arrangements.

According to the present plans, the opening session will be held in Chapel Hill on the evening of January 11th. The following morning, there will be a business meeting, and, in the afternoon, the Institute will proceed to Duke for a dinner meeting, and possibly for a carillon and organ concert. The final session will be held at the University on Friday the 13th.

Several widely known persons are to appear at the session in Chapel Hill. Karl Bichell, of the United Press, has agreed to make an address, and J. C. B. Ehringhaus, governor-elect of North Carolina, has arranged to attend at least one of the meetings. Other outstanding newspaper men and speakers have been invited to be present.

Divisional meetings for daily and weekly periodicals have been arranged to meet on the mornings of either the 12th or 13th. R. E. Price will be in charge of this group.

Henderson Addresses Sigma Xi On Universe

The first meeting of the North Carolina chapter of Sigma Xi, national-honorary scientific society, took place Tuesday night in Graham Memorial. A lecture by Dr. Archibald Henderson on "Modern Theories of the Conception of an Expanding Universe and the Age of the Earth," featured the program.

Following the supper and Dr. Henderson's address, the members of the organization discussed Dr. Henderson's paper. Several members of Sigma Xi at Duke University entered into the active discussion.

The officers of the local chapter are Dr. A. S. Wheeler, president; Dr. E. T. Browne, vice-president; and Dr. E. L. Mackie, secretary and treasurer.

PHARMACY GROUP INSPECTS SCHOOL

Four-Year Curriculum of Pharmacy School Draws Praise
Of Visiting Pharmacists.

The visitation committee of the North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association met in Chapel Hill Tuesday and spent the day inspecting the school of pharmacy.

The committee expressed itself as being highly pleased with the new four-year curriculum which went into effect this year, the physical equipment, and the teaching methods of the school.

A. C. Cecil of High Point, president of the North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association, was present at the meeting of the committee, which is composed of W. L. Moose, chairman, Mount Pleasant; J. C. Brantley, Raleigh; C. N. Herndon, Greensboro; D. A. Dowdy, High Point; and C. T. Council, Durham.

Board Conducts Meeting

The North Carolina Board of Pharmacy conducted its semi-annual meeting in Howell hall yesterday and Tuesday. The board, consisting of Dr. E. V. Zoeller, president, F. W. Hancock, secretary-treasurer, W. L. Moose, I. W. Rose, and J. G. Ballew, together with the visitation committee, were guests of the school of pharmacy staff at luncheon in Graham Memorial. Also present at this luncheon were President Frank P. Graham, Dean J. M. Bell, Dr. H. R. Totten, and Mr. B. W. Walker, inspector for the board of pharmacy.

The North Carolina Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Lamar Stringfield, will present a concert at Durham, Thursday evening, December 1, and one at Chapel Hill, Friday evening, December 2.

The Chapel Hill concert will be given in Memorial hall at 8:30 o'clock. Percy Grainger, composer, soloist, and conductor, will be the guest artist.

The Durham program, which will be presented in the Junior high school auditorium at 8:30 o'clock, will offer: Marriage of Figaro, by Mozart; Symphony Number 7, by Beethoven; three compositions by Percy Grainger; and the initial performance of The Legend of John Henry, by Lamar Stringfield.

DR. METZENTHIN GIVES OPINION ON DEBTS FROM WAR

University Professor, in Talk Before Philanthropic Assembly, Says
France Should Pay Debts.

E. C. Metzenthin, professor of German at the University, spoke briefly at the meeting of the Phi assembly last Tuesday evening on the bill, Resolved: That the United States cancel the war debts owed her by the European nations. The bill was defeated by practically a unanimous vote.

The next bill discussed by the assembly was, Resolved: That the Phi assembly go on record as favoring the proposal of the student council affecting the honor system. The representatives were well divided on this issue and presented arguments for both sides. The resolution was defeated by a close margin.

The remainder of the meeting was devoted to a discussion concerning the number of pages the Phi was to have in the Yackety Yack and when the picture was to be taken; no definite agreement was reached.

Early in December.

Rehearsals have begun for the four original, one-act plays which will make up the second presentation of the Carolina Playmakers, December 8, 9, 10. Tentative results of the try-outs held Tuesday have been announced.

Those given parts in Davy Crockett, a drama of the southwest frontier by John Philip Milhous, are: Crockett, Foster Fitz-Simons and Frank McIntosh; Mary, Marion Tatum; Tim, Alfred Barnett; Kate, Eugenia Rawls; Uncle Dick, William Clifford and Bob Proctor; Martha, Betty Barnett and Jo Orendorf; Ben, Bill Bonyan; Bill, John Briggs and Frank McIntosh; Agent, William Pitt and Joe Nelson; Sal, Phoebe Barr and Jo Orendorf; Man, Edward Martin.

The cast selected for Creek Swamp Nigger, a negro tragedy by Harry W. Coble are: Bo-cat, David McIlhenny; Ruby, Ellen Stewart; Jerry, Jack Riley, Johnson.

Association Gives Reception

President and Mrs. Frank P. Graham will be guests of honor at a reception given by the Woman's association, Tuesday night, November 22, from 9:00 to 11:00 o'clock in the reception rooms of Spencer hall. Invitations are being sent to the members of the faculty and those otherwise prominently connected with the University.

COMMITTEE WILL NAME GRAHAM'S SUCCESSOR HERE

Gardner Selects Group to Name Vice-President for This Unit of Greater University.

A committee of five members from the board of trustees of the Greater University of North Carolina to recommend a vice-president for the Chapel Hill unit of the school has been appointed by Governor O. Max Gardner.

When President Frank P. Graham was elected president of the consolidated school, the board of trustees adopted a resolution instructing the governor to name such a committee. The members are: Josephus Daniels of Raleigh, John Sprunt Hill of Durham, A. W. McLean of Lumberton, A. M. Dixon of Gastonia, and John J. Parker of Charlotte.

Although Dr. E. C. Brooks has been elected vice-president of the State College unit and Dr. J. I. Foust vice-president of the Woman's College at Greensboro by the board, no successor to President Graham has as yet been named.

BRAZIL IS GUEST OF KIWANIS AT SPECIAL MEETING

Radio Announcer Entertains Six Kiwanis Clubs and Local Rotarians With Stories.

The Kiwanis clubs of Chapel Hill, Durham, Greensboro, Raleigh, Henderson, and Oxford, as well as the local Rotary organization, met at supper in the basement of the Methodist church for an entertainment by Jules Brazil, noted radio entertainer and master of ceremonies, Tuesday night at 7:00 o'clock.

The supper was prepared by the ladies of the Methodist church, and was served by co-eds of the University. Professor E. J. Woodhouse, president of the local Kiwanis club, introduced Russell M. Grumman, chairman for the evening.

Brazil Introduced

Grumman introduced Jules Brazil, official entertainer of the Kiwanis clubs assembled at international conventions, nationally known radio announcer, and master of ceremonies. Brazil was chiefly remarkable for his unbelievably good memory for names, and he called on nearly every one in the gathering by name at one time or another during his informal entertainment, referring to their professions or peculiar likes or dislikes in a most intimate manner.

He kept the audience in gales of laughter with anecdotes of his experiences around the National Broadcasting Company's studios in New York, and sketched a few humorous contacts with various people he met. He accompanied himself at the piano, imitated several types of musicians, and sang snatches from popular songs of many years ago.

Vespers Given Sunday

Professor Nelson O. Kennedy will present the second in his series of vesper concerts Sunday afternoon, November 20, at 4:00 o'clock in the Hill Music hall auditorium. He will offer the following program: War March of the Priests, by Handel; Romanza, by Wolstenholme; Dreams, by McAmis; and Symphony, number four, by Wildor.

Chrisco Studying At Survey Laboratories

H. F. Chrisco, a graduate of the University in chemical engineering and a resident of Bading, is now in Washington at the United States Geological Survey laboratories. He will spend several days there studying the methods used in the chemical analysis of water.

Chrisco was recently awarded the graduate fellowship established by the North Carolina department of conservation and development and extended through the conservation department's division of water resources and engineering here. The fellowship was awarded to Chrisco for the seeking of more specific knowledge of the supply of water in North Carolina for industrial uses.

FEDERATION WILL MEET SATURDAY

Officers of Student Federation
To Discuss Affiliation With Government Institute.

A meeting of the officers and the executive committee of the North Carolina Federation of Students, called by Haywood Weeks, president of the federation, will be conducted in Chapel Hill, Saturday morning at 10:00 o'clock.

The purpose of this meeting is to discuss the advisability of affiliating the North Carolina Federation of Students with the Institute of Government.

Institute Formed Here

The Institute of Government was founded by Albert Coates, professor of law at the University, at Chapel Hill. It was organized with the purpose of educating in better government all public office holders throughout the state. Student government is a branch of the Institute; therefore it should become affiliated with it, according to President Weeks.

Each university and college in the state of North Carolina has a representative in the federation. The following are the officers for this year: Haywood Weeks, Carolina, president; William Smith, Catawba, vice-president; Eloise Cobb, N. C. C. W., secretary; Mary Siewers, Salem, treasurer; the executive committee: Mark Wilson, N. C. State, chairman; Jerome Clark, Davidson; Wendell Horne, Duke; and Sarah Stephens, Asheville Normal.

SENATE DEFEATS BILL ADVOCATING NEW HONOR PLAN

After Heated Discussion by Members
Di Senate Votes Against New Plan for Honor System.

By a vote of 14-4, the Di senate voted against the bill, Resolved: That the Di senate go on record as favoring the proposal affecting the honor system which is being sponsored by the student council. The discussion on this resolution was very heated, and much interest was shown by the senators.

The honor system bill was the only one discussed. The Senate decided to take only one page in the Yackety Yack this year, if the Phi assembly would follow suite. Senators Daley, Hart, Sell, and Grier were reinstated in the organization.

Critic, McKee, at the close of the session, declared the meeting to be one of the best and most interesting held this year.

HUGE EFFORT TO AID SPIRIT TO BE LAUNCHED TODAY

Local Cheerleaders Plan to Compete With Pep Meetings
Taking Place at Duke.

Carolina will by far surpass the mammoth cheering effort launched this week by Duke for the Duke-Carolina game Saturday if the plans carefully worked out by Ernest Hunt and Henry Betts, chief cheerleaders, fulfill their expectations.

The local cheerleaders are putting forth a supreme effort to bolster up cheering to compete with Duke, which has outlined a full program in preparation for the game.

An account in a Durham paper gives the following plans for Duke cheering: "Duke students plan their biggest pep-meeting in years on Friday night. The Chronicle, student newspaper, will come out with a special edition, a huge bonfire is planned, and the band will be on hand with the cheerleaders to limber up a few larynges. And on Saturday with the students gone enmasse to Chapel Hill the university campus will look like the original Deserted Village."

Cheerio Practice Tonight
Cheerio practice has been set for tonight in Memorial hall so that the student body can get their lungs and yells in shape for the contest Saturday.

"We want to see every Carolina man at Memorial hall at 7:30 tonight to complete our organization for the most important game of the year," Hunt said yesterday.

TROPHY WILL BE GIVEN TO WINNER OF DUKE CONTEST

Silver Goal Posts Presented as Emblem of Friendship Between Two Schools.

The Duke-Carolina friendship trophy will again be awarded this year, in an effort to cement friendly relations between the two schools. This trophy will be presented by the captain of the losing team to the captain of the winner in the middle of the field at the end of the game. This ceremony will be accompanied by the playing of the winner's alma mater by the bands.

First Awarded in 1930

This trophy, which is an annual award, was first given in 1930. In that year, representatives from the student organizations of the two schools met and passed out resolutions to establish better relations in all activities. Out of this developed the idea of some tangible expression of friendly rivalry and this trophy was purchased.

Since the Duke-Carolina games for the past two years have resulted in scoreless ties, neither team has won the trophy. However, it is at present in the possession of Duke, since it was the visiting team the first year it was presented. It will remain in the possession of the winning team only until the next game is played and there will be no permanent possession of the award by either school.

The trophy consists of two silver goalposts mounted on a black base. The dates and names of the winning teams are engraved on it each year.

Not to Be Compared To Dr. Graham

With the problem of finding a successor to Dr. Frank Graham on their hands, the members of the Board of Trustees are now faced with a task far more difficult than that of selecting the president of the Greater University; for so long as Dr. Graham was available for that office, that selection was relatively simple. But now that Graham's hands will be filled with his new duties, the Board finds itself dealing with an even more perplexing task, the solution of which should not be too hastily attempted.

Several members of the present faculty as well as University administration officials have at one time or another been mentioned to take over the Vice-Presidency of the Greater University here at Chapel Hill. But as yet no one man in the eyes of the public holds what might be called a leading place in the entire array of eligibles. Regardless of this fact, however, the qualifications of this one man, whoever he may be, are fairly well fixed in the minds of those persons who have had any connection with the work of the University thus far.

True enough every individual has his own standard by which he gauges the capability of the man to fill the office. But even so, all indications point to the fact that Graham's successor must of necessity be a man who is liberal-minded enough to carry on the policies of the University which have been in force during these last few years. The more conservative element of the board will possibly try to bring in a man who does not have the liberal tendencies as our present leader. But the followers of Graham's policies must see to it that this conservative group does not carry out their point.

Admitted that this liberal characteristic is the most important qualification for the man to fill Graham's shoes here at Chapel Hill, there are still other factors which in many ways hold just as outstanding a place in the final selection. Several of those men who have thus far been mentioned fulfill this first necessity exceptionally well. But in the matter of their contacts throughout the state, they drop far behind the other possible selections.

In times such as these, when the University is facing financial barriers on every hand, it is imperative that the head of this Chapel Hill branch of the Greater University be able to present his cause to the people of North Carolina in a convincing manner. It is true that Dr. Graham as President of the Greater University will still be able to use his unparalleled influence in the state. But the effectiveness of the Vice-President here at Chapel Hill in pleading his case will be a large factor in determining the results he will get.

In looking over the probable successors to Graham, there can be found a relatively small group which can successfully pass these two qualifications. And of this numbered few, there is left not more than one or two who have the contacts with the members of the student body which are so essential in securing the whole-hearted co-operation of the student element. This ability to meet the students on their own grounds and still hold their undying respect and admiration plays a larger part in the successfulness of a college president than one would first imagine. In a rather large measure it is the attitude of the students that determines the feelings of their families, who in turn have their weight on the sentiment of the entire state. A man who does not have this ability of forming student friendships, regardless of his other qualifications will find himself at a decided handicap if at any time he must fall back on the students and their families for both financial and moral support.

To find a man who has all these characteristics is a problem for the Board of Trustees. But for the benefit of the man who is selected, it would be well for the people of the state as well as the students and faculty not to measure his ability by a comparison to Dr. Graham—for no man yet in educational circles in this state will profit even in a small measure by such a comparison.

To Put It Crassly

"I am generally opposed to the proposition of the student council to establish classroom honor committees," said one student, "but, to put it crassly, it looks like some people are getting away with a lot of cheating. Naturally, they object to any plan that would stop it."

This statement is hardly true. It is an unfair accusation against the integrity of the student body as a whole.

As a matter of fact, though, the honest man should have nothing to fear from the proposed system. It would not take away any of the rights and privileges that he now has under the honor system. As usual, the student council would assume a man's innocence until he had been proved guilty. The classroom committees would not be strategically stationed during examination periods to seek out violators of the honor system.

The whole purpose of the plan is that it shall serve as a deterring and educating influence on weak students who need the visible presence of authority to impress them with the consequences of dishonesty. It is the dishonest man who might suffer—anything from the quavering of conscience to expulsion from school—from the new system. Certainly, it cannot be denied that the dishonest man should be punished or in some manner be shown the error of his ways.—E.C.D.

Music in The Air

Chapel Hill, long known as a center of literary interests, has turned to another one of the arts in an effort to find an anesthetic for those strong minds which have only recently become weary of liberalistic ballyhoo.

Authors may have been able to relieve their own minds and those of their readers, but what power have they to silence these champions of the liberal cause?

Songs, hymns, and classical music seem to have been unanimously selected to drown the weary turmoil which can not be quelled or ignored, but we sincerely believe that they can be smothered by dance orchestras, symphonies, and crooners—the rest can hum.

While Herbert Hazelman's selection, Danse Motonique, which has received wide recognition, may not be credited to the above it will undoubtedly play its part in the results. Alan's new marching song which is soon to appear can be used by everyone and on Sundays, Peery's new University Hymn may be safely sung even under the blue laws of Carolina.—L.M.J.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

Suggestion

The campus seems to us to be in imminent danger of a big split over this laundry question. Every day someone dashes into the office with a wild look in his eyes and furtively deposits a red-hot open forum letter on the editor's desk. It's getting to be more than a game; on every hand we hear little murmurs about this and that side. Everybody has a different opinion about how much more or less it costs to have laundry done up in his home town. It's more at Catawba, it's less at Greensboro. The whole thing has us pretty much wrought up.

Our solution for the problem—and we offer it absolutely gratis as a patriotic gesture—is to suspend all classes until eleven o'clock every Monday morning. Then close the laundry and send everybody down to Morgan creek and make 'em wash out their own stuff. Then there wouldn't be any more talk about ripped shirts and plucked buttons, unless of course, you want to feel at home and tear up a shirt or two each week.

Arson

Seldom do we give way in this column to what we feel is the sophomoric urge of most of our contemporaries—writing about a fellow columnist. The Pound might crumple to the post-war mark, crowns might totter 'neath the feet of marching rabble, but still we'd go on our way jotting down little bits of this and that. But when this Albright fellow nearly gets us indicated for arson, that's a different matter.

Albright mentioned this department in his column the other morning and pretty soon we got a call from the state fire marshal, at least he said he was the state fire marshal, raking us over the coals for nearly turning in a false alarm. But Albright started it all. He called us into his office several days ago to see his new one-armed telephone and suggested that we try it out. A fellow member of the editorial board, nothing loath, picked up the instrument and gave the message that caused the trouble. That's our side of "The New Republic," our favorite journal of opinion, took the presidential election pretty hard after all. Not particularly pleased with any of the candidates before the election, the returns from last Tuesday's contest didn't help the matter much more. Skeptical to the last ditch, the New Republic stated, "... The really difficult thing to explain is why Hoover succeeded in capturing the few states he did win." And on Roosevelt, "... A large portion of the successful candidate's majority does not even consist of Democrats who can be counted upon to feel any loyalty to the party ... etc."

The business might be settled in the same way that Al Smith was taken care of. The New Republic seems to be without a policy and Hoover is without a job. The government might buy up New Republic and give it to Hoover, thereby giving the candidate-reject something worthwhile to do. Might even make an institution of it and give every defeated candidate a magazine to edit.

- SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

More About Laundry

First let me clear up a point which Mr. Wadsworth has not caught on to about the manner of doing up shirts. Everyone understands that a poorly laundered shirt here costs 10 cents and a starched one 15. (Because of the expense I do not have my shirts starched.) My point is that in other places the ordinary price (which in most commercial laundries is 15 or 20 cents) includes starch in practically all instances. As for comparative prices of this sort, however, there is much to be said. Commercial price lists are utterly fallacious as a basis for computing comparative costs.

First: Practically no one except transients uses the regular commercial service when sending clothes to a laundry. There are, as Mr. Wadsworth does not point out, various types of service with various prices, the common name for the service given students here being "Family Wash" in most cases. Family Wash is in every case I know of, or any of my friends know of, cheaper than the price paid here for student laundry. I refer the gentleman to the following: Trio and May's laundries, Atlanta, Ga.; all other Atlanta laundries in the association; Capital City Laundry, Columbia, S. C.; Piedmont and Spartanburg laundries, Spartanburg, S. C. The Atlanta laundries mentioned give Georgia Tech students rates lower than those here. I know from personal experience, having had my laundry done beautifully by these two institutions for $5.00 a month or less when on account of the extra dirt and extra money collected in a city I sent out two or three more shirts a week and correspondingly more other clothes than I send out here.

Second: at the end of the summer school this year I had almost exactly the same amount of laundry I sent out last week (two weeks' accumulation) and had it done by the Spartanburg Laundry. The list includes nine shirts and a proportionate amount of other clothes, towels, and bed linen. The bill here: $2.31. The bill there: $1.35. I also had two linen suits washed and splendidly finished for $7.00 by the H. Lee Smith Co. of Spartanburg at the same time, making the charge for all this summer work less than the work done for me here last week.

Third: the services spoken of here are not the "Wet Wash" service which Mr. Wadsworth would probably like Tar Heel readers to think. In every case the laundry was finished better than it is here, and any torn garments (not worn socks, of course, but torn shirts and shorts) were either mended or replaced. At this sitting I have on a shirt given me by the Trio Laundry of Atlanta for one which was accidentally torn there. Since coming to Chapel Hill this fall I have had three sets of shorts returned so badly ripped that I cannot wear them, and nothing was done about it.

Fourth: Mr. Wadsworth's comment on the distance which U. C. S. P. laundry trucks must travel to deliver a bundle is most interesting. Would the laundry deliver bundles to the other side of Durham? How kindly Plans are under way for a mammoth outdoor pep meeting tomorrow night. Two prominent alumni are being secured for talks and plans have been made for a bonfire and a snake-dance. In all probability the Carolina band will play at the meeting.

The cheerleaders have announced a surprise for the meeting but would not disclose its nature.

Carolina's support at the game Saturday will be supplemented by over 350 girls from the Woman's College of the University who will journey to Chapel Hill by special train.

It haunted clerks for generations

"The first of the month" used to be a time of feverish activity for ledger clerks. But the Bell System accounting staff—breaking away from tradition—simplified the keeping of accounts and rendering of monthly statements to customers.

They applied a modern system of rotation billing to the telephone business which now spreads this work evenly throughout the month. In cooperation with manufacturers, they devised special typewriters and bookkeeping machines. Thus they did away with inefficient rush and achieved greater accuracy, speed and neatness.

This is but one example of a point of view found throughout the Bell System. Even long accepted routine is constantly studied—it's always worth looking for the more efficient way!

Varsity Looks Good Defensively Against Frosh In Duke's Clothing

First Team and Freshmen Battle Long in Fierce Scrimmage Yesterday.

STUART CHANDLER STARS

Veteran Shows New Offensive Drive and Speed in Clicking Off Nice Gains.

For the second straight day the varsity engaged the frosh in a long, hard scrimmage as the first team battled a Tar Baby eleven employing the Duke defense and offense yesterday.

Yesterday, as Tuesday, the varsity offense was weak, the team finding it hard to penetrate the frosh line using the Duke defense. Defensively the Tar Heels were stronger than they were Tuesday and stopped the Duke attack completely.

Chandler Shows Class

Stuart Chandler stood out for his work in the backfield. Good on defense all season, Chandler gave notice yesterday that he is going places Saturday against the Blue Devils as he clicked off several beautiful runs from scrimmage. Chandler showed his old drive and seemed speedier and shiftier than ever yesterday.

Trainer Chuck Quinlan announced that he would have everyone ready to go Saturday. Bill Croom who was injured in the Davidson game will be back in there as his leg injury has healed. George Barclay's knee is rounding into shape and he will be ready for service also. It is doubtful still whether George will be used against the Blue Devils, but Quinlan said he would be ready to go.

Word received from the Duke camp last night stated that the Duke team had recovered from its upset defeat at the hand of State and was working with new determination to defeat the Tar Heels.

CAROLINA HOST TO SOUTHERN CROSS COUNTRY RUNNERS

Team Entries Announced for Ninth Conference Meet Here This Saturday.

Team entries in the ninth annual Southern Conference meet here this Saturday were announced yesterday by local officials in the hill and dale event.

Carolina, Florida, Tennessee, V. M. I., and Duke have entered teams, while Washington and Lee and Ole Miss have two and one entries apiece. It is possible, however, that late applications will be received from Georgia and Georgia Tech.

Favorites

Although Duke and Tennessee rank as top-heavy favorites to take the team title, several members of the U. N. C. club are slated to give much better performances than against Duke last Saturday. The Devils took the Chapel Hill boys in to the tune of a 17-41 tally card.

The race will begin next Saturday morning sharp at 11:15 o'clock. The race is open to Southern Conference institutions only. Each team may enter ten men, eight of whom may start the race, five of whom must finish. The initial five men of each club to cross the finish

I Only Heard

By Morrie Long

According to comparative scores Wallace Wade's potent aggregation is 53 points better than the Tar Heels while Chuck Collins' up and coming retinue of stars appear 19 points stronger than the Blue Devils—That is if you figure Duke beat Maryland 34 to 0, and Vanderbilt licked the same crew 13 to 0. This makes Duke 21 points stronger than the Commodores. And since Vandy swamped Carolina by some 32 points Duke is 53 points ahead of the Tar Heels. On the other hand, Carolina took State by 13 points while the Blue Devils lost by 6 which makes the Tar Heels some 19 points better than Duke. Which all proves comparative scores are a lot of hokey.

Did you know that Bill Cerney, assistant football coach, was the fifth horseman to the famous four horsemen of Notre Dame—that Cerney and Chuck Collins both are owners of gold footballs emblematic of national champions of 1924—that Wilmer Hines won the Tennessee, South Carolina, and Carolinas tennis championships this summer and was runner-up to Frankie Parker in the Kentucky state play—that Nick Laney, Duke's stellar halfback, is a crooner for a campus orchestra and also peddles papers in the morning to defer his expenses—that Lou Little of Columbia is reputed to be the highest paid coach in the business with an estimated salary of $17,000—that there have been 24 football deaths this year as compared to 50 of last season—that Vanderbilt and Tulane severed athletics relations because of the unsportsmanship tactics employed by New Orleans fans—that Carolina has filled her stadium twice, once with Virginia in 1928 and again with Georgia in 1929.

From Texas comes the story, about two football teams who were keen rivals. With the count deadlocked in the fourth session, one team fumbled on its 12-yard line and the ball was recovered by its opponents. Realizing that there was but thirty seconds left to play, a placekick was tried. The ball was kicked and by the looks of things it was going to break the tie, but a Texan with a lot of hard earned cash on the outcome of the game changed the complex of the battle by calmly pulling out his .45 revolver and cold-cocking the ball just as it was about to go over the cross-bars. The referee awarded the game to the place-kicking team.

line will count in the team score. Individual entries are being accepted this year.

The University of North Carolina Athletic Association will award a plaque to the team winning the race. The initial seven members of the winning team will receive gold track shoes. Medals will be awarded to the first fifteen men to cross the finish line. The first five in will get gold medals, the second five, silver medals; and the third five, bronze medals.

DEVILS AND TAR HEELS PREPARING FOR TOUGH GAME HERE SATURDAY

Wademen Look Better on Paper, But Tar Heels Have Upset Dope In Previous Contests When Duke Was Favored; Game Will Decide State Championship.

Probably the greatest football team in Duke history will move on Chapel Hill Saturday, in the Blue Devils' annual attempt to win a football game from Carolina. This year Duke has a good chance to realize its ambition and knows it.

Duke has come through a rather stiff schedule with five wins in eight games and a .500 standing in the Southern Conference. Wake Forest and Davidson have been downed in non-Conference games, the only ones played by the Blue Devils this season.

Devils Lead on Paper

On paper Duke stands to win Saturday's game in spite of a disappointing 6-0 loss to a rejuvenated State College team last Saturday, but a team's past record doesn't mean a great deal when the Tar Heels and Blue Devils mix. There have been times in the past when Duke was doped an easy winner, but each time the Tar Heels have risen and continued their superiority with dazzling wins.

In 1927, Duke came to the end of the season with a string of victories over highly rated northern teams and was a strong favorite to break into the win column, but Carolina, with Steve Furches leading the way, ran wild on Hanes field, Durham, and came home with a startling 18-0 victory. The following year the pre-game situation was much the same and the Tar Heels rallied in the last half to emerge with a 14-7 win. So this year, in spite of Duke's Laney, Crawford, Rossiter, and Mason, it's anybody's game.

Crawford Line Star

Freddy Crawford, at left tackle, has been a tower of strength all season and has been mentioned prominently as a candidate for all-southern honors while Dunlap at center and Andrews at guard have played excellently.

Werner, a former all-state guard who has been handicapped with injuries the past two seasons will pair with Andrews at guard, but an injury to Porreca may cause Duke to call on another right tackle. Rogers, James, and Rossiter give the Blue Devils plenty of strength at the end posts, and Rossiter ranks as one of the state's best punters.

Laney and Mason have been the most brilliant backfield performers, but Bob Cox, a sophomore fullback, stole the show until put out of the game by an injury in mid-season. Artie Ershler, a hefty fullback who can block with the best of them, has been playing regularly of late and will probably get the call against Carolina. Ken Abbott will likely hold down the other backfield berth with John Brownlee, who has been handicapped by injuries, in reserve.

Blue Devils' Record

In eight games the Blue Devils have rolled up 133 points against 40. A 13-0 win over Davidson opened the season and was followed by a 44-0 defeat of V. M. I. Then came Auburn and the Plainsmen took advantage of early Duke mistakes to finish on the long end of an 18-7 score. Maryland was swamped 34-0 and Wake Forest went down 9-0.

The Tennessee game found Duke at its best and the Vols had a hard day of it before Breezy Wynn booted a field goal with three minutes to play and gave Major Neyland's band a 16-13 victory.

Kentucky was taken after a hard struggle, but last week the Devils slumped and were powerless to do anything against State in one of the year's most important games.

Betas Meet Zeta Psi Today In Big Tussle

Representatives of Alpha Tau Omega, Beta Theta Pi, and Zeta Psi met yesterday in the Tin Can to toss for the bye in the fraternity league play-offs. A. T. O. won this advantage, and will meet the winner of this afternoon's contest between the Betas and the Zetas tomorrow.

Today's game, which will start at 4:00 o'clock, is expected to draw a big crowd.

Other intramural games scheduled to start at 4:30 are:

Field 2: Theta Kappa Nu vs. Theta Chi.

Field 3: Manly vs. New Dorms.

Wrestlers Open Intramural Tournament With Fast Bouts

Laney, Versatile Duke Back, Takes Morning Cropper

Blue Devil Grid Flash Garners Stumped Toe Rather Than Early Worm in Spill.

Many old sages and sports savants may wag their heads and say that the early bird always gets the worm, but Duke fans will maintain otherwise.

Nick Laney, conceded by leading sports scribes not only in the state but in the south as one of the finest punters for miles around, has not punted a single time this year until Saturday's State game. It is true that Rossiter has borne the brunt of the Duke kicking, but some fans maintain that Laney can even do better than Rossiter at booting 'em.

Laney is a self-help student, working his way through the Methodist University. Many fair co-eds throughout the state will tell you of Nick's thrilling crooning, for he does the vocals in a college orchestra and is darn good, as crooners go.

Also Carries Milk

Another one of Nick's jobs is carrying milk early in the morning, and therein hangs the thread of our tale. While the Duke campus is getting its best sleep, Laney is carrying milk to the professors' door steps. On one of his morning rounds, Nick, the crooning half-back, stumped his toe, and broke the nail off the big digit on his kicking foot. Although Laney is not hampered from making his touchdown jaunts, his lame foot is still unfit for the punting role.

Does the "early bird always get the worm?"

S. A. E. CONQUERS DUKE TEAM 6-0

Lambda Chi, Phi Delt, and K. A.'s Score Other Wins In Yesterday's Play.

None of the games in yesterday's intramural tag football play were of championship calibre, for all the leaders marked time in preparation for the fraternity league play-offs today and tomorrow and the campus championship game next Tuesday.

Delta Kappa Epsilon staged a fiercely contested game against Sigma Alpha Epsilon, with the latter coming from behind in the second half to gain the decision, 6-0.

D. K. E. rolled up a commanding 7-4 lead in first downs in the first half, by virtue of short but effective passes. S. A. E. was powerless to break up these plays which never threatened to score, but continued to amass first downs.

In the second half, S. A. E. staged a rally, and, after tying

FINALS SET FOR TONIGHT

Big Crowd Expected to Witness Finals in Tin Can At 8:00 O'clock.

The annual fall intramural wrestling tournament opened yesterday with a series of matches that provided both thrills and entertainment for those who saw them.

An unusually large number of men entered the tournament, although there were no men entered in the unlimited division. Most of the contestants are inexperienced in any sort of wrestling matches.

Many of the falls were made in remarkably short times. In the 126-pound division Kornigay looked good, but Beebe and Kellenberger are two experienced men who are yet to be put out of the tourney. Kornigay took a time decision of 5:55 from Hupman of Steele. Kellenberger had a 5:30 time advantage over Snowden of Kappa Alpha. Parker who represented A. T. O. took a time decision over his fraternity brother Northrop.

Most of the really fast falls occurred in the 135-pound division. In another all A. T. O. match, Webb took a fall from the novice Crowell in 25 seconds. Roberts pinned the shoulders of Teer to the mat in 20 seconds. Both men represented the Betas. Rogers of the Chi Psi showed excellent promise in defeating Connors of Lewis.

The bouts in the 145-pound class gave evidence that whoever wins the title in that division will have to plow his way through a series of hard matches. Blackwood, who is trying for a varsity berth held Ryan's shoulders to the mat after 1:30 of hard grappling. In a whirlwind bout, J. Miller of Best House felled H. Miller of the A. T. O.'s in 20 seconds. In a bout that was full of thrills, Pennington pinned Hornaday to the mat in six minutes.

Spencer and Owlick won their bouts in the 165-pound class.

Shipman wrestling for Best House took a fast fall from Biggs of A. T. O. in 25 seconds. Robertson of A. T. O. felled Resler of Lewis dorm in an overtime match.

Percy Idol and Don Conklin, varsity wrestlers, refereed the bouts. Hiller also of the varsity was head time keeper. The semi-finals and finals will be run off this afternoon and tonight. Finals are set for 8:00 o'clock tonight.

Squads To Meet

Coaches Rowe and Quinlan request that the varsity and freshman boxing and wrestling squads meet in Gerrard hall tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

COACHES TO TALK AT SMOKER FOR JUNIORS TONIGHT

Wallace Wade, "Chuck" Collins, R. A. Fetzer, and Others to Be Guests at Affair.

The members of the class of 1934 will assemble in Swain hall tonight at 9:00 o'clock to conduct their first smoker of the year. Clyde E. Boyles, president of the class, will address the juniors and will then turn the meeting over to Coach Bob Fetzer, who will act as master of ceremonies and introduce the principal speakers of the evening, Wallace Wade, director of athletics and head coach of football at Duke University, and Coach "Chuck" Collins of Carolina.

The main purpose in the selection of these particular speakers is to stimulate the friendly relations between the respective schools on the eve of their annual football game, according to the class president.

As another feature of the program, Jack Wardlaw and his Carolina Tar Heels will provide music from 9:00 until 10:00 o'clock. President Frank P. Graham, Dean Francis F. Bradshaw, R. B. House, and other University officials will be honor guests at the smoker. All the coaches are also invited.

Cigarettes and refreshments will be served, and all juniors are urged to attend.

the score in first downs, 8-8, scored the game's only touchdown when Nutt Parsley took a short aerial and dashed fifteen yards to the goal.

Bob Gold, Irvin Boyle, and Ben Willis played best for the losers, while Buck Harris and Ansley Cope excelled for E. A. E.

Phi Alpha lost a chance to tie the score and possibly win from Lambda Chi Alpha when Jack Bessen failed in a desperate attempt to snare a long forward pass. Bessen had previously scored for his team on a brilliant run of about sixty yards.

Lambda Chi Alpha played a cautious game, however, and protected its lead, to triumph, 13-7.

Zeta Beta Tau Loses

Zeta Beta Tau dropped a heart-breaking decision to Phi Delta Theta, 5-4 in first downs. The losers had led throughout the second half, until, with two minutes to play, Chigger Moffitt's outfit staged a march which netted it three first downs in quick succession.

Walter Brown did stellar work for the losers, turning in one seventy-yard run which failed a touchdown by only two yards when he was overtaken from the rear.

Kappa Alpha Scores

With Schriver, Everett, McGill, and Wiggs scoring freely and Morrison playing an all-around good game, Kappa Alpha trounced Delta Psi, 39-0, in the season's windup for both teams.

Last Guess

Here is a scene from the moving picture that sounded the knell of silent pictures. It was the first sound picture, produced six years ago, with John Barrymore as the hero and title-roleist. Mary Astor, Estelle Taylor, and Warner Oland had featured parts. If you remember the picture from which this scene is taken, bring your solution to the editorial office of THE DAILY TAR HEEL after 10:30 o'clock this morning.

This is the last of the "movie milestones" which you are asked to recall and name in a contest suggested by Ernest Lubitsch's new picture, "Trouble in Paradise," which plays at the Carolina theatre today.

"Trouble In Paradise" Is Today's Attraction

"Trouble In Paradise," an Ernst Lubitsch production, comes to the Carolina theatre today with a cast headed by Miriam Hopkins, Kay Francis, Herbert Marshall, Charlie Ruggles, and Edward Everett Horton.

This cinema, from a play by Laszlo Aladar, is the story of the efforts of a couple of suave super-crooks—Miss Hopkins and Marshall—to swindle Miss Francis, a widow with a bank account as large as the war debt, out of her fortune, and of the complications, all of a humorous nature, which ensue when Marshall develops non-professional interest in his proposed victim.

Business Staff to Meet

The business staff of the Yackety Yack will meet this afternoon at 4:10 o'clock in the offices of the publication in Graham Memorial. All staff-members are requested to be present.

ELEVEN JUNIORS ARE INITIATED BY
PHI BETA KAPPAChapter of National Honorary Scholastic Fraternity Elects Officers at Meeting.

Eleven juniors in the University were initiated Wednesday night into the North Carolina chapter of Phi Beta Kappa. The students honored were: Thornton H. Brooks, Greensboro; Clyde H. Cantrell, Charlotte; Robert D. Davis, High Point; Junius W. Durham, Pittsboro; Peter W. Hairston, Advance; Daniel M. Lacey, Rocky Mount; J. Hanes Lassiter, Charlotte; James R. Marvin, Charlotte; William G. Miller, Rockwell; Laurence W. Ross, Davidson; and Kemp Plummer Yarborough, Louisville.

Officers Elected

At the meeting, John Allan McLean was elected secretary for the coming year. R. B. House, C. P. Spruill, and F. M. Green were re-elected as faculty members of the executive committee, and Dr. T. J. Wilson, Jr., was re-elected corresponding secretary-treasurer for the year. Fred H. Koch, Jr., and Thomas Russell Taylor, Jr., are president and vice-president, respectively, by reason of their leading scholastic standings.

Phi Beta Kappa was organized in William and Mary College by five students in 1776. The aim of the group was the furtherance of literature, science, philosophy, and "friendly intercourse among scholars." It did not develop into a national organization until 1881. Today there are 125 chapters in the United States and the society is recognized as the outstanding organization of its kind in the country. The Alpha chapter of North Carolina was an outgrowth of the local Alpha Theta

PLANS PROPOSED FOR PROGRAM OF EIGHT LECTURESSchedule of Speakers Here Includes Many Well-Known Citizens of Country.

At the meeting yesterday in Gerrard hall, plans were discussed for a series of lectures sponsored by the League of Industrial Democracy. According to tentative plans, season tickets will be sold at one dollar each to cover the cost of the lecture series, $400.

Two programs of lectures are offered by the League. As yet, the particular program has not been selected for Chapel Hill. The lecture series consists of eight lectures, beginning in the middle of January, 1933, and continuing once a week for eight weeks.

Some of the speakers on the tentative programs are: Norman Thomas, recent Socialist presidential candidate; Ernest Gruening, editor of the Portland (Maine) Evening News; Dr. John Gray, former president of the American Economics Association; and Winifred Chapell, secretary of the Methodist Federation for Social Service.

The movement to bring the lecture series to the University has been approved by the Y. M. C. A. cabinets, Amphoterathan Epsilon Phi Delta, and the Di and Phi societies.

Leaders For German Club Dances Today And Tomorrow

Pictured above are the young ladies, who, with their escorts, will lead the annual series of Thanksgiving dances to be held at the University today and tomorrow.

They are: Miss Louise Galloway of Winston-Salem who, with Jack May of Burlington, will lead the sophomore German tonight; Miss Corinne Mosley of Farmville, Va., who, with Louis Skinner of Greenville, will lead the figure in the Fall German tomorrow night.

Assistant leaders will be Miss Sarah Elizabeth Phillips of Lincolnton with Frank Hargreaves of Long Island, N. Y.; Miss Nancy O'Hanlon of Winston-Salem with James C. Steele of Statesville; Miss Dorothy Harper of Wilson with Robert Mebane of Chapel Hill; Miss Ruth O'Brien of Durham with William O'Brien of Durham.

GERMAN CLUB TO OPEN DANCE SET
THIS AFTERNOONCharlie Boulanger's Orchestra to Furnish Music for Annual Thanksgiving Dances.

The annual series of Thanksgiving dances at the University of North Carolina will take place today and tomorrow in the Tin Can, with Charlie Boulanger and his orchestra furnishing the music. Many attractive girls from this and neighboring states have accepted invitations to attend.

The festivities will open with a tea dance at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon with the sophomore German set for tonight from 9:00 to 1:00 o'clock. There will be a morning dance tomorrow preceding the Carolina-Duke game, and the final of the series, the Fall German, will take place tomorrow night.

Dances Moved Up

Usually conducted during the Thanksgiving holidays, the dances have been moved up a week this year, due to the fact that the Carolina-Virginia game is to be played at Charlottesville. The Duke game will offer returning alumni an excellent chance to attend the festivities.

The Tin Can, scene of the dances, will be decorated in harmony with autumn.

Boulanger and his orchestra come here direct from Bridgeport, Conn. They have played at several leading hotels in the north and for dances at a number of colleges including Cornell, Yale, Northwestern, Illinois, Wisconsin, and Purdue.

Officers of the German club, which will supervise the dances, are: Lenoir Wright, Charlotte, president; Tom White, Hertford, vice-president; Milton A. Barber, Raleigh, secretary and treasurer; and Charles T. Woolen, Jr., Chapel Hill, assistant secretary and treasurer.

Depending On The Student Body's Conduct At The Game

—AN EDITORIAL—

When the starting whistle blows tomorrow afternoon in Kenan stadium for the Duke-Carolina football classic of 1932, there will be in the air a feeling of tenseness such as has never before surrounded any game between these two institutions. For the last two years the Duke and Carolina teams have battled to scoreless ties. And as a consequence they will be eagerly awaiting every opportunity to break this deadlock tomorrow.

Not only will this add considerably to the tensive spirit, but the fact that the state football championship for this year hinges on the outcome will tend to intensify the interest and enthusiasm even more. With such conditions existing it is imperative that the Carolina student body as hosts to the occasion be especially attentive to their conduct as well as that of the entire Carolina stands. For with the feeling running as high as it will be, any thoughtless move on the part of a group of Carolina students or supporters will likely set off the entire crowd at the wrong time.

The members of the Duke student body will attend the game 2,500 strong, and as guests they will naturally be looking to Carolina to be received in the proper sportsman-like and courteous manner. Any deviation from this expected reception will certainly have no beneficial effect on their attitude toward Carolina.

As has been pointed out on a previous occasion the relationships between the two schools have come to such a point that if they are continued for this year on their present high level, no longer will there be any doubt as to the existence of anything other than a friendly feeling between Duke and Carolina.

Everything, however, will depend on the conduct of the Carolina stands. If they show an unsportsman-like attitude and cheer Duke's misfortunes and set-backs, the chances are that the possibility of perpetuating the present friendly relations with Duke University will be completely wiped out.

The Tar Heels have come through their Big Five season without having an opponent to cross their goal line. And with proper backing from the stands tomorrow there is no reason why they can not continue to make this boast after the game. A few of the dopesters seem to think that Duke has the edge, but on no less than three previous occasions when the Durham institution was doped to win did the Carolina eleven turn the tables and carry the day with flying colors. Nothing prevents a repetition of this act tomorrow.

In the final analysis if the Carolina stands will only throw their support for their own eleven and not so much against the Duke team, the Tar Heels should not only come off victorious, but what is just as important, the path will be paved for establishing a permanent good-will between Duke and Carolina student bodies.

Will Be Conducted Today at Graham Memorial.

The assembly period yesterday was devoted to platform speeches by the freshman presidential candidates. The three candidates set forth their platforms and policies briefly.

Platforms Presented

Frank Rogers' platform consisted of co-operation between fraternity and non-fraternity men. He also expressed a desire to put the class squarely behind the honor system. The main plank in the platform of David McIlhenny was to institute a program against the undermining of democracy at the University. William Hobgood based his platform on the idea that freshmen should know their candidates and that co-operation between all organizations was necessary to the good of the class.

The freshman elections will last from 9:00 to 5:00 o'clock today. The ballot boxes are in Graham Memorial, and all voting will be by secret ballot, under the supervision of the student councilmen.

FIVE OF FACULTY

Modern Language Association
Will Convene in Atlanta.

Five members of the faculty of the University will appear on the program of the fifth annual meeting of the South Atlantic Modern Language Association convening at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel in Atlanta on November 25 and 26, it was announced yesterday by Dr. George R. Coffman, head of the English department.

Papers Presented

Professor Harry K. Russell of the University English department will present a paper on "Elizabethan Dramatic Poetry in the Light of Natural and Moral Philosophy" and Professor A. P. Hudson, in collaboration with Peter Kyle McCartre, will discuss "The Bell Witch of Tennessee and Mississippi." Professor Meno Spann of the University German department will present a paper on "Problems in the Teaching of German Literature."

Professor W. S. Barney of the Woman's College of the University will talk on "Some Recurrent Problems in French Teaching" and Professor U. T. Holmes, Jr., of the University French department will discuss "The Doctrines of Gian-Battista Marini."

Professor Nolan A. Goodyear of Emory University is president of the Association, and Professor John A. Strausbaugh of Emory is acting secretary.

Theatre Passes Awarded

VARIOUS TALKERS
TO ADDRESS MEN
AT HUGE MEETINGYells, Snake Dance, and Bon-Fire Will Be Part of Evening's Program.

With the stage all set for a full program of talks and fun, on the eve of the Duke-Carolina game the entire student body of the University is preparing to gather at Memorial hall at 8:00 o'clock tonight for what cheerleaders hope to be the largest and most spirited pep meeting of the year.

"Dean" Paulsen, one of Carolina's foremost supporters, General Albert Cox and Judge James Patton, prominent alumni, have been asked to make talks on the program.

The University band will open the program with a concert in front of Memorial hall as the students gather. Following this in rapid succession will be the yells, a snake dance, a march to the bon-fire on the intramural field, the talks and finally the reforming of the snake-dance.

The largest number of persons coming out for the Cheerios this year were on hand at the practice last night and all indications are that the student body will give full support to the grid team at the game tomorrow.

The laundry has supplied hand bills with all the Carolina yells and songs which will be distributed tonight at the meeting and again tomorrow at the game. It is hoped that everyone that can will get one of these papers and learn the yells so that the Carolina stands will be able to compete with the Duke cheering section which has made quite a name this year and which has put special work for this final effort.

STATE ECONOMIC GROUP DISCUSSES SOCIAL PROBLEMSMeeting at Charlotte Elects
Bruce Webb, Asheville, to Succeed Frank Graham.

At the meeting of the North Carolina division of the South-eastern council in Charlotte Wednesday, Bruce Webb of Asheville was elected vice-president of the division to succeed President Frank P. Graham, who had been serving as the temporary chairman until the Charlotte meeting.

Leaders in the state's industrial, agricultural, business, educational, and social progress attended the conference and took active part in outlining the North Carolina division's program.

Future Plans Made

As a plan for organization, the conference adopted that of the New England council and set up the framework of the division on a similar plan. Members of the University faculty elected to the various committees are: Dr. H. N. Jenks, power committee; Dean Francis F. Bradshaw, education committee; and Dr. S. H. Hobbs, Jr., and Dean H. G. Baity, research committee.

President Graham sounded the keynote of the organization when he explained the economic and social changes that have taken place in the last several years.

But the Melody Lingers On

The Columbia Spectator, which may be remembered for the various and vitriolic attacks of its editor, Reed Harris, on numerous university institutions, still follows in the steps of its late master, and this week is launching a faculty poll on varsity football. "We are interested," says Spectator, "in seeing what the faculty members who have been in touch with the system so many more years than ourselves, will have to say about football at Columbia."

Somehow we feel that Spectator is in for a set back if it wishes to obtain a faculty indictment against the gridiron sport. Attacks against football have come, in the main, from college publications desirous of obtaining larger circulation, from professors with head-line cravings, and from more or less radical youths who possess tendencies so liberal that they are against everything. Football, they fail to realize in their accusations, is a business—to the athletic managers and stadium builders. But to the public, whom Roosevelt told us couldn't be "fooled all of the time," it's a red-blooded sport and not a business proposition. In what other light can the public, which fills stadiums every Saturday, consider it? Football has been the crown prince of sport for thirty-five years. We doubt that Columbia's faculty may see it in a different light.—D.C.S.

Roosevelt's Magnanimity

The acceptance by Governor Roosevelt of President Hoover's invitation to attend an unofficial conference at the White House presents the president-elect to the American people in a new light. Since the announcement of the invitation several days ago speculation has been rife as to the manner in which the Democratic leader would receive it. "Our government," said President Hoover to Roosevelt, "is now confronted with a world problem of major importance to this nation . . . which can only be solved with the complete cooperation of both parties." The problem is the recent request of Great Britain and France, America's greatest debtors, that they be relieved of their immediate payments, and President Hoover will indeed find it a difficult one to solve alone.

This is the second time during his administration that the president has attempted to settle international debt disputes informally. When they arose in acute form in the spring of 1931, he undertook to solve them without calling a special session of Congress. Today he is more precariously situated than before. He is a leader of a nation which has lost its confidence in him. In a special session of Congress he would find little cooperation or support, and any legislation he might achieve without Democratic aid would, in all probability be repealed by his successor.

The necessity for some immediate decisive action is evident to the leaders of both parties. Governor Roosevelt has shown himself to be greater than party prejudices by his willingness to cooperate. He would have nothing to lose by refusing to take a hand until March 4, and would be excused by the American people for refusing to take anything from Hoover. Politics in the United States needs more men who are willing to discard personal animosities for the betterment of the whole in such times of crises.—V.C.R.

Rousseau Was Right

A news item tells us: "How the aborigines of South Australia manage to live in lean times on next to nothing is to be investigated by an expedition sent out by the University of Adelaide. The secret of the economy of the natives near Mount Liebig, 200 miles west of Alice Springs, will be thoroughly probed for the benefit of the whites." Professor J. B. Cleland is leaving for the wilds, determined, if it is the way they live and the food they consume that is the basis of their thrift, to let us profit by their experience.

All this makes us, who are not very well versed in these problems, wonder why with all our marvelous and vast political machinery, with our congressmen and senators, Hoovers and Roosevelts, interstate commerce commissions, and so forth, we have not yet found the perfect economy. But these things very likely are problems too intricate to understand. Doubtless, in condescending to visit our uncivilized brethren, we shall do him great honor. Patronizingly, we may muddle his brain with tales of our wonderful automobiles, radios, and rackets, our "covering up," "fixing," "muscling in," and other multitudinous activities which our complicated government have made possible.

In return for our wondrous tale and the gift of beads, glass, and trinkets, we may be able to persuade Big Chief Dynamo to tell us how he has learned to live so economically. After many hours of sign language in which we might attempt to explain to Big Chief what unemployment and a high tariff were, and how lucky he and his people are not to be pestered with problems of such dignity, after many hours so spent in vain, we should eventually have recourse to asking him by pointing to the mouth how we can keep from starving. This unusual problem would, no doubt, perplex Big Chief mightily at first. Still he would eventually solve this problem to his satisfaction, if not to ours, by pointing to the land, to the sky, and to our hands. He would then elucidate further by propelling his hand to his mouth, thus explaining the process of eating in its earlier stages. With this start certainly, we should have no trouble in finding at once that long lost road back to prosperity. We should then return to our country, still scornful, of course, of our crude, uncultivated, un-Christian, uncivilized, and boorish fellow beings, but nevertheless convinced that Rousseau had the right idea.—B.B.P.

It All Depends

Since the days when Alexander The Great founded the city of Alexandria, and its famous university along with it, as a memorial to himself, state universities have been struggling for existence.

Since that time, the very factor which prompted the great conqueror to build an institution sponsored by the state—the aim that it should be the mother of free and liberal thought—has served as a check on the development of such schools.

During the last half of the nineteenth century, despite the efforts of the demagogues, and all the other impedimenta on society, there was built up in this country a fine system of public institutions of higher learning, embracing every section of the nation, and almost every state of the union.

Behind the spirit which gave rise to these new developments, there lay a new concept of the duty of the state towards its citizens, and of their duty toward their state. The state needed educated citizens; the citizens needed a chance to secure an education, regardless of financial status. To provide for these needs, a system of state universities, rivaling, and surpassing the oldest and richest of privately endowed institutions, both in the wealth of their equipment, and the scope of their activities, was founded. They were influenced by no creed but the determination to find the truth.

Now, the very existence of these institutions is being threatened as a result of the depression. Salaries have been cut below the cost of decent living; building and the acquiring of new materials have been curtailed.

As the state legislatures go into session, they would do well to bear in mind that in a very short time the work which may be irretrievably ruined by parsimony.—W.A.S.

The young lady agrees with him. She says: "They click with me, too. I'm not what you'd call a heavy smoker. But even I can tell that they're milder. Besides, I always She's right. Chesterfields are just as pure and wholesome as Nature and Science can make them. And we have upwards of 90 millions of dollars invested to ensure their mildness and better taste.

Varsity Ends Heavy Work For Important Duke Tilt

First and Second Teams Watch Reserves in Long Scrimmage With Frosh.

BARCLAY READY TO PLAY

Injured Guard and Gus McIver, Center, Have Recovered and Will See Action.

The varsity squad ended its heavy work for the Duke encounter yesterday with another scrimmage against the frosh. It was the third team that worked against the frosh while the first and second teams followed the play from behind.

Several new developments appeared on the scene yesterday as it was almost certain that Tom White will be unable to see action in the Saturday fray. White's ankle has failed to respond to treatment as rapidly as was hoped and it seemed that the star halfback would watch the play from the sidelines.

Reserves Needed

The other two injured players, Barclay and McIver, guard and center, respectively, were showing slight evidence of their injuries with a slight limp but both will be able to see action Saturday. How long either of these men will be able to last is a matter of speculation, and Coach Collins has been working hard to find reserve material which will be needed for this fierce battle.

After the scrimmage yesterday, Coach Collins had his teams run through their signals, and he had a first team of Walker and Brandt, ends; Hodges and Smith, tackles; Barclay and Kahn, guards; and Underwood, center, in the line. The quartet behind this wall showed Chandler, fullback; Burnett, quarterback; and Phipps and Daniel, halfbacks.

HARRIERS READY FOR CONFERENCE MEET SATURDAY

Jensen, Louis and Henry Sullivan, and Hubbard Are Chief Carolina Threats.

Carolina's representatives in the ninth annual Southern Conference cross-country are fast rounding into shape for next Saturday's clash with the cream of Dixie's hill and dalers.

Clarence Jensen, winner of the event last year, has not turned in any especially brilliant performances thus far; but the local star has evidenced considerable improvement in the week's training.

Sullivan Tar Heel Threats

Louis Sullivan, a lad who has turned in fine work in both the Florida and Duke meets, is another man who is on tap to show flying heels to the other runners. Henry Sullivan, his twin brother, is another boy who is being counted upon to do some fine work in the meet. Louis Sullivan was fourteenth last year with a time of 28:29 for the difficult five-mile Chapel Hill course. Captain Bob Hubbard, fifth in the meet last year, being clocked at 27:49.5, is another boy who has done consistent work all season. Hubbard finished second to Louis Sullivan in the Florida meet, and tied with him for the leadership of the Heel procession in the Duke clash.

ZETA PSI DOWNS BETA OUTFIT, 9-7

Good Play Evidenced in Intramural Tilt Which Advances Zetas to Playoff for Title.

Zeta Psi upset Beta Theta Pi yesterday, 9-7, in the first of the playoffs to decide the winner of the fraternity league of the intramural tag football race.

The Zeta outfit played a heads-up brand of football, smothering completely the Beta running attack and breaking up numerous of the losing eleven's passes.

Both Start Slowly

After both teams had started slowly, the Zeta team scored a safety when Bill Harrison tagged Frank Hargreave, Beta back, behind the goal line after Hargreave had touched Sam Hanff's beautiful punt which rolled across the goal line, where Hargreave picked it up and attempted to run it out.

In the third quarter the Beta outfit launched a passing attack which carried nearly eighty yards. The advance halted when a pass over the goal line lost possession of the ball for the Betas.

Zetas Score

Zeta Psi inaugurated a counter-attack at this point which culminated in a touchdown when Pig Barber took a 25-yard pass from Harrison and stepped across the goal line. Hanff scored the conversion.

Beta received and soon lost the ball on an intercepted pass. Zeta Psi started another march which was on the way to a score when Henry Anderson intercepted a pass and sped seventy yards for a touchdown, outdistancing several pursuers. Anderson's accurate toe accounted for the extra point on a drop-kick.

Theta Kappa Nu Wins

Led by Cecil Longest and James Berry, Theta Kappa Nu gained an 8-5 decision over Theta Chi. No actual scoring took place, the winners gaining the victory on first down supremacy.

Manly gained a 1-0 decision over New Dorms when the latter team failed to appear.

Zetes And A. T. O. In Titular Contest

Zeta Psi, which conquered Beta Theta Pi yesterday in the first round of the playoffs for the championship of the fraternity intramural tag football circuit, will meet Alpha Tau Omega in the final game of the playoffs this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

The winner of this game will oppose Lewis, winner of the dormitory race, on Emerson field next Tuesday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock for the campus championship.

Four other games are scheduled for today, the wind-up of the tag football program for this year.

3:30 Field 2. Question Marks vs. Steele.

3:30 Field 3. Carr vs. Old West.

4:30 Field 2. Tau Epsilon Phi vs. Phi Sigma Kappa.

4:30 Field 3. Pi Kappa Phi vs. Zeta Beta Tau.

PLAY WITH DEVILS FOR LAST TIME TOMORROW

Eight Tar Heels who are getting their last crack at the big, bad Devils from Duke tomorrow in Kenan stadium. All of these boys are expected to play an important part in the Carolina attack in a last effort to break the two-year scoreless deadlock.

Four Carolina Grid Stars Will Have Last Crack At Duke Team Saturday's Encounter Will Be Last Tilt Seniors Will Have With Old Rivals.

HOPE TO DEFEAT DEVILS

Other Men on Team Will Have First Crack at Aggregation From Durham School.

A quartet of Carolina football stars will have their third and last chance to beat Duke University on the gridiron in Saturday's clash between the rival institutions.

Stuart Chandler, Erwin Walker, and Harry Hodges, are the boys on the local club who will be out for the third time to break the scoreless knot resulting from grid meetings between the two schools for the past couple of years.

Chandler and Walker All-State

These men performed well in the aquatic battle staged on Lake Kenan in 1930. In that game the Tar Heel backfield, composed of Strud Nash, Johnny Branch, Jim Wagner, Stuart Chandler, and Jimmy Maus were greatly handicapped by the downpour. Chandler was the captain last year in the Duke fracas, turning in some nifty ground gaining. Having appeared as a full for the past two years, the U. N. C. premier back will make his bow to the Duke team as signal barker this year. He was an all-state man last year, and is a leading candidate this year for mythical honors.

Erwin Walker, who turned in a creditable game against Duke for the last two contests, is another who will have his last try against the Devils. Walker is another 1931 all-stater.

Harry Hodges has turned in a consistent game at tackle for both of the past two years. Hodges was instrumental in stopping Bill Murray's depredations last year in the Duke horseshoe.

Other Swan Songers

June Underwood, who appeared against Duke for the initial time last year as a tackle, will be in the game this year to strengthen his claims to an all-state pivot position.

Four other local stars will sing their swan song in the Duke game. Norman McCaskill, a hard driving back, and Zeke Cozart, a steady, dependable end, will be having their first and last crack at Wallace Wade's hirelings tomorrow, while Cabell Philpott and Elliot Newcombe, U. N. C. guards, will be appearing for the second time against the Bull City gridsters.

Philpott appeared last year as sub for Newcombe, who started the game. McCaskill and Cozart, back and flankman, respectively, have not tasted Devil blood yet; but both of them are out to get revenge for their teammates who have been unable to tally against Duke in '30 and '31.

LOCAL RIFLE CLUB TO HAVE MEETING TODAY

All students, including co-eds, who wish to join the Carolina Rifle club, in preparation for a match with the Durham Rifle club, December 3, are asked to meet with the old members this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock in the basement of Alumni building.

FAST WRESTLING SHOWN IN FINALS OF INTRAMURALS

Bouts Are Fast With Matmen Getting Four Falls and Two Decisions.

The annual intramural wrestling tournament was brought to a close last night with six hard fought final matches. One bout was forfeited due to illness in the family of one of the contestants.

Allen O'Bryan of Old West was crowned the new 118-pound champion by virtue of his victory over Jim Jackson of the A. T. O.'s. The leader in the 125-pound division was George Kellenberger of Mangum dorm, who held a 4:03 time advantage over Bill Beebe, Chi Psi wrestler, when their bout ended.

The title fight in the 135-pound class ended one minute and forty seconds after the start when Gayle Rogers of Chi Psi threw Tom Webb, one of the A. T. O. wrestlers. J. Miller, representing Best House, felled Billy Binder in the 145-pound class of Kappa Alpha after 6:32 of good wrestling.

MacFayden in the 155-pound division of A. T. O. threw Paul Schallert of Old East after a short 29 seconds of grappling. The bout in the 165-pound class provided the most thrills for the large crowd of spectators. Carl Spencer of Mangum dorm was

What is YOUR RECORD so far?

EVERY undergraduate is judged by his class and campus record. Usually the outstanding men in college are those whose energy springs from a vital, healthy body.

A common enemy of health is constipation. It may cause loss of energy, lack of appetite, sleeplessness.

Try this pleasant "cereal way" to health. Two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN will promote regular habits. ALL-BRAN furnishes "bulk," vitamin B, and iron. Ask that it be served at your fraternity house or campus restaurant.

The most popular ready-to-eat cereals served in the dining-rooms of American colleges, eating clubs and fraternities are made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. They include Kellogg's Corn Flakes, PEP Bran Flakes, Rice Krispies, Wheat Krumbles, and Kellogg's WHOLE WHEAT Biscuit. Also Kaffee Hag Coffee — real coffee that lets you sleep.

NOTED TENOR TO SING AT DURHAM

Negro Musician Will Present Charity Benefit Program At Carolina Theatre.

Roland Hayes, famous negro singer, will appear at the Carolina theatre in Durham Sunday afternoon in a concert sponsored by the brotherhood of St. Joseph of the African Methodist Episcopal church.

Tickets for the entertainment are on sale at the University Y. M. C. A. offices. Because of the demand for tickets only forty-four have been allotted to Chapel Hill and the University. All proceeds over a certain amount will be devoted to the purpose of feeding undernourished negro children in Durham.

In Hayes' program will be included representative songs from each great field of song. The closing number of his program will include a medley of negro spirituals. Hayes estimates these significant folk songs second to none.

Before this, his eighth tour of America, Roland Hayes has given, exclusive of his European appearances, 379 recitals. He has sung in 153 American cities, and in forty states. By this record number of recitals; by the vastness of audiences far exceeding those of any other singer; and by the immensity of his success, Roland Hayes stands as one of the most popular singers of the world.

DR. MOTLEY TO ADDRESS MEDICAL GROUP TONIGHT

The University Medical Society will meet tonight at 7:30 o'clock in the Caldwell hall. Dr. F. E. Motley of Charlotte will address the society on the subject, "The Relation of Otology to the Fundamentals of Medicine."

Dr. Motley is a member of the staff of the Charlotte Eye, Ear, and Throat Hospital and is a specialist in otology, which is that branch of medicine which is concerned with the treatment of the ear and its diseases. He is quite prominent in this field of medicine, having been for some years a member of staff of this national known institution.

"THREE ON A MATCH" IS CAROLINA SHOW TODAY

Ann Dvorak, Joan Blondell, and Bette Davis are Warren William's three leading ladies in today's presentation at the Carolina theatre, "Three On A Match." Besides these stars who fill the principal roles, important parts are played by Lyle Talbot, Allen Jenkins, Grant Mitchell, Shelia Terry, Clara Blandick, Buster Phelps, Glenda Farrell, Humphrey Bogart, and Patricia Ellis. Mervyn LeRoy is the director.

The story of "Three On A Match" deals with three young girls who had graduated from public school together and who meet ten years later when the paths of their contrasting lives and adventures cross.

Oral Examination for Anderson

The preliminary oral examination of E. H. Anderson for doctor of philosophy will take place this afternoon at 2:30 in 113 Bingham hall. All members of the graduate faculty in the division of philosophy and social sciences are invited to be present.

A.B. Seniors

Seniors in the college of liberal arts whose names begin with the letters "K" through "M" will report today to Dean A. W. Hobbs to make their applications for a degree.

Pharmacy Examination

Five University Students Pass Examination Given by State Board Of Pharmacy.

The results of the state board of pharmacy examination held here this week revealed that eleven had passed the examination entitling them to become registered pharmacists, while three had passed the assistant pharmacist examination. All five of the University graduates taking the examination passed.

Those qualifying for pharmacists were T. P. Webb, Jr., Shelby; L. M. McCombs, Salisbury; T. W. Gordon, High Point; R. P. Craig, Charlotte; Miss Carolyn Cox, Winston-Salem; W. H. Creech, Selma; C. E. Godwin, Pine Level; W. A. Andrews, Louisville; E. V. Stone, Charlotte; R. S. Rittenbury, Bailey; and R. A. L. Emanuel, (col.) Durham. Those qualifying for assistant pharmacists were J. A. Bass, Wilson; L. R. Burris, China Grove; O. J. Phillips, Norwood. The first five named are graduates of the University school of pharmacy and Miss Cox led the board.

STUDENT TICKETS TO BE EXCHANGED TOMORROW

Holders of season student entertainment tickets who plan to attend the concert of the North Carolina Symphony Society on December 1 must exchange their coupons for reserved seats not later than tomorrow, it has been announced by Dean A. W. Hobbs. Reserve seats may be obtained without charge to holders of season tickets provided these presentations are made by that date. The exchange should be made at a specially provided booth in the Y. M. C. A.

Faculty and townspeople who now hold membership in the Symphony Society will be entitled to attend the concert at half the regular admission price. In order to take advantage of this reduction members should present their membership cards. These tickets may also be obtained at the booth in the "Y" or at the office of Felix A. Grisette, secretary of the society, 209 South building.

Lamar Stringfield Wins Praise For National Symphony Concert

Washington Critics Laud Work; Conducted Second Half of Program Featuring American Composers; Hazelman's Composition, "Moronique Danse," Also Acclaimed.

From the Washington press have come several fine bouquets for Lamar Stringfield, the celebrated Tar Heel composer-conductor, who was guest conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra at a concert given in Constitution hall there last Sunday.

Stringfield conducted the second half of the program which featured the works of American composers including his own Pulitzer prize-winning suite, From the Southern Mountains.

Student's Piece Played

A composition entitled Moronique Danse, by Herbert Hazelman, of Asheville, a nineteen-year-old University sophomore, which was included in the program, also received much favorable comment.

Hans Kindler, the National Symphony's regular conductor, praised Stringfield's conducting and composition highly.

The Washington Star reported the concert drew the largest attendance of any of these Sunday concerts and that in the audience were many distinguished people.

"There were many distinguished people in the audience, come especially to honor Stringfield, whose success was attested by the generous applause," the Star critic reported.

"I have a feeling that any work that bears Stringfield's name is quite likely to be very much worth while," reported the critic of the Washington Herald.

Called Versatile

Reported the Washington Post: "Mr. Stringfield proved as versatile a conductor as he is a composer." Then, referring to Herbert Hazelman's composition, the Post critic reported: "The audience keenly enjoyed the playing of young Hazelman's Moronique Danse, which has many musical virtues to its credit. It portrayed the undoubted talents of this young American composer."

N. C. EDUCATION WILL BE TOPIC OF LEGION CONTEST

Plans of Annual Oratorical Contest Here in December Announced By Professor McKie.

Announcements regarding the annual oratorical contests conducted by the American Legion were made yesterday by Professor George McKie, who has charge of the local arrangements.

The contest this year is the fifth based on the idea of promoting Americanism. The subject will be "Public Education in North Carolina—Its Past and Its Future."

The local contest will be conducted before the Christmas holidays. Following this, the winner will meet representatives from other schools in the state and then a state winner will be picked.

All students wishing to enter the contest are asked to see Professor McKie in 210 Murphey hall immediately.

Midnight Show

The doors of the Carolina theatre are to open tonight at 11:20 o'clock for a special midnight performance of "That's My Boy," taken from Francis Wallace's latest football novel. The author of this picture, which stars Dorothy Jordan and Richard Cromwell, is the same who wrote "Touchdown." Twenty grid stars, including the University of Southern California football team, are included in the supporting cast. Included in tonight's program is a vitaphone musical act.

FORUM MEMBERS DISCUSS STUDENT COUNCIL PROPOSAL

E. C. Daniel, Jr., Outlines Plans for Change in Honor System at Meeting Wednesday.

The Union Forum conducted its regular meeting Wednesday night from 9:30 until 10:30 o'clock in Graham Memorial, with thirty-seven present.

In the absence of President Graham, who was scheduled to speak, the ex-officio chairman, E. C. Daniel, Jr., outlined and explained the student council proposal on change in honor system and reviewed the objections and the favorable points concerning the issue.

As there was no business to be transacted the forum was opened for a formal discussion concerning the student council proposal. Several members presented well-prepared speeches on the subject. After the meeting was adjourned, an informal discussion was conducted by several of the members.

TWO DRAMAS TO BE PRESENTED BY JITNEY PLAYERS

Drama Company Comes Here
For Annual Visit Under Auspices of Playmakers.

The Jitney Players who are to appear here Wednesday, November 30 at 4:00 and 8:30 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre under the auspices of the Carolina Playmakers will present two well-known dramas. For the matinee, Tom Robertson's romantic, mid-victorian comedy, Caste will be given, and for the night performance the Jitney Players will present George Bernard Shaw's romantic satire, Arms and the Man.

The Jitney Players are the result of the desire of two people, Alice Keating Cheney and her husband, Bushnell Cheney, the founders, to carry the drama to the people, and make it live. To do this they had to assemble a company of professionals in order to present to the public their repertoire of plays in the real New York manner. Ten years ago the company was begun and today, with Mrs. Cheney its leading lady and head of the company, the Jitney Players have become a famous professional touring company.

Mrs. Cheney, who has studied in this country and abroad, has played in support of both John and Lionel Barrymore, and was at one time under the management of The Theatre Guild. She has the leads of Esther in Caste, and Raina in Arms and the Man. Playing opposite Mrs. Cheney is Douglas Rowland who played a season in support of Branche Yurka, supreme interpreter of Ibsen, and has appeared for the last three seasons

PLAYMAKERS TO POSTPONE PLANS FOR USUAL TOUR

Financial Conditions Will Not Permit Group to Take November Trip.

Professor F. H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers, explained in an interview this week, why the Playmakers found it necessary to give up plans for their annual November tour.

"The present financial conditions of the Carolina Playmakers will not permit them to make tours this year as in former years without sufficient guarantees to meet the cost of touring, travelling expenses, hotels, and advertising.

"We have had many invitations from various cities and towns in North Carolina and in other states—just this morning we had one from the head of a progressive school at Croton-on-Hudson, in New York, and a few days ago, one from the University of Chattanooga, but we cannot resume our touring at the present time, as in former years, because we can not assume the financial risk involved.

"We are hoping, however, to make a number of short week-end trips this year to North Carolina towns not far away from Chapel Hill, and we are hoping to form a small company with simple stage settings and new plays for such touring."

COLLINS SPEAKS BEFORE DURHAM MONARCH CLUB

Coach Collins was the principal speaker at the weekly meeting of the Monarch club at the Washington-Duke hotel yesterday.

Mrs. E. O. Dameron and Mrs. J. S. Babb, representatives of the recently organized Monarch auxiliary, told of the work of the new organization.

The Monarch club is preparing to dispatch its second set of letters to all brother clubs in the east inviting the members to the convention that will be held in Durham sometime in June, 1933.

The first set was mailed November 1 representing the Durham club, and the second set, which will be mailed December 1, will represent Durham's mayor, D. W. Sorrell. Other letters from the chamber of commerce and civic organizations will follow a month apart.

RED CROSS DRIVE NOW AT MIDPOINT

Annual Soliciting for Members Of Relief Organization Finds Goal Far Removed.

The goal for this year's Red Cross drive has been set at 750 members, which it is hoped will net the local chapter over $1,000. So far, the membership has passed the 350 mark, netting approximately $400. It is hoped this mark will have passed 750 when the curtain falls on the 1932 drive next Wednesday.

Colonel Pratt wants it clearly understood that the local chapter stands ready and willing to aid the students of the University as well as the people of this community. It is the object of this chapter to make it possible for every man, woman, and child to make a contribution, no matter how small it may be.

The call for clothes, food, and other articles has been issued to those who are unable to make monetary contributions. For those who, heretofore, have been unable to get in touch with a Red Cross worker, a receiving desk has been placed in the post office.

FOOTBALL TALKS FORM ATTRACTION OF JUNIOR EVENT

Wade and Collins Present Different Phases of Athletics in Respect to Colleges.

Short but illuminating talks on football featured the first smoker this year of the class of 1934, conducted Thursday night in Swain hall. Coach Wallace Wade of Duke University and Coach Charles "Chuck" Collins of the University were the featured speakers. Tasty refreshments and the music of Jack Wardlaw's orchestra rounded out the program.

Wade spoke of the connection of athletics to education, defining education and pointing out that football and other lines of athletic endeavor made for the better educated man.

Collins outlined the systems employed by state colleges and universities, pointing out that the team with the best blockers usually was victorious.

Director of athletics, Bob Fetzer, introduced the speakers, and was in turn introduced by "Red" Boyle, president of the junior class.

Dean Paulsen, a rabid University football supporter, made a short extemporaneous talk.

And Cooperation Between Two Institutions by Having Expressions of Good-Will Printed in Papers.

The efforts of Carolina and Duke student body leaders to cement a closer feeling of friendliness and cooperation between the two universities are in full evidence this week-end when the grid teams of the two institutions have their annual game in Kenan stadium this afternoon.

The Duke-Carolina friendship trophy, an outgrowth of the first official attempt for friendlier sentiment between the universities, will be awarded to the winning team as a token of goodwill from the losers. The presidents of the student bodies have exchanged messages urging that each student body observe the best sportsmanship and friendliness.

Be Cordial to Guests
In addition, students of the University, as host to the Duke student body, are planning to extend every courtesy to their visitors.

In this issue of THE DAILY TAR HEEL, Wendell Horne, president of the Duke men's association, expresses good-will to the University while in a similar article to appear in the Duke Chronicle Haywood Weeks, president of the student council here, greets Duke students.

Weeks' Greeting to Duke
Weeks' statement is as follows:

"On behalf of the student body of the University of North Carolina I extend a most cordial welcome to the students, faculty, and administration of your University to visit our campus to see the Duke-Carolina football game Saturday.

"The success of the game itself will mean much to both of us. But the friendly conduct and sportsmanship which will be shown by our student bodies will transcend the football stadium and will add to the names of our two universities, already leaders in education in the south and prominent in the nation as well.

"The game will prove not

Head Of Duke Student Body Speaks

This afternoon is an important event in the history of the University of North Carolina and Duke University. For two years our institutions have fought hard nothing-to-nothing ties in football. . . .

Every Duke student takes much pride in the friendly rivalry that exists between Carolina and Duke. I believe any school would be glad to have such a spirit of rivalry in its institution as we have. One must want a victory over a team to really get a kick out of winning the game. Our student body is anxious for such a spirited rivalry to continue to be a cherished tradition.

I have observed very closely the friendly relations between Carolina and Duke the last few years. To better explain what I mean, I shall give an example of one of my observations.

Last year when Carolina and Duke went to Atlanta for the Southern Conference basketball tournament, one would have thought they were brother institutions. Both teams went down on the same train, stayed at the same hotel, and pulled for each other in every game. Sometimes around the hotel, a stranger could hardly have known whether Captain Alexander was captain of Carolina or Duke; the same thing was true of Captain Shaw of Duke. Just this sort of relationship is what we are proud to have a share in.

You know that we are coming over to Chapel Hill hoping to win that football game; you are hoping the same thing for yourselves. May the best team win!

Whether we win or lose we are going to be good sports—a good loser, if need be, or a good winner.

WENDELL HORNE,
President Duke Student Body.

NEWS MEET PLANS TAKE FINAL SHAPE

Program Committee Meets in Grumman's Office This Morning at 11:00 O'clock.

Final plans for the annual mid-winter Newspaper Institute which will convene here January 11-13 inclusive under the auspices of the North Carolina Press Association and the University, are to be shaped up at a meeting which will be called in the office of Russell M. Grumman this morning at 11:00 o'clock.

Karl Bickel, general manager of the United Press, is among the speakers who have already accepted invitations to address the institute.

Attending the meeting here today will be: John A. Park, president of the North Carolina Press Association, R. E. Price, vice-president, and Miss Beatrice Cobb, secretary-treasurer. Russell M. Grumman, director of the extension division, Robert W. Madry, director of the news bureau, and O. J. Coffin, head of the journalism department, will represent the University.

DEAN JACKSON TO ADDRESS JOINT Y MEETING MONDAY

Officers of Three Cabinets Met Yesterday and Decided on Joint Monthly Meetings.

The regular weekly meeting of the officers of the three cabinets of the campus Y. M. C. A. met yesterday morning during freshman assembly period in one of the most important gatherings of the group for the current month.

Plans were completed for the monthly joint meeting of the three Y. M. C. A. cabinets to be in Gerrard hall next Monday night at 7:00 o'clock. The group secured as speaker at the event Dean W. C. Jackson of the school of public administration.

Plans were also completed for the annual Thanksgiving service in Kenan stadium next Wednesday morning at 7:15 o'clock, and the colored football game sponsored by the "Y" between the Orange County training school and an opponent yet to be selected. The football game will come the first Friday after Thanksgiving. This, a part of the work of the "Y" inter-racial committee, is to aid the town of Chapel Hill in the support of a nurse for local negroes.

PROFESSORS FACE TWENTY PER CENT SALARY DECREASE University Is Threatened With $113,000 Deficit; Forced to Take Drastic Action.

University faculty members and other University employees are faced with the prospect of another salary cut which is expected to amount to twenty-two per cent for the year. Since all other expenditures have been pared to the bone, reduced salaries were seen as the only way in which the estimated $113,000 deficit of the University might be met.

From the beginning of last year a ten per cent salary cut was in effect, and during the months of April, May and June an additional twenty per cent reduction was deemed necessary. This year also began with a ten per cent cut, but the second cut has of necessity to go into effect earlier than last year.

Lower Income Responsible

The major reason for subjecting salaries to this additional cut has been the reduced income which the University has realized from other sources than the state appropriation and endowments. Enrollment has dropped off in number by about 200 students and there is a corresponding decrease in tuition and free money. Less revenue is being obtained from the dormitories and from Swain hall since room rent and board have been materially reduced.

No definite decision has been reached in regard to the time that this cut will go into effect. It has been rumored that November 1 would be the date, but President Graham is consulting the faculty members as to the time of application. The impending cut may be spread over

FRESHMEN ELECT FRANK ROGERS AS CLASS PRESIDENT

Webb Is Chosen Vice-President;
Bost, Treasurer; Sam Clark,
Secretary, Unopposed.

University freshmen received their induction into campus politics when they went to the polls yesterday and chose their officers for the coming year. Frank Rogers of Rome, Ga., was elected president of the class.

Though the vote was not close in any case, the contest was hot around the polls in front of Graham Memorial, with even upperclassmen joining in the enthusiastic campaign talks for the various candidates. Printed slips bearing the names of the candidates were displayed while several huge placards were in evidence at the front of the building.

Rogers received a total of 342 votes to sweep into the class presidency while David McIlhenny, the nearest candidate received 167. Van Webb of Raleigh was elected vice-president, defeating Bill Moore by a large total. In the third contest John Bost of Raleigh received 316 votes, a 130 lead over Mortimer Ellisburg.

The fourth office went to Sam Clark of Tarboro who was declared elected November 10 when his nomination was unopposed.

More than 500 ballots were cast in the election.

Win or Lose—A Gentleman

A battle will be waged today between the football teams of two of the South's and the nation's leading universities. These two institutions have in recent years become the keenest rivals in every field of endeavor—educational, scholastic, and athletic.

Two years ago the senior classes of Duke and Carolina presented a beautiful trophy, a pair of silver goal posts mounted on an ebony base, to alleviate the tenseness of feeling which was at the time evident between the schools. The trophy which is received by the winning team is emblematic of that old prize taken by bloodshed, the actual goal posts.

Since that time relations between Carolina and Duke have been steadily improving, and as a result of the two scoreless ties which have preceded today's game, feeling among the student bodies of the competing teams is most intense. Today's sun will set either upon a stadium filled with supporters of both schools who have a mutual respect and maintain a feeling of good natured rivalry for each other or a mass of bitter humanity looking across the field at their hated and despised enemies.

Should the latter condition result, irreparable damage will be done to the movement for better relations between the students of these two great centers of higher education in the South. What little bitterness may result from today's game are likely to become actual grievances of tomorrow, and all hope for amity will be definitely blasted.

Let us in the broadness of our vision forget the petty hatreds kept smoldering in the hearts of generations of Carolina and Duke students for so many years, and welcome our neighbors with a real cordiality and extend to them the hospitality to which as our guests they are due.

Whether with today's dying sun the flag of the University flies triumphantly in the clear air over Kenan stadium or whether it hangs dejectedly in defeat let us remember that we are gentlemen and sons of Carolina. A gentleman takes his triumph quietly and his defeat gracefully. A Carolina man is a gentleman.—O.S.S.

Music in The Balance

The fate of North Carolina's bid for recognition in the march of cultural progress hangs in the balance. The concert of the North Carolina State Symphony here December 2, will give to the people of the state an opportunity to decide upon the future of the only organization of its kind in the country. North Carolina is the only state in the Union possessing a state symphony composed of amateur musicians drawn from the entire state, but it would seem we have set the style. The symphony has been in existence only six months, yet even in this short period it has done much to stimulate a wider interest in symphony music within the state. From Delaware comes the news that a similar project has been begun.

Cultural music and interest in symphony concerts have suffered a decided set-back during the past decade due to the influx of the so-called "popular" music. The power of this popular music is on the wane, however, and, as Paul Whiteman, famed King of Jazz, said a few weeks ago, "modern jazz is taking a decided trend towards classicism. The people are again clamoring for music with depth and real beauty."

The average Carolina man has never heard a true symphony concert. His nearest association with classical music has been through the high school orchestras and bands, an unfortunate situation since the performance of most high school orchestras does not offer the best introduction to musical appreciation. Nor are the people of the state much better off than the college students.

The initial concert of the symphony in May showed clearly that the state is eager for better music, yet it failed to fill the depleted coffers of the Symphony Society. The December concert of the symphony is its last chance and without the support of the entire state it cannot but fail. It is an achievement which deserves a helping hand. Its influence in other states has already begun, and it would be a disgrace for North Carolina should the idea of a state symphony fail in its native state.—V.C.R.

Let's Compromise

In our world today we have, fundamentally, two classes—those who have lost sight of pride, initiative, and personal freedom and those who still hope to retain those once idealistic qualities of a time-worn monetary system. If we were to delve deeply into the actual hopes and beliefs of both classes we would find them basically the same. The first class, for the great part victims of well known discrepancies of our present system, have placed their hopes on the only apparent avenue of escape—radical socialism. The other class, winners in a game of both chance and skill, have squared their jaws and prepared to fight for the game that has placed them above the present average or above the highest attainable average under a socialistic system.

Among the youth of today you will find very few who would be willing or anxious to be plunged into a system where personal ambition or initiative could not have both its chance and its reward. It is here that opinion differs. Most of the aforementioned group will agree that salaries in excess of one hundred thousand dollars a year are ridiculous. The same facts hold true as to inheritances. Few people believe that they should not exist, but they would question the practicality of sums exceeding a million dollars. Amounts in excess of those mentioned could be turned over to laborers in form of higher wages, used by the government for unemployment insurance, old age pensions, or used for the furtherance of education.

No one wishes to be told what industry he must go into or how hard he must work, yet some form of planned production might go a long way toward correcting self-evident errors of today.

There are in existence, at present, examples of both capitalistic and socialistic systems. There are many weak as well as strong points in each. Why not replace erroneous principles with proven ones?—L.M.J.

OUR TIMES

Bottles

The Syracuse Daily Orange has gone and spoiled all our enthusiasm for the football game this afternoon. "There were," says the Orange, "more empty whiskey bottles found in the stadium after the Colgate game than there have been for the past four years . . . approximately 2,500 bottles were found in and around the big oval. Last year there were between 500 and 1,000 less." The information was gathered by a reporter from the men who clean the stadium. For the sake of the Orange reporter we're pretty much wrought up about the whole business. We can imagine the reporter lingering in the stadium after last Saturday's game until everyone had gone home, and then rushing down to quiz the stadium cleaners. His story of the game must have been: "In the midst of a wildly clinking mass of frenzied whiskey bottles, unofficially estimated at 2,500, Colgate battered its way to a 16-0 victory over Syracuse here today . . ."

Frank

A friend of ours reports that there are too many Franks in the University for anybody's good. Walking past Phillips Thursday morning he saw a friend of his across the street and shouted "Hey, Frank." Whereupon four other individuals walking near our friend's Frank turned around and responded with a like "Hey." One it developed, was Frank, a janitor, another Frank was a law student, and the other two Franks were undergraduates. Our friend says that he was too surprised to make a comeback. Just waved a hand feebly and slunk off down the street.

Guards

We feel that the great American football public ought to be set right about this "dumb guard" business. In an editorial argument over the Princeton extra point in the Yale game, an Eli varsity guard, one Allan Converse, writes to the Princetonian: "I venture the statement that the Princeton kick for extra point was wide of the mark. I saw it fail from an optimum position; others in my position corroborated my opinion . . . I heard Billings himself acknowledge the score should have been seven to six . . ."

Venezelo's reported determination to use military force to prevent a return of royalism, should the Greek people vote for it, reminds one of the man who said if people didn't want freedom it should be forced upon them.—Chicago Daily News.

RALEIGH CHESS CLUB INVADES CAROLINA

Initial Fall Tourney

RALEIGH CHESS CLUB will encounter the Carolina Social Chess Club for the first competitive match series to be played by the Carolina team this fall, Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock, Graham Memorial Chess room.

The tournament is open to the public. The opposing teams consist of seven players, respectively. Each player engages in three matches. Playing time is twenty moves the hour.

Any chess player at the University may be considered eligible for the Carolina team; however, all candidates must be present tonight at the local club's meeting to prove their avowed abilities.

SIMULTANEOUS CHESS TONIGHT

Six tables of simultaneous chess will be played tonight in the Graham Memorial Chess room. Each table may have five consulting players championing White. Paul J. Miller, Jr., will be the defensive black. Roosevelt will toss in the ball at 7:30 sharp. Hoover will hold the towel—as usual.

the entire eight months at twenty per cent or over fewer months at a higher rate. In either case the saving realized by the University will be the same.

The total maintenance fund of the University is made up of the state appropriation, income from endowments and other sources. The most remunerative of these other sources are the fees and dormitory rentals. This last class of income varies each year, and this year took a downward turn necessitating the salary cut.

HERR KIEBITZ

In every college you will find this species. It will never become extinct as long as the planet Earth churns through the void and the two-legged mammal called man, generically Homo sapiens, trods the turf.

A matter for the variety of Kiebitz, who disturb the game of others by interruptions and superiority of chess knowledge, seems opportune as initial rule for beginners and amateurs.

House rules of the year 1583, in a Berlin hostelry, give some idea how the tribe of Kiebitz was punished in old Berlin. They read thus:

"Whoever persists in gazing over a busy player's shoulder until the player becomes flushed with fright, shall be driven away immediately and shall be called Kiebitz. Whosoever may glare at the board of two players and is overcome by his passion for giving one of them a hint by motions of his eyes, or prattle of his snout, he shall be fined thirty pennies of good coin, or a crock of malt-beer for the common good. Then he shall be driven away. But he who thinks him-self so overburdened by wisdom that he must give advice to the players, shall have his muzzle pummeled and his cap driven over his ears, for he is an ass; in addition, he shall be beaten and thrown into the street."—The Gambit.

Whitehead were both with Jesse Bonstelle's famous company in Detroit before coming to the Players. Sam Pearce, stage manager and actor in the Jitney Company, was in the Yale School of Drama, and actively engaged in the New Haven Little Theatre. He appeared in the production If Booth Had Missed and when it closed joined the Jitney Players.

Shepherd Strudwick, alumnus of the University and prominent in the Carolina Playmakers was with the Jitney Players for three seasons after he left Chapel Hill.

DANCES CONTINUE THIS MORNING AND EVENING

After a successful dance in the Tin Can last night the climax of the week-end's festivities will come tonight with the Fall German dance which will take place in the Tin Can from 9:00 until 12:00 o'clock with Charlie Boulanger providing the music. There will also be a dance this morning from 11:30 to 1:15 in the Tin Can.

Charlie Boulanger and his orchestra, who have been engaged for the complete set of dances by the German club, first became well known through his broadcasting at the Park Central hotel and Yeongs Restaurant in New York City. Bringing the latest sound equipment, Charlie Boulanger has as special features two radio soloists, Miss Virginia Lee and Cole Coleman.

The chapel period was cut short yesterday in order that the freshman class picture could be taken. Chapel was dismissed after the devotional and the announcements.

The freshmen then met on the steps of the law building. Four pictures were taken. One was an entire group picture and there were three smaller groups arranged according to names.

Carolina-Duke

A more perfect setting for this classic could not be found. The Tar Heels have been hitting on all eight since the midway point in the schedule, while the Blue Devils will be all the more dangerous since last week's defeat by State. A champion will arise from today's game. Local pride compels us. One vote for Carolina. In case of rain, a scoreless tie.

Auburn-Georgia

This is where the Plainsmen meet their Waterloo. Auburn hasn't a championship schedule nor a championship team, and with all their stars on the hospital list, it seems improbable that they will get by Georgia today. We suspect that the Bulldog will be the lone survivor on the Plains this evening.

Florida-Georgia Tech

How the 'Gators have stood up under continued beatings is a miracle. They're practically punch drunk and the Engineers were never known to pull their punches.

Maryland-W. & L.

The Generals are in the doldrums. Nuff said. One vote for Maryland.

Tulane-Sewanee

This concludes the southern selections and also concludes Sewanee's hopes for winning a conference game this season. Tulane by a landslide.

Yale-Harvard

This classic needs the good old days to again center the spotlight upon the Yale Bowl, but there's still plenty of color and thrill left for the fans. Neither team has made an impressive record, so take your pick. We'll string along with Johnny Harvard.

Columbia-Syracuse

The Orange used to mop up the Yankee Stadium with the Lions. Today, Columbia should do a little housecleaning on their own account.

Michigan-Minnesota

The Gophers are the only ones who have a chance to stop Michigan's bid for the Big Ten title, but I think that the Maize has just a bit too much power and deception for Coach Bierman's squad. Manders or no Manders, one big vote for Michigan.

CAROLINA TO GREET PROMINENT VISITORS

Several distinguished visitors will be in the stands at Kenan stadium today when the annual Duke-Carolina football classic takes place.

President and Mrs. W. P. Few of Duke University with Vice-President and Mrs. R. L. Flowers, and several other Duke officials will occupy seats in the guest box.

Cornelius McGillicuddy, better known as Connie Mack, veteran manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, and Mrs. Mack will accompany their son, a student at Duke, to the game. In this party, there will also be Ira Thomas, former Athletic catcher and now Connie's chief scout, with Mrs. Thomas and Coach Jack Coombs, noted Athletic pitcher who directs the destinies of Duke baseball teams and who was Thomas' battery-mate in many an important game a score of years ago.

Leads Devils Against Carolina Today

Lowell Mason captains the Duke team which invades Kenan stadium this afternoon in an effort to crush the Tar Heels and end the two-year deadlock. Mason has been the sparkplug of the Blue Devils all season and will bear watching today.

BOXING MATERIAL FOR THIS SEASON SHOWS PROMISE

Old Mittmen and Good Frosh Aspirants Turn Out Fast Practice Bouts.

In this week's boxing activities at the Tin Can, matters took on a cheerful aspect for a good season as several veterans threw gloves with their old ability and many newcomers gave two-fisted notice of future recognition.

Sophomores led the way with Norm Quarles, Lee Berke, Sam Gidinansky, Frank McIntosh, and Pete Ivey bidding for varsity places. All these boys had impressive records last year and are indicating by their work this early in the season that they will be equally formidable this winter.

Many in Good Shape

Quarles, the flashy blonde scrapper who was undefeated as a freshman, is in perfect condition and was punching accurately and hard in his exhibitions this week. Norm figured in what was perhaps the boxing highlight of the week when he fought one hurricane round against Marty Levinson. It was interesting to see people come running from all directions in the Tin Can and crowd ten deep at the ringside. The two minutes were over all too quickly for the spectators, and at the end there was little to choose between the two.

Cliff Glover, who fought but once last year and put Dave Stoop, 115-pound intercollegiate champion on the floor, only to have Stoop get up and win, looked good. So did Pete Ivey, who did some defensive work against Marty Levinson Tuesday afternoon.

Frosh Shows Promise

A boy named Flaherty appears to have plenty of class in the frosh lightweight division. Keeping an educated left hand in his partners' faces most of the time, he was pretty hard to hit. Max Frucht, another freshman, looks rugged and should improve with work.

Possibly, as the European press asserts, America is slipping. But it isn't slipping any more to Europe.

ALPHA TAU OMEGA WINS INTRAMURAL FRATERNITY RACE

DuBose Avery Largely Responsible for A. T. O. Win From Zeta Psi by 9-0 Score.

Alpha Tau Omega gained the championship of the fraternity intramural tag football league yesterday by downing Zeta Psi, 9-0. The contest was played in a cold drizzle which made the ball hard to handle.

A. T. O., by virtue of its win yesterday, will enter next Tuesday's contest for the campus championship with Lewis, winner of the dormitory circuit.

The first quarter of yesterday's game was played in Zeta Psi territory. Both teams played cautiously, exchanging punts, until, at the end of the period, Bill Harrison, Zeta Psi back, took two passes from Pig Barber for the initial first down of the game.

On the first play of the second quarter Harrison accounted for another first down, but A. T. O. braced and held for downs on the 25-yard line to take the ball. After an exchange of intercepted passes, Alan Smith made his team's first down when he skirted left end for eleven yards. The whistle blew for the first half with Zeta Psi leading in first downs, 2-1.

Second Half

Zeta Psi kicked off to start the second half, and Wally Kendall returned the kick to the 30-yard line, from where three completed passes netted fifty yards. Sam Hanff intercepted the next aerial, however, on his own 15-

SEVEN COLLEGES POST ENTRIES IN CONFERENCE MEET

Ninth Annual Contest Will Be Started From Stadium This Morning.

Dixie's choice cross-country runners clash this morning at 11:15 o'clock on Emerson field in the ninth annual Southern Conference cross-country run. Entries have been received from Carolina, Duke, Tennessee, Florida, Washington and Lee, Ole Miss, and V. M. I.

Duke, V. M. I., and Tennessee are the reigning favorites to cop the contest at present, but a rejuvenated Carolina club is going to be mighty hard to beat. Duke holds straight victories over Davidson, St. Johns, and Carolina, and consequently Bob Tuttle's Devils are given a slight edge even over the Vol and Cadet harriers.

History of Event

Carolina runners are perhaps the heirs to the greatest cross-country tradition in the nation. In the past six years Carolina has won a half score championships in the cross-country department.

In 1925 the Heels were state champs. Repeating in 1926, they added the Southern Conference crown to their state laurels. 1927 saw another powerful Tar Heel club clinch both championships once more. The next year witnessed the first defeat in a dual meet suffered by a Carolina team up to that time. Duke's potent Devils of that year wrecked havoc in Tar Heel

DUKE RUNNERS TO MEET FRESHMEN

Return Engagement With Blue Imps Will Furnish Second Event for Tar Babies.

Carolina freshmen cross-country clash with Duke University Blue Imp harriers this morning in Emerson field at 11:00 o'clock. This is the second meeting of the year for the two teams.

Although Bob Tuttle's Blue Imps sustained a decisive 23-34 whipping from the local yearlings last Saturday, the Durham club is reported to be in a better condition than ever for the clash.

Among Carolina men who have shown up well are Carraway, McPhail, Conte, Umstead, Keeney, Garrison, Sullivan, Neal, Lynch, and Mark. The first eight named, however, appear to be the most likely starters judging by their creditable showing against Duke last Saturday.

This year's freshman club has almost entirely been built around lads who finished well up toward the front in the Cake Race. The run will be over a three-mile course.

Tennis Team Has Hard Work-Out For Virginia

The varsity tennis squad is going through stiff practices daily in preparation for the Thanksgiving match with the University of Virginia at Charlottesville. Several challenge matches are being played daily.

The rankings of the leaders at the present are: number one, Wilmer Hines; number two, Lenoir Wright; number three, Harvey Harris; and number four, Dave Morgan. Others showing promise are Willis, Minor, Dillard, and Levitan.

In two of the better challenge matches yesterday Ricky Willis defeated Harris 6-2, 3-6, 7-5; and Dillard beat Levitan 4-6, 6-3, 6-4. These were real thrillers, as the scores indicate.

Country's Fans Plan To Attend Publication Tilt

Yackety-Bucs and Tar Mags Will Clash Monday Afternoon On Intramural Field.

The battle of the century, or to be conservative the battle of the decade, will bring thousands of football fans from every section of the country to Chapel Hill, Monday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock as the mighty grid machines of the Tar-Mags and the Yackety-Bucs tangle on number one intramural field.

Special trains, air transports, and hundreds of busses will bring the throngs of rabid football fans to the Hill, who realize that they can't see the Tar-Mags play every day. Herman Schnell, selected as referee for the contest, stated last night that "there will be ample seating arrangements for thirty-five spectators, excluding subs and drug store coaches."

The Tar-Mag band, decked out in gorgeous silver and gold uniforms, will assemble at Five Points in Durham and march over to the game. The Tar-Mag cheerios, three hundred strong, will stage a gigantic pep rally Saturday night with a bonfire and a pajama parade, Hotcha!

FAMOUS AIRMEN WILL TAKE PART IN AERIAL CIRCUS

Local Airport Will Play Host to Dare-Devs at Exhibition Tomorrow Afternoon.

Chapel Hill airport will be the scene of an aerial exhibition Sunday afternoon. Replete with breath taking thrills, spills and tumbles, aircraft of all kinds and descriptions will cavort above the airport and surrounding countryside with all the thrills of loops, rolls, spins, and human bodies dangling high above the earth.

From Danville, Virginia, come Bill McGalliard flying a low-winger Barling monoplane, and "Squeek" Burnett, nationally known flyer, piloting a Curtis Robin; Dr. Reeves, who is the X-ray specialist at the Duke hospital and whose hobby on the side is flying, is coming from Durham to exhibit his skill. Others, known locally and in other sections of the country, will take part in the show.

The program includes stunt-flying, a trapeze act high in the air, and, weather permitting, an air-acrobat will change from one plane to another in mid-air.

All ships and pilots are commercially licensed, and as an added attraction, passengers will be taken aloft all afternoon. Through the courtesy of local merchants, special tickets have been issued by which two may ride for the price of one. However, these tickets are good only when surrendered to Montrose Tull, local aviator.

"HOLD 'EM JAIL" IS NOW AT CAROLINA

A football "game of the century" between rival penitentiaries provides the climax of "Hold 'Em Jail," new Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey starring comedy showing at the Carolina theatre today. Others in the cast are Edna May Oliver, Rosco Ates, Edgar Kennedy, and Betty Grable.

The action and dialogue of "Hold 'Em Jail" races through the field of slapstick. By the time the play is built up to the scene of the big game one should reasonably be all steamed up over Bidmore's chances on the gridiron, although there never was a football game played that even remotely resembled this one. There will be a morning performance of "Hold 'Em Jail" this morning at 10:00 o'clock.

Scene From "Caste"

ranked, but Dale Ranson's boys managed to shake off the jinx in time to chalk up their third straight triumph in the event. Coming back strong in 1929, Carolina won the state title; and then they battled icy wind and sleet for the fourth consecutive Dixie crown. 1930 was a lean year for Carolina. Although U. N. C. was the state champ, a potent flying quadron from V. M. I. blew in to break the continuous line of U. N. C. wins. Last year Carolina won back their crown with Clarence Jensen, Ed McRae, and Mark Jones finishing first, second, and third respectively.

Although sports savants are conceding the Tar Heels little chance to win again this year, much improvement has been evidenced in the past week. Last year saw Clarence Jensen, the winner, stricken with an attack of appendicitis several days before the meet; and it was not certain that he would run until almost the eve of the event.

Carolina entries in the event will be picked from Clarence Jensen, Louis Sullivan, Captain Bob Hubbard, Henry Sullivan, T. H. Curlee, T. L. Cordle, Walter Groover, Ed E. McRae, G. Stratford Donnell, and Gerry Goldman. All of these boys have been the representatives of Carolina in previous meets this year.

Other entries are as follows: Duke University: J. Brag, R. Bird, Captain H. Lewis, J. Heritage, J. Jester, J. Eridsen, T. Garris, R. Nitsche, C. Dovey, and B. Weems. Tennessee: Woodall, Frazier, Goddard, Fuller, Stuot, Pugh, Kemmon, and Dyer. V. M. I.: W. Turner, W. Burruss, H. Welford, M. Milton, M. Moore, Neidengard, Findlayson, M. Riddle, G. Bain, and P. Rutschaw. Florida: James Burnett, Ralph Paige, Claud C. Calmes, Robert Turill, Ed Crews, Jim Crews, Jim Atherton, Homer Wakefield, Houston McClane, and Ray Alexander. Washington and Lee: M. R. Dunaj and E. L. Bond. Ole Miss: Robert E. McCallough.

Conference officials gave special permission to Washington and Lee and Ole Miss not to enter the regulation eight-man team.

Alpha Kappa Psi Pledges

The Alpha Kappa Psi, national honorary commerce fraternity, announces the pledging of the following: Alex B. Andrews, Jr., of Raleigh; Charles F. Beaudry of Cortland, N. Y.; John J. Binder of Charlotte; Cornelius B. Bretsch of Raleigh; Cicero A. Frazier of Mooresville; Herbert H. Harriess of Wilson; Emmet Joyner of Memphis; Frank H. Kenan of Atlanta, Ga.; and Colin Stokes of Winston-Salem.

Tar Heel Band Widely Known For Concert And Parade Appearances

Described by New York Herald-Tribune Writer as One of Very Finest Organizations of Its Kind in the Country; Music Lovers of State Praise Concerts Given by Group.

"If there is any snappier band in the country than the blue and white uniformed band of the University of North Carolina, your correspondent will travel any distance to see and hear it."

That was the opinion of Will McGeehan, sports editor of the New York Herald-Tribune, when he saw the band at Atlanta three years ago. This tribute has been substantiated by the Asheville, Greensboro, Charlotte, Durham, and Raleigh newspapers, not only in connection with the parade band but also with the concert group under the same leadership. In fact, the concert band has been styled a "symphony organization without strings."

This reputation which the band has built up for itself is not a hastily-acquired one, but a gradual ascent from an organization of only twenty pieces to a personnel of eighty. The band owes its inception to the efforts of Charles T. Woollen, now business manager of the University, who as a student twenty-five years ago conceived a musical organization which would be an inspiration and object of pride to the student body. Following a period of gradual expansion, in 1922 the band was placed directly under the supervision of the department of music, and two years later T. Smith McCorkle assumed the post of leader.

Two Bands in One

Actually, the band is a dual organization, for out of the entire number of performers which comprises the parade band there evolves a selected group of concerters. The entire roster of musicians plays for all home football games, pep meetings, and important occasions such as Founders' Day.

Following the gridiron season, the concert band begins an intensive study of symphonic compositions for a series of recitals given throughout the state the latter part of the fall quarter and during the succeeding divisions of the school year.

The parade band is organized immediately after the autumn opening of school, at which time all candidates are accepted. Then, during the first few weeks of the season, individual try-outs are conducted which sectionize and eliminate the various aspirants.

Rehearsals a Problem

It is with considerable difficulty that the band rehearses the formations to be used between the halves of the football games. Although the Tin Can affords a practice site twice a week, the band is never able to rehearse the formations in full size, as they will actually appear on the field. Despite this technical handicap, the organization has received much favorable criticism on its marching in the forming of letters. It has been ventured that the method of the University band is considerably superior to the customary shuffling and side-stepping used by many other bands. A distinctive characteristic is its goose-step which is apparently the exclusive property of the University organization.

It has been the custom for the band to attend two or three of the most important games away from Chapel Hill, but this year the deflated condition of the treasury of the athletic association warrants only the traditional journey to the Thanksgiving game at Charlottesville.

Concert Band Plays Classics

Although less well-known on the campus than the parade band, the concert group enjoys perhaps wider popularity over the state. It consists of forty-eight men, subjected to rigorous bi-weekly rehearsals in preparation for concert tours. Bach, Beethoven, Tschaiowsky, and Mendelssohn's compositions are typical of the band's repertoire, a far cry from the simple marches played by the band a dozen years ago.

An organization similar to those which regulate other campus associations has arisen from the dual musical work. Each spring officers are selected, and, if needed, the director appoints a manager for the coming year. The band rewards its staff with a beautiful key, which is reputed to be as difficult to obtain as any extra-curricular award on the campus. Awards are made only to men who have played in both the concert and parade bands for three years and have not missed a single public performance during that time without a reasonable excuse.

none in each of his consistent victories, triumphed over Professor C. B. Robson 3-0.

The last match of the day saw the history department clinch victory by virtue of Mr. Cecil Johnston's sensational last-hole victory over Dr. R. P. Bond, 2 1-2 to 1-2. In this match, Bond made a threatening rally after the fourth hole, and managed to remain on even terms with his opponent until the last hole when Johnston shot a remarkable par 3 score which gave him the deciding nod.

GREENSBORO CO-EDS WILL ATTEND GAME 400 STRONG

About 400 girls from the Women's College of the University of North Carolina will attend the Duke game this afternoon. Special busses have been chartered to bring them from Greensboro.

The young ladies will sit in section 9 of the stadium. The business office wired Greensboro a few days ago asking them if they would rather have seats on the south side of the stadium. They replied that so many seats had been sold for section 9 that there would be too much trouble to change the tickets for the south side seats.

yard stripe, to stop the A. T. O. advance.

Another series of intercepted passes gave A. T. O. the ball on the Zeta Psi 40-yard line, from where Kendall caught a pass for a first down on the 25-yard mark.

Avery Big Factor in Win

Late in the final quarter, after the ball had seen-sawed in mid-field, Smith intercepted a pass on the Zeta Psi 38-yard line and started a march for a touchdown. Two passes to Avery were completed, after which a toss from Smith to Thompson, who dodged five yards to the last line, netted a score. Smith's dropkick went wild.

A. T. O. scored again on the last play of the game, when Smith scored the first field goal of the current intramural season on a beautiful dropkick from the 25-yard line.

Phi Sigma Kappa Wins

Phi Sigma Kappa won the only other game of the day, 12-0, over Tau Epsilon Phi. The losers, led by Leonard Jacobs, held a 9-6 advantage in first downs, but a 50-yard dash for a touchdown by Paul Kaveney, and another six-pointer by Mitch Mitchell were enough to bring victory to the Phi Sigma Kappa outfit.

Question Marks beat Steele, Carr won from Old West, and Zeta Beta Tau scored over Pi Kappa Phi by forfeits.

Dr. Wiley To Address Fayetteville Teachers

Dr. W. L. Wiley of the department of Romance languages will address the northeastern council of high school teachers' division of French today at Fayetteville. He will deal with details in the method of instruction of high school students, and will draw distinctions between the high school and college teaching methods.

DR. JACKSON TO ADDRESS GROUP ON CITIZENSHIP

Y. M. C. A. Quartet of Parker, Briggs, Brietz, and Templeton to Sing at Meeting.

A joint meeting of the Y. M. C. A. cabinets will be in order Monday night, 7:00 o'clock, in Gerrard hall.

Dr. W. C. Jackson, dean of the school of public administration will address the group on "Campus and Christian Citizenship." Dean Jackson is in his first year at the University as head of this new department. Previously he was vice-president of N. C. C. W. before the consolidation of the state's institutions.

Another special feature of the gathering will be the quartet of the Y. M. C. A. This group is composed of Jesse Parker, John Briggs, Raymond Brietz, and Charles Templeton.

Important Business

Important business is also billed for discussion at the meeting. The annual Y. M. C. A. Thanksgiving service, scheduled for Wednesday morning at 7:15 o'clock in Kenan stadium, will be up for discussion. Members of the groups will aid in the advertisement of the event, at which Reverend Ronald Tamblin will speak. The annual football game between the Orange County Training school and an opponent as yet to be selected will also be up for discussions at the meeting.

All students interested in joining the cabinets are cordially invited to attend this meeting and give their names to the secretary of the club under which they will be classified—freshman friendship council, sophomore cabinet, or junior-senior cabinet.

OKLAHOMA DAILY LISTS TAR HEEL AS WELL-KNOWN

"Daily O'Collegian" Lists University Paper as One of Five Best Known in Country.

In a news story reprinted recently in the Daily O'Collegian and other prominent undergraduate newspapers, the University of Oklahoma Daily picks the following "the country knows these best" list:

College presidents: Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia, Glen Frank of Wisconsin, A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard, Robert M. Hutchins of Chicago, James Rowland Angell of Yale, and Ray Lyman Wilbur of Stanford.

College students: Pug Rentner of Northwestern, Jackie Coogan of Santa Clara, Orv Mohler of Southern California, Allan Hoover of Harvard, and Burbank Murray of Wisconsin.

College newspapers: Yale Daily News, Columbia Spectator, Wisconsin Daily Cardinal, DAILY TAR HEEL, North Carolina; Daily Princetonian.

College football teams: Notre Dame, University of Southern California, Army, Northwestern, Pittsburgh.

THE DAILY TAR HEEL is one of the youngest college dailies in the country, being the junior of both the Cardinal and the Princetonian by forty years, as well as being the junior of the Yale Daily News and the Columbia Spectator by several years.

TWO CONVENTIONS WILL HAVE LOCAL MEN ON PROGRAM

Professors Have Prominent Places On Programs of Sociology and Economic Conferences.

At the twenty-seventh annual meeting of the American Sociological Society December 28-31, in Cincinnati, two University professors will have prominent places on the program.

Dr. Howard W. Odum of the department of sociology is chairman of the division of cultural and folk sociology and will preside over the sessions of that group. In the division of social psychiatry, Dr. E. R. Groves will deliver a paper on the subject: "The Field and Problems of Social Psychiatry."

The American Economic Association will be meeting in Cincinnati at the same time in its fifty-fifth annual session. At this meeting Dr. C. T. Murchison of the school of commerce will deliver a paper on: "The Requisites of Stabilization in the Cotton Textile Industry."

DR. W. F. PROUTY WELL KNOWN AS GEOLOGY TEACHER

New Head of Geology Department Is Considered One of America's Authorities on Marble.

Dr. W. F. Prouty recently made acting head of the department of geology has a distinguished record as teacher and practical geologist. His chief interest is in teaching and for this reason he has resisted repeated offers to go into specialized branches of commercial geology. Before coming to Chapel Hill, Dr. Prouty was head of the department of geology at the University of Alabama and at the same time was chief assistant on the Alabama Geological Survey. Under his guidance the department developed from one having a few beginning courses to one including a number of advanced courses.

Most notable among Dr. Prouty's contributions to the development of Alabama during his residence at the University are: "Geological Map of the Coosa Coal Field," "Map and Geological Report on the Marble of Alabama," "Report and Geological Map of the Graphite Areas," the first official report of the presence of workable iron ore beds beneath the Shades Valley (Birmingham area) directly contributing to the great industrial development of that section, "Map and Bulletin on Good Roads and Road Materials of Alabama," and report to the War Department on the geology of the site for Wilson Dam at Muscle Shoals.

In addition to his duties as a teacher Dr. Prouty has found time to publish forty bulletins, reports and scientific papers. Recent information received in Chapel Hill reveals the fact that Dr. Prouty is considered by the commercial world one of America's leading authorities on marble and marble quarrying.

GLEE CLUB WILL SING ON CAMPUS DECEMBER 4

The University glee club will give its first campus concert of the year in Hill music hall Sunday, December 4, at 4:00 o'clock.

This concert will take the place of the regular Sunday vesper service, and is the first of a series to be given, one each quarter. The concert is open to the public.

Roland Hayes Left Rustic Life Of Obscurity For International Fame

Negro Tenor Who Will Appear in Concert at Durham This Afternoon Went to Europe Early in His Career to Seek Fame Which Was at First Denied Him in This Country.

Like so many others of his race who have received world renown as artists, Roland Hayes, negro tenor, rose from complete obscurity. This singer, who is to give a concert in Durham this afternoon, was not many years ago a mere Georgia "nigger," just another pickaninny from a large family born of a widowed mother, who was reared as a slave.

After a desperate struggle for existence on a tiny Georgia farm, Hayes went to Fisk University as a self-help student. It was here that his singing attracted attention and won him a place with the Fisk Jubilee Singers. In Boston he was singled out by a noted instructor of music and given the advantage of a complete vocal training. He launched his personal career with a few recitals, the small proceeds of which were soon swallowed by his overhead.

Famed in Europe

Unsuccessful in Boston, he was urged by friends to try Europe. Although virtually destitute when he reached London, his genius soon received appreciation. As has happened to many other American artists, Hayes enjoyed continental fame before the praise of his native land.

His European experiences were comparable to a triumphal procession. He appeared in Buckingham palace before the crowned heads of England. Parisian critics recognized the delicate perception of his singing style, while Vienna and Berlin elevated him to the heights reserved for their own Teutonic favorites. His remarkable interpretation and the poignant appeal of the negro spirituals were a superb novelty never before experienced by Europeans.

Received American Offers

His meteoric rise in Europe brought a flood of offers to return to this country. When Hayes finally did come back, he was heralded as one of the outstanding artists of his race. In addition to comparisons to Countee Cullen, Jules Bledsoe, and Langston Hughes, cultural leaders of the negroes, he was accorded a fitting place in the lists of all American vocalists.

Since his return he has sung in practically every city of size in this country. Frequently he has appeared with leading symphony orchestras as guest soloist.

Appeal of Artist

The appeal of this young man is difficult to analyze, but it unmistakably is related to a deep sympathy with the suffering of all humans. His own story of the origin of his desire to sing is typical of his attitude toward art. Upon hearing phonograph records of Caruso and Eames, he declared, "It was as if a bell rang in my heart." From that moment on, his course was a clear one.

Monde Musical, Parisian music journal, has summarized his effect as satisfactory as any with the statement, "One feels that Roland Hayes is here without equal and that to hear his negro spirituals is a sort of blessing from Heaven."

Dr. Cobb To Record Observations Of Forty-Five Years Of Teaching

University Professor Who Headed Geology Department for Forty Years Says He Has Taught Enough and Now Plans to Devote Major Attention to Writing Results.

By Robert W. Madry

"When a man has taught some forty-five years, that is enough. If he can afford to do so, he ought to quit the classroom and set down in writing the results of his work."

The words are those of Dr. Collier Cobb, celebrated geologist and teacher of three generations of University students, who with this explanation served notice this week on the trustees of the University of North Carolina that he desired to retire from administrative duties and devote most of his time to writing.

Although already the author of several well known books and of other numerous scientific papers that have appeared in magazines and elsewhere, from now on, Dr. Cobb, if he keeps the promise made himself, will do but little teaching. But the world may expect to hear from him often, for, after being prodded for many years by his friends and colleagues, he has finally agreed to devote major attention to the results of his work and observations during these last forty-five years. He has even promised to do a book of memoirs, which likely will be the most interesting contribution of all.

Offers to Help University

"I have reached the age of seventy still mentally and physically in good condition," he told President Frank Graham the other day in announcing his decision. "I shall be glad to serve the geology department and the University through the rest of my days, I hope, by giving up some of my duties now, to do writing that I have long had in mind, and preserve my vigor to a happy old age."

Those who have known him here in Chapel Hill through the years realize that Dr. Cobb was not overstating the case when he spoke of being "seventy and still mentally and physically in good condition."

He doubtless could go on teaching for a number of years, for he apparently is as alert and as sound in mind and body as when he celebrated his sixtieth birthday ten years ago. One explanation is that Collier Cobb has obeyed the laws of good health. When his rotund figure has become a bit too plump, his blood pressure a bit too high, he has consulted his doctor and taken measures to remedy the trouble. He eats and sleeps regularly and neither smokes nor drinks. His has always been a temperate life.

In resigning his position as head of the department of geology, which he has built up from practically nothing to one of the best in the country during the

WEEK-END DANCE SET COMPLETED BY FALL GERMAN

Annual German Club Dance Set in Tin Can Brought to Close Last Night by Fall German.

With the closing of the annual fall German club dances last night, the program of social festivities for the Duke week-end was brought to a close. A tea dance and the sophomore German Friday and the morning dance and fall German yesterday completed the set of dances. Charlie Boulanger and his orchestra furnished the music for the dances. Besides the group of girls coming from North Carolina towns to the dances, others attended from Sweet Briar and the Woman's College of North Carolina, as well as some from as far as New York.

The fall German, extending last night from 9:00 o'clock to midnight was led by Louis Skinner with Miss Corinne Mosely. Assisting in the leading of the dance were: Bob Mebane with Miss Ruth O'Brien.

STUDENT GROUP HAS MEETING OF COMMITTEE HERE

State Federation of Students Convenes at University; Issuance Of Paper Discussed.

At a meeting of the executive committee and officers of the North Carolina Federation of Students, which convened yesterday morning in Graham Memorial, the organization decided to affiliate with the Institute of Government. The institute was founded by Albert Coates, a professor in the University law school.

This organization was begun with the purpose of educating public office holders throughout the state in better government. The plans of the institute were presented to the group by Professor Coates. The issuing of a monthly journal to members of the federation and the high schools in the state was discussed but nothing definite was decided upon.

Those attending the meeting were: Haywood Weeks, Carolina, president; William Smith, Catawba, vice-president; Eloise Cobb, W. C. U. N. C., secretary; Mary Siewers, Salem, treasurer; Carlton Anderson, State; Jerome Clark, Davidson; Wendell Horne, Duke; and Sarah Stevens, Asheville Normal. After the meeting, luncheon was served in the grill of Graham Memorial.

SIGMA GAMMA EPSILON ENTERTAINS PROFESSORS

The local chapter of Sigma Gamma Epsilon, national geology fraternity, entertained the professors of geology and their wives on Thursday evening. The professors and their wives were the guests at a bridge party held in the fraternity's chapter room in the geology building. Following the bridge refreshments were served. The list of guests included: Dr. G. R. MacCarthy, Dr. W. F. Prouty, Dr. John G. Douglas, Mrs. Collier Cobb, the Misses Mary and Mary Lou Cobb, Miss Edith Averitt, I. L. Martin, Lindsey Hunt, E. N. Kjellesvig, J. A. Alexander, J. C. Dunlap.

Bowling Alleys Completed

The bowling alleys in Graham Memorial have been completed and will be open to the public Tuesday.

GENERAL ALUMNI MEETING CALLED FOR NEXT MONTH

Group Which Initiated Loan Fund Drive Faced by Different Situation This Year.

The Alumni office of the University has been busily engaged during the past week in sending invitations to officers of local alumni clubs, organized alumni classes and prominent alumni to attend the meeting in Chapel Hill, December 9, of the annual General Alumni Assembly.

The program of the annual assembly and business meeting of the General Assembly Association is to be concentrated this year into one evening. K. P. Lewis, president of the General Alumni Association, will preside over the meeting.

Loan Fund Drive Started

It was the same meeting last January that initiated among the alumni the Emergency Student Loan Fund appeal. Following the meeting here, which brought together some 150 alumni from more than twenty-five cities, thirty alumni clubs throughout North Carolina and other states held meetings and were addressed by President Graham, thus giving him a platform for broadcasting the University's appeal: "Save the students."

According to local opinion a different situation confronts the University this year. It is felt that a legislative year serves to challenge the faith of the stand in the University and the aim of the alumni officers is slated to take the form of making the coming assembly a genuine and real expression of the continued faith and loyalty of the alumni.

PRIZES OFFERED FOR SPEAKERS IN ORATORY CONTEST

American Legion Is Sponsoring Oratorical Contest to Promote Patriotism in State.

In the fifth oratorical contest to promote patriotism and Americanism in North Carolina, the American Legion is offering to the winners of an inter-collegiate contest four prizes: a gold medal and seventy-five dollars to the best speaker, fifty dollars to the second best speaker, twenty-five dollars to the third, and fifteen dollars to the fourth.

The speaker who will represent the University must be chosen before December 17. The subject is "Public Education in North Carolina—Its Past and Its Future." The final contest, when representatives of all the colleges in the state will meet, will be conducted in Raleigh in the Needham Broughton high school building, January 20, 1933.

Speeches Limited

Rules for the contest require that the speech of each contestant shall be original with them, and shall not exceed fifteen minutes in length.

This contest is the fifth in a series sponsored by the American Legion for the promotion of patriotism in the state of North Carolina.

It is necessary that all candidates see Dr. George McKie, of the English department, at once at 210 Murphy hall, between 9:30 and 11:45 o'clock.

An Ideal

Becomes a Reality

The battle has been won. Despite the fact that Carolina came out defeated in the game, the fight which has been waging for a permanent good-will between Duke and Carolina is over, and the existence of this good feeling need no longer be a matter of doubt. Any two schools, at one time as jealous of each other as Duke and Carolina were several years ago, who can go through such a trying test of spirits as yesterday's game, and still come out without a single offensive occurrence taking place, should have no fear of any strained relationships in the future.

It was a hard game for the Tar Heels to lose. But the spirit with which they took their defeat can not be too highly commended. At times it looked as though the Fates were frowning down upon them. At times there seemed every reason in the world for completely giving up because of discouraging circumstances. But they refused to do so, choosing rather to take their medicine "standing up."

The presentation of the Friendship Trophy was formally carried out for the first time since its establishment three years ago. And the effect that it had upon the stands was astonishing. As the game ended there seemed to be a feeling of discontentment running through the Carolina crowds. But the presentation ceremony acted as oil poured on troubled waters. And when it was all completed no one was harboring any ill-will against the rivals.

The trophy has proved its worth beyond all possible bounds of expectation. And many of the skeptics who formerly opposed the idea have now changed their viewpoint after yesterday's occurrence.

The student bodies of Duke and Carolina are to be congratulated on their conduct, and more especially should praise be fitting for these organizations and individuals who have been instrumental in bringing about a lasting friendship between the two institutions.

The ideal has, as last become a reality.

Down, But Never Out

The University of North Carolina faces today a chapter in its lengthy history of almost unprecedented tragedy. With a deficit estimated at $113,000 looming for the year, it is obligatory that University officials again pare the salaries of the teaching personnel so that this institution may continue to exist as a tower of intellectuality to the youth of the state.

State institutions all over the nation have faced practically the same situation in these three years of economic discomfort. Unfortunately, out of the select group listed among the country's most outstanding colleges and universities, this is one of the very few institutions which must turn to salary cuts in order to exist.

Last year a similar condition, though not quite so drastic, was faced by the faculty and executive officials. In this trying time all expressed a spirit of loyalty and devotion in the face of economic maladjustment that was a credit to the reputation of the institution. Salaries of young instructors and faculty members low in the pedagogical ranks were slashed along with those of the higher-ups. Many of these had families to support. Somehow they have managed to make the grade, though it is likely that the light of better times for 1932 helped to spur them onward.

Instead of a new era of light we now face one of darkness, which before the year is out may see this institution at its lowest mark since war days. We feel certain that such a situation at any other institution would be met with a wholesale exodus to other fields from lowest instructor to highest professor. Happily, there is little danger of any such retrogressive step. The same spirit that binds students together for one common cause manifests itself similarly in faculty ranks.

Down? We are... but not out.

Pedagogic Equitation

"Ride, v. t. To sit on and control so as to be carried; to control... autocratically; to dominate over," Noah Webster.

This term in recent years has become broadened to include many new forms of pleasure never imagined by the verbose old namesake of the ancient and holy mariner. Among these is the peculiar diversion enjoyed by instructors in picking out especially dumb looking students for a sort of squirming, twisting performance of physical anguish incident upon a series of mental gymnastics. "Er. Mr. Jones, can you explain to me the salient points of the treaty concluding the Conquest of Canaan, if any?" begins the professor of American history, and the morning canter is started.

On last September twenty-third, a certain quite learned and vicious doctor of philosophy in the University apparently decided that one of the occupants of the front bench in his course had not been sufficiently trained in celerity on the pick-up in his mental processes and, so, set immediately about to help the student to remedy this defect. For five days per week, this poor devil regularly received his morning work-out until his humorously called brain became overburdened and entirely ceased to function, while the power of suggestion or something actually operated to cover his back with saddle sores from the nape of his neck to—well, to as far back as a saddle could possibly slide without falling off. The last that was heard from him, he had just become frightened at an automobile, whinnied mournfully and sadly, and set off in a mad high-tailing run-away in the general direction of New York City. If no one has stopped him, he is probably taking the Niagara in one long broad jump about now.

Then, there is the professor who uses the names of his students in illustrating certain points in the text. He would probably come under this same general category. Anyone who has been subjected to the American history courses in this institution of alleged higher education will doubtless recognize this attempt at wit of the more subtle sort.

To understand properly the encroachments of the colonial assemblies upon the powers of the British Parliament, we will take the case of Mr. Smith who escorts a little co-ed out into the arboretum some night, ostensibly to get a better view of the fine old southern moon. Mr. Smith grasps a finger and, seeing that he is not going to be rebuked, takes another finger and, finally, the whole hand. Pretty soon, he has both hands in his grasp. Then, he becomes intoxicated with his success and begins to grow bolder. A few minutes later, he develops a grasping personality, and the sky is the limit. Anything may happen."

To a sensitive soul, this is torment of the bitterest sort. Gentlemen—and co-eds—something should be done about it. Write a letter to your congressman.

THOSE NEW BOOKS

FORGIVE US OUR TRESPASSES. Lloyd C. Douglas (Houghton-Mifflin Company) $2.50. Reviewed by Carl G. Thompson, Jr.

In his new and second novel, Forgive Us Our Trespases, Lloyd C. Douglas writes in an astonishingly better style than in his first and fascinating book, Magnificent Obsession. Those who have read and remember his first novel will recall the original and absorbing spiritual theme which is followed throughout the book. For those who expect another similar plot, Douglas' second novel will not be disappointing. Again this new author uses a biblical phrase which is modernized to apply to life as it is today, and again the reader will feel a deep sense of spiritual, not exactly religious, reverence toward the theme which the author employs.

Those who are unfamiliar with Douglas' first novel should not be misled by the mention of spiritual or biblical theme; for this phase of the novel is brought out in an impartial manner which would interest even the most confirmed atheist.

Those who are familiar with the Magnificent Obsession must not expect another plot coinciding with that of the first novel. Instead readers will find an entirely new plot, revolving around entirely new characters. The only link which joins the two novels together is the unusual interpretation of a significant passage of the Bible, brought out in a story of a young boy who is the cause of his mother's death at his birth and who later enters into the field of journalism with a cynical and morbid outlook upon life. How his life develops and continues is brought out in the most unusual style the reviewer has ever seen used in modern writing.

It is only too evident that the author has profited by his first novel, for all defects which could be found in this first story are carefully overcome in the second, and many additional contributions to literary style are found.

Forgive Us Our Trespases has the qualities of real literature, has a plot which will fascinate all readers, has that unusual theme developed as only Douglas can, and has the 'universality' which will appeal to all.

This week in connection with our permanent display of North Carolina we shall have on exhibit some of Mrs. Wooten's photographic studies of mountain people. These pictures attracted considerable attention when they were given a showing in Boston last year.

THE THREE PELICANS, a study of Archbishop Cramer and the Tudor Juggernaut, was written by Arthur Styron, formerly a student at the University. The Book-of-the-Month Club in offering it to their patrons declare it "a careful, talented and interesting historical novel about Archbishop Cramer and the English Reformation... The book is a work of real calibre, and unquestionably gives an able presentation of the period and characters."

Next Tuesday afternoon Miss Betsey Farrar will read from the Golden Tales of Anatole France. Miss Farrar is the daughter of Dr. Preston C. Farrar of the educational department. During the last several seasons she has appeared in several New York productions and in Miss Blanche Yurka's Company. All those who care to join us at this reading are asked to gather 'round the Bull's Head fireplace at 4:30 in the afternoon.

Duke Blue Devils Win From Tar Heels By 7-0 Score

Duke Wins Heartbreaker From Carolina On Soggy Field In Kenan Stadium

Blue Devils Take Advantage of Break in First Quarter to Push Over Score.

LANEY SCORES FOR DUKE

Plunges Over From Two Yard Line for Only Score of Game; Brandt Plays Brilliantly.

Heated to a boiling point by one of the most intense rivalries in the south, Duke's highly touted football machine, by taking advantage of a break in the first quarter, scored a 7 to 0 triumph over the fighting Carolina Tar Heels on a muddy field yesterday.

Approximately 20,000 fervent fans braved the threatening weather to see the Blue Devils break the Carolina victory jinx and register the first victory a Durham eleven has been able to garner over the Tar Heels in forty years.

Duke Threatens

Roaring along, devoid of the smashing power it was rated to have, the Duke juggernaut threatened to score in the initial period when Wentz, Blue Devil end, blocked Woolen's punt on the 35-yard line. The battling Collinsmen turned back every Duke thrust to take the ball over on downs only to be victims of a costly break a few plays later.

With the ball in midfield, Laney, Coach Wade's best back, kicked the ball bouncing off McCaskill and was recovered by Means of Duke on the 20-yard line. A 15-yard penalty ensued when Coach Collins came on the field to protest the decision of the officials, placing the ball on Carolina's 5-yard line.

The elixir of life furnished to the situation by the Tar Heel line kept the victorious aggregation away from the promised touchdown land for two downs, but Laney made a dive over the left side of Carolina's line to register the first Duke touchdown in three years. Cornelius converted by place kicking to make the score 7 to 0.

Carolina was unable to make any scoring gestures the first half, but Duke managed to reach the Tar Heel 25-yard line by virtue of Rossiter's superior kicking and Mason and Laney's plunging. The half ended with Duke trying to penetrate Collins' line on the 24-yard mark.

Third Quarter

A short time after the resumption of hostilities in the second half, Kahn recovered Laney's fumble of "Pepper" Martin's kick on the 40-yard stripe to give Carolina the ball in Duke's territory. Duke took the ball on downs and lost it a minute later when Laney fumbled again when Brandt hit him hard and Walker recovered on Duke's 25-yard. Two smashes and McCaskill's fumble with Duke recovering terminated the Tar Heel scoring attempt.

Electrifying the shivering crowd by intercepting White's pass, Laney scampered to the Carolina 15-yard line from his 43-yard marker for the longest run of the game. White knocked him out of bounds. Displaying a great defensive stance, Carolina took the ball over on downs.

Another Duke Threat

In the fourth quarter, Duke again menaced the Carolina goal line, reaching the 10-yard mark before the Tar Heels thwarted their chances of another touchdown. The game ended with the Blue Devils hammering away at the Carolina's line on the 20-

Duke Freshmen Defeat Davidson Team, 14 To 6

Counting twice in the third period, the Duke Blue Imps took their fourth straight win in as many starts, downing Davidson's Wildkittens 13 to 6. Davidson rallied in the last period, pushing across their only marker.

Neither team threatened in the first half. Intercepted passes paved the way for both of the Duke scores. Whitener crossed the goal line for the first touchdown and Alexander tallied a few minutes later for the second marker. Alexander placed-kicked for the Duke extra point after the second marker.

Veriible carried the ball over for Davidson in the final period after a march nearly the entire length of the field.

FROSH HARRIERS TAKE WIN FROM DUKE YEARLINGS

McPhail of Carolina Takes First Place With Fine Time Over Three Mile Course.

Placing three men in the initial five to cross the finish line, Carolina's powerful freshman cross-country team chalked up a 24-31 victory yesterday over Duke first year men.

R. Y. McPhail, who has shown marked ability all season, clinched first place with the fine time of 16:30 for the course. MacQuarrie and Ford were the only Duke men to finish in the first five, being second and third respectively. L. Conte was fourth.

In one of the finest goal line sprints ever seen in a Carolina freshman harrier meet R. M. Neel, finishing fifth, barely nosed out Umstead of Carolina who was sixth and Witherell of Duke who was seventh. Witherell and Umstead, close together upon entering Emerson field for the final dash, were a full score of yards ahead of Neel before the latter forged ahead.

The full summary is as follows: McPhail, Carolina, first, 16:30; MacQuarrie, Duke, second, 16:37.2; Ford, Duke, third, 16:44; Conte, Carolina, fourth, 16:54; Neel, Carolina, fifth, 17:01; Umstead, Carolina, sixth, 17:02; Witherell, Duke, seventh, 17:02.3; Keeney, Carolina, eighth, 17:21; Coeste, Duke, ninth, 17:28; Everhart, Duke, tenth, 17:43; Doerk, Duke, 17:45; Eberley and Hollingsworth, both of Duke, tied for twelfth with 18:23.

yard stripe.

The outstanding man in the field was George Brandt, his scintillating work at end being above the defensive play of any other performer. Chandler played a whale of a game as did George Barclay. Both men were removed from the game because of injuries, Barclay returning in the fourth quarter. Walker did some excellent work at end. Underwood was a tower of strength at center.

Laney and Mason stood out for Duke as the star performers. The work of Crawford, J. Dunlap and Rossiter in the line was consistently good. Laney and Rossiter did some fine booting, outkicking Carolina's punters by decisive margins.

First downs favored Duke, 5 to 1.

Star In Carolina Defeat Yesterday

Upper left, George Brandt; upper right, Kay Thompson, lower left, Charlie Shaffer; lower right, George Barclay. These four players were shining lights for Carolina in defeat yesterday. Brandt turned in one of the most brilliant games at end ever seen on Kenan field. Thompson played well in the backfield, clicking off Carolina's only first down from scrimmage. Shaffer also turned in some nice work at halfback in the second half. Barclay, who returned to the Tar Heel lineup yesterday after an absence due to a knee injury, played his usual powerful game at guard.

CAVALIERS HAVE HIGH SPIRIT FOR TAR HEEL GAME

Play Against V. P. I. Last Week Showed Improvement and Encouraged Followers.

Virginia's football team, for the next few afternoons at least, will drill at top speed in order to be ready to face North Carolina in Scott Stadium at two o'clock on Thanksgiving afternoon.

Through this afternoon the Cavaliers will have a mixed diet of rough contact work, dummy scrimmage, drill in position play and in blocking and tackling, and signal drill. Next week, for three afternoons, there'll be only light workouts devoted to polishing the attack and strengthening the defense.

Starting Team Set

Coach Fred Dawson has been running together the same 11 men who started against V. P. I. This includes Captain Lewis Reiss in center, Horace Hallett and Chris Tompkins as guards, Buck Poss and Ray Burger in the tackles, and Bill Condon and Gene Wager on the ends. Tommy Johnson continues to call signals with Frank Sippley and Gene Stevens as halfbacks and Spencer Berger in as fullback.

If there are to be any changes in this lineup for the Tar Heel game it has not been indicated by Coach Dawson. Henry Sackett, who is back in uniform again after four weeks of nursing a bad shoulder, has been following the regulars in their signal drill. But it is not likely that he'll be with the starters against Carolina.

George Coles, tackle, and Johnny Dial, guard, have been in some of the rough going in

WESTERN STATE GRID TEAMS GO INTO TITLE TILT

Durham Downs Raleigh 34-0 for Eastern Title; Charlotte To Meet Salisbury.

Durham high school won the eastern North Carolina class "A" football championship Friday by defeating Raleigh, 34-0. Durham was undefeated in the 1932 campaign which ended this week-end.

Salisbury's great eleven, by trouncing Winston-Salem, Friday, went into a tie with Charlotte for the western honors. Neither team has been defeated. The deadlock will make necessary a change in the date of the state championship tilt with Durham, which was scheduled for next Saturday in Kenan stadium. Salisbury and Charlotte will play some time the coming week for the western title and the winner will meet the eastern winner either December 2 or 3.

The class "B" title race narrowed down to two teams Friday. Mount Airy won the western honors Friday by downing Reidsville, 12-6, and Elizabeth City surprised with a sensational win over Lumberton, 7-6. Mount Airy and Elizabeth City will meet for the state class "B" title Friday, November 25, in Kenan stadium.

In other class "A" games this week-end that marked the season's end, Goldsboro beat Rocky Mount, 12-7, and Greensboro and High Point fought to a scoreless tie.

Charlotte is the only unscored-on class "A" team in the state. The big team from the west amassed 82 points on the offensive. Durham easily leads in points scored, totalling 151

Carolina Finishes Second In Cross-Country Meet

Duke Takes Southern Conference Cross-Country Run, With Tar Heels Following.

SULLIVAN LEADS HEELS

Louis Sullivan Takes Fifth Place For Carolina, and Hubbard Follows for Sixth.

Sloshing five miles through mud and rain, Duke University harriers copped the ninth annual Southern Conference cross-country meet yesterday with the low score of 23 points, 22 points ahead of Carolina with 45. V. M. I. tallied 68; Tennessee, 125 for third and fourth positions.

Bob Bird and Jerry Bray, Duke's premier tracksters, led the field in a dead heat. Their time was 27:21.8, falling less than a minute short of Galen Elliot's record set in 1927. Captain "Red" Davis, also a Duke man, was third with 27:34.6, 100 yards behind his mates.

Carolina Second

Carolina's defending champs turned in some mighty fine performances, but they failed to put enough men towards the front ranks. Clarence Jensen of Carolina, last year's winner of the event, finished seventh with a time of 28:02. Both Louis Sullivan and Captain Bob Hubbard of Carolina finished ahead of Jensen, the former fifth with 27:52.8 and Hubbard trailing for sixth with 27:58.

Burruss of V. M. I. was third with 27:46.8. The highly touted Cadet club could do no better than clinch third place with 68 points.

Tennessee gave the dope bucket the most unprecedented kick of the day. The Vols only had five men to finish, four of whom were in the final seven.

Jerry Bray who tied with Bird for the championship was fourth in last year's event. The Duke man led the 1931 harrier procession all the way to the laundry where Jensen hit his stride. Bob Bird didn't run last year, but Captain "Red" Lewis, finishing third yesterday for Bob Tuttle's outfit, improved his position considerably. He advanced from thirty-first last year to third this year.

Sullivan Leads

Another lad who turned in fine work yesterday was Louis Sullivan, a boy who has been a consistent runner all season for Carolina. Last year Louis finished fourteenth, but he advanced to fifth position this year to lead the Tar Heel procession. Henry Sullivan, his twin brother, finished twelfth with 28:34.4.

Several lads failed to negotiate the full course, among whom was Robert McCallough, a boy who had traveled from Oxford, Miss., to enter the meet. Washington and Lee didn't enter a full club either, but M. R. Dunaj, a General, finished eleventh with 28:29; and E. L. Bond, his mate, was fourteenth with a time of 29:10.2.

SOUTHERN TEAMS GREATLY CHANGE GRID SCHEDULES

Carolina Remains on Vanderbilt Card, While Vandy Severs Relations With Tulane.

With this football season almost over, Southern Conference teams are arranging their next year's schedule, and as a result many important changes are being made. The most outstanding announcement so far was that Vanderbilt broke off athletic relations with Tulane.

Carolina Plays Vandy

The Commodores said they would play six Southern Conference teams next year but would make several changes of opponents. Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia Tech, and North Carolina would remain on the card, but that Tulane, Georgia, Maryland, Mercer, and Western Kentucky were being dropped. Sewanee, Louisiana State, Oklahoma, and Ohio State are new opponents.

Reports have it that Georgia Tech would probably not play the Green Wave in 1933, but Tech officials claim they have taken no action on next year's schedule. Although they have not released their card, Tulane may play Colgate, Pittsburg, and Maryland next fall.

New Intersectional Tilts

Several intersectional contests have been arranged. Georgia, who won their third successive game from Yale last year, will play the Eli after the two teams had severed relations this fall. V. M. I. and Mercer meet Navy at Annapolis. Virginia has Ohio State scheduled in Columbus, and Louisiana tackles Oregon in Portland. South Carolina has Villanova and Louisiana State on their card for 1933.

Kentucky will cut their schedule from nine to eight games next year. V. P. I. has been dropped from the Wildcat card.

COLLEGE DAILY ASKS WHY NOT PAY PLAYERS?

The Minnesota Daily asks editorially: "Why not pay football players? They constitute the most important cog of the athletic money making machine, and all they get in return is a lot of slush about fighting for dear old 'Alma Mater' and that 'tired aching feeling.'"

WILL ROGERS IS STAR IN PICTURE BEGINNING WEEK

Rogers, Muni, Huston, Morley,
And Laughton Are Stars in Attractions for Week.

The simple virtues and homely philosophy of real Americans are extolled by Will Rogers in "Too Busy To Work," a story of everyday people which, with Rogers in the title role, is heading the week's program at the Carolina theatre tomorrow.

A most unusual type of story comes to the screen Tuesday in the Warner Bros. picture, "I Am A Fugitive From a Chain Gang," starring Paul Muni. The picture treats of the experience of a man sentenced to a state chain gang for the theft of less than five dollars, who escaped and is still at large.

Jungle Picture Wednesday

A quarter-mile of the African jungle was duplicated by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the filming of "Kongo" which, with Walter Huston in the featured role, comes here Wednesday. As "Deadlegs" Flint, Huston re-enacts the role he created on the New York stage. He portrays a paralyzed tyrant who propels himself around in a wheel chair, dominating the few whites who inhabit his small African trading post and the hordes of black savages who infest surrounding jungle.

Karen Morley plays the part of Jenny Wren, an adventuress who was slain by some unknown in "The Phantom of Crestwood," Thursday's feature. Included in the cast are H. B. Warner, Ricardo Cortez, Robert Elliott, Ivan Simpson, Robert McWade, George E. Stone, Sam Hardy, and others.

Charles Laughton, as the murderer in "Payment Deferred," showing Friday, repeats the role in which he scored a sensation on the stage in London and New York. The cast also features Neil Hamilton, Maureen O'Sullivan, Dorothy Peterson, Verree Teasdale, and Ray Milland.

Saturday's feature, "The Big Stampede," stars Noah Beery and John Wayne.

German College Songs To Be Sung At Meeting

Dr. E. C. Metzenthin has arranged to have a group of University students sing German students songs at the meeting of the Friends of German club, tomorrow night, at 7:30 o'clock, in room 214 of Graham Memorial.

Dr. Metzenthin has worked with the group in preparation for the program. Dr. Meno Spann and Dr. F. E. Coenen will deliver informal addresses on present-day conditions in Germany.

Professor F. H. Koch to Speak in Cincinnati, Ohio

Professor F. H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers, will leave Tuesday afternoon for Cincinnati, Ohio, where he will speak Wednesday in the Woman's club building on "Making an American Folk Drama." While in Cincinnati, Koch will be the guest of the city manager, C. A. Dykstra. Friday afternoon he will lecture before the annual convention of the National Council of Teachers of English, his subject being "Playmaking in Our Schools."

A.B. Seniors

Seniors in the school of liberal arts whose names begin with the letters "M" through "R" will report to Dean A. W. Hobbs tomorrow to make applications for degrees.

TWO TEAMS HAVE STIFF WORKOUTS TO END PRACTICE

Betting Odds on Great Grid Tilt Shift To 50-1 on Tar-Mags as "Pop" Albright Remains Silent.

An air of tension pervaded the city rooms of THE DAILY TAR HEEL yesterday afternoon as the redoubtable daily force went through its last practice session with pencil and paper for the famed Tar-Mag vs. Yackety-Buc encounter Monday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock on the intramural field. Reporters pecked nervously at their typewriters, city editors chewed their pencils, and the editor and managing editor paced feverishly up and down the room. The day of the great game was drawing near!

Editors Confer

Editors Barnett and Rose together with Managing Editor Wilson, the latter two of the TAR HEEL, conferred far into the night with Coach "Silent Pop" Albright, who hasn't said much in the last few days. Coach Albright's silence was said to be affecting the betting odds on the game, which have shot to 50-1 on the Tar-Mags.

Coach Hill, of the Yackety-Bucs, could not be reached for a statement at a late hour last night. It was understood that he would start the first string team in an attempt to run up a large score on the Tar-Mags in the first quarter. It is understood that the Yackety-Buc team, if it is ahead in the first quarter, will probably walk off the field.

Dr. Cobb To Record Teaching Observations

forty years he has been its chief administrator, Collier Cobb has no idea of pausing from the scene of campus life.

Well-Known in Village

Chapel Hill would not be Chapel Hill without this man—passing on the campus and at the postoffice, always jovial, always with a story, his face aglow with good humor, his smile infectious.

Few professors at Carolina have ever been so close to the students, few so beloved by them. Occasionally he finds in his classroom the grandson of some man whom he has taught.

During his life he has traveled far and wide, around the world several times, and he has brought the observations of his travels to bear on the subject at hand in his classroom.

And in his travels he has not neglected his home state. He has first-hand knowledge of Tar Heel soil. His students are frequently astounded to find that he knows about ten times more about their home county than they do. Put him down in any Carolina hamlet, town, or city, and in less than five minutes he will be shaking hands with more than a dozen people he knows. Not only that, but one will discover that he is related to ninety percent of them.

Drew Map of State

One of the best pieces of work he ever did, he feels, was a map of North Carolina which he completed in 1879. It was adopted by the State Board of Education and was for forty-five years the official map of the State.

Collier Cobb comes from Wayne county. He was born on the Mt. Auburn Plantation, his grandfather's home, near Goldsboro. He was educated at Wake Forest, the University of North Carolina, and at Harvard.

He made all of his expenses at Harvard working as a newspaper correspondent, and he believes that he established while at Harvard the first newspaper syndicate in the country, for he corresponded for newspapers from all sections.

Early Start in Journalism

He had gained his journalism experience early, for at the age of nine, strange as it may seem, he had edited a paper of his own in Shelby. From 1871 to 1875 this precocious youngster was editor of the Shelby Home Journal. He illustrated his articles himself, drawing the sketches on a block and cutting them out with a graver.

In 1880 he came to Chapel Hill to teach Greek and physical geography in a school presided over by Locke Craig, afterwards governor of North Carolina. He also taught in Waynesville and Wilson.

He had just finished a term as superintendent at Wilson when he went to Harvard. He never lost touch with North Carolina while in the north, for he came back each summer to lecture in some of the state's summer schools. For two years after graduation at Harvard he was assistant there in geology, and for two more years he was an instructor in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

And one should not close a recital of Collier Cobb's student days without mentioning the fact that during some of his summer vacations he worked as telegraph operator, being at one time supply operator for the Carolina Central Railroad.

Is Versatile Man

Nor should the fact be overlooked that along with his amazing versatility goes his reputation as an artist. His pen and ink sketches, some of which hang on the walls of his study, have won much commendation, and his water-color and oil paintings, with their subjects in all parts of the globe, are not considered bad.

In material possessions Collier Cobb does not run true to form as college professors go. He has worked hard and has deservedly accumulated a substantial amount of this world's goods. The depression already has cost him around $50,000, but if things get better, as he believes they will, he will still have enough to get along on. Most of his money he made in real estate. He developed Cobb's Terrace into one of the most popular residential sections of town.

Has Large Private Library

One of Dr. Cobb's greatest prizes is his extensive private library, consisting of more than 10,000 bound volumes. He believes it is the largest private collection south of the Potomac or east of the Ohio. The books line the walls of three rooms in his home, overflow into the out-houses, and his office is lined with still others. Most of them

Dr. Cobb's home life is pleasant. With him and his wife, the former Mary Knox Gatlin, and his daughter, Miss Mary Cobb, who is head of the bureau of correspondence of the University extension division. One of his sons, Collier Cobb, Jr., also lives in Chapel Hill and is doing well as a road builder. Another son, William Battle Cobb, now at State college, has gained a national reputation as an authority on soils.

French Picture Will Be Shown Here Today

Continuing the policy so successfully begun with Rene Clair's A Nous La Liberte, the department of Romance languages is presenting one of the most popular current French cinemas of the day, Marius at the Carolina theatre tonight at 9:00 o'clock.

The scene of the picture is Marseilles, and in the cast are the celebrated French stars, Pierre, Frosnay, and Remu, one of the most popular present day actors in France.

Dr. H. H. Staub, of the Romance language department, who saw the picture in France last summer, says: "We can well be proud to have such a picture in Chapel Hill."

The picture, which is taken from a success on the French stage, is described as being typically southern in temperament and mood.

RED CROSS WILL CLOSE CAMPAIGN TOMORROW NIGHT

Nearly 500 New Members Obtained and Over $600 Has Been Contributed.

With reports from Carrboro and the student body still missing, Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt reports that nearly 500 new members of the Red Cross have been secured in Chapel Hill. Total contributions from townspeople thus far have been in excess of $600.

Colonel Pratt, who is at the head of the local organization, gave his report with a marked note of optimism. The regular campaign, begun on Armistice Day, is slated to end tomorrow night. The goal of the organization is to secure 750 members and $1,000 in contributions.

Large Returns Expected

Gratifying returns are expected to come in from the student body. Irving Boyle, president of the interfraternity council, has charge of collections from fraternity men; Bill Medford, is at the head of the campaign in the different dormitories; and Elizabeth Moore has charge of the two sororities and Spencer hall. Any students desiring to make contributions to the Red Cross coffers may communicate with the aforementioned.

Colonel Pratt addressed the grammar school students of Carrboro yesterday on the Junior Red Cross; and he is expecting the fund to be considerably augmented from this source. The remainder of Carrboro has not been heard from as yet, but the head of the local chapter reports that unofficial returns show Carrboro with a large percentage of enrolled compared with the population of the village.

ADULT EDUCATION CLASSES FORMED IN MANY TOWNS

Fall Classes Organized by Extension Division With Thirteen Subjects Offered.

Extension classes in adult education have been organized this fall quarter by the extension division of the University in twenty-seven communities of North Carolina, according to a report issued by R. M. Grumman, director. Ten instructors have been employed in the work, teaching 534 students in thirteen subjects. There have been approximately 900 course registrations. This is slightly more than the total of last year.

Regular Courses Taught

All courses taught through the extension division are identical with courses given here in the University. The following subjects have been administered: dancing and pageantry, health and physical education, elementary education—the social sciences, general science, teaching pupils how to study, ancient history, introductory course in school administration, Victorian literature, child study and development, social policy and education, guidance and administration of public school pupils, sight singing and ear training, public school music methods.

Classes of extension work have been organized in twenty-seven communities.

Will Sing At Duke

Pictured above is Doris Kenyon, famous motion picture actress, who will present a return engagement program of songs and costumes, next Monday evening in Durham, as a part of the Duke University concert series.

CINEMA STAR TO APPEAR ON DUKE CONCERT SERIES

Doris Kenyon, Famous Actress, To Present Recital for Second Time at Duke.

With the appearance of Doris Kenyon, famous motion picture star, in a program of songs and costumes, the Duke University concert series will get under way Monday evening, November 28. Miss Kenyon won a tremendous success at Duke last year and is making a return engagement.

Wednesday following her appearance here she will give a similar program at the Penn athletic club, in Philadelphia, which is presenting the identical series which is on the Duke schedule. Miss Kenyon will have an entirely new group of songs and beautiful costumes gathered from many parts of the world.

Claibert and D'Arkor

Those who heard Madame Clare Claibert, the beautiful Belgian coloratura soprano last season at Duke, will hear her again on Friday, December 16, in a program in which she will appear with Andre D'Arkor, leading tenor of the Brussels opera.

Incidentally, Claibert and D'Arkor will come directly to Durham from New York. Another direct-from-New York attraction in the Duke series will be the Gluck-Sandor Felicia Sorel ballet company, who are leaving that city for the first time after more than 150 consecutive performances to give a program at Duke Friday, January 6. This company is regarded as the only true American ballet. Gluck-Sandor is the teacher of the Earl Carroll "Vanities" dancers.

Other Attractions

Largest of the Duke series groups will be the National Woman's symphony orchestra, led by Ethel Leginska, conductor and soloist, which will play Tuesday evening, January 24. There are nearly 100 pieces in the orchestra, and each player is of soloist ability.

Gieseking, the celebrated German pianist, will be the last artist appearing in the series, Monday February 13. By many he is regarded as the world's greatest pianist actively engaged in concert work, and, still young, is in his prime.

More than 500 season tickets have been sold for the series and the sale of single tickets begins Monday.

EFFORT TOWARD HOMOGENEITY IN THEATRE BEGUN

Koch to Direct Spanning of Distance Between New York Theatre and Theatre Throughout Nation.

The National Theatre conference, as "a gesture in the direction of wiping out that sense of distance and aloneness which adds so much to the difficulty of those working actively in the theatre away from New York," has chosen Professor Frederick H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers, as regional director of the southeastern division.

Theatres in the southeastern division include those in North and South Carolina, Kentucky, Alabama, Mississippi, Maryland and Virginia.

The National Theatre conference is the outgrowth of a meeting of the National Drama conference last February, conducted under the auspices of the Carnegie foundation. It was formed as a co-operative membership organization purposing to "serve collectively the interests of the American theatre" and was "organized as a medium for the exchange of ideas and of collective service between the leading organized theatres of all kinds throughout the country."

Executives' Photos

Pictures of the Executive Committee of Sophomore Class Will Be Taken This Morning.

The executive committee of the sophomore and junior classes are requested to meet in room 214 of Graham Memorial this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in order that a group picture of each committee may be taken for the Yuckety Yuck.

The following committeemen will be in the picture: J. D. Winslow, Garwin May, Foster Thorpe, Chapin Litten, C. R. Faucette, Will Sadler, H. K. Bennett, C. S. McIntosh, Richard Somers, Abbott Dibblee, Jim Lothian, Bob Blount, H. C. Bridgers, Reed Devane, and Staley Pattishall, of the sophomore committee; and L. P. Tyree, Cornelius Bretsch, John Leak, John Barrow, Nat Townsend, Ed Michaels, Tom Broughton, Bernard Solomon, Julian Frankel, Brodie Nalle, Stokes Adderton, Paul Hiller, Ike Minor, and Jack Hammer, of the junior class.

Those to be in the picture are asked to wear dark suits.

THANKSGIVING SERVICES PLANNED BY Y. M. C. A.

The second annual Thanksgiving service of the campus Young Men's Christian Association will occur tomorrow morning at 7:15 o'clock in Kenan stadium.

Reverend Ronald Tambllyn of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian church will address the group. Another feature of the gathering will be several renditions by the "Y" quartet.

At last year's observance of the day, R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, was the speaker.

TAR HEEL WILL SUSPEND WORK DURING HOLIDAYS

Following its usual custom, THE DAILY TAR HEEL will suspend publication for Thanksgiving vacation with tomorrow's issue.

Work will be resumed Monday and the first issue after the holidays will appear Tuesday. All city editors, desk men and reporters will come to the office Monday for assignments.

GRAHAM FAVORS INTERCHANGE OF WORK WITH DUKE

President Visualizes Great Educational Center by Cooperation Between Duke and Carolina.

At the assembly period yesterday President Graham addressed the freshmen and sophomores in Memorial hall. He expressed an opinion that by the co-operation of the University of North Carolina and Duke University one of the great spiritual and educational centers of the world might be established in North Carolina. This might be accomplished by exchanging courses, professors, and material and books from the two best libraries in this section.

He said that new society could be built by careful planning. "We have," he said, "drifted into this depression because we have had no economic plan. Several of the larger New England interests are even now carefully planning for the progress of New England and we must follow them."

President Graham concluded by saying that we were the generation to build a fairer, greater and more progressive world, and urged that we plan our courses so we would be able to take our part in the affairs of the world.

Last Pep Meeting

Students Planning to Go to Charlottesville Are Asked to Meet Tonight For Final Instructions.

There will be an important pep meeting in Memorial hall tonight at 7:00 o'clock, in preparation for the Virginia game.

Day coach transportation for all who wish to make the trip to Charlottesville has been arranged, and the cheer leaders have expressed the desire that at least 150 students take advantage of this opportunity to help the school at Charlottesville.

Those who wish to make the trip are asked to be present at this meeting for last minute instructions.

The price for the round trip is $3.77.

SENIOR CLASS INVITATION COMMITTEE ANNOUNCED

Headed by Percy Idol as chairman, the senior class invitation committee announced yesterday by A. S. Cate, president of the senior class, is composed of Dan Kelly and Wilmer Hines. The committee will meet to arrange for the printing of invitations for commencement next spring. Two types will be made, one leather-bound and one cardboard-bound for the seniors to send out to their guests for the graduation exercises.

The first meeting of the committee is scheduled tonight at 6:45 o'clock in Graham Memorial.

Bowling Alleys Are Now Open for Student Patronage

The new bowling alleys in Graham Memorial will be unofficially opened today. The price will be ten cents for each person in a game. This will include nine boxes with three balls for each person a box and the playing off of strikes and spares made in the ninth box.

The new alleys are sixty feet long and highly varnished, and the pins have rubber cushions around them to prevent them from being knocked very high in the air and endangering the pin boys.

Betsey Farrar Will Read At Bull's Head

Miss Betsey Farrar will read from The Golden Tales of Anatole France at the Bull's Head this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. Readings were a regular feature of the old Bull's Head when the shop was located in Murphey hall. They were started again this year during the summer session, and proved so enjoyable that they have been continued throughout the fall.

Miss Farrar, who is spending the winter in Chapel Hill with her family, is a former Playmaker. Since her appearance on the boards here she has been in the cast of several New York productions including, The Lady With the Lamp, Sophocles' Electra with Blanche Yurka, and has been a member of the staff of the Neighborhood playhouse.

ORGANIZATION TO INSTRUCT NEWLY CHOSEN OFFICERS

Government Institute Will Arrange Conferences Between Old and New Officials.

Presidents of over a score of groups of county governmental officers in North Carolina joined together last week in one of the most unique public statements in the history of this state.

Realizing that a third or more of the newly elected officials in North Carolina will go into office December 5 to deal with problems with which they have had little previous experience, heads of the twenty-one units of the recently organized Institute of Government have decided to arrange several conferences to instruct the incoming leaders.

Conferences Arranged

Joint conferences between all incoming and outgoing officers prior to the induction of new officials; joint conferences between city aldermen, county commissioners, and state legislators prior to the convening of the General Assembly; and joint meetings of public officers and private citizens in the 100 counties Monday evening, December 5, to launch a far-reaching program of popular governmental education in connection with the first public installation of local officials ever held in North Carolina, in the presence of the rank and file of the people who elected them, are the three activities proposed by the Institute.

A petition to this effect has been signed by all of the leaders of the various governmental groups in the Institute, including Kemp P. Battle of Rocky Mount, president of the state bar association, and A. H. Graham of Hillsboro, Lieutenant-Governor elect of North Carolina.

KING VIDOR STUDYING IN LIBRARY AT DUKE

King Vidor, the celebrated motion picture director, played hookey to see the Carolina-Duke football contest last Saturday when he took time out for his research to see the game.

Vidor has taken a room in the Duke student union and is making that his temporary headquarters, although he is visiting Lawrence Stallings, prominent author, at his home in Reidsville.

The director is spending a great deal of time in the Duke library searching out facts and data for use in a new picture he is directing.

RESEARCH WORK TO BE CONTINUED BY TEXTILE BODY

University Selected by Textile Foundation for Research in Disposal of Wastes.

The University was selected by the Textile Foundation of Washington, the trade organization of the entire textile industry of the country, last Thursday for special research on the disposal and recovery of wastes resulting from the manufacture of various textile goods, according to H. G. Baity, dean of the engineering school, who is directing the research.

The arrangement which has been made with the Textile Foundation includes the institution of a fellowship which has been awarded to M. S. Campbell, who received his master's degree in sanitary engineering here last year. The arrangement authorizes the establishment of experimental plants in this state to study the matter, and it is this phase of work which is now being carried on. The University, as its part of the agreement, contributes its facilities and the direction of the research, which will be done by Dean Baity and Professor H. N. Jenks. Professor Thorndike Saville, who left the University last year, was also largely instrumental in arranging the matter.

Research Work

The research work will be a continuation of a study which has been carried on here for the past four years. The work already accomplished includes the study of wastes themselves and amounts resulting from various processes. More recently the study has been confined to the methods of treatment of wastes to render them safe for disposal.

THREE UNIVERSITY DELEGATES WILL ATTEND SESSIONS

Annual Meeting of National Students Federation Set for Christmas Holidays.

The eighth annual congress of the National Student Federation will be conducted in New Orleans, at Tulane University from December 28 through December 31. Approximately three hundred student body presidents will be in attendance.

Haywood Weeks, president of the University student body, will represent the men students there; Mary Frances Parker, president of the Women's Association, will represent the co-eds. Mayne Albright, southern district representative of the federation, will also attend the congress.

Many Activities Represented

Experts in the field of student government, student publications, honor systems, and athletics will lead discussion groups, and each representative will be given an opportunity to bring up any perplexing problems of his administration.

Speakers of national prominence will address the plenary sessions where the representatives will be allowed to express themselves on affairs of nationwide and international importance. The headquarters for the congress will be the Hotel Roosevelt in New Orleans.

Forgotten Principles

Supposedly an organization representative of campus opinion, the Student Forum has shown that there are many who object to the proposed plan for remedying the defects of our honor system. The majority of those who object, however, have shown only misunderstanding of the plan and its purpose. Being an innovation, it is distrusted, and students are prejudiced against putting it in operation.

The great objection, around which have been built so many arguments, is that student honor committees in each room will transform our honor system into a monitorial system. The Student Council has no such intention, nor will its plan have any such effect. The proposal to elect classroom honor committees contains the proviso that the students elected shall not in any way act as "policemen" or make any undue effort to apprehend a violator of the honor system. They will retain their normal seats; they will be expected, just as every student is under the honor system, to keep their eyes on their papers, not on the lookout for cheating in the class. And the classes who elect these committees and who have the authority to appoint whom they wish, will see to it that their representatives do not abuse their authority.

An issue so vital to the life of the honor system at this University should not hinge on what is relatively a technicality. In advancing our pros and cons we often lose sight of the question at stake. The student body of this campus will be called upon to make a decision, and that decision will determine whether our honor system will survive or whether it will eventually have to be replaced by a monitorial system. There are but few advocates of the latter plan, and those few will doubtless agree that such a step would be an acknowledgment that we cannot trust ourselves to govern ourselves; that we cannot behave according to a code of honor but have over the ever-present threat of punishment; that we cannot continue to maintain an honor system which has been an essential part of the life of this University since the day it was founded. If we resort to such an expedient, we destroy over a century's tradition of progress in student government.

But it will be inevitable if we do nothing to improve conditions. And although much criticism of the proposed plan has been offered, not one of its opponents has suggested a constructive measure. Meantime the question is: Shall we continue to approve an honor system whose principles and ideals we have forgotten?—A.T.D.

Pedagogics in The White House

"A professor's place is in his college." Within ten years that will be the plaint of the reactionary.

Already, volunteers are rushing from the classroom and laboratory to engage the enemy on the economic and political fronts. In North Carolina, a group of University professors have been largely instrumental in the establishment of the Institute of government to study and reform all branches of state government. Dr. Clarence Heer, University economics professor, has given up his classes in public finance to help North Carolina unravel its tax tangle.

Next year, in Salt Lake City, Reed Smoot, co-author of the much-reviled-by-Democrats Smoot-Hawley tariff bill, will become a private citizen, while Professor Elbert Thomas, of the University of Utah, will assume the senatorial toga in Washington.

Then, if Franklin D. Roosevelt follows his campaign policies, he will have a corps of college experts at his elbow during his stay in Washington. This week, when he goes to Capitol Hill to swap ideas with President Hoover on the foreign debt question, he will carry with him Dr. Raymond Moley, a Columbia economics professor.

Presidents may be born in log cabins but, in the future, they will be bred in the classroom. Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton and a professor of political science, was our first but not our last Professor-President.—E.C.D.

Rolling Stones Gather No Moss

In the early waking hours of a cold, bleak November morning would not the beckoning finger of field trip day cause the vivification of stark reality so impressively as to demand the casting of all field trip originators into the seven fires of eternal damnation? No sensible person would tie his boat to the dock, grab the oars, and attempt a three mile row. Yet, there are some exponents of stream-up pedestrian civilization whose main objective seems to inflict fiendish tortures on we unfortunate mortals under their tyrannical authority. Maybe it's, but I feel that the great weakness of fire in a Geology-minded pedagogue is continuity and judgment in invoking field trips. You cannot imagine our forefathers gathering in the wild and woolly forest and gazing up at a Diorite Hill in askance of its significance, nor do swampy terrains, slippery rocks across streams encourage our twentieth century gapers.

A brisk walk in the morning, when voluntarily undertaken, excites a vigor beyond compare, but such a ramp through the woods and fields under compulsory initiative revolts in the soul one phrase, explicit to infinity—"damn it!"

Nature is beautiful but why spoil the picture portrayed in poetic lore such as: "woodland glen: the smooth like sheen of rounded pebbles, glistening in the bottom of a sparkling brooklet," and similar phraseology, with: "a mass of crustal vegetation; round stones in the stream are examples of stream erosion; that hill is a Granite Rise; this spot here is a Gabbro Sill," and so far, far into the retarded endurance of we straggling slaves to the hammer and notebook.

We sigh and yield to our subjection—after all life is like that, full of hardship and these things which have to be done to gain another rung in the ladder of success. The forgotten man might as well pack up his troubles, put on his rose colored glasses and do a bit of forgetting himself.—F.A.N.

Youth Takes A Hand.

One phase of the past presidential election which should do much to lift the gloom from around the rank pessimists is the part which the youth of the country played in the support of both candidates. Youth has definitely taken a hand in national politics, a fact which bodes ill for the aged-in-wood politicians. Never in any preceding election has the younger generation taken so active and intelligent an interest in the outcome and the consequences of the economic policies of the candidates.

The present generation, which will be the generation of tomorrow, is conscious of the grievances it has against the old traditions and its rights in demanding retribution. It has seen the world thrown into war and subsequent economic turmoil and the grave consequences therefrom. It has seen the statesmen of today in their frantic endeavor to recover mold a still more unintelligible mass.

And it asks why. The telegrams from 176 college students throughout the country to the major political candidates asking them to clarify their position on world affairs is not a sign which may be dismissed lightly. It is the handwriting upon the wall.

"This youth of our present day," says the Christian Science Monitor, "is face to face with problems that bear so directly upon young manhood and womanhood that they are forced in causes and remedies . . . They bring new enthusiasm and a fresh, detached viewpoint."

In some countries this new enthusiasm of youth has been turned into narrower channels, but in America it has been allowed to stretch itself to the full extent. It is wholesome and filled with the driving ambition for better things. Youth's coming of age will mean a new and greater era in American politics.—V.C.R.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

Bowls

Something of an athlete, though in a rather wholly conservative and retiring manner, we welcomed the opportunity yesterday afternoon to try out Manager Albright's new duck pin alley downstairs in Graham Memorial. The alleys, constructed several weeks ago and now ready for the public, are two in number, and lie under the big piazza. We tossed three of the bowls (the correct term according to Webster), missed the end of the alley completely on the first two and knocked down eight pins on the third. Albright told us that the alley will stay open through the holidays and be formally dedicated sometime after Monday. We hope that the dedicatory (who will open the alleys by tossing a bowl down the alley under a rose petal arch) will profit by our experience and take three tries.

Fatal

Fatalities and near-fatalities are on the decrease in intercollegiate football, we are told, though we feel that the rules committee might look into the cheer leader end of football. An Associated Press dispatch from Champaign, Ill., reports that Claude Miller, University of Illinois varsity cheer leader, is in the hospital recovering from the effects of a head injury received during the Indiana-Illinois football game a Saturday or so ago. The report does not state whether the injury was inflicted by an unappreciative pop bottle tossing fan or whether Mr. Miller fell on his head in the process of cheer leading gymnastics. This, we feel, might bear investigation. Cheer leading is a grand old game and rough tactics have no place in it.

Election

Little political notes on the election drift into our desk every day or so. One of these we think should be passed on to our readers. Out in Washington, Aloysius Meyers, jazz band leader, running for lieutenant-governor on the Democratic ticket, was surprised to look into the papers Wednesday morning and find that he had been elected. Taking the whole election with a barrel of brine, Aloysius had based his campaign on a platform of "chorus girls on street cars, harmony in high chairs, and silk hats for traffic officers." Interviewed, he was still rather dazed over the whole affair and told reporters that he attributed his success in politics to taking a cold shower every morning.

Mr. Meyers' election, we feel, opens a broad field in American politics. In 1936, war debts, prohibition (sic), and tariff will be something for your grandchild's history book. Ben Bernie, shouting for pretzels at breakfast and two saxophones in every garage will sweep the country.

is enhanced by some startling brilliant remarks about other campus publications and may be a product worthy of the staff at whose whim it intermittently appears. It is not, however, worthy of this University.

There seems to be an unwritten law that every institution hoping to be dignified by the name university or college owes to itself and the public a humorous magazine. The production of good humor is the most difficult of arts. The rare instances in which collegians originate something really funny are by no means sufficient to sustain the flow that issues from every college in the country.

Every college from the rock bound coast of Maine to the sunny slopes of California is afflicted as we are. The Buccaneer is typical, neither one of the best or one of the worst. Its jokes are of the usual mellow over-ripeness and for the most part it is only mildly offensive as it reaches the public eye.

Granting that it is not such an insidious organ it obviously does not justify its precarious existence. To be sure it reaches a considerable number of young ladies bringing a delightful sensation of risque daring to sender and receiver but this lone use is no ample reason for its continued existence. The Buccaneer represents along with other publications of its nature a total waste of time. Its feeble and offensive attempts at humor are affronts to the good taste of the student body. It must be hoped that yielding to the sensibilities of the students and the faculty it will shortly drop off into the oblivion on whose brink it has so long lingered perilously.—J.F.A.

Carolina Team Gets Down To Hard Work For Thanksgiving Day Game

Whole Squad Puts Duke Game Behind and Works Earnestly For Virginia Contest.

INJURIES ARE NOT SERIOUS

Chuck Quinlan Announces That Team Will Be in Shape for Thursday's Encounter.

The Carolina gridders turned up in good shape today, and charging the Duke game off their books, concentrated on getting ready for Virginia Thursday with a long thorough drill at fundamentals, topped by offensive dummy scrimmage for three elevens.

Barclay, guard, had a swollen leg and a limp, but Chandler, fullback, showed no signs of the hard licks he took Saturday, and Burnett, quarterback, looked much better although he still has a very sore shoulder. Trainer Quinlan thought Carolina would be in as good shape at Virginia as against Duke.

The coaches were even pleased with Carolina's brilliant defensive play, and the work of Walker and Brandt, ends, Underwood, center, and several backs was particularly splendid.

Coach Collins offered no criticism and made no post-mortem. Instead everybody set to work with vim and determination to make the most of the short time left for preparing for Virginia.

Martin, quarterback; Shaffer, halfback; and Lassiter, fullback, who led the offense against Duke; won tries with the first string backfield in pass defense practice as a reward.

Offensive drills found Coach Collins shifting the backs around again to get them accustomed to running in many combinations.

Woolen, quarter; McCaskill and Thompson, halfbacks, and Chandler, full, ran behind the first line, which was intact except that Philpott replaced Barclay at one guard.

Burnett, quarter; Phipps and Daniel, halfbacks, and Lassiter, full, charged behind the second line. The third backfield had Martin, quarter; White and Shaffer, halves; and Croom full.

FOOTBALL TEAMS TO CLOSE SEASON

Undeclared Teams Will Meet Some of Stiffest Opposition In Game This Week-end.

Mythical national championship arguments waged more furiously today than ever on the gridiron battle fronts of the undefeated coterie of major elevens.

Included in the roster of victorious teams are Auburn in the south, Michigan in the Big Ten, Southern California in the west, Brown and Colgate in the east and Texas Christian in the southwest.

Southern California's Trojans meet Notre Dame in a battle which will be an important affair in deciding national champions while Auburn clashes with South Carolina to terminate her most successful season in years.

Michigan's powerful juggernaut, led by the all-American material Harry Newman, completed its season without a loss by taking Minnesota's fine contingent 3-0.

Brown and Colgate meet Turkey day to eliminate one from the titular honors in the east. Pitt, conquerors of Army and Notre Dame, meets Stanford and if the Pennsylvania crew wins this set to it should have preference in deciding the leading eastern eleven, even though her record is marred by ties with Nebraska, Big Six champ, and Ohio State.

AROUND the FIELD

By

CLAIBORN M. CARR

COACH CHUCK COLLINS HAS been the object of much talk, both favorable and unfavorable, since his memorable jaunt onto the playing field Saturday which cost Carolina fifteen yards and ultimately a touchdown. Every sports writer in North Carolina has had his say and in all the incident was a blessing to those in need of copy. Consequently, many untrue statements have been made concerning the play and what happened in the Carolina dressing room during the halves. The fact remains that Duke won the ball game and all the crying and "crabbing" in the world won't change that fact. Carolina played well and lost; Duke won but the Devils' supporters realize it was an unsatisfactory win and many wish the game had ended in a tie.

"FIFTEEN YARD PENALTY. Coming on the field without permission." Those were the words the headlinesman shouted into Coach Collins' ear Saturday after he had walked across the field with the coach to the ball ten yards from the sidelines. Coach Collins had walked from the sidelines to the head linesman and said, "I want to make a protest." The latter said nothing but blew his horn calling the attention of the referee. Coach Collins said yesterday that he was convinced that the headlinesman intended to give him permission when he blew his horn and that he changed his mind while the two were crossing the field. The referee of the game is secretary of the Southern Conference Officials' Association and has a large say in the appointing of officials. Coach Collins said yesterday, "I am thoroughly convinced that the act of the headlinesman was a display of authority to impress the head of the officials' association." Collins added that his belief was borne out by the personnel of the officiating crew and by the fact that the penalty was not called by the referee but by the headlinesman.

THE ONLY DEFENSE THE headlinesman had after the game was that in putting one foot across the sidelines, Coach Collins had violated the rules. Coach Collins says that this technical interpretation has never been used any place before and that it was a good defense to not refusing permission but "instead giving tacit permission by blowing his horn." The rule against coaches running on the field was made to prevent them from interfering with the play. In this case, play was thirty yards from where the headlinesman could have refused Coach Collins instead of walking that distance with him and then slapping on a penalty. The headlinesman had the power to refuse when Collins asked to protest, that official did this in the Georgia Tech game when the Carolina coach tried to protest the Jackets' shift.

SOME PEOPLE HAVE SAID that Coach Collins lost his head under fire and rushed out on the field. This was not the case. In seven years at Carolina, Collins has gone on the field two times. He was convinced that the officials' ruling was wrong Saturday and went to protest before another play was run and the protest would have been useless.

BEFORE WE LEAVE THE game we must glance at the brilliant end play of George Brandt. From the very first time Duke

EIGHT CAVALIER VETERANS WILL START THURSDAY

Three Sophomores Have Made Way Into Varsity During Their First Session.

Virginia will face North Carolina in Scott stadium on Thanksgiving with a line-up including only three men who have become regulars during their first season on the Cavalier varsity squad.

Horace Hallett, guard, of Newport News, Va.; Tommy Johnson, quarterback, of Norfolk, Va.; and Spencer Berger, fullback, of Flint, Mich.; are the only three players from the 1931 first year team who have made their way into the 1932 first team line-up.

Hallett Proves Valuable Man Hallett started out as understudy to Captain Lewis Reiss at center, but was found to be such a valuable lineman that he was soon playing guard as a regular. He weighs 175 pounds, is five feet, eleven inches tall, and played with Newport News high school before entering the university.

Johnson was in the starting backfield of the opening game, but received an injury in scrimmage that sent him to the hospital. By mid-season, however, he had worked his way back as a regular ball carrier. Against V. P. I. he was given a trial calling signals and he will probably direct the team against Carolina. He weighs 193, stands six feet, three, and used to play with Maury high in Norfolk.

Berger got his chance after Bucky Harris, regular fullback, had been injured in mid-season. His weight is 178 pounds, his height an inch under six feet. He played with Central high in Flint, Mich.

CONFERENCE CONSIDERS ADDED MAN ON TEAMS

There is a possibility that the Southern conference may follow the National Intercollegiate Boxing association's plan of adding a 115-pound division to college boxing teams, and allowing fighters only three pounds overweight.

At the present time, the lightest fighting class is the bantamweight, in which the standard is 119-pounds with an allowance of four pounds over.

If this plan is adopted, colleges will carry eight divisions instead of the seven which were bantam, feather, light, welter, middle, light-heavy, and heavyweight. The new division is still unnamed, but it may come under the heading of the flyweight class.

How To Avoid BONERS

THIS sort of thing has gone too far! When asked what product we get from whales, Bill Boner said, "Little whales."

Let's take action at once. Get him a good pipe and a tin of good tobacco. We all know a pipe smooths out the wrinkles, clears the mind for its best thinking. And we all know what smoking tobacco goes best in a good pipe. For a recent investigation showed Edgeworth to be the favorite smoke at 42 out of 54 leading colleges.

Rowe Started Successful Fistic Career When In Charlotte High

Boxing Team Won Conference Championships During First Two Years Under Rowe's Guidance, and Has Continued With Envious Record Ever Since.

Crayton E. Rowe, head coach of boxing here, has established an enviable record with his teams since he first took charge in 1926.

Coach Rowe originally hailed from Charlotte, and it was while he was attending high school there that he first donned the padded gloves. At the age of thirteen, he was fighting amateur bouts, and a year later he entered the professional prize ring, while still attending his classes at Charlotte high.

After graduation from high school, he continued fighting until the fall of 1925, when he decided to further his education. Entering Carolina, his ring prowess was acknowledged and he was made head boxing coach in the winter quarter of 1926.

Begins Winning Titles

In two short years, his proteges brought the Southern conference championship to Carolina. The members of that 1928 Tar Heel team were: Rufus White, featherweight, Lou Carpenter, bantamweight, Archie Allen, lightweight, Ed Butler, welterweight, Charlie Brown, middleweight, Odell Sapp, light-heavyweight, and Ox Shuford, heavyweight.

TENNIS TEAM TO MEET VIRGINIANS

Carolina Netmen Will Try for Fiftieth Consecutive Victory In Thanksgiving Meet.

The University tennis team will seek its fiftieth consecutive victory Thanksgiving day, when they clash with the University of Virginia netmen in Charlottesville. The team will leave tonight with the football squad. Wilmer Hines will play No. 1 and will be acting captain in the absence of Bryant Grant.

The other single matches will be played in the following order: Richard Willis, Harvey Harris, David Morgan, Walter Levitan, and Ike Minor. The doubles matches will be played by Hines and Morgan, Harris and Levitan, and Minor and Willis.

The Virginia players are: Donald Morrison, Washington, D. C.; J. de Koven Bowen, New York City; Stuart Taylor, Baltimore, Md.; Captain John Hedges, Plainfield, N. J.; Carl Rohman, New York City; and Herman Fletcher, Goshen, N. Y.

The Carolina players are expected to register a decisive win, since the Virginia record of last year was poor and the Carolina team has greatly improved with addition of two sophomores.

The following year, Coach Rowe left college and renewed his affiliations with the professional boxing game, acting in the capacity of manager and matchmaker for several prominent fighters. During his absence, the Carolina team proceeded to win the conference title for the second successive year with a nucleus from his great 1928 outfit.

He returned here in 1930 and, while he has had to watch Florida and Virginia take conference honors for the last three years, he can still boast of never having lost a state meet and very few dual events.

Developed Many Stars

Among the greatest boxers he ever turned out were Add Warren, Ox Shuford, Archie Allen, Noah Goodridge, Charlie Brown, Ed Butler, and Marty Levinson.

Although developing fighters is a strenuous job and very often an aggravating one, Coach Rowe gets many a grin out of his duties. For instance, the other day while his boys were working out in the Tin Can, he walked up to one of them and asked: "Are you a southpaw?" "No," replied the leather-pusher. "I'm a freshman."

Bryant Grant, captain-elect is expected in school for the spring quarter. In the meanwhile he is taking correspondence course.

Lenoir Wright will not be included in the line-up, since he is going to spend the holidays with his family. Coach Kenfield has scheduled Yale, Harvard, Army, Navy, N. Y. U., and Brown for spring competition.

Alpha Tau Omega and Lewis, winners respectively of the fraternity and dormitory leagues in the recently ended intramural tag football season, will meet on Emerson field this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock for the campus championship.

Both teams came through their regular schedules undefeated, and A. T. O. went on to win a three-cornered playoff for the championship of the fraternity loop when Beta Theta Pi and Zeta Psi also finished without losing a game.

Lewis Always Pulls Through

Lewis never won a game by an overwhelming margin, but was always there with the necessary punch to triumph by small advantages. In its first five games, the winner of the dormitory race never scored a touchdown.

Starting off against Manly, Lewis won out on first downs, 6-4, and, after receiving a forfeit from Old East, downed Ruffin 7-2, Aycock 4-1, and Best House 3-2, by the same method.

Steele was the first team to lead Lewis, holding a 13-6 margin at the end of the first quarter.

"I AM A FUGITIVE" WILL BE ATTRACTION TODAY

The story of "I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang," showing today at the Carolina theatre, was taken from the autobiographical novel of Robert E. Burns.

The picture tells of the inhuman treatment which the prisoners receive at the hands of the guards who watch over them with guns and bloodhounds.

Paul Muni, the sensational "Scarface," has the featured role. Also in the cast are Glenda Farrell, Helen Vinson, Preston Foster, Sally Blane, Noel Francis, Hale Hamilton, and Allen Jenkins.

TAR-MAGS SCORE VICTORY IN CLOSE PUBLICATION TILT

Yackety-Bucs Offer Strong Competition But Lose by One Touchdown Margin.

A stout-hearted, valiant, courageous band of fighting gridders that asked no quarter, gave none, and incidentally received none, battled the Yackety-Bucs on even terms through three quarters and all but the closing seconds of the fourth and emerged victorious 6-0 yesterday afternoon. With first downs tied and moral defeat staring them in the eyes, the Tar-Mags surged ahead in the dying moments of the game, tightened their defense and seized the golden opportunity. As the blazing sun sank over the Yale Bowl, or perhaps it was number one intramural athletic field, the mighty Rose, Tar-Mag fullback, seized a Yackety-Buc pass on his forty yard line and raced down the east side of the field sixty yards to a score. The try for extra point failed and with a scant thirty seconds left in the game, the Tar-Mags settled down and clinched the victory.

The Kick-off

The Yackety-Bucs lost the toss and the Tar-Mags elected to receive. Difficulty seemed to be encountered getting the kick-off to stay in the playing field, and after a 5-yard penalty for off-sides and two out-of-bound kicks the Tar-Mags were given the ball on their 40-yard line.

The game was a see-saw affair throughout the first half with neither team having the advantage. The only threatening gesture came toward the end of the second quarter when Hargreaves, Yackety-Buc halfback, intercepted a pass which bounced off Shoemaker's shoulder and dashed for the goal line only to be run out of bounds on the 15-yard line. The Tar-Mag defense tightened and the half ended soon after. Score 0 to 0 with the Tar-Mags leading in first downs 5 to 3.

Second Half

The Tar-Mags kicked off deep into enemy territory only to see Poole run the ball back to the 50-yard line. The Yackety-Bucs started a concentrated drive with a 25-yard pass to Long outstanding. A score appeared eminent, but the Tar-Mags tightened and the ball went over on the 3-yard line.

After this titanic effort, which had netted the Yackety-Bucs enough first downs to knot the count in that department 7-7, the ball stayed near the center of the field. Late in the fourth quarter with the ball in the Yackety-Bucs' possession, a long pass was intercepted by Rose near the east sidelines and he galloped 60 yards for the only score. The Tar-Mags attempted the conversion with a pass but it was grounded. A few seconds later the final whistle blew to end the first inter-publication grid contest in a planned annual series.

For the Yackety-Bucs Kendall and Poole were the main cogs in the passing attack with Long and Parsley on the receiving end. The Tar-Mag mainstays were Rose, Albright (who incidentally blocked one of Rose's punts to the great glee of the opposition), Lowe and Woerner.

"Nature in the Raw is seldom MILD"

THE PILGRIM'S FIRST WINTER
"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by Herbert Reese, celebrated painter...inspired by the bitter hardships endured by America's first settlers in their conflict with raw, wild nature (1620). "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes.

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

UNIVERSITY SENDS TWO DELEGATES TO Y CONFERENCE

Bill McKee and W. T. Minor
Selected Tentative Delegates
To Meeting in Atlanta.

A southern student conference is scheduled for Atlanta, Ga., on December 28-31. Bill McKee, president of the local "Y" and W. T. Minor, treasurer of the association, are the tentative delegates from the University.

This meeting is being sponsored by five student organizations in the south—The Student Volunteers, the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the colored Y. M. C. A., and the colored Y. W. C. A.

This meeting, to which representatives of colleges from the entire south will be sent, is designed to promote the application of creative intelligence to the problems of our day in the effort to aid in the construction of a social order which will meet the needs of all people. Delegates attending the conference will work towards this end.

The theme is: "The responsibility of the forces of religion in building the south of tomorrow." To start the gathering the delegates will be given a critique of the present situation, an analysis of the bearing of racial and economic factors upon the organization and functioning of the present social order, and an evaluation of education and religion as constructive forces in the achieving of more complete living for people in the world today.

About two hundred delegates are expected to be present at the convention. The central committee of the project is attempting to obtain a fair proportion of colored and white student delegates from southern institutions of collegiate rank.

THANKSGIVING DAY PROGRAM WILL BE PRESENTED TODAY

Local Pastor Speaks at Stadium
In Event Sponsored by University Y.

Thanksgiving day will be observed by University students this morning at 7:15 o'clock in Kenan stadium. The three Young Men's Christian Association cabinets are sponsoring the gathering, which is an annual affair.

Reverend Ronald Tamblin is to address the audience. Reverend Tamblin is a newcomer to Chapel Hill, acting as parson of the First Presbyterian church of the village. His subject has not been announced as yet.

Another feature of the gathering will be several renditions by the Y. M. C. A. quartet, composed of Jesse Parker, president of the freshman friendship council, John Briggs, Raymond Brietz, and Charles Templeton.

Last year, R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, was the speaker of the occasion. The meeting proved to be such a success that association officials decided to make it a yearly affair.

This is the last event on the card of the campus Y. M. C. A. before the holidays are over. The next project is a colored football game to be played between Orange County Training School and an opponent to be selected.

GRAHAM MEMORIAL WILL BE OPEN DURING HOLIDAY

Mayne Albright, manager of Graham Memorial, announced yesterday that the student center would be open for the holidays.

"The entire facilities which the students may have access will be open and going strong," Mayne said.

The Grill, the barber shop, the game room, the bowling alleys, and the lounge will all be open for the students' leisure moments which should be many during the Thanksgiving recess.

LANGUAGE GROUP TO CONDUCT FIFTH ANNUAL MEETING

Several University Professors to Present Papers at Gathering
In Atlanta.

The South Atlantic modern language association will conduct its fifth annual meeting at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel in Atlanta, November 25 and 26. Five members of the University faculty will appear on the program, according to an announcement last week by Dr. George R. Coffman, head of the English department.

Professor Harry K. Russell of the University English department will present a paper on "Elizabethan Dramatic Poetry in the Light of Natural and Moral Philosophy" and Professor A. P. Hudson, in collaboration with Peter Kyle McCartre, will discuss "The Bell Witch of Tennessee and Mississippi." Professor Meno Spann of the University German department will present a paper on "Problems in the Teaching of German Literature."

Professor U. T. Holmes, Jr., of the University French department will discuss "The Doctrines of Gian-Battista Marini," and Professor W. S. Barney of the Woman's College of the University will talk on "Some Recurrent Problems in French Teaching."

Professor Nolan A. Goodyear, of Emory University, is president of the association, and Professor John A. Strausbaugh of Emory is acting secretary.

BOYLE AND WEBB GO TO INTERFRATERNITY MEET

Leaving today for New York City to attend the meeting of the National Interfraternity council are two representatives of the University, Irvin Boyle, president of the local interfraternity council and Alexander Webb. The convention scheduled for the Thanksgiving recess will be comprised of representatives from all over the country gathered to discuss both fraternity and interfraternity council problems. Some of the subjects already listed on the program include fraternity finance, rushing, pledging, co-operative buying, interfraternity council organization, and interfraternity council finance.

Engineering Students

A special meeting of all students in the engineering school has been called this morning at 10:30 o'clock in room 206 Phillips hall. All registered in this school will be expected to be present.

Jitney Players Will Give Comedy Here Under Playmakers Auspices

Tom Robertson's "Caste," Though Mid-Victorian in Feeling, Deals With Timeless and Ever Popular Theme of Love Between Persons Born in Different Stations of Life.

Caste, which will be presented here by the Jitney Players under the auspices of the Carolina Playmakers, Wednesday, November 30, at 4:00 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre, was written by Tom Robertson in 1867. It is a comedy, delightfully mid-Victorian in feeling though the theme of the play is the timeless one of romantic love between people born in different stations of life. It tells the story of a young dragoon of "noble station" who falls in love with a beautiful and angelic maiden of more "lowly birth." Of course, it ends with everybody happy and the lowly maiden turning out to be a lady, but there is more to the play than that, and the drama bears out the reputation Robertson had of being the wittiest man of his time.

The characters as conceived by Robertson are convincingly and beautifully drawn. From Esther, the heroine, in her billowing hoop-skirts, to her disreputable old father they live before our eyes. Each character has been a touchstone of success for the actor or actress who specialized in the playing of certain types. Old Eccles was the goal of every character man and to have played Sam Gerridge was enough to place one as a leading comedian of the day. Sometime or other every sourette must dance her way through Polly and many an aspiring juvenile won the hearts of his feminine public by his nobility in the part of George D'Alroy.

Author's Masterpiece

It is universally agreed by critics that Caste is Robertson's masterpiece, and it will be played to advantage by the Jitney Players with a cast headed by Alice Keating Cheney as Esther.

Wednesday night at 8:30 o'clock the Players will present George Bernard Shaw's romantic satire Arms and the Man. The tickets for these two performances are fifty cents for the matinee, and seventy-five cents for the night, with a special price of one dollar for both plays.

House Mothers Value Friendship Fraternity Members Give Them

Three Greek Organizations on Campus Employ Services of House Mothers Whose Duty It Is to Supervise Dining Hall and Lend Woman's Touch to Fraternity Atmosphere.

With one accord Carolina's three fraternity house mothers agree that their occupations are the most pleasant in their professional experiences. All the ladies in the lodges, none of whom had ever served in this unusual work before, emphatically declare their pleasure at the response from the boys in their houses and for the warm friendships they have made with them. All three of them are enthusiastic in expressing satisfaction at the result of the house mother system.

House mothers for Chapel Hill fraternities are a comparative innovation, having been introduced only in the last five years. Many fraternities have secured townsladies to oversee the care of their homes, but a house mother differs from the overseer in that she resides at the house and is always on hand. Although several fraternities have maintained house mothers at one time, at present there are only three houses having them.

Three House Mothers

These are: Phi Delta Theta, whose house mother is Mrs. Lily McPhail of Rockingham, Pi Kappa Phi, with Mrs. L. R. Brown of Charlotte, and Beta Theta Pi. The house mother for Beta Theta Pi is Mrs. Collin Harding of Washington, N. C., who has been with that fraternity for several years. This is the second year for the other two mothers. Sigma Chi maintained a house mother for a short period two years ago.

The house mother holds a unique position. She is operating a club, a boarding house and a home at the same time she is striving to please a particular group of young men. All the house mothers assert that a deep understanding of boys by the house mother is essential if the boys are to succeed in their purpose to conduct a better fraternity home.

Not one of the house mothers had had any experience in operating a fraternity house before accepting their positions. One of them jocosely confessed that she had no sons to teach her the art of handling boys. Consequently each house mother smiles over the memory of her perplexity when she first assumed her position.

Duty of House Mothers

The chief duty, they explain, is caring for the fraternity house. The fraternity men say that a house mother lends a woman's touch to the fraternity atmosphere which makes living in a fraternity more enjoyable. Supervising the dining room is the second duty. The next duty is to act as hostess during parties and dances, and to be always on hand when guests of the boys are visiting the house.

Value Contacts Made

One of the house mothers claims that she might like her occupation solely for the warm friendships she has made with the boys and their relatives and companions. In fact, another stated, the chief disadvantage of being a house mother is that the house mother cannot help regarding the boys at her house as her own sons, and that therefore she feels all the sufferings of a real mother.

The relations of the house mother with the boys in her fraternity must of course depend upon the personalities of both the mother and the fraternity men. One house mother declared that in her opinion the matron should not interfere with the personal conduct of the boys, but should remain aloof until she is needed to fulfill her special duty as a hostess. Another professed a belief that the presence of a house mother did much to forward a high standard of conduct in the house.

EIGHT MEN INITIATED BY EPSILON PHI DELTA

Formal initiation for the Epsilon Phi Delta Cosmopolitan club took place Monday night in the club's council ring, in the woods near Chapel Hill.

Those initiated at this meeting were: George H. Malone, Pensacola, Fla.; William T. Minor, Charlotte; Lyman A. Cotten, Salisbury; John K. Barrow, Zebulon; Leonard L. Hutchison, Charlotte; Frank M. Parker, Asheville; Thomas Webb, Fayetteville; and David G. McLeod, Raleigh.

JACKSON SPEAKS TO "Y" CABINETS ON CHRISTIANITY

University Professor Outlines Concepts and Aims of Christian Living.

"Christian citizenship is the rebuilding of our modern civilization in North Carolina and all over the world," declared Dean W. C. Jackson of the school of public administration in an address last Monday before the three "Y" cabinets in Gerrard hall.

"Life is complex, confused, and dissatisfactory," said Dean Jackson; "but there is a way out. First, we must get acquainted with the world by gaining some knowledge of it; and, second, we must fight for a better world and apply the simple fundamentals that Jesus stands for. We may fight this complex life by studying problems of nationalism, economics, and race, all of which can be found in North Carolina."

Dean Jackson commenced his address by the story of how Galileo dared to question authority stated in the works of Aristotle, and how the Italian tested his supposition with an experiment. The head of the public administration department went on to tell his audience how these two things that Galileo did were to aid materially in the two great revolutions of the world—industrial and scientific.

"There are many distinct characteristics of our modern civilization," said Dr. Jackson. "The increase of knowledge, the decline of the old ipse dixit spirit of authoritarianism, the changed mental attitude, the widespread growth and development of democracy, the integration of life, and the loosening of moral sanctions of a former day, all compose the civilization in which we find ourselves today. That is what makes our life confused and complex."

UNIVERSITY ORCHESTRA WILL PLAY DECEMBER 11

The University Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Professor Harold S. Dyer, of the music department, will present a concert Sunday afternoon, December 11, at 4:00 o'clock, in the Hill Music hall. The program includes five numbers: Egmont Overture, by Beethoven; Capriccio Espagnole, by Rimski-Korsakoff; Nutcracker Suite, by Tchaikowsky; Siegfried Idyll, by Wagner; and Minuet, for strings, by Bolzoni. The orchestra is composed of students, faculty members, and townspeople.

Seminar Will Not Meet

It was announced by Professor Woosley's office yesterday that the economics seminar will not meet tonight because of the Thanksgiving holidays.

RED CROSS DRIVE FOR MEMBERSHIP ENDS NEXT WEEK

Head of Local Chapter Will Make Report in Address at Theatre Tonight.

The membership of the Chapel Hill chapter of the American Red Cross will continue through this week, it was announced yesterday by Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt, head of the local organization.

With the membership well over the 500 mark and the goal set at 750, Colonel Pratt said that the project would be continued in an effort to enroll many of those who have not had a chance to join. Any students or townspeople desiring to join can do so at any of the following places: Eubanks drug store, the "M" System grocery store, the Consolidated Service Plants, or at the main office of the Chapel Hill welfare committee.

Fraternity men may join through Irvin Boyle at the Deke house, and students residing in dormitories may do so through Bill Medford. Elizabeth Moore has charge of the two sororities and Spencer hall.

Old Clothing Wanted

Many clothes are now coming into the headquarters of the committee. This spare wearing apparel will be distributed among the needy of Chapel Hill. Colonel Pratt said that anyone wishing to donate any clothing should communicate with the office of the welfare committee. Among things needed are the following: overalls, shoes, socks, stockings, underwear, shirts, overcoats, suits, dresses, etc.

Last night the audience at the Carolina theatre was addressed by E. Carrington Smith, manager of the house, in an effort to augment the returns. Tonight Colonel Pratt will address those present in a report of all contributions thus far.

SPECIAL TRAIN TO CARRY STUDENTS TO VIRGINIA GAME

Football Special Leaves Pittsboro Street Station at 9:00 O'clock Tonight.

A "football special" will leave the Southern Railway station on Pittsboro street tonight at 9:00 o'clock for Charlottesville to carry Carolina supporters to the annual grid contest between Virginia and Carolina. Tickets will be on sale this afternoon and tonight in the Book Exchange for $3.77, round trip. They will be limited to use before Monday night.

Will Return Friday

The special, which will arrive in Charlottesville at 4:00 o'clock tomorrow morning, will return to Chapel Hill at 1:30 Friday morning, and arrive here at 8:35. The sleeping cars will be set out for occupancy until 8:00 o'clock tomorrow morning, and will be open for occupancy for the return trip at 9:00 o'clock tomorrow night. Pullman rates are $3.00 and $3.75 for uppers and lowers, one way, and $4.50 and $5.63 for round trip. Stopovers are permitted, and tickets will be honored on regular or special trains, and not confined to a certain trip, date, or vehicle.

The band, sixty-two strong, will have a special car in the procession.

The Federation To the Fore

Though only in its third year of operation, the North Carolina Student Federation has made its influence strongly felt in the educational institutions of the state. In a meeting here Saturday morning with the president of the University student body, who heads the Federation in a similar capacity, the executive committee of the organization laid plans for a vigorous program to increase the scope and influence of the body through the next year.

Paramount among the obligations of the Federation is the unification of state student government, with an eye toward the exchange of views and systems so as to perfect a better system as a state-wide project. The only active body of its kind in America, the Federation is rapidly working toward this ideal with general annual congresses and frequent executive meetings at this and other institutions.

In Saturday's meeting, plans were set forth for the furtherance of student government and the honor system in North Carolina high schools, a project which has met but lukewarm reception in this and other states. Through a process of education in a journal published by the Federation and by frequent deputations trips by members of the organization to state high schools, an attempt will be made to acquaint potential college freshmen with the ideals of student government and campus honor systems. Here, the Federation feels, its work can be most effective.

This is a comparatively minor point in the extensive program of the Federation, yet under existing circumstances, it is one of great importance. Educators are agreed that orientation to college life must begin in the high school upper classes. This contact alone establishes the Federation as a worthy institution in state government.—D.C. S.

Our Children?

Now that the 'accuracy and value of the Literary Digest's presidential polls have been conclusively demonstrated, it may be of interest to analyze one of the minor straw votes which, on the face of things, did not harmonize with the actual election results.

The most prominent of these was the survey conducted among college students by the Daily Princetonian. Although this poll did not cover every state in the Union, it obtained replies from a fairly representative group of students in different sections of the country. Its chief fault lay in the fact that a preponderance of New England colleges was polled, thus giving President Hoover a much stronger showing than he actually deserved. The total vote of 57,097 was divided as follows: Hoover 28,180; Roosevelt 17,712; Thomas 10,490; Foster 715. Had the survey been so conducted that a definite percentage of the students in each geographical section could have been heard from, the vote still would have exhibited unmistakable Hoover sentiment.

In the face of the overwhelming victory of Roosevelt, how can this wide discrepancy be explained?

The solution to the problem may be found in the economic sphere. The Republican party many times accused of being the political organ of "Big Business." In support of this contention statistics as to the wealth of Republican office-holders, Republican campaign chests, the membership of the Republican party, etc., can be gathered to show that the preponderance of the wealth of the country is in Republican hands.

Turning to the colleges again, we come upon one of the primary problems of our educational system; namely, the semi-prohibitive costs attached to acquiring a university education. It is quite evident on the face of it that it would be impossible for everyone who has the ability and the desire to go to college to satisfy his or her ambition in this direction. The college student is, therefore, an economically selected individual; he comes from the upper economic strata; in short, he is a Republican in tradition and social experience.

The huge student vote for Norman Thomas may seem to be at least a partial contradiction to the foregoing conclusions, but it need not be so if we analyze all the factors involved. The great majority of American college students—as is so strikingly shown by the Daily Princetonian poll—merely follow along the pathways of their elders. But there seems to be a growing minority in the colleges and universities of the country which has broken with tradition and, seeing no salvation in the Democratic party, has turned to the Socialist political philosophy. Although this condition is reversed in the south—where in this case the student sees no hope in the Republicans—there does exist a flourishing sentiment for the party of Norman Thomas. The question of how far this sentiment will progress, the possibility of an old-party rejuvenation, or even the remote chance of a Fascist student movement—all contribute to the vitally interesting question; what kind of citizens are colleges turning out?—V.J.L.

Professional Culture

In providing the students of North Carolina with good music, the Student Entertainment Committee is doing the University a signal service. Men receive with open arms any such chance for a broadening culture. But in addition to this type of entertainment, it has been suggested that students be allowed to see drama of an expert sort, as would be furnished by a group of professional players. This idea has been broached before, but apparently not emphatically enough to be brought to the attention of a large number.

In addition to giving members of the Playmakers a chance to watch experienced actors, actors of a professional sort at Chapel Hill would be able to produce famous and ambitious plays which would be beyond amateur scope, but which would be of interest to nearly all members of the student body. It would seem that the organization best able to handle such a proposition would be the Student Entertainment Committee. Such a proposal does not involve a large expenditure. With the Entertainment Committee thus furnishing the students and faculty with symphonies and dramatic art, the University could not be accused, as some colleges might be, of advancing the intellectual side at the expense of the aesthetic. With professional acting at Chapel Hill, our already broad cultural horizon would be widened further.—B.B.P.

Shadow of The Nazi

The mandate issued by President Hindenburg of the German republic to Adolph Hitler, leader of the opposition, that the latter form a cabinet, brings another crisis in the nine-year fight between the two factions for political supremacy. Since the recent election, when the former war commander defeated his more radical opponent, the Nazi leader has been consistently gathering power until he again seriously threatens the existence of the Hindenburg machine.

The aged president has held the upper hand in German politics since the war, and it is upon the result of this crisis that his future depends. Few men have held a nation in their grasp so long during such a period of turmoil. The economic and social upheaval which enveloped Germany following the war has not yet subsided, and the more conservative policies of the government have accomplished what good they could. The recent sudden growth of Hitler's power may be taken as a good sign that the German people are seeking a change.

Four years ago such a concession by Hindenburg would have been unthinkable, and Hitler, realizing that only the exigencies of weakening power could have brought such a move, today refuses to accept the mandate under the restrictions offered by the government leader. Whether he "fears the Greek's though bearing gifts," or whether he feels that by patience he may gain the last stronghold, he declined and emphatically declared "that his party could co-operate only in a government led by himself."

The conservatives have had their chance to revive Germany and have fallen short of the goal. Hitler has shown himself to be an embryonic Mussolini, a man of undeniable capabilities. A strong dictator, wielding his power wisely, could infuse new strength into Germany. Dictatorship is by far the most economic and unified form of government, and consequently best adapted to meeting critical periods. The present period is most certainly a critical one, and one which would call upon all the resources of any form of government. The world awaits with interest the German people's decision.—V.C.R.

Instead of writing any more reprimands to Japan, the League of Nations could save a lot of time by just putting on a phonograph record — San Diego Union.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

One Vote for Dr. Baity

The selection of a vice-president to succeed President Graham as head of the Chapel Hill branch of the Greater University of North Carolina is of the utmost importance.

The man who is honored by the appointment to this post should be a liberal-minded, strong character, capable of continuing the policies of fostering freedom of conduct, speech, and thought that have been carried on by Dr. Graham and his predecessors.

There are many men serving the University on this campus who would meet each of these requirements to a great extent, but in my opinion and the opinion of many of my fellow students, Dean H. G. Baity is more capable of filling President Graham's shoes than any other man eligible for the post.

While serving as a professor in the engineering school he was seriously considered by the trustees as a candidate for the presidency when Graham was selected. Upon the death of Dean Braune, he was made acting dean. His appointment as dean a short time later was unanimous and was hailed with joy by the engineers.

Miss Jekyll

And Mrs. Hyde

"Women are angels," cried a world, steeped in its idealistic concept of a creature, "pure, sincere and fragile, impractical, but to be considered with utmost awe."

Then came Kipling with his "rag, a bone, a hank of hair," Schopenhauer's short, narrow-shouldered, broad-hipped, short-legged monstrosity; Nietzsche's "women for the diversion of the warrior," and Chesterfield's view of women as children.

Men early realized the inaccuracy of both the old and the new concepts, and changing conditions brought the same realization of the women themselves. While they lived the role of complementary but rather useless organisms, insulated from careers of business, they were able to maintain the angelic aura. But the briskness and intimacy of their contact with the world today has revealed that women have dimensions, feelings and capacities like other human individuals.

As a result, many women try to live up to both concepts at once. They employ a dual personality, shifting disconcertingly from the soft-voiced Victorian to the hard-lipped, calculating modern. A Minnesota professor tells the story of a girl who wept in his class while reading a romantic selection. "Oh!" she cried, "They gave up everything for love!" The professor tested her: "Would you go to the Common Peepul's ball with a boy you liked very much, or to the Junior prom with a mere acquaintance?" The tears stopped, the eyes hardened, "That's different! Of course I'd go to the prom!"

The world of men might face with equanimity a return to the old and simple idealistic concept of women. But perhaps the woman's new hardness is deeper than a veneer. — Minnesota Daily.

CAROLINA SOCIAL CHESS CLUB ROUTS RALEIGH CHESS CLUB, 7-3

Maxwell Wins Three Rounds

BOY! WHAT A MATCH.

Not three on a match but four. Not Kreuger but Chess. Saturday evening at seven-fifty the Carolina Chess team engaged in a twelve-round tourney with the Raleigh team of four, in the Graham Memorial Chess room.

At eleven-thirty (P.M.) the Carolina Chessmen had scored seven wins out of a possible twelve, and the Raleigh Chess-Nuts, having garnered only three victories of the precious dozen, courteously declined to prolong the match for the remaining two games. Albert Barden, acting captain of the Chess-Nuts, announced that the seven wins gave the Carolina Chessmen a decisive tournament victory irrespective of how the scoring of the unplayed games might be.

The successful routing of the Raleigh Chess-Nuts by the Carolina Chessmen is a wonderful beginning for the newly organized Carolina Social Chess Club, scarcely two months in operation.

The team scores were as follows:

Barden (R) 0, Godbold (C) 1; Barden (R) 1, Tillery (C) 0; Adickes (R) 1, Cartland (C) 0; Adickes (R) 0, Cartland (C) 1; Price (R) 0, Wilson (C) 1; Price (R) 0, Godbold (C) 1; Price (R) 1, Godbold (C) 0; Gaitling (R) 0, Maxwell (C) 3. Carolina, 7; Raleigh, 3.

—ICA—

LOOKING 'EM OVER

Albert Barden got away to a fast start with White P-K4 but Reverend Albee Godbold blocked the kick with Black P-K4, and the White King finding himself poorly supported after the 25th play resigned. With revenge in his heart and red in his eye, Barden grappled with George L. Tillery, coming barrister and future LL. B. cum laude, and catapulted the Queen's Pawn across no-man's land. Tillery went into a brainstorm, lost his head, his knight, and his game. In a private interview with the reporter of THE DAILY TAR HEEL, hours later, Lawyer Tillery attributed his defeat to the inferiority complex that he has been laboring under for the past five years.

—ICA—

We do not know what was wrong with Chess-Nut Gaitling, but Thomas A. Maxwell gave him a sound thrashing. And talking of lightning Chess! The third round went fourteen moves in eight minutes. Maxwell tossed over a Giuoco Piano and Chess-Nut Gaitling whiffed the air helplessly. We think he was out of breath from chasing the long drives of Tom's first two games. Chessner Maxwell says that he does not smoke.

—ICA—

W. L. Wilson, Carolina English pedant, outstripped jovial Major P. W. Price of North Carolina State College in the foot race of sixty-four moves. It was a thin man against a fat one. The old story of brains against brawn. Cassius had a lean and hungry look. He thought too much. Jovial Major resigned. (A fat man never has a chance.) Professor Price has been playing Chess exactly two years. In a twosome with Reverend Godbold, pastor of the University Methodist church and Chess general par excellence, the Major scored one victory. He insisted that he be given full credit. All right, Major, here's to you—and bring over your North Carolina State College team any time.

—ICA—

When Chessner E. D. Cartland forced Thomas W. Adickes, Chess-Nut, into an end-game that boded ill for the veteran Raleigh player, the latter declared that a mistake had been made. Upon inquiry it was found that the mistake was not at Chess. "I have a nephew at N. C. State. He should have come to Carolina. You could make something out of him," emphatically asserted Tom.

The victory of Burgoon King is the first bright moment that royalty has had in quite a while.

Tomorrow at 2:00 o'clock the Tar Heels will meet the Cavaliers for the thirty-seventh time in the ancient series between the two schools.

The game will mark the Tar Heels' first appearance in Scott stadium, since it was not ready two years ago. After a tough week of work following the V. P. I. game the Virginia squad has been taking it easy this week to escape last minute injuries. Coach Dawson has everyone in shape, though it is a question how long Henry Sackett, star halfback, will be able to play, due to an injury which has not yet healed.

Carolina Stops at Woodberry

The Carolina squad left last night by train and will go to Orange, Va., today and practice at the Woodberry Forest school, motoring to Charlottesville tomorrow before the game.

Coach Collins put his men through the last bit of hard work yesterday working them against Virginia plays and trying to get the Carolina attack groomed to show the Cavaliers that their loss to Duke was simply a turn of ill luck.

Both Carolina and Virginia will be working to redeem a rather unsatisfactory season. The Tar Heels have won three, lost four, and tied two games; winning two conference tilts out of six played. Virginia has fared none the better and has been beaten by V. M. I., Washington and Lee, and V. P. I. along with Columbia. The wins the Cavaliers have hung up are registered over weak opposition, but the team has had twelve days to prepare for Carolina and should be ready tomorrow to pull the same surprise it pulled here last year.

TWO CRACK HIGH TEAMS TO MEET HERE FOR TITLE

Class "B" Titular Contest Set for Friday; "A" Title to Be Decided Next Week.

Mount Airy, western North Carolina champion, and Elizabeth City, winner in the east, will meet Friday afternoon in Kenan stadium for the class "B" football championship of North Carolina. Both teams are undefeated.

An exceptionally high grade of class "B" football has been played in the state this year, and the two teams that will meet in the finals are well coached and extremely fast. This is the first time that either high school has been represented in the state championship match in Chapel Hill.

Salisbury and Charlotte, the two undefeated leaders of the western class "A" conference, will play Saturday in Davidson for the western title. The winner of the game will meet Durham high's powerful eleven in the state finals next Saturday in Kenan stadium. Charlotte has not been scored on this year.

I Only Heard

By Morrie Long

Replete with outstanding grid battles, both from traditional and titular standpoints, Thanksgiving Day will provide a setting for several interesting games, especially in the south and east.

Included in the schedule of Dixie skirmishes are the all important Carolina-Virginia, Tennessee-Kentucky, Alabama-Vanderbilt, North Carolina State-South Carolina settos. In the east the Brown-Colgate meeting and the Cornell-Pennsylvania match are the big affairs.

Carolina-Virginia

A choice football cocktail, not too heavy yet with plenty of punch, will be served to Charlottesville-goers when the Cavaliers renew their ancient rivalry with the Tar Heels. Too much backfield strength plus a strong line gives the Collins crew the advantage to capture its sixth consecutive victory in as many starts with the Virginians.

Brown-Colgate

With a "Rose-Bowl" gleam in their eyes, Colgate and Brown will endeavor to settle the eastern supremacy. Devoid of any stains of defeat on their football escutcheon, the game should be one of the best of 1932. We'll bet on Colgate.

Tennessee-Kentucky

It is highly improbable that Kentucky will win a moral victory and capture some goal posts this Turkey Day as Tennessee has too consistent a team. Though Kercheval may kick them high and wide, the Vols look like winners by at least one touchdown.

Alabama-Vanderbilt

Chasing football rainbows, the Crimson Tide by the looks of things can't hope to realize on any victory results if Vanderbilt clouds up and storms over the Alabamans like she has most of her foes this fall. For once in a long while, Vanderbilt holds the edge.

N. C. State-South Carolina

Winds which have no resemblance to zephyrs have been sweeping through State's field and if these cold winds are prominent Thursday South Carolina has more than a good chance to win. State seems to fumble at the most inopportune times and coldness won't help her cause. Because of a week's rest and her decisive win over Duke, we'll pick State even though South Carolina is favored.

BOB LASSITER TO LEAD YALE GRID TEAM NEXT YEAR

Brother of Carolina Fullback and Native of Charlotte to Succeed Wilbur as Bulldog Captain.

Bob Lassiter, a Tar Heel who comes from Charlotte will captain the Yale gridiron eleven next fall. He is the brother of Hanes Lassiter, Carolina fullback.

Lassiter, who won his fame filling the shoes of Albie Booth in a brilliant way, won greater laurels, as did Booth, when he helped down the Harvard Crimson this year. Not only did he prove the undoing of Johnny Harvard last Saturday, but he tallied Yale's only touchdown against the fighting Princeton eleven, the previous Saturday.

The Charlotte boy played freshman football and basketball in 1930, but did not go out for varsity basketball last year due to illness. However, he is slated to join the ranks of the basketball aspirants this week.

Carolina Buried

Word has just reached Chapel Hill regarding the Duke campus aftermath of the Carolina-Duke game here Saturday afternoon. The undergraduate student body of Duke, in solemn attire, conducted an elaborate burial of "Carolina" in effigy in the center of the campus.

Earth from the four sections of the campus was collected and placed over the prostrate body of "Carolina," and over this a stone was placed bearing the inscription "Here lies Carolina. Died Nov. 19, 1932. Duke 7, Carolina 0. Rest in Peace."

Engagement Announced

Reverend and Mrs. Milton A. Barber of Raleigh recently announced the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth, to Arthur deLoss Sickles of Rochester, N. Y.

Miss Barber attended the University after graduating at St. Mary's, Raleigh. Sickles also graduated from the University, and is now working in Charlotte.

Duke students, coming from church Sunday morning, gathered about the tomb in a moment of silent reverence, heads bared.

Branch's Bantams to Play Brill's Undefeated Team

One of the heaviest teams ever to play in the south will meet Johnny Branch's Charlotte Bantams in a game at Charlotte Saturday night. This will be the first invasion of the south by the undefeated Clifton Heights team of Philadelphia under the direction of Marty Brill, former all-American halfback at Notre Dame; the Bantams of Johnny Branch, former Carolina star, are also undefeated.

CAROLINA FROSH WILL MEET BLUE IMPS TOMORROW

Two Frosh Elevens Battle for State Championship in Durham at 2:30.

With the North Carolina freshman football title depending on the outcome, Carolina's Tar Babies meet Duke's Blue Imps tomorrow afternoon in Durham at 2:30 o'clock. A tie or a win will give Duke the championship while the Tar Babies need a victory to take top position.

Neither Team Defeated

Neither team has been defeated so far this year while Carolina has one tie marked against them. The Blue Imps downed the first year elevens from State 12 to 0, Wake Forest 13 to 7, and Davidson 13 to 6, and also defeated Oak Ridge 18 to 13. The Tar Babies downed Campbell 18 to 0, Oak Ridge 7 to 6, Virginia's yearling 33 to 14, and tied State's freshmen 6 to 6.

The Tar Babies worked hard yesterday and Monday and are in as good shape as they have been all year but are still weakened by backfield injuries. Jim McCachren, fullback, who hurt his back and shoulder in the contest with the young Cavaliers, has very little chance of being fit to play, but will be replaced by Charles Sutton, fullback who has been out of the line-up for some three weeks with a bad ankle. Herman Snyder, who busted a bone in his left hand during practice, will still be on the bench, while Harry Montgomery, who injured his elbow in the Virginia contest, is in good shape to start.

Chesterfields are Milder

Chesterfields Taste Better

As smokers become more experienced, they demand milder cigarettes. Chesterfields are milder. Their mildness is just as much a feature as the beauty of their package.

The tobaccos are mild to begin with. Patient ageing and curing make them milder still. And Chesterfields contain just the right amount of Turkish—not too much—carefully blended and cross-blended with ripe, sweet Domestic tobaccos.

Chesterfields are milder. They taste better. That's why "They Satisfy."

A. T. O. STAGES UP-HILL BATTLE TO TAKE TITLE

Fraternity Wins Intramural Tag Football Championship by Downing Lewis.

Alpha Tau Omega became the first fraternity team in three years to gain the intramural tag football campus championship when it downed Lewis on Emerson field yesterday before a crowd of several hundred spectators.

Alan Smith's team staged a powerful up-hill battle in the last quarter of the game to come out on top. Lewis started slowly, with most of the first quarter's play taking place in its territory, the initial period ending at 1-1 in first downs.

The dormitory outfit took the offensive in the second and third periods, however, and had rolled up a 4-2 lead at half time, and a 6-2 lead at the end of the third quarter. Smith rallied his forces at this time, and A. T. O. rolled up five first downs during the last period to take the game and the championship.

First Quarter

A. T. O. scored its first first down early in the game when, after Jones Pollard had intercepted a Lewis pass on the losers' 30-yard stripe, Mel Thompson took an aerial from Wally Kindel and ran to the 19-yard mark.

Dave McCachren, Lewis back, tossed a pass to Bruten Peacock late in the quarter for a first down on his own 30-yard line to even the score, 1-1.

Lewis threatened to score in the second quarter when, after Snooks Aitken, Sid Unger, and Jack Pepper had made first downs, the losers had the ball on the A. T. O. 11-yard mark. A pass over the goal on the fourth down, however, was knocked down and the ball went over.

Smith dodged twenty-eight yards through center on the first play for a first down. He punted to the 24-yard line after three attempts had failed to gain a first down, and the half ended before Lewis could set an attack in motion.

Third Quarter

Peacock scored the first first down of the second half for Lewis when he took a pass on the A. T. O. 49-yard stripe for a 19-yard gain after an exchange of punts had given Lewis the ball on its own 32-yard line. The losers gained their final first down late in the quarter on a series of short passes, bringing the score to 6-2 in Lewis' favor.

After another exchange of punts in the first part of the final quarter, A. T. O. gained the ball on its down 38-yard line; from there a pass to Clarence Stimpson netted a first down on the midfield line. Smith gained five yards on a wide end sweep, after which "another pass to Stimpson marked up another first down on the Lewis 37-yard line. Smith gained again on a run, and then passed to Kindel for first down.

Lewis braced here, and took the ball on downs on the 30-yard line. Pepper was tagged behind the line for a ten-yard loss, and Aitken punted to midfield where Smith was tagged after a short gain.

Smith took a beautiful pass on the 39-yard line for a first down on the first play. He was knocked out on the play, but got up to catch another pass and throw one to Kindel on the 24-yard line for the winning first down.

Pledging Announced

The Epsilon Beta chapter of Chi Omega, national woman's fraternity, yesterday announced the pledging of Joslyn Small of Chapel Hill.

UNION SERVICE AT BAPTIST CHURCH

All Local Congregations Will Meet Together for Thanksgiving Service.

Congregations of all the churches in the village will gather tonight at 7:30 in the Baptist church in the annual Chapel Hill union Thanksgiving service.

Reverend Eugene Olive, parson of the local Baptist church, will deliver the sermon. His topic has not been announced as yet.

Reverend Olive was not originally scheduled to deliver the sermon, but practically all of the other preachers in the town are unavailable. Reverend Albea Godbold, minister of the Methodist church, was to be the preacher; but the Methodist pastor is out of town attending the annual Methodist conference.

All townspeople are cordially invited to attend the service, and any students staying over during the holidays will be heartily welcomed. Arrangements are being made for a large crowd at the service.

Willow Oaks Being Planted On Campus

A number of willow oaks are being planted by the grounds department along the walks to the library. The trees, which were grown by the buildings department on the grounds behind Peabody building, are the largest which have ever been planted here. Equipment for the work was loaned to the University by the grounds department of Duke University.

According to Dr. W. C. Coker, chairman of the faculty grounds committee, this planting is part of a project to beautify the campus with many new trees. Water oaks and maples will be set out on other parts of the campus.

NORA BEUST AND LUCILE KELLING REPRESENT U.N.C.

Representing the University school of library science, Misses Susan Akers, Nora Beust, and Lucile Kelling will attend the seventh bi-ennial meeting of the Southeastern Library Association, November 24-26 at Chattanooga, Tennessee. Delegates will be present from the following southern states: North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, Alabama, Florida, and Georgia.

Miss Beust is chairman of the children's library section and will have charge of a discussion on this phase of work. Dr. Louis R. Wilson, former University librarian and now dean of the graduate school of library science at the University of Chicago, will lead a discussion on "Planning for the Immediate Future."

Mental Aptitude Tests Are Scheduled for Next Month

Students intending to take mental aptitude tests must leave their names with Dean J. M. Bell, before the Thanksgiving holidays. The examination will be conducted the afternoon of December 9 at 3:00 o'clock, in room 206 Venable hall.

The examination is a normal requirement for admission to the school of medicine. It is not necessary that all pre-medical requirements be complete at the time of the examinations, but by the fall of 1933.

One of our British critics has declared that among the many of the greatest surprises he experienced while here was the fact that Americans want both liquor and prohibition. He seems to have been too fuddled to notice that they weren't the same Americans.—New Orleans States.

DUKE BLUE DEVILS WIN STATE TITLE

Laney Leads State Scorers With Thirty Points; Cox, Rex, And Cumisky Follow.

Duke clinched the championship of the Big Five with its victory over Carolina last Saturday, and Nick Laney, Blue Devil halfback, became the leading scorer of the state with 30 points, by adding six points with the only touchdown scored in the Carolina-Duke game.

Wake Forest and Davidson have yet to play their game, but the result will have no bearing on the Big Five leadership. It is merely a contest for the cellar position.

Cox of Duke comes second to Laney in scoring honors, while a triple tie exists for third place with Rex and Cumisky of State and Mason of Duke all having a total of 24 points.

With the exception of Duke, which ran its team total to 140 points with the touchdown and converted point against Carolina the four other teams in the race found their scores unchanged since a week ago Saturday. State still has 90 points, Carolina has 77, Wake Forest has 39, and Davidson has 35.

ALUMNUS BECOMES HEAD OF HEALTH ASSOCIATION

Dr. John A. Ferrall of Brookland, N. Y., alumnus of the University, was chosen as president of the American Public Health Association at the annual meeting of the association in Washington, October 26.

Dr. Ferrall attended this University from 1899 until 1902, in which year he received the degree of bachelor of arts. He entered the school of medicine of the University in 1904, receiving his medical degree in 1907. Afterwards he attended Johns Hopkins University from which he received his Ph.D. He, although a native North Carolinian, now lives in Brookland, N. Y., where he is a doctor of public health.

FRAZER LEADS DEBATE GROUP IN DISCUSSION

At the regular meeting of the debate group last Monday night, Professor Frazer, of the government department, led a round-table discussion on "Nationalism." This discussion was preparatory to try-outs which will be conducted at the meeting next Monday night at 9:00 o'clock, in 214 Graham Memorial.

The University will meet the University of Dublin in the early part of December in a debate on the subject, "Resolved: That nationalism is a bar to peace and progress."

For Stringfield Call 6401

In order that members of the S. P. E. house will have time to do a little studying, the TAR HEEL has been requested to announce that the telephone number of that house is 6061, and not 6401, the number of Lamar Stringfield's residence. It is reported that some fifty persons have called this frat house in the last few days desiring to speak with Stringfield.

Senior Comprehensives

Senior comprehensive examinations for the fall quarter have been scheduled for Saturday, December 3. All seniors have been requested to arrange conferences with the heads of the departments they are majoring in if they have not done so already.

PLAINSMEN KEEP CONFERENCE LEAD

Auburn Leads Scorers With 255 Points; Tennessee, Alabama, And L. S. U. Come Next.

Auburn and Tulane, the only leading Southern Conference teams to see action during the past week, both won and as a result the Plainsmen have only to win over South Carolina to take the championship and the Greenies went into a tie for fifth place with V. P. I.

Duke's win over Carolina hoisted the Devils to ninth place and Tech's defeat of Florida sent the Yellow Jackets into a tie for tenth place with Kentucky and South Carolina. Sewanee, in going down before Tulane, lost its fifth straight game of the season and went into undisputed possession of the cellar.

Auburn was the only leading scorer to play and strengthened its lead in that department by running its season total to 255. Tennessee follows with 180, Alabama with 174, L. S. U. with 173, and Duke with 140.

Tulane's 26 points against Sewanee once more sent the Green Wave into the ten leading scorers, and putting the Greenies in seventh place with 131 points, just four behind Mississippi who holds sixth.

Vandy dropped to eighth place with 128 while V. P. I. and Georgia bring up the rear with 127 and 122 respectively.

LIBRARY SCHOOL WILL HEAR WOMAN EDITOR

Helen Ferris, editor of the Junior Literary Guild of New York, will speak to the school of library science, Monday, November 28, at 11:00 o'clock.

Miss Ferris, who is stopping by Chapel Hill on her way from a meeting of the National Council of Teachers of English in Memphis, has written several well known books. Among her most recent ones are: Five Girls Who Dared and Here Comes Barnum. She is also editor of Young Wings, a magazine for children.

HUSTON, STAR OF "KONGO," AT LOCAL THEATRE TODAY

In today's feature at the Carolina theatre, "Kongo," Walter Huston has the role of "Dead-legs" Flint, a tyrannical man who has become confined to a wheelchair through a fight with an enemy.

By means of his conversance with black magic, Flint becomes the white witch-doctor of the African natives, and uses his power in this plot for vengeance on the man who has crippled him. It is the same role that Huston played with great success on the New York stage. Chester DeVonde and Kilbourn Gordon wrote the original play from which Leon Gordon, author of White Cargo, made the current screen adaptation.

Among those who distinguish themselves in the cast are Lupe Velez, as a Portuguese girl; Conrad Nagel and Virginia Bruce, who furnish the romantic interest of the story; C. Henry Gordon as the man Flint is seeking to trap; and Mitchell Lewis and Forrester Harvey, a pair of white rogues gone native.

Initiations Announced

The Rho Chi honorary pharmaceutical fraternity announces the initiation of C. S. Curry of Lexington and C. H. Cobb of Fremont.

Carolina's first freshman team will probably start the contest and will be almost the same as that which started against Virginia's yearlings. Cox, quarter; Montgomery, left halfback; Pendleton, right halfback; and Sutton, fullback; will round out the backfield while the line will be made up of Ellisberg and Barwick, ends; Evins and Watkins or Hobgood, tackles; Moore and Joyce, guards; and Kaner, center.

Herman Caldwell, former star back at Alabama, and Freddie Sington, all-American tackle at Alabama in 1929 have coached the Blue Imps into one of the best Duke first year teams in many a year. The backfield is especially outstanding and will be made up of Alexander, Ward, Mizell, and Russell. Dempsey, Quinn, Saleeby, and Durner have starred in the forward wall in most of the Blue Imp contests this year.

being demonstrated by excellent management of the engineering school, although he was handicapped by having to take over the office of dean very suddenly and without warning. He is devoting all of his energy to this work.

While acting dean he aided Graham in his fight against appropriation cuts by appearing before the legislature.

I hope the committee of the board of trustees will consider deeply the desirability of appointing a man who will continue Graham's liberal policies. E. A. G.

A New Song

Future football battles will carry on the college spirit with an added zest, college reunions will have more reminiscent tears, and the nation over will gain an insight into the campus of the oldest and one of the most democratic state universities in the United States if present plans materialize.

The University of Maine became famous over night due to the fact that one of her loyal alumni presented by means of the radio, and to the thunderous approval of the public, the Maine Stein Song. It is now the time for Carolina to become prominent in these lines. It is the consensus of opinion that Carolina should have this new song presented as soon as possible and introduced to the public over the radio by Hal Kemp, popular Carolina alumnus.

Now that the people have turned to dancing for recreation and exercise during the winter months there is no time like the present to introduce this song. Carolina is known for her high scholastics, liberalism, and soundness, so let's add another feature to her long list by presenting in a little different line the "hit of the year," a new tune entitled, the "TAR HEEL BATTLE SONG."—E.F.J.

TAR-MAG VICTORY TO BE PROTESTED BY YACKETY-BUCS

Losers to Send Formal Protest to National Body Questioning Eligibility of Albright.

It was understood in official circles here yesterday that the Yackety-Bucs, defeated by the mighty Tar-Mag grid combine in the annual publication football classic yesterday, would lodge formal protest to the National College press association this week over the game. Coach "Silent Pop" Albright, they claim, was by reason of his position, ineligible to take part in the game. Ancient files in the library reveal that Albright was editor of the Yale Daily News in 1847, or at least somebody that looks like Albright performed in that capacity.

Various other charges other than that of being subsidized from Yale was charged against the Tar-Mag mentor. It was he, they say, who was responsible for the injury to Weeks, the flash Swansboro Swashbuckler, who had to leave the game in the third quarter after tangling with Albright on the playing field.

In response to the charge, Albright was silent as usual, remarking that "I am of the opinion that the status quo of my ineligibility was proportionally counteracted by the fact that only three of the gentlemen playing on the opposing team have ever been closer than ten yards to any publication office. Indeed, the Yackety-Buc line looked like an A. T. O. chapter meeting. Besides, I thought Yale was a lock."

RED CROSS RELIEF WORK AIDS MANY STATE RESIDENTS

Membership Dues Make Possible the Expenditure of Huge Sums to Help Needy People.

More than $3,838,000 has been spent by the Red Cross in the last year to alleviate the hardships of those without work and those suffering from natural disaster. Membership dues make possible this huge relief program.

In North Carolina alone, 200,000 yards of cloth have been distributed, and 101,626 barrels of flour have been furnished to 70,936 families. In the spring 4,800 families, and in the fall 500 more were furnished garden seed. Yeast furnished for pellagra prevention amounted to 12,326 pounds. Eight hundred and fifty-five disaster sufferers were aided. $30,843 was expended from national funds in disaster and unemployment relief. Six nurses made 12,080 home visits last year. The service and ex-service cases handled numbered 7,505; cases of civilian families numbered 3,562.

The present American Red Cross membership in North Carolina is 39,276; this is only 1.2 per cent of the state population. The organization is setting as its state goal this year 95,000 members.

ILLUSTRATOR TO GIVE TALK HERE THURSDAY NIGHT

Oakley to Appear in Hill Music Hall Through Generosity
Of Mrs. Arrington.

Thornton Oakley, noted illustrator and lecturer, will present an illustrated lecture in the Hill music auditorium Thursday evening, December 1, at 8:30 o'clock. His subject will be
"Illustration" and he will demonstrate with personal drawings on an easel various points as he is speaking.

Usually there would be a charge for admission to this lecture, but through the general provision of Mrs. Katherine Pendleton Arrington of Warrenton, N. C., who has been active for several years in the work of the state art society of North Carolina, the American Federation of Arts is sending this lecturer to the University free of charge.

Oakley is in North Carolina on a lecture tour under the auspices of the state art society of North Carolina and the American Federation of Arts. He is to speak at the annual meeting of the society in the Sir Walter hotel in Raleigh tomorrow evening.

Has Received Many Awards
He has received many awards and has held numerous positions in art organizations, and has been special lecturer at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City and at Pennsylvania
Museum school of Industrial Art; and has been an instructor at the latter institution.

Professor Nelson O. Kennedy will play several selections on the organ before and after the lecture.

JITNEY PLAYERS WILL GIVE SHAW PLAY TOMORROW

"Arms and the Man," Satiric Comedy by English Playwright, to Be Given.

Arms and the Man, George Bernard Shaw's satiric comedy about militarism, will be presented by the Jitney Players, famous professional touring company, under the auspices of the Playmakers tomorrow night, at 8:30 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre. This "pleasant play" was one of the first of a series written by Shaw when there was a good deal of talk about the "new drama" that ended in establishing the "new theatre."

Critics say that nowhere in the whole of Shaw is his satire more keen, his humor more piercing or his wit with such an edge as in this play. Shaw, being a law unto himself, ridicules and satirizes human beings, their frailties and foibles but in such a way that the audience really enjoys the evening.

The Jitney Players have assembled a strong company to support Alice Cheney and Douglas Rowland in the leading roles of Rains Petkoff and Captain Bluntschli. John Maroney will play the role of Major Petkoff, Barbara Benedict that of Catherine Petkoff, Ellen Love that of Louka, Charles Kradoska that of Sergius and Harrison Dowd that of Nicola with Lee Crowe as a Russian Officer.

The matinee performance
Wednesday will be Tom Robertson's romantic, mid-victorian comedy, Caste.

Wager Will Speak Over Radio Hookup

Dr. Paul W. Wager, assistant professor of rural social economics, will speak over a nationwide hook up through WJZ in New York tonight from 8:00 to 8:30, on "Redistributing Functions of State and Local Government."

Making addresses on this same subject will be Governor O. Max Gardner of North Carolina and former Governor Harry Flood Byrd of Virginia.

ENGINEERS VOTE TO PUBLISH OWN NEWS MAGAZINE

George Gorham and Noel Zelly Elected Editor-in-Chief and Business Manager.

At a meeting of the entire student body of the school of engineering, the engineers decided unanimously to assess themselves to assure financial backing for the newly formed magazine of the engineering school. The magazine will be called the Carolina Engineer. It will contain articles and essays submitted by the students themselves as well as other material.

Final plans for the publication of the magazine have not been worked out, Fisher Black, who was chairman of the meeting last week said yesterday. The fee which the student will be assessed, expected to be approximately thirty cents each, has not yet been determined nor has the date of the initial publication been set. There will be two issues for the remainder of this year and probably four issues per year hereafter.

Magazine Heads Elected
George Gorham was elected editor-in-chief while H. Noel Zelly was chosen business manager. Four associate editors will be elected later, one from each engineering society. The business manager will select his assistants from those who volunteer for the positions.

The officials of the magazine hope to be able to join a publications union of college engineering magazines. Such an arrangement would benefit the Carolina Engineer in that it would derive national advertising which it is hoped will make the paper self-supporting.

The Carolina Engineer is not a new magazine on the campus but is a revival of an engineering magazine published here in mimeograph form a number of years ago.

Staff Meetings
Special meetings of the editorial writers, city editors, and reporters have been called for this afternoon in Graham Memorial building. All members of these staffs will be expected to attend unless previously excused.

The editorial board will meet at 2:30, the city editors at 3:00, and the reporters, sports staff included, at 3:30.

Loan Fund Established
The Xi chapter of the Rho Chi honorary pharmaceutical fraternity has established a loan fund to be known as the Rho Chi loan fund.

This fund is open only to graduate and undergraduate students of the pharmacy school, and it is hoped that it will be increased yearly by contributions.

Roosevelt Confronts Gigantic Task In Selection Of Cabinet

With Nearly Six Hundred Eligible Aspirants for Cabinet Offices, President-Elect Faces Job of Picking Ten Best; Tar Heel
Presents List of Thirty Democrats for Offices.

(By Don Shoemaker)
The all-important task of selecting those ten men best fitted to partake in the executive destiny of the administration will be a gruelling one to president-elect Franklin Delano Roosevelt, when the choice is made a few weeks hence. Top wave on the crest of Democracy's clean sweep of 1932, Roosevelt, as both the leader of his party and the nation, will be hounded on every side by tens of dozens of eligible cabinet officers, yet from all this number he must select but ten. A half-score from a field of nearly six hundred!

For there are actually that many governors, ex-governors, partisan publishers, national committeemen, congress members and local party whips who seem eligible to the leaders in their respective states. Of course this number includes some three hundred and fifty Democrats in the next Congress, all of whom, the political prophets say, are good cabinet material.

In selecting his cabinet a prospective president has an ample range of choice. He may select some of his officers from among the defeated group of nominees at his party convention. He may choose several for his cabinet from the new Congress. He may also put men into his cabinet who have never figured in a previous state or national legislature or who have but little political prominence in their respective territories. In the latter case, men skilled in the affairs of state, legal rights, or bankers

STUDENTS INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT SUNDAY EVENING

Miss Anna Cowles in Duke Hospital
Recovering From Injuries; Four Others Receive Treatment.

Driving over the Greensboro road about 8:00 o'clock Sunday evening to meet a train a group of students saw coming at them a swerving car traveling at a high rate of speed. Instead of turning to the right side of the road the car headed directly for them, smashing into their car at about forty miles an hour. In the one car, driven apparently by drunken negroes, it was rumored that two of the occupants were killed. In the car from Chapel Hill the severest injuries were sustained by Miss Anna
Cowles, a freshman co-ed at the University, who is now at the Duke hospital in Durham.

John Cowles, father of Miss Cowles and a graduate student here, was also injured and was treated at the University infirmary shortly after the accident. Miss Porter Cowles, a sister of the above Miss Cowles and a senior co-ed here, Miss Betty Bolton, also a senior co-ed, and Winant Wilder, a junior, who were riding in the back seat when the accident occurred escaped with minor cuts and bruises.

Senior Comprehensives
The senior comprehensive examinations for the fall quarter have been scheduled for December 3. All seniors have been requested to arrange conferences with the heads of the departments they are majoring in, if they have not done so already.

The dates for the ninth annual Newspaper Institute, which will be conducted here under the auspices of the North Carolina Press Association and the University of North Carolina, have been set for January 18, 19, and 20, instead of 11, 12, 13, as originally announced.

The change was made to suit the convenience of governor-elect J. C. B. Ehringhaus, who is to address the opening session,
Wednesday night, January 18.
President Frank Graham of the University will give the address of welcome and John A. Park,
President of the North Carolina Press Association, will make the response. At the opening session there will also be a brief program by the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra, with Lamar Stringfield conducting.

Program for Thursday
The program for the morning session of the second day, Thursday, will include addresses by Karl Bickell, general manager of the United Press, and Dr. Albert
S. Keister, professor applied economics in the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina. Bickell is expected to discuss some general phases of the newspaper situation and Dr.
Keister will discuss new sources and distribution of revenue. From 2:00 until 4:30 o'clock, Thursday afternoon the weeklies and dailies will conduct separate group meetings for general discussion.

After that the editors will go to Duke University, which is again cooperating in the program. There will be an organ recital and carillon concert Thursday afternoon, a dinner in the Duke Union, and a meeting that night.

President W. P. Few will welcome the visitors to Duke. Louis
I. Jaffe, editor of the *Norfolk
Virginian-Pilot* and Dr. Franklin Hickman of the Duke school of religion, have been invited to take part in the program. The Duke orchestra and glee club, will provide entertainment.

Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business, is among the speakers invited to address the closing session Friday morning.
Lee B. Weathers of the *Shelby
Star* will lead a discussion on "The Audit" and R. E. Price of the Rutherfordton Sun will lead a discussion on "The Advertising Representative."

Feature Board Meets
There will be an important meeting of the feature board this afternoon at 2:00 in the offices of the DAILY TAR HEEL. All men who have been trying out for this board are requested to attend.

GEORGE COFFMAN CHOSEN HEAD OF LANGUAGE GROUP

University Professor Is Elected President of South Atlantic
Language Association.

Five members of the faculty of the University attended the fifth annual meeting of the South Atlantic modern language association at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel in Atlanta, Georgia,
November 25 and 26.

Three University men were elected officers of the association for the coming year. Dr. George R. Coffman, head of the University English department, was elected president of the association; Dr. A. P. Hudson, head of freshman English here, was elected chairman of the English section, and Dr. U. T. Holmes, of the romance language department, was named chairman of the French section.

University Speakers
Dr. Harry K. Russell, of the University English department, spoke on "Elizabethan Dramatic Poetry in the Light of Natural and Moral Philosophy"; Dr.
A. P. Hudson discussed "The Bell Witch of Tennessee and Mississippi"; Dr. Holmes spoke of "The Doctrine of Gian-Bat-tista Marini"; and Dr. Meno
Spann, of the German department, spoke on "Problems in Teaching German Literature."

Dr. Joseph Quincey Adams, director of research of the new Folger Shakespeare library in Washington, made two addresses, one on the new library, which contains the finest collection of Shakespeareana in the world; and one on "Shorthand in Pirating King Lear."

LODGES HERE ARE RATED SEVENTH IN NATIONAL SURVEY

First Time Carolina Has Fallen
Below Fifth in Fraternity Scholarship Standings.

The University fraternity scholarship ranking, in comparison with that of the 158 outstanding colleges and universities throughout the country, is seventh from the top, according to Irvin Boyle and Alec Webb, representatives to the national interfraternity conference.

These statistics are compiled by making a comparison of the averages of fraternity men with those of the undergraduate men students of the entire student body. In fifty-seven of the 158 institutions the fraternity average was below that of the other students, but as a whole the averages are better this year than in former reports.

The University has consistently had a high average and this is the first year it has ranked lower than fifth. The highest rating ever achieved was in 1928 when it ranked third.

The six schools which rank higher than the University this year are Cincinnati University,
Monmouth College, Oregon State College, University of Texas,
University of Mississippi, and Ohio State University.

Buccaneer Meetings
There will be a meeting of the business staff of the Buccaneer tonight at 7:00 o'clock. A meeting of the editorial and art staffs is scheduled for 8:00 o'clock.

Place in The Sun

It is true that the Co-ed engages in a multiple-city of extra-curricular activities but very few of these are of a serious nature which reflect glory and honor on the name of the old Alma Mater. This is due to the fact that the students who reside in Spencer are pursuing studies of every sort and variety in many different schools and there is an astounding lack of any kind of mutual interest among them. They support their University loyally but because of the divergence in their occupations they fail to feel that they are an integral part of the whole organization. Nevertheless great benefit to Carolina, and to the women could be derived from the positive and active cooperation of the Co-eds in all of the non-academic enterprises on the campus.

Among those things which are amazingly in need of the feminine touch is the wrestling team. Intramural basketball games between the different halls of the woman's building would help greatly to establish the proper feeling of unity and enthusiasm. Golf and tennis are open to the "lighter-weight" individuals whereas the more energetic of our Co-eds have even gone out for football. Debating is woman's natural forte and she is noted for her Playmaking, hardly doing anything else; but the institution which offers the largest opportunity for her talents is the Buccaneer. Being the subject of many of its issues, she has developed a sixth sense from long practice which makes her especially acute and able to relay bad puns (even thinking them up herself sometimes) with the ease and proficiency of an expert. Then, of course, if she is so ambitious, there are the accepted publications.

In the event that her inclinations are not bent in any of these directions, there is the German club which is within the range of a large number of vampires.

After having conscientiously contributed to all of these shenanigans, we feel sure the honor of U. N. C. will be elevated permanently and its reputation settled forever (beyond doubt).—P.A.H.

The Battle Of Illusions

Before November 8, Walter Lippman declared that if President Hoover were re-elected the chances for survival of democratic government would be small.

What, if any, chances does democratic government now have with Governor Roosevelt's election assured?

With conditions as they are, the American people evidently and honestly thought that they were registering a positive protest vote in retiring President Hoover. The conceived Governor Roosevelt as the liberal champion of the common man. As a representative of those ideals, he was elected.

No doubt, Lippman meant to imply that if the present governmental policy should be continued for another four years the reaction against it would be so violent as to generate an open revolt, culminating in some form of a dictatorship.

But now, the complacent man of the street, with his delusions in the efficacy of democracy, believes that he has accomplished a revolt with his one respectable and legal means, the ballot. He vaunts the polling power with which he overthrew Hoover. He glorifies the Roosevelt myth, as he praised the Great Engineer in 1928. He has voiced his new liberal tendencies, epitomized by the champion of the Forgotten Man.

Apparently, as Bruce Barton insisted, Main Street has been satisfied by the outcome of the election.

So, democratic government is safe for another four years, provided the President-elect satisfies the expectations of his admirers. The people were ready for revolution. Thinking that they have accomplished it by peaceful democratic means, they are content. Had they not thought that a revolution was accomplished by the vote of November 8—more bluntly, if President Hoover had been re-elected—the trend towards open revolt might have begun, as Lippman predicted.

The future chances of democratic government depend upon Roosevelt's success in making the people continue to think that they got what they wanted when they elected him. Can the candidate who spent half of his campaign effort in explaining his conservatism maintain in the common mind the illusion of his liberalism?—E.C.D.

On Our Shoulders

This universally discussed period of stagnation which has caused wide-spread suffering and sacrifices has brought the youth of today face to face with some real problems. During past days of insane financial intensification of industry we were not forced to think. Every college student readily found his place in the outside world. Political interests and monetary problems were of minor importance, for the sun shone brightly.

Then, almost over night, the scene changed. Today we have been brought face to face with the grim realization that the sun has at last clouded under. Our chances for employment at the close of our college careers are becoming more and more scarce. The step from college into a bread-line is not an idealistic one. The youth of today, and those to follow are the ones who will suffer most from the evils of these time-worn policies. The old saying that necessity is the mother of invention will undoubtedly hold true now. On our shoulders, primarily, rests the burden of revising these policies in such a manner that we and our children may boost civilization and progress to undreamed of heights.

doubtedly hold true now. On our shoulders, primarily, rests the burden of revising these policies in such a manner that we and our children may boost civilization and progress to undreamed of heights.

In every youthful organization throughout the land one may see signs of this necessitated awakening of political interest. We must think carefully and act slowly. To rush blindly into radical consternation would lead us farther from our goal than we are at present. We must start at the bottom and build steadily, carefully and soundly. The future of our civilization rests upon the shoulders of young America, and the leaders who will come forth. Certainly the youth of today, carefully trained in a period of necessity, must not fail to establish a higher, better balanced, and better governed order than this world has ever known.—L.M.J.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

Martyr

Little Finland, whose abandonment of the dry standard was an object of glee for American wets last April, is having a pretty tough time of it, news dispatches hint. Sales of legal hard liquor have declined more than forty per cent, the government reveals, and it's all the fault of "bootlegging," or "smuggling," in polite Finnish. Plenty of good beer, Scotch whiskey, French cognac and other drinkables are within the purchase reach of even Finland's forgotten man. Estonian brandy, for instance, sells as low as three cents a drink in the best restaurants.

Finland's case, we feel, is pretty disheartening. Neither her noble nor ignoble experiment would work. We interpret this as one of the little failings of the modern human race. When you don't give the people liquor legally they get it anyway, and when you give it to 'em legally they don't want it.

Trophy

We've heard so many rumors of ill feeling between those two contingents, the Yackety-Bucs and the Tar-Mags, that we think it's about time that some peace methods are adopted before the two groups tie in intramural combat again on the athletic field.

To insure good feeling between the two rivals we suggest that the losers present a pair of goal posts fashioned out of Octagon soap to the losers and that both sides promptly eat a post apiece.

Reactionary

Just when we were all primed to tell you about the growing tide of conservatism in the American college and university system, Davidson up and beats Wake Forest. For the first time in ten years, they tell us.

The Davidson student body, stronghold of Presbyterian conservatism, promptly launched a prop rally that rocked the eaves of every house in Mecklenburg county. It lasted far into the night and then the next day the entire student body declared an English week-end abandoned the campus for Friday and Saturday classes. Chapel services, time honored, were attended by a contingent of twenty-four loyalists.

A faculty session extraordinary promptly declared the absent students academically a. w. o. l. and awarded cuts to each and every absentee.

Nomination

We feel that the editorial board of the Stanford Daily deserves a small portion of immortality for the following: "The Stanford Daily takes great pleasure in nominating Horace Greeley, former New York newspaper editor, as the posthumous receiver of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce medal of honor for having repeatedly, and under great stress, urged all men to go west."

With Contemporaries

Editorials printed in this column are selected weekly by the editorial board on the basis of pertinency and style from the exchange list of college and national dailies and weeklies.

Sparing

The Knife

When colleges have to pull their purse strings tighter, their favorite economy is, so to speak, to put less coal on the furnace and to turn the lights out earlier at night. But paying the professor, at least in the present emergency, is generally being considered the last place where pennies should be spared.

Of the 159 colleges in all parts of the country reporting to the Association of American Colleges, more have cut their budgets this year by reducing the cost of maintaining and operating buildings and grounds than by any other method. Postponement of new buildings and of appointments to vacancies on the faculty are other popular economies practiced by more than half, while still another is reducing expenditures for travel and for clerical help.

Professors, to be sure, are being asked to teach more and larger classes and to do without some of the prerequisites and assistance to which they have been accustomed, but in many instances

"Nature in the Raw" is seldom MILD

THE HUNTER HUNTED!

"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by the famous artist, R. Atkinson Fox... inspired by the battle between an enraged bull buffalo and the savage Indian hunters whose lances roused the beast to furious charge. "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes.

No raw tobaccos in Luckies —that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

BOXING TOURNEY SLATED TO TAKE PLACE NEXT WEEK

Annual Fistic Festival Will Be Staged December 7; Practice Begins Today at 4:00.

First call for entrants in the annual fall intramural boxing tournament will be issued today. All men desiring to enter are requested to report today at 4:00 o'clock to the boxing managers in the Tin Can.

The tourney, slated to commence Wednesday, December 7, is one of the foremost events of the quarter on the intramural card; the officials are expecting a record number of both team and individual entries. Last year there were thirty individuals entered, and half that number of teams were on the card. This year, however, all indications are pointing to a much larger number.

Five workouts are necessary before any man will be eligible to compete. These workouts may be taken any day between 4:00 and 6:00 o'clock in the afternoons at the Tin Can. Entrants will report there daily to the managers until they have filled their required quota of exercise periods.

Eight weights will be listed—115, 125, 135, 145, 155, 165, 175, and unlimited. Each man will be given four pounds. Last year the weights were 115, 125, 135, 145, 160, 175, and unlimited. This year, however, officials realized that only one weight between the 145 and 175 pound classes had kept many boys from entering the meet; and consequently Coach Crayton Rowe, boxing mentor, and Herman Schnell of the intramural department have added one more division. A medal will be awarded the winner in each weight.

Scoring

The boxing tournament is one of the largest events of the year, at least according to the generous allotment of points in year-round competition. The individual winner gets 25, and each runner-up gets 15. The team winner gets 50 points; second place, 40; third place, 30; fourth place, 20; and fifth place, 10. The team having most entrants gets 50 points; second place, 40; third place, 30; fourth place, 20; and fifth place, 10. The team winning the campus championship gets a bonus of 50 markers.

Last year the team winner was Best House in both the fall and spring tourneys. Individual winners, their weights, and organizations in the fall meet are as follows: Ivey, 115, Mangum; Mowery, 125, Best House; Shuford, 135, S. A. E.; Berbe, 145, Lewis; Gidinsansky, 160, Lewis; Barclay, 175, Phi Gam; and Underwood, unlimited, Best House. Individual winners, their weights and organizations in the spring meet are as follows: Stoll, 115, Everett; Mowery, 125, Best House; Graham, 135, Sigma Nu; Jones, 145, Best House; Finklestein, 160, Lewis; and Efland, 175, Best House.

Bowling Alleys Being Used Extensively by Students

During the Thanksgiving holidays the new bowling alleys in Graham Memorial were used extensively by those students staying in Chapel Hill during the holidays and a large number of faculty members and townspeople. The alleys are proving very popular, and those using them seem to like the rubber pins that are being used. The student managers of the alleys are: Willis Sensenbach, junior bowling champion of North Carolina for two years; Dexter Hornaday, R. J. Whittington, and Sparks Grif-

AROUND the FIELD

By

CLAIBORN M. CARR

WELL, THE CURRENT GRID-iron season has just about passed on and Carolina has compiled a record of five losses, three wins and two ties from a stiff ten game schedule. To some this is a very unsatisfactory record and the alumni, pointing to the Duke and Virginia disappointments, begin to talk of changing coaches. Frow now on rumors regarding possible successors to Coach Collins will be numerous and absolutely unfounded. Until a definite statement comes from the athletic offices, and none has been issued as yet, no change will be made. When you consider the reserve strength Vandy, Tennessee, and Tech had it is not hard to realize that Carolina just couldn't have beaten either of those teams. The Duke and Virginia losses were different. The story of the Duke game is history, but the Thanksgiving Day affair has not been elaborated upon. Carolina had three days to prepare for the tussle; Virginia had twelve working days. The Tar Heels were over-confident, there is no doubt about that; no one even dreamed Virginia would offer any resistance. The funny part of it was that that early score had no awakening effect at all, every player on the squad seemed to feel that ole Carolina would come through and swamp Virginia, and thinking this went back to day-dreaming.

ALL THE CAROLINA SUP-porters were surprised to see an old friend and former playmate in the role of officiator at Charlottesville. I refer to none other than our pal, Mr. Tolley. He was well concealed until just before game time and then appeared as field judge. Everyone on the Carolina side was glad to see him and greeted his appearance with a deep nasal cheer. Fortunately, in his new role as field marshal he had very little to say about what went on.

CAROLINA WAS TWO TOUCH-downs behind and the game was getting old. Coach Collins called Bill Croom and sent him into the game. The Tar Heels were on the defense when Croom entered the fray and Bill had time to warm up. When Carolina got the ball it was given to Croom on the first play and the elusive back cut over the weak side tackle, sped toward the sidelines, he slowed down to allow one of his mates to take out the Virginia halfback in a beautiful block, then he cut back to the center of the field where other Tar Heels had cleared his path and on to the goal. Captain Lewis Reiss, Cavalier center, was closing in on Croom only to be cut short by Erwin Walker in another beautiful block and Bill went over the goal standing up. The run was something over seventy yards and was a replica of what Croom has been doing for the past two years. He has carried the pigskin over a hundred and twenty-four times, has lost thirty-five yards and gained around five hundred and eighty for the Tar Heels, making his average over a two year span a little under five yards a try.

GEORGE BRANDT WAS GIV-ing an awful blow by Buck Poss the giant Virginia tackle who takes it upon himself to lose his head in a football game and try to settle his personal differences on the field when his opponents are fully unaware. It was Poss who last year hit Harry Hodges in Kenan stadium and was removed from the fray. Last Thursday he hit Brandt a terrific blow in the right eye. George had taken him out and the two were getting up when Poss, a huge six-footer and a heavy-

Final Standings In Intramural Football League Is Announced

A. T. O., Beta Theta Pi, and Zeta Psi Rank at Top of List; Lewis Far Superior to All Other Dormitory and Independent Aggregations.

Final standings and point distribution for the recently-ended intramural tag football season were released yesterday by Herman Schnell, director of intramural athletics.

In the awarding of points for the grid campaign, A. T. O., winner of the campus championship, came out on top with 175 points to its credit. Beta Theta Pi and Zeta Psi, which tied the A. T. O. outfit in the regular campaign but lost out in the playoffs, ranked second in the fraternity standings with 110 points each.

Lewis Tops Dorms

Lewis gained top honors in the dormitory circuit by virtue of winning its league race hands down. The victors scored 125 markers toward the all-campus championship, and were closely followed by Aycock and Grimes with 110 each.

Final standings in the two flag races showed Lewis, the only dormitory team to finish the season without a defeat, leading the field with seven victories. Aycock and Grimes tied for second with six victories and one defeat apiece. Everett held undisputed possession of third place with five wins against two defeats.

Three Unbeaten

A. T. O., Beta Theta Pi, and Zeta Psi all came through their regular campaigns unbeaten, and were ranked together at the top of the fraternity league in spite of A. T. O.'s triumph in the playoffs.

Chi Psi, Phi Kappa Sigma, Phi Sigma Kappa, and Sigma Nu tied for second in the Greek letter race with six wins against one defeat for each. D. K. E., Lamb-weight boxer, swung at Brandt and caught him clean in the eye. Dazed, George instinctively swung back and the two were removed from the game. I saw Brandt in the infirmary in Charlottesville after the game Thursday night and no definite diagnosis had been made. Brandt was left in Virginia and went home to recover before returning. Coach Collins received a wire Sunday stating that Brandt was out of trouble and had gone to Washington before coming to Chapel Hill. No definite word as to the nature of the injury has been received.

THE HEADLINESMAN AT the Carolina-Virginia game was on the New York train Thursday night and when asked what he saw of the fight he said that on the play, Brandt had kept Poss off him by putting his hands on the tackle's head. He said that Poss was raging when he got up and swung at the Carolina end. This official said that Brandt's attempt at defense was wild, but that he swung. The headlinesman also said that our dear friend Tolley, who was roving all over the field, had been Johnny on the spot and declared that the Carolina player swung first. Isn't he a pal?

Game Room Assignments

In the absence this week of the manager, all assignments for rooms in Graham Memorial will be made at the counter of the game room in the basement of the building. Such reservations may be made any day from 12:00 until 10:00 o'clock.

Boxers Asked to Report

All first string boxers are asked to report to Coach Crayton Rowe this afternoon at the east end of the Tin Can at 4:00 o'clock. Intensive training will begin immediately.

da Chi Alpha, and Phi Gamma Delta held third position with two defeats each in seven games. Final standing in both leagues follows:

PLAINSMEN BOAST BEST RECORD OF SOUTHERN TEAMS

L. S. U. Does Not Have Representative Schedule; Tennessee Has Been Tied.

Three football teams are dominating the Southern Conference gridiron horizon as the sun of the 1932 season is setting.

Auburn, L. S. U., and Tennessee have yet to taste the bitterness of defeat in conference games, although L. S. U. has been beaten by Centenary and Tennessee tied by Vanderbilt. Auburn sports an even half dozen victories and no defeats on their slate; L. S. U., four victories and no defeats for their conference record; and Tennessee, six victories and one tie for their season's record on the conference warpath.

Auburn Appears Best

Undoubtedly Auburn will be adjudged the champion of Dixie should it beat South Carolina next Saturday, but latest despatches from the Alabama institution are to the effect that fourteen of thirty-seven Auburn varsity men have been laid low with influenza. The epidemic, striking Auburn in the middle of last week and causing Coach Chet Wynne to call off practice for a few days in the hope that the menace would disappear, has spared Captain Jimmy Hitchcock, crack fullback; but Quarterback Williams is among the missing.

Tennessee closes its campaign against Florida in Jacksonville Saturday, and L. S. U. has closed its season.

Aside from Louisiana State's victory over Tulane last Thursday, the only other upset was when 'Bama toppled over Van-

RED RAIDERS PROBABLE ROSE BOWL CONTESTANT

It looks like opponents in this year's Rose Bowl classic are going to be Colgate's Red Raiders and the Trojans of Southern California.

Southern California clinched the honor when it beat Washington, 9-6, last Saturday, while the only other undefeated contender for the Coast Conference diadem, California at Los Angeles, lost to Washington State Cougars by a field goal.

Colgate has demonstrated clearly to eastern grid strategists that they are a match for any of the far west clubs, and the Red Raiders also have probably the best record of any club in the east. They are undefeated as yet.

Stuart Chandler Picks Opponents For Star Team

Tennessee Gets Four, Vanderbilt Three, Duke Two, Wake Forest and Florida One Each.

Stuart Chandler, who has been a member of the varsity football team three years, yesterday collaborated with the DAILY TAR HEEL in selecting an all-opponents team.

Included in the selection are four men from Tennessee, three from Vanderbilt, two from Duke, and one each from Wake Forest and Florida. These men are selected on the basis of their play against Carolina regardless of how they have played in other games.

Of the men placed on this team several have an excellent chance of being placed on mythical all-southern teams. It will be hard to keep men like Roberts, Feathers, Ellis, Crawford, and Gracey off any selection that might be made.

WRESTLING COACH ISSUES CALL FOR FIRST PRACTICE

All Monogram Men, Reserves, And Last Year's Freshmen Are Asked to Report.

Coach P. H. Quinlan, varsity wrestling coach, will issue his first call for mat candidates today.

All men who are interested in making this year's edition of the Carolina grappling team must report at 4:00 o'clock this afternoon in the Tin Can. This means, all letter-men, reserves, and freshmen must put in their initial showing today.

It is very urgent that everyone contemplating going out for wrestling should report today, because Coach Quinlan wants to get a line on the candidates who are coming out for the squad. The mat coach wants it known that all men who did not go out for the intramural tourney have an equal chance to make a showing in the workouts.

For the next three weeks, the varsity workouts will comprise mere coaching in the fundamentals of wrestling, but the monogram men from last year's team must be on hand to assist in drilling in the rudiments of the mat game.

This year's squad is especially strong, having lost few men by graduation and being made up mostly of juniors who made their letters for the first time last year.

Percy Idol, a senior, in the unlimited class, will captain the wrestlers this year.

COLORED GRID GAME IS SET FOR NEXT MONTH

University of North Carolina students will have a chance to do their bit in helping maintain a full-time public colored nurse for negroes in the community.

The Orange County Training School football outfit will clash with an opponent yet to be selected on Emerson Field, Saturday, December 10. The proceeds of this event, which is sponsored by the senior Y. M. C. A. cabinet, will go to the maintenance of the local public colored nurse.

Bradshaw Speaks On Selecting Vocations

The freshman and sophomore assembly yesterday was addressed by Dean F. F. Bradshaw on the topic of "Choosing a Vocation." Dean Bradshaw said that within the memory of our grandfathers, all kinds of work were performed by members of the family; the child did not have to choose his life's work so early because all different kinds of work were carried on all about him, consequently he had information about all these vocations and about his fitness for doing these. Today a vocation must be chosen from material gathered from all sources, resulting in much mental confusion.

Dean Bradshaw concluded by saying that everything was determined by the kind of work that we chose as our vocation—our home, our companions, and our method of spending our leisure time.

(Continued from page two) stances their salaries are still intact or only slightly reduced. Many trustees apparently share the viewpoint of those of the University of Chicago who recently announced that in spite of a mounting deficit the academic salary level should be maintained.

"The board takes this action," said President Robert M. Hutchins, "not alone because it wishes to reward the professors of the university; rather the action is taken because of the critical situation in education generally, and because the board recognizes the position of leadership which the university occupies."—Eunice Barnard in The New York Times.

New Assembly Schedule

A new schedule for the assembly programs was announced yesterday by Dean of Students F. F. Bradshaw. The sophomores will be required to attend assembly only Monday mornings. The freshmen are required to attend Mondays and Fridays unless otherwise announced. All first year men must meet with their respective deans Wednesday mornings at 10:30 o'clock.

Roosevelt Confronted By Gigantic Task In Selection Of Cabinet

Similarly cautious must the new executive be in the selection of his attorney-general, who is one closest to the ear of our foremost citizen in matters of delicate legal import. He often privately interprets the constitution and stands as advisor in questions involving state and federal government.

The other seven cabinet offices require men of no less ability, but in themselves do not constitute such a strong arm of the administration. The Secretaries of War, Navy, Interior, Commerce, Labor, Agriculture, and the Postmaster-General do not all need the command of men fitted in each of the lines, though it seems that at this time the quality of material available for cabinet offices is well adaptable for specific berths.

My lineup, selected from the large field of candidates noted above, may not include some of those who will be ultimate choices when President-elect Roosevelt announces his cabinet. Men of ability along certain lines fitted for a particular cabinet berth are often switched to a different department in the administration, and many times, those designated for cabinet offices desire diplomatic plums or rewards in another field. Despite this, I believe that the majority chosen will come from the following list. They are listed in order according to office with past accomplishments and recommendations:

Secretary of State

YOUNG, OWEN D., New York, 58, St. Lawrence; economist, industrialist, lawyer; chairman Executive Committee R. C. How To Avoid BONERS

A GOITER IS A MUSICAL INSTRUMENT

THERE ought to be a law against people like Bill Boner! He even thinks an escapade is a staircase outside a house.

Still—he might be cured, if somebody would convert him to pipe smoking. For a good pipe with the right tobacco is man's first aid to clear thinking and wisdom. As for the "right tobacco," that's easy. A recent investigation showed Edgeworth Smoking Tobacco to be the favorite at 42 out of 54 leading colleges.

Just one puff will tell you why. It's that truly individual blend of fine old burleys—a blend you find only in Edgeworth Smoking Tobacco. Once you try Edgeworth, you'll never again be satisfied with less.

MUSICIANS ARRIVE TO PRACTICE FOR SYMPHONY GROUP

Percy Grainger Will Conduct
Fifty Piece Orchestra in Local Concerts.

Percy Grainger, noted pianist and composer, and fifty selected musicians will arrive here this morning to begin rehearsals for the North Carolina Symphony concerts to be presented in Durham Thursday night and Memorial hall Friday night.

Grainger has obtained the distinction of being one of the few people in the world to be nationally recognized in the triple capacity of artist, composer, and conductor. In concerts at New York, Washington, and other large cities, he has appeared in only two of his three roles; and for the first time in his life, he will appear in this triple capacity in the Durham and Chapel Hill concerts.

Stringfield's Work

Lamar Stringfield, conductor of the North Carolina Symphony, appeared before Hans Kindler's National Symphony as guest conductor a few weeks ago, and conducted his From the Southern Mountains suite, a composition that won the Pulitzer prize for its composer.

While he was there, the National Symphony read the latest symphonic work of Stringfield's, and Hans Kindler requested that his orchestra be allowed the first performance. Stringfield declined this honor, and is giving North Carolina the first opportunity of hearing what, in his own words, is "that of his works which most approaches being a masterpiece." He will conduct the North Carolina symphony in this composition which is a distinctly American folk legend told through the medium of the symphony. It will be played.

EX-PRESIDENT OF CHILE TO ADDRESS RELATIONS GROUP

Dr. Davila Will Lecture on Western Hemisphere Politics Before New Club.

A former president of Chile and one-time ambassador to the United States, Dr. Carlos Davila will speak before the newly-formed International Relations club sometime in the near future. Dr. Davila is a distinguished lecturer and authority on general world problems and particularly on the relations of the governments and peoples of North and South America. Arriving Monday, Chile's former president will remain in Chapel Hill for sometime and will make a series of public lectures.

The International Relations club, which has been organized within the last two weeks mainly through the work of Professor K. C. Frazer, has outlined its program for the entire year. There will be a series of meetings on current international affairs. Among the subjects to be discussed are the Manchurian situation, war debts, tariffs, and disarmament.

Information Service

A high light of the club will be the information service which it will place at the disposal of its members. There will be a mimeographed bulletin furnished forth.

SCENE FROM TONIGHT'S SHOW

Here's a scene from George B. Shaw's satiric comedy, "Arms and the Man." G. B.'s brilliant work will be interpreted by the Jitney Players' troupe tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre. Alice Keating Cheney, head of the company, has assembled a strong cast for these two dramatically appealing works.

Doris Kenyon Believes Southern Audiences Are Most Appreciative

Attractive Movie Actress and Concert Singer Interviewed
By Daily Tar Heel.

A charming beauty, whose following of collegiate autograph seekers always runs into hundreds, and who likes scrambled eggs for a midnight lunch, is Doris Kenyon. Singing before a small audience at Duke University Monday night for the second time in succeeding years, the attractive moving picture actress again captured Duke theatregoers with her clever musical impersonations. Before her performance, she told TAR HEEL reporters that she had rather sing in the south than any where else because southern audiences are more appreciative.

Doris Kenyon, who was Mrs. Milton Sills before the death of her husband three years ago, was a favorite in silent films. Last year she told TAR HEEL reporters that she had turned temporarily to the stage to overcome her grief for her husband. Monday night she explained that she had become so attached to her work that from now on she intends to make at least a six weeks' tour every year. Miss Kenyon goes to New York from Duke, and thence to New Orleans for an engagement.

Will Make Singing Picture

In the spring Miss Kenyon will return to Hollywood to make her first singing picture which will be with Lawrence Tibbet. The "singles," she thinks, have improved vastly in the past year. Singing pictures of the pioneering period of talking pictures lacked the construction and technique found today. These pictures had to improve, she observes, since low patronage indicated that the public would not tolerate them.

As for her choice of audiences in her present work, Miss Kenyon likes the southern theatre because the people are far more enthusiastic over a performance than the theatregoers of New England, who, she says, are coldly reserved. Audiences of the west, she finds, are too critical. It is difficult to give one's best to an unappreciative audience, she explains.

Distinctive Personality

Miss Kenyon probably has

PLANS FOR NEW SOUTH DISCUSSED BY "Y" CABINETS

All Groups Study for Southern Student-Faculty Conference In Atlanta.

A study and discussion of the New South and its problems, social, economic, and political, was in order Monday night for the junior-senior cabinet. Leonard Hutchison led the discussion, which was a preparatory discourse for the Southern student-faculty conference which will meet in Atlanta, December 28-31. The "Y" cabinets will be represented at the meeting.

The sophomore cabinet meeting consisted of an informal discussion of the changes in the honor system. Announcements regarding the negro football game and the advisability of sending a delegate from their group to the Atlanta conference constituted the meeting of the freshmen friendship council.

Bill McKee, president of the "Y," announced that Professor L. M. Brooks, of the sociology department, would lead the discussion next week at the junior-senior cabinet meeting. A continuance of the discussion of the south will be in order.

Try-outs For Debate With Dublin Monday

Try-outs for the debate with the University of Dublin were postponed last Monday night at the regular meeting of the debate group, until next Monday night at 9:00 o'clock, in 214 Graham Memorial. Don Seawell will debate the Dublin side of the question.

Instead of conducting try-outs at the last meeting, as was scheduled, a round-table discussion was conducted on the subject of Nationalism.

The University will meet the University of Dublin here, Thursday, December 15. The Carolina debaters will take the negative side of the resolution, Resolved: That nationalism is a bar to peace and-or progress.

Phi Mu Alpha Meeting

The local chapter of Phi Mu Alpha will meet this morning at 10:30 o'clock in Hill music building. A full attendance is urged.

DR. WALTER TOY RESIGNS POST AS FACULTY OFFICER

Colleagues Adopt Resolution Expressing Admiration; House Is Appointed Successor.

Dr. Walter Dallam Toy, secretary of the University faculty for forty-three years, has resigned that position and Robert Burton House, executive secretary of the University, has been named his successor.

Dr. Toy, who celebrated his seventy-eighth birthday November 13, last, came to the University forty-seven years ago, in 1885. After serving about fifteen years as professor of both German and French, he relinquished the French department, but continued as head of the department of German.

Resolution Adopted

Dr. Toy's colleagues on the University faculty have adopted a resolution expressing to him their admiration and affection. The resolution follows:

"The important office of secretary of the faculty, which concerns itself with a record of our activities, you have filled to the great satisfaction and delight of all of us since May, 1889. For forty-three years, serving in this capacity you have had the opportunity of noting in a most interesting and accurate fashion our thoughts, our resolutions, counter-resolutions and substitutions. It has been your privilege and our good fortune to have you chronicle the deliberations of our faculty through the administrations of Presidents Battle, Winston, Alderman, Venable, and E. K. Graham; the chairmanship of the faculty under Mr. M. H. Stacy, and again during the administrations of Presidents Chase and F. P. Graham. The intimate history of the University has, in a sense, been written by you, almost since its re-opening in 1875. Such a record will prove of infinite value to future historians. Serving in this capacity, your secretaryship has been not merely that of a scribe. You have made it a most delightful part of our meetings and have enabled us to anticipate our gatherings with a certain pleasure.

"With these thoughts in mind the faculty of the University desires to express to you its gratitude and very deep appreciation for your years of kindly service. We would go further, and attempt to make you feel not only this appreciation, but a love for you which came and abides through your fineness and your gentleness, your poise and your understanding."

PLAYMAKERS TO TRY OUT FOR EXPERIMENTAL PLAYS

Try-outs for the next bill of experimental plays will be conducted tomorrow afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre. About twenty parts will be available in the six or more new plays to be presented December 14, and all interested are urged to come to the try-outs.

This bill of experimental productions is not to be confused with the bill of four, original, one-act plays which is to be presented by the Carolina Playmakers as their second public presentation of the season December 8, 9, and 10. These experimental plays are entirely new and are presented to an invited audience.

LOCAL RED CROSS COMPLETES DRIVE

Six Hundred New Members Are Added to Local Chapter; Students Contribute $100.

Completing a successful membership drive covering a period of two weeks, the local chapter of the American Red Cross acquired 625 new members and a large number of contributions in produce, clothes and fuel. Although they failed to reach the local fixed quota by 150, they exceeded the quota set by the national chapter by twenty-five.

The success of this project begun on Armistice Day, which was led by Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt, was a result of intensive canvassing of Chapel Hill and Carrboro by a number of members of the local organization. A number of talks asking for contributions were made in the Carolina theatre by prominent members of the society.

Of the quota, sixty of the new members are students and contributions from this source amounted to $100. Irving Boyle was in charge of contributions from fraternity members; Bill Medford, the dormitories and Elizabeth Moore, Spencer hall, the Chi Omega, and Pi Beta Phi houses.

A request has been sent in to the national chapter by Colonel Pratt for about 5,000 more yards of goods and a large quantity of clothing to be distributed among the poor people of the county. This is approximately half as much as has already been given away.

FIELD ARTILLERY SCHOOL MEETS HERE TOMORROW

The next session of the 316th Field Artillery troop school will convene in Davie hall, tomorrow evening, at 7:30 o'clock.

This is a part of the general headquarters order being issued by Captain Dan B. Floyd, field artillery instructor, from the office of the executive officer in Raleigh.

Socialist Club Meeting

The Socialist club will meet tonight at 7:30 o'clock in 210 Graham Memorial. Arnold Williams will be speaker for the evening. All persons interested in socialism are cordially invited to attend.

STRAW BALLOTS WILL BE CAST FOR UNIVERSITY HEAD

Polls Set Up in Y. M. C. A. and Graham Memorial; Voting to Last Until Saturday.

In order to determine student opinion on the question of a successor of President Frank P. Graham to head the University here, THE DAILY TAR HEEL will conduct a straw vote beginning today and lasting through Saturday.

The ballots will be printed in the TAR HEEL, and ballot boxes will be placed in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. building and in the lobby of Graham Memorial. All students, graduate or undergraduate, are eligible to participate in the vote.

A number of persons have been proposed for the post but no great movements to promote candidates are apparent. Several faculty members and several men who have left the University within the past three years are suggested.

Though little local opinion has been expressed on the possibilities of any one candidate, it is indicated that only persons who are at present connected with the University or who have been associated with it recently will be the choice of the trustees.

The selection of a head of the University, whose official title will be vice-president of the Greater University of North Carolina, is one of the phases of the consolidation of the three leading state-supported institutions of North Carolina.

Under the scheme of consolidation there are three vice-presidents, each of whom heads one of the three divisions of the Greater University. Dr. E. C. Brooks was appointed head of State College and Dr. Julius I.

LOCAL CHEMICAL ENGINEERS PLAN EVENTS MONDAY

A.I.Ch.E. Branch Here Will Celebrate Monday as Chemical Engineers' Day.

The local branch of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers has chosen next Monday as Chemical Engineers' Day at the University.

The program which has been arranged for that day includes four seminars and one general lecture.

Dr. Webster N. Jones, director of engineering at Carnegie Institute of Technology, will be the principal speaker. He will give a lecture on "What Industry Expects of the Young Chemical Engineer." His lecture is scheduled for 9:30 o'clock, Monday morning, in 206 Venable hall. Dr. Jones will also speak in the evening at 8:30 o'clock in 206 Phillips hall on "The Processing of Rubber."

White to Lead Seminar

A seminar will be conducted in 206 Venable hall at 11:00 o'clock by Professor Alfred H. White, head of the chemical engineering department of the University of Michigan. His subject will be "Recent Developments in Fuel Gases."

Other seminars will be conducted by Professor A. M. White at 3:00 o'clock in 206 Venable

These Truths Are Self Evident

"No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

Thus reads the first section of article fourteen of the constitution of the United States. It takes no sage to see how void meaningless these phrases have become, or, rather, have been, in their application to certain very definite exigencies in our social and legalistic economy. Reference is made to the the flagrant discriminations against negroes, both in law and equity, here in our own beloved Southland.

The picture portrayed in the recent edition of the Carolina Magazine, in an absorbing, but cutting, satire, entitled: Sunday Evening, of some of the abuses of which the southern negro is a victim is not an unusual one. Here in Chapel Hill, the seat of Liberalism, such evils exist, if we can give consideration to recent revelations. If reports are true, negroes here have been victims of fraud and deception, on the part of some one, because they were willing to trust their white friends.

The facts in one case, as stated to the writer, by an old and bereaved member of the colored race, are these: Some time ago, the town officials decided to widen the street on which he lived and, by some form of deception, he was induced to sign a paper, binding him to fulfill certain obligations, which were not made plain to him, and promising him certain advantages, later on. When the project was completed, a bill against the old man's property for three hundred dollars was presented, and collected, with the assurance that he would receive a large refund, to compensate him for the property he had surrendered for the improvement. When he applied to the authorities for the promised refund, he was told that the town had nothing to do with the matter; he applied to the state officials only to be reminded that such functions belonged to the town, not the state.

Then, to make bad matters worse, the tax assessment on his property was raised from eight hundred to thirteen hundred dollars.

These facts may or may not be true; if true, they indicate one of several things, each equally deplorable: There is corruption among governing officials; else public records are very badly kept, and public servants remarkably ignorant, or, that private fraud is being indulged in, to the detriment not only of the victims concerned, but also of the good name of organized government.

It is very evident that this negro has been wronged by some one, and if such evils exist in this University town, how much more shameful must they be in the south in general.—W.A.S.

Modern Dark Ages

"Georgia feels that the convict has broken a state law and consequently owes the state a debt. Georgia does not feel that the state owes anything to the convict" is the statement of a Georgia official, hardly believable for its ignorance, vindictiveness, and brutality. It is amazing to find this attitude persisting in a country that claims to civilization. It is terrifying to know that the statement is being carried out in a manner fully as ignorant and as brutal as the spirit that prompted it. A committee of very distinguished men have found sufficient proof of the horrors of the Georgia chain gang to warrant an action on the part of the Civil Liberties Union endeavoring to gain some constitutional and humane treatment for the unhappy wretches that fall into the mercies of the Georgia penal system.

The facts this committee has found would be incredible did they not represent the work of so eminent a group, and did not the attitude of the Georgia officials make the worst seem probable. We are told of one man dying in horrible agony while his guards laughed at his pleas for medical aid. We are told of men "accidentally shot" or deaths recorded as "unexplained" and the death list is supplemented by a gruesome record of the various cruelties inflicted by the agents of Georgia's backward and brutal prison system.

Stories of this nature are no new thing and Georgia has long been infamous for the mistreatment of her criminals. Many a horrible tale has come up from the prison camps but now they have been proven true. Now this nation must admit that within her borders exist conditions unsurpassed for sheer cruelty. Now we must confess that we are handling with ignorance and brutality a problem that calls for the very best in science, education, and humane-ness. There is a certain grim humor in the realization that in Georgia whose people are among the nation's most devout, savagery and brutality flourish at their greatest heights.

We may boast the skyscraper and the airplane. We may take pride in the radio and the automobile but so long as the chain gang, the third degree and the sweat box are with us there can be no achievement of our civilization capable of partially compensating for the stark bestiality that goes on about us. Did these conditions exist only in our backward regions they would be inexcusable. What can we say when they exist as viciously in the centers of our culture? Within the year our greatest city exhibited to the world as repugnant and fiendish a sample of police methods as could be imagined.

The Georgia chain gang, the Florida sweat box, and the New York third degree killing are unpleasant demonstrations that our progress has consisted of making money and machines. For the elimination of brutality we are little removed from the days when the Pharaohs' chain gangs built pyramids under the Egyptian sun instead of roads beneath the Georgian sun. And through the ages the crack of the man-wielded lash resounds from the bloody backs of man.—J.F.A.

The Noblest Work of God

Among the problems that recur every year at Carolina is included always the problem of the honor system, how it shall be administered and whether or not it shall be retained. Since first introduced on this campus the honor system has never ceased to be a topic of heated controversy and there have been periods during which its very existence has hung upon a thin thread. Yet those who love the University and glory in its reputation have managed to keep alive here the spark of honor. To struggle as they have done to maintain the honor system there existed within them, and does yet exist, a great faith, a faith in the integrity and manhood of Carolina men, a solemn pride that though every other college may see fit to employ detective methods we have confidence in the word of our students.

A university may take pride in many things. It may boast a fine faculty, a great library, a beautiful campus or a famous alumnus. But no pride can be so great as the simple pride in the honor of its men and women. The goal of education and of learning is Truth. To act honorably is the basis of education. When a body of mature men and women come to a college motivated by desire for higher education it does not seem right that they must be spied upon as though they waited only an opportunity to cheat. Yet in almost every college, students perform their work under the vigilant scrutiny of monitors.

It would be foolish to hope that in some system under which a few morally inferior men will not seek parasitic success at the expense of others. Let those who will do so, they have gained a trifle and lost the greatest satisfaction that life offers—the ability to look their fellows in the eye. The cheater is to be pitied, he is conscious of being a sneak, a coward, and a liar, not alone for his dishonesty but for his abuse of the trust of his fellow students.

The men who gave this school the honor system believed in us. They believed that the normal man and woman is honest and fair. They knew that there will always be a few that would abuse the trust they offered, but they hoped that this school might cultivate and foster above all else the sense of honor and of right. It is our proud duty to hold high the torch they have

With Contemporaries

The Worm

Is Turning

Those of us who have grown up in Alabama since the passage of the Eighteenth Amendment, look with amazement at the growing tendency of the lawmakers of this state to align themselves on the side of Prohibition Repeal. Through the long years since the war we have become accustomed to the title of "Driest State in the Union," and have considered it justly merited. We have listened while our mothers and other feminine relatives heatedly debated the question before our silent fathers and uncles. We have trudged dutifully behind the bands that blared their way toward the halls where the valiant "Knights of Temperance" held sway. We have dimly realized that somewhere, someday, some chap with unlimited courage would advocate striking the Volstead Act from the lawbooks.

The repeal of the state law prohibiting the sale of near beer, after almost two decades, is a very evident straw in the wind. The old-time legislatures of our fathers have given reluctantly away to the newer and broader-minded one which is now making the laws of this state. The entrusted to our care, to preserve in the many and inculcate in the few the finest and most fundamental thing that Carolina stands for—the Truth—J.F.A.

general sentiment of these legislators and of we youngsters who shall follow them is overwhelmingly against prohibition. We have impartially noted its failure. We have seen others break and have broken ourselves a dozen laws designed to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment, and we are disgusted with its futility. It is not surprising, therefore, that we heartily cheer those men who are paving the way toward a new era when the individual liberties which Washington and Jefferson enjoyed will be restored to us. The worm has turned. A new day is dawning over Alabama.—Auburn Plainmen.

TWENTY REPORT FOR INTRAMURAL BOXING PRACTICE

Scarcity of Material in Heaviest Weights Worries Coaches of Varsity and Frosh Teams.

Twenty men reported for intramural boxing yesterday at the Tin Can and their first day's work consisted of limbering up exercises, light and heavy bag punching, rope skipping, and shadow boxing.

Coach Archie Allen of the freshmen put the boys through their paces, in which they were joined by nearly all of the freshman team candidates and several of the varsity men.

Need Heavyweights

Coach Allen reports that there is still a scarcity of candidates for the four heaviest divisions on the freshman squad, the 155, 165, 175-pound and unlimited.

In the latter two weights on the varsity there is also a need of men, Val Edwards being the only light-heavy and Jim Caruth the only heavy prospect out so far. There is a chance that Peyton Brown, last year's 175-pound slugger, may return to school, but the heavyweight class would still be in need of material.

Out of the intramurals which will be held next Wednesday and Thursday, several fine prospects are sure to emerge. This has always been the result in the past.

CO-EDS WILL PLAY INTRAMURAL BALL

Second, Third, and Fourth Floors Of Spencer Hall Will Play Basketball Games.

Much excitement is being evidenced in Spencer over the fact that the Co-eds have taken the Buccaneer and the TAR HEEL at their word and have "waxed athletic."

So great is the effect of the wide-spread reflections upon their ability as sportswomen and the openly expressed doubts as to their possession of the proper amount of school spirit that they have decided to blast the arguments of their most rabid critics permanently and play intramural basketball! The third floor of Spencer hall will play the second floor Thursday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock on the girls' athletic field, and the fourth floor will play the winner at the same time Friday. Betting odds heavily favor the second and third floors, as there is an opinion prevalent that the fourth-floor-girls are too weak from walking up so many stairs to be much competition.

Tentative line-ups are as follows:

Second Floor: forwards, Munson, Jolly, and McKinney; guards, Parker, Bizzell, and Stetcher.

Third Floor: forwards, Daniels, Parker, and Bowes; guards, Pope, Ross, and Orendorff.

Fourth Floor: forwards, Perrow, Barnett, and Harris; guards, Phillips, Vardell, and Roberson.

Eagle Scout Meeting

The Eagle Scout club will hold an important meeting tonight at 7:30 in room 209 Graham Memorial.

CAVALIER ELEVEN WILL PLAY TOUGH TEAMS NEXT YEAR

Five Southern Conference Foes Included on Virginia's 1933 Football Schedule.

Virginia's football schedule for 1933, which has just been announced by James G. Driver, athletic director, includes five members of the Southern Conference, two major eastern teams, one member of the Big Ten, and two teams from the Virginia Conference. Five of the games are to be played at home, five away.

Ohio State is on Virginia's grid card for the first time. Navy has been listed again after a lapse of more than a score of years since the last game in 1909.

Columbia is being played on Baker field for the third season in succession. The Lions won their first game from the Cavaliers 27 to 0, and this fall gained a 22 to 6 victory.

Five Conference Foes

Five traditional Southern Conference rivals are to be played one after the other during the last half of the season. Games with V. M. I., Maryland, and V. P. I. are scheduled for Scott stadium. Washington and Lee and North Carolina are to be played away.

Virginia's 1933 football schedule follows:

Sept. 23, Hampden-Sidney at home.
Sept. 30, Randolph-Macon at home.
Oct. 7, Ohio State away.
Oct. 14, Columbia away.
Oct. 21, Navy away.
Oct. 28, V. M. I. at home.
Nov. 4, Maryland at home.
Nov. 11, W. and L. away.
Nov. 18, V. P. I. at home.
Nov. 30, North Carolina away.

PLAN BOWLING TOURNEY FOR GRAHAM MEMORIAL

During the last week before the Christmas holidays there will be a bowling tournament in the alleys in Graham Memorial with everybody eligible, both faculty and students. Beginning this past Monday all the scores above 130 will be recorded by the managers and those making this score or above will be eligible for the tourney. Each week the highest scores will be listed.

After the holidays fraternities and dormitories will organize teams and a University team will be formed. It is hoped that bowling will become a recognized intramural sport here, and that the University team will have several meets, official and unofficial with other colleges and cities.

Boxing Tourney Workouts

Entrants in the annual boxing tournament are requested to report for workouts to the boxing managers in the Tin Can any day in the week between 4:00 and 6:00 o'clock. Five workouts are necessary before any man may enter the tournament which is slated to begin Wednesday, December 7.

Chess Club Lecture

A Chess club lecture will be given tonight at 7:00 o'clock in the lobby of Graham Memorial. All members are urged to be present.

DURHAM HIGH TO PLAY QUEEN CITY TEAM SATURDAY

Both Teams Undeclared; Charlotte Unscored on; Durham Tallied Against Once.

Durham high school, eastern North Carolina class "A" football champions, will meet Charlotte, winner in the west, for the state class "A" title in Kenan stadium Saturday, December 3. The game will begin at 2:30 o'clock.

Both teams have perfect records in conference play this year. Charlotte defeated Salisbury, 19-0, at Davidson last Saturday for its fourth straight conference victory. The Queen City club has not been scored on this season. Durham has swept aside all opposition in the eastern section in four games, also, and has allowed rival teams only seven points in the entire campaign.

Charlotte's march to the western title has been impressive and thorough. Greensboro was beaten in the first game, 14-0, and High Point was overwhelmed in the second, 40-0. Winston-Salem fared hardly better the next week, being crushed, 38-0, and Salisbury was severely trounced in the last game, 19-0.

Durham's conquest has been equally as impressive. The Bull City gridders routed Rocky Mount in the opener, 39-0, and ran through Goldsboro in the second, 46-7. They defeated Wilmington the following week, 32-0, and ended their successful campaign by giving Raleigh one of its worst defeats in recent years, 34-0.

Durham Won Last Year

Durham won the state championship last year for the first time, ending Charlotte's two year reign by a convincing win in Kenan stadium. Charlotte has won the state championship five times since the conference began.

Student tickets will be on sale at the box office for fifty cents. Other tickets for townspeople and visitors will sell for seventy-five cents.

FENCERS CONDUCT INITIAL PRACTICE IN TIN CAN TODAY

Egan, Litten, and Weesner, Members Of Last Year's Team, Will Coach New Men This Year.

The Tar Heel fencing team will open this season's practice today in the Tin Can at 4:30 o'clock. All new candidates or transfer students who have fenced are urged to be present.

Last year the Carolina swordsmen fought their way through a very successful season. They defeated the Universities of South Carolina and Virginia, William and Mary, Rollins College, and St. John's. The Tar Heels tied La Fayette, and were defeated by Rutgers and V. M. I.

In the Southern conference tourney held at Chapel Hill, Carolina took second place in the general match and won first and second places in the saber engagement. E. Egan, F. C. Litten and Dick Weesner, three members of last year's team will be back to coach the new fencers.

JUNE UNDERWOOD LEADS TAR HEELS IN PLAYING TIME

Star Center Has 496 Minutes of Play; Walker Is Second With 488; Chandler Leads Backfield.

June Underwood, star center playing his last season on a Carolina team, led all the Tar Heels in the number of minutes played this season in action.

The big pivot man turned in 496½ minutes in the ten games played and was followed by Erwin Walker, who had 488 minutes. Frank Smith, tackle who still has a year left to play, had 434½ minutes to his credit and was third. George Brandt, who also has another year on the Tar Heels, was fourth with 430½ minutes.

Stuart Chandler, fullback, halfback, and quarterback and a probable all-state choice, led the backs in the number of minutes and was fifth on the squad. Chandler, who has played his last game on the Tar Heel eleven turned in 411½ minutes.

LOU BUSH LEADS NATION'S SCORERS

Massachusetts State College Halfback Amasses 114 Points to Out-Distance Rivals.

A diminutive whirlwind swept out of Massachusetts State College this football season to capture high scoring honors for the nation.

Lou Bush, brilliant half of the Bay State institution wound up his season last week with a grand total of 114 points, a full 29 points ahead of his nearest opponent, Ralph Graham of Kansas State. Don Zimmerman led the scoring procession in Dixie. The speedy Wave halfback amassed 70 points.

Leaders in the nation's ten major conferences or sections follow:

East—Bush, Mass. State, 114; Big Six—Graham, Kansas State, 85; S. I. A. A.—Broderick, West Kentucky, 84; Southwest—Hilliard, Texas, 75; S. I. C.—Zimmerman, Tulane, 70; Midwest—Monnett, Michigan State, 69; Rocky Mountain—Christensen, Utah, 57; Missouri Valley—Gordon, Creighton, 54; Pacific—Smith, Idaho, 54; Big Ten—Manders, Minnesota.

SIX VARSITY MEN BOLSTER VIRGINIA BOXING MATERIAL

Experienced Boxers From Last Year's Championship Team Form Nucleus of Team.

Six members of Virginia's Southern Conference championship boxing team of 1932 are among the forty candidates that have been out for places on the 1933 ring squad.

John LaRowe, boxing coach, has ended several weeks of fall practice because of the coming first term examinations. The workouts will be resumed January 3, less than two weeks before the opening match with Duke.

Two Conference Champs

Two holders of individual conference ring titles will be on the squad again. These are Bobby Goldstein of Washington, D. C., featherweight conference and national collegiate champion, and Lewis Reiss of New York City, conference light-heavyweight champion and captain of Virginia's football team.

Other veterans of last winter's undefeated team are Richard Sowers of Richmond, bantamweight; Thomas Fishburne of Charlottesville, lightweight; Harold Stuart of Oklahoma City, welterweight; and Hiram Smith of Richmond, middleweight.

Because there are to be bouts in eight classes this season instead of seven as before, Coach LaRowe is having to make several shifts in his men. Stuart will probably compete in the new 158-pound division and most of the others may be boosted up into heavier classes.

Six Bouts Slated

Six bouts, three at home and three away, have been scheduled. Navy and Florida have replaced Yale and Pennsylvania. The list follows:
Jan. 14, Duke at home.
Jan. 21, V. M. I. in Lexington.
Jan. 28, V. P. I. at home.
Feb. 4, North Carolina in Chapel Hill.
Feb. 11, Florida at home.
Feb. 16, Navy in Annapolis.

OAKLEY FAMOUS FOR WORLDWIDE EMINENCE IN ART

Lecturer Who Is to Appear Here Has Received Distinction in Many Foreign Countries.

Thornton Oakley, who is to present an illustrated lecture in the Hill Music auditorium tomorrow evening at 8:30 o'clock, is an illustrator, painter, writer, and architect. He studied architecture at the University of Pennsylvania, receiving the degrees of B. S. in 1901 and M. S. in 1902. He was a pupil of Howard Pyle at Wilmington. His drawings of Hog Island (United States Navy shipbuilding yard) were adopted by the United States government in 1918 for foreign news service. His lithographs, paintings, and drawings are in the Library of Congress, and the National Gallery, Washington; the Boston library and other public libraries in this country; in the Musee de la Guerre in Paris; in the British Museum, and in the Luxembourg Museum.

Decorated in France

He received from France the decoration of "Palme d'Officier d'Academie," in recognition of his distinguished work in art.

In collaboration with his wife, Amy Oakley has produced the following elaborately illustrated works: "Hill Towns of the Pyrenees," "Cloud-lands of France," and "Enchanted Brittany."

Oakley is also well known for his illustrations of "Westward Ho," "Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin," and "Folk Tales of Brittany." His industrial verse and drawings have appeared from time to time in the official publication of the American Federation of Labor.

PHONE CHANGES CAUSE MUCH CONFUSION HERE

Here's another one of those freak changes in telephone numbers recently made in the new telephone book—a document which has caused considerable confusion among residents of Chapel Hill, dormitory and fraternity phones.

Aspiring young swains who have "numbers" on the fourth floor of Spencer hall have been calling at the home of Dr. R. B. Sharpe of the English department at 1-C Graham Court Apartments. Dr. Sharpe's new number is that which was formerly of the phone on the fourth floor of Spencer hall, and the English instructor is requesting all young men with Spencer hall dates to ring 4181, the Spencer hall combine, instead of 4716, Dr. Sharpe's new number.

Jitney Players Will Appear Here Today

This afternoon, at 4:00 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre, the Jitney Players, famous professional touring company, will present Tom Robertson's mid-victorian romance, Caste under the auspices of the Carolina Playmakers.

Arms and the Man, George Bernard Shaw's satiric comedy about militarism, will be presented by the Players at 8:30 tonight. Alice Keating Cheney, head of the company, has assembled a strong supporting cast for these two dramas that are constantly revived because of their timeless appeal.

A ticket covering the two performances has a special price of one dollar, while for the matinee the price is fifty cents, and for the evening seventy-five cents.

more personal charm than any actress who has played on an entertainment program at either Duke or Carolina in recent years. Her voice is soft and well modulated. Although she was born in New York City her accent is distinctly southern. Her eyes are blue and when she breaks into her frequent and engaging smile, they seem to twinkle through her long lashes.

When she received the reporters in her dressing room she was gowning in a low cut yellow costume of the Louis Fourteenth period, as she was to appear for her first number. She seems to enjoy an interview quite as much as the reporters who are fortunate enough to make her acquaintance. She converses in a laughing easy manner that seems not at all like the aristocrats of the movies. Complete evidence of her human qualities was her order of scrambled eggs, dry toast and coffee after her performance. It could have at least been caviar.

LOCAL OPERA GROUP TO PRESENT "IOLANthe"

The Chapel Hill opera association will present Gilbert and Sullivan's Iolanthe Saturday, December 3, at 8 o'clock. The opera will be presented at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Farrar. Because of limited seating capacity, admission will be by invitation only.

The Chapel Hill opera association has no formal organization and is not connected with any other local dramatic group. The members are those local singers who wish to prepare performances for the enjoyment of singing together. The Savoy Opera of London, which owns the copyrights, has granted this society the privilege of singing any Gilbert and Sullivan opera free of royalty.

Di And Phi Select Men For Memorial Debate

The speakers for the Di and Phi societies, in the annual Mary D. Wright Memorial debate, have been selected. Elmer Oettinger and Bill Eddleman will represent the Di, and C. W. Griffin and L. W. Fountain will speak for the Phi. The question for the debate is, "Resolved: That all nations should totally disarm all forces except those needed for police protection." The Di will debate the affirmative side of the question and the Phi will take the negative. The debate will be conducted Friday night at 7:30 o'clock, in Gerrard hall.

Both of the societies will be represented by two speakers. Each speaker will have twenty minutes to present his argument. The speeches will be followed by a rebuttal.

Tar Heel To Find Student Opinion On Next Vice-President

Foust was chosen vice-president to direct Woman's College at a meeting of the trustees while President Graham was elevated to the position of president of the Greater University, leaving the vice-presidency here vacant.

The successor to President Graham will probably be selected at the next meeting of the Board of Trustees. Though the date of this meeting has not been set, it was announced at the November meeting that the group would convene before the meeting of the state legislature in January.

Pi Beta Phi Will Sponsor Dance at Inn Friday Night

The members of the Pi Beta Phi sorority will sponsor a dance in the ballroom of the Carolina Inn Friday night from 9:30 until 1:00 o'clock. Jack Wardlaw and his orchestra will furnish the music. Invitations to the dance were sent out yesterday.

Freshman class pictures will be on sale in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. Thursday, Friday, and Saturday during assembly period and from 3:00 to 5:00 o'clock in the afternoon. The pictures will be sold for five cents.

Community Club Meeting

Chapel Hill's community club will meet Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the Episcopal parish house. Dr. Raymond Adams of the English department will address the gathering on "Adult Education One Hundred Years Ago."

Reverend Godbold Returns

Reverend Albea Godbold, minister of the local Methodist Episcopal church, has been re-appointed to his pastorate in Chapel Hill, it was announced at the closing session of the North Carolina Methodist Episcopal Conference.

nightly by the Carnegie Foundation to the club containing a summary of important current subjects on international relations. Moreover the Carnegie Foundation will furnish books on current topics for the benefit of members of the club.

All members of the student body and members of the faculty are invited to become members of the club and attend its meetings for which there is no charge. The first meeting at which Dr. Davila will speak is especially brought to the attention of those interested. The club has elected no permanent officers as yet.

FOUR SCHOOLS ASPIRE TO CONFERENCE RATING

A quartet of colleges will be considered for membership in the Southern Intercollegiate Conference when the body meets at Knoxville a fortnight from now.

Davidson, William and Mary, University of Richmond, and Loyola of New Orleans are the institutions seeking entrance into the select group, it was announced last week by C. P. Miles, president of the loop and graduate manager of athletics at V. P. I.

Davidson, William and Mary, and Richmond have far better records than many conference teams; but Loyola has played more games against non-conference foes.

Senior Comprehensives

Senior comprehensive examinations for the fall quarter are scheduled for December 3. All fourth year men expecting to take this exam are requested to confer with the heads of the departments in which they are majoring, if they have not already done so.

LITERARY GROUP IS SCHEDULED TO MEET IN RALEIGH

Miss Thornton and Colonel Pratt Will Address Annual Meeting Of Association.

Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt, of Chapel Hill, and Miss Mary L. Thornton of the University library staff, are scheduled to make addresses at the thirty-second annual session of the North Carolina literary and historical association which will convene in Raleigh, Thursday and Friday. Colonel Pratt will speak on "The Conservation Movement in North Carolina" and Miss Thornton's subject will be "North Carolina Bibliography of 1931-32."

An interesting feature of the meeting will be the presentation of a replica of the Mayflower society cup to the resident of the state publishing the best original work during the year ending November 1. The winner of this cup last year was Dr. M. C. S. Noble, of Chapel Hill, chairman of the North Carolina historical commission, for "History of the Public Schools of North Carolina." The original cup was presented to the North Carolina society of Mayflower descendants last year and is on permanent display in the state museum. The names and works of the winners are to be engraved on the original cup each year.

BOY SCOUTS WILL MEET HERE FOR ANNUAL SEMINAR

President Graham and Many University Professors Will Speak at Meetings.

Boy Scout executives of several states gather in Chapel Hill today to attend the Boy Scout executive seminar which will be in session at the University for three days: today, Friday, and Saturday. These meetings will be attended by all the executives of region six of the Boy Scouts of America.

The program of the meetings which begin with a luncheon meeting in Graham Memorial today and lasts through 1:00 o'clock on Saturday, will include as speakers many prominent professors. Regional Executive Kenneth G. Bentz of Atlanta will also have an important part of the program, making a series of addresses to the executives on the subject: "Organization and Administration."

Graham Welcomes

At the opening meeting today at 1:00 o'clock President Frank P. Graham will deliver an address of welcome to the visitors. This will be followed from 2:15 till 4:30 by a session at which Bentz will make the first of his series of speeches. At the supper meeting at 6:00 o'clock, Dr. Frederick H. Koch of the faculty of the University will speak on "Dramatization and Pageantry," and following this the Reverend Douglas Wright will talk on "Indians and Indian Life in North Carolina."

Many Prominent Speakers

The program for Friday will begin with an address by L. D. Harrill, N. C. State Club leader

DAILY CONTINUES STRAW VOTE ON VICE-PRESIDENT

Balloting for Student Successor To President Graham Continues Through Week.

With a fair sized vote cast yesterday, the DAILY TAR HEEL straw vote on student choice for a successor to President Frank P. Graham to head the University here will enter its second day this morning.

The object of the ballot is to allow University students, both graduate and undergraduate, the opportunity to express their views on the choice of a vice-president of the Greater University of North Carolina. This man will have charge of the University.

Balloting in the vote will continue until Saturday night when the votes will be counted and the results are to be released Sunday. The ballots are printed in the DAILY TAR HEEL and the polls have been placed in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. building and in the lobby of Graham Memorial. All students in the University are requested to cast their ballots and express their true convictions as to who should direct the affairs of the University.

Comprehensives to Take Place

The comprehensive examination in English will be given to all juniors and seniors majoring in that subject Saturday at 9:00 o'clock in 201 Murphey.

Black and Hunter To Represent Engineers

Fisher Black and John Hunter, chairman and secretary representatives of the local chapter of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, will attend the sectional convention at Knoxville, Tenn., December 1, 2, and 3. This convention will be composed mainly of the chairmen and counsellors of each branch.

The major purpose of the convention is to exchange ideas and to acquaint the delegates of all that is taking place in the progress of electricity.

Papers are presented by students for which prizes are awarded to the best. No papers will be presented by the delegates from Carolina because of lack of time since receiving notice of the convention meeting.

Professor W. J. Miller of the electrical department will also attend the convention.

DEBATE SOCIETY VOTES AGAINST BILLS DISCUSSED

Bills Favoring Credit for Athletic Attainment and Discard of Monroe Doctrine Defeated.

Little response was given the introduction of bills on the calendar of the Phi assembly at the meeting in New East building Tuesday night, and the meeting presided over by Speaker Dan Kelly adjourned prior to the regular time for adjournment.

The only speaker to discuss the proposal that students of the University of North Carolina be given credit toward graduation for athletic attainment, Representative Rubin, opposed the measure. An overwhelming majority voted against the bill. The following bill was defeated. Resolved: That the constitution of the United States be so amended as to provide that the citizens of the District of Columbia and all territories of the United States, incorporated in the United States, be allowed a prescribed number of Presidential and Vice-Presidential electors.

A bill favoring the discard of the Monroe Doctrine by the United States provoked a great deal of discussion. The major argument for the discard projected by supporters of the measure was that the Doctrine is used as a screen to foster the economic interests of this country in the various countries affected by the policy.

The meeting next week will be a business session, at which time officers for the coming quarter will be elected.

"Y" CANVASSES STUDENT BODY FOR RELIEF FUNDS

An "every-student canvass" will be conducted Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of next week by the three Y. M. C. A. cabinets, according to an announcement made yesterday by Bill McKee, president of the Y. Since students are not contributing in their home towns, local relief officials feel that they will be glad to support the Orange county campaign. George Lawrence, county welfare officer, will see to the distribution of the college donations.

Entertainment Postponed

The regular Thursday evening entertainment program sponsored by the Union Forum for this week has been postponed until next Thursday night, it was announced yesterday.

U. N. C. Campus Has Few Monuments To Eminent Alumni And Officials

Monuments Have Been Erected To Joseph Caldwell, First President of the University, Mrs. E. K. Graham, and Confederate Soldiers; None to President Polk.

Among even the few monuments on the campus, there is none to the sole alumnus who rose to the highest position in the nation. Nothing more than a tablet in Memorial hall has been the University's commemoration of James Knox Polk, eleventh president of the United States, and a member of the class of 1818.

Aside from personal memorial gifts such as Kenan stadium, Carr building, and the Morehead-Patterson campanile, the grounds of the University are conspicuously lacking in monuments. There is little question that an absence of sufficient funds has thwarted more than one plan to erect shafts or tablets in honor of the great dead of the University.

Caldwell Monument

The history of the Caldwell shaft is indicative of the struggle necessary to securing the means for presenting memorials to the University. Eleven years were required to raise the money to erect this monument to Joseph Caldwell, D.D., the first president of the University.

Ironically enough it was Polk who instigated the movement among the alumni of the University to raise a memorial to Caldwell. While he was still chief executive of the country, in 1847, he sponsored the resolution that the graduates make the monument possible by contributing three dollars each. It was decided to place the new shaft at some central spot on the campus to supplant the old sandstone column which had been placed in a bad location by the erection of New West building.

Dedicated in 1858

According to Battle's history of the University, $210 was the sum amassed after the first canvass. Since this sum was insufficient, the individual contributions were increased and in 1858 the committee appointed for this purpose announced the dedication of the monument.

When the Caldwell monument was dedicated it was a shining white marble obelisk, more than twenty feet in height, situated near Davie Poplar. At that time it was virtually in the center of the campus and attracted considerable attention.

Today, however, it is weather-beaten, cracked, overgrown, with

Opportune Gift Of Land Figured In Choice Of University Location

Haywood, Chatham County, Was Favorite in Popular Opinion for University Site, But Donations of Land Intervened
To Place Institution Here.

Chapel Hill, which is not the name by which the town was known in the days when the University was being founded, came precariously near not being the site of the heart of the state educational system. A donation of a few acres of land seems all that prevented the state legislature's committee of six state senators from placing the University in the now non-existent village of Haywood in Chatham county.

Public opinion on the question of the location of the University was heartily in favor of Haywood. In fact, the situation indicated that almost any place but Chapel Hill would be selected, for the legislature seriously considered Raleigh, Williamsboro, and Goshen in Granville county, Smithfield in the east, Pittsboro, and Hillsboro.

Committee Undecided

The controversy over whether Carolina should be at Haywood or Chapel Hill grew out of the fact that the legislature selected Cyprett's Bridge which crosses New Hope creek in Chatham county, adjoining this one. However, the Bridge was not chosen as the location until after a measure had been passed providing that the site might be fifteen miles from the place designated. A committee of six was appointed to select the land.

In November, 140 years ago, the senators set into the woods of Chatham and Orange county to search about in the prescribed radius of fifteen miles. A record of a journal kept by Senator Fred Hargett, chairman of the selection committee, and dating from November 1 to November 9, reveals that the men viewed several possible places and received numerous unimpressive financial proposals from the proprietors. Although pleased with the site at Haywood, the senators were hesitant because of the price of the land.

Speculators Boomed Haywood

A determined effort was under way to bring the University to Haywood. Confident that it would be the location selected, speculators bought land with intentions of selling at high prices to instructors and business people who must follow the students. Had it not been for donations of land on and surrounding Chapel Hill, from people in this vicinity, Carolina boys might today add boat racing to their athletics, since Haywood was located at the confluence of Haw and Deep rivers. Haywood has today taken its place with other vanished "boom-towns" of past years.

The committee was equally impressed with the hill near New

Today Last Day For Annual's Discount

The Publications Union Board announced yesterday that this is the last day on which organizations on the campus may receive benefit of the ten per cent discount on space offered by the Yackety Yack.

This discount was announced by the Publications Board early in the year with a view to benefit those organizations whose finances are low and who find it difficult to meet their various obligations. As the offer is virtually a price reduction to those orders who are able to meet their obligations—it is surprising to note that a large number of organizations have so far failed to take advantage of this discount.

The Annual is particularly anxious that it be brought to the attention of the secretaries of the various organizations that failure to pay today means the forfeiture of a liberal discount.

LECTURE SERIES AND ORCHESTRA HAS APPROBATION

Project of Senator McKee to Bring Lecturers to Chapel Hill Favored
By Senate Tuesday Night.

Motions favoring co-operation in bringing a series of educational lectures to Chapel Hill in January and in lending aid to officials in establishing the prestige of the newly-formed North Carolina symphony orchestra were passed by the Di senate Tuesday night.

Senator McKee asked for the co-operation of the body in bringing eight famous lecturers to Chapel Hill for weekly talks beginning January 7. The discussions will be concerning economic problems of the country today. Senator Medford moved that the Di co-operate in selling tickets and favoring the project. The motion passed.

President Rose voiced a plea to help the North Carolina symphony orchestra throughout the state in future concerts. The senate voted in favor of such a plan.

After much discussion, it was voted to run the regular two-page publication in the Yackety Yack this year. Three new members were taken in. They were James Craighill, Arthur Block, and William Singleterry. Senators Medford and Blackwell were re-instated. Initiation of the new men will take place at the next meeting, which will be an executive session at which time officers for the next quarter will be elected.

KOCH CHIEF SPEAKER AT LENOIR-RHYNE BANQUET

Professor F. H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers, will be chief speaker at the annual banquet of the Lenoir-Rhyne Playmakers Saturday night, at Lenoir-Rhyne College, Hickory. The director of the Lenoir-Rhyne Playmakers is Miss Pearl Setzer, a former Carolina Playmaker, several of whose plays, among them notably, Black Rooster, were produced here.

Grail Dance to Take Place

The order of the Grail will sponsor a dance Saturday night from 9:00 until 12:00 o'clock in the Bynum gymnasium with Jack Wardlaw and his orchestra furnishing the music. Tickets will be $1.00 per person, and, as usual, freshmen will not be permitted to attend.

COLLEGE GROUPS WILL GATHER TO STUDY PROBLEMS

Representatives of Local Organizations to Attend Faculty-Student Conference.

With the theme "The Responsibility of the Forces of Religion in Building the South of Tomorrow," the Southern Faculty-Student Conference will meet in Atlanta, December 28-31. This will be the first south-wide convention dealing with interracial and economic problems to take place among student-faculty groups. The Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., and the Student Volunteers will cooperate in the project.

Questions on economic situations, race, education, and religion are on the program for discussion. Dr. W. A. Smart of Emory University, who is widely and favorably known throughout the region as a scholar and a sympathetic helper, will open the conference. Howard Thurman, who is now connected with Howard University, will lead the devotionals. Dr. W. W. Alexander, executive secretary of the commission of interracial cooperation, will address the assemblage on "Human Relations in the South." Francis P. Miller, chairman of the World Student Christian Federation and lecturer at Yale University, will speak during the conference, as will Miss Winifred Wygal, secretary of the national student council of the Y. W. C. A., and Frank Wilson, secretary of the national council of the Y. M. C. A. Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University, will make the closing address.

THORNTON OAKLEY TO GIVE LECTURE ON ILLUSTRATION

Famous Lecturer Will Come Here Under Auspices of Mrs. K. P. Arrington.

Through the courtesy of Mrs. Katherine Pendleton Arrington of Warrenton, N. C., students at the University will have the opportunity of hearing an illustrated lecture by Thornton Oakley, noted artist and illustrator, in the Hill music auditorium at 8:30 o'clock tonight.

Oakley's subject will be "Illustration" and he will demonstrate his points with personal drawings.

Oakley has received many rewards and has held numerous positions in art organizations. For his distinguished work in art he has received the French decoration of "Palme d'Officier d'Academie." His lithographs, paintings, and drawings are in the Library of Congress and the National Gallery in Washington, the Musee de la Guerre in Paris, and in the British Museum.

He is in North Carolina on a lecture tour under the auspices of the state art society of North Carolina and the American Federation of Arts. Through the provision of Mrs. Arrington, who has been active for several years in the work of the state art society, the federation is sending the lecturer to the University free of charge.

Oakley spoke at the annual meeting of the state group in the Sir Walter hotel in Raleigh yesterday.

Road Open

The direct expression of students sincerely interested in foreign policy and international relations has conceived the International Relations club which, though in stages of comparative infancy, bids fair to occupy a sorely needed spot in campus life. Outline under the leadership of a faculty adviser and captained by several students who seek such an agency for personal expression on affairs of government, the club launches this week an intensive program in every field of this endeavor.

A paramount feature in the early plans of the club will be the presentation of Dr. Carlos Davila, one-time president of Chile and ambassador to the United States. The eminent South American will appear shortly before the organization in one or more of a series of lectures on international problems as they confront relations here and in the republics to the south of us.

Though the International Relations club joins a list of some four hundred-odd organizations functioning on this campus in one capacity or another, it is one of the few which will have a definite and constructive purpose at heart. There will be no dues, no special membership requirements and little formal organization. In these respects it will supercede groups of the same nature already allegedly serving the campus.

The International Relations club can hope to do little more in a constructive way than awakening some measure of interest in affairs outside the sometimes dull circle of campus activities. Perhaps its only contribution in its early stages may be that of serving as a symposium of student thought—an emergency to waken brains which oftentimes become dulled through pointless bull sessions and inane arguments.

A broad avenue is opened. May it soon be trafficked.—D.C.S.

Pugnacity At Its Worst

After fourteen years of consistent planning, legislation, and note signing to insure world peace, some of this country's restless adventurers are questioning the practicality of it, suggesting war as preferable to the monotony of mechanized peace.

It is true, if we are to believe the general consensus of psychological opinion, that fighting is an instinctive native reaction, as well as one of the so-called dominant human urges. Nevertheless, we sometimes question the possibility of fully satisfying urges through the gruesome slaughter of thousands of the nation's finest manhood by poisonous gases, long-distance guns and explosive bombs. It may be true that those older adventurous individuals who experienced countless death-daring episodes in our last war find our present day mechanized civilization dull and unexciting. For them few peaceful problems, however interesting to the normal individual, can offer thrills that will begin to compare with those of past encounters. However, most certainly the youth of today and tomorrow will be able to satisfy these urges in a less devastating manner than by the wholesale butchery of war.

Our whole civilization throws a challenge into the very face of the youthful adventurer. Political, moral, and social reform offer sufficiently perplexing problems to satisfy the weaker adventurous urges of the normal person. Many scientific problems still unsolved necessitate adventurous expeditions into both the polar regions and the less explored areas of the upper atmosphere. Of course, many will argue that we can not all be chosen to participate in various deeds of valor. Even so, we are all born with the same chance to excel. That alone should provide sufficient interest to keep youth from turning to war to escape the tedium of life in a warless land. But . . . should that pugnacious urge excessively dominate various persons, there will still be room in the boxing arenas of Madison Square Garden.—L.M.J.

Life, Limb, Pursuit Of Happiness

The automobile has become a factor of great importance to modern civilization. It has been invaluable in allowing us to cover great distances in short periods of time. People have come to feel that having a car is no longer a luxury but a necessity in our day of faster traveling and more complicated business. But, like every ingenious toy, this machine is a mixed blessing. When managed by incompetent people, a car is no less effective a weapon for injury and murder than a shot-gun. In parts of the country where traffic is heavy, state regulation of automobiles and their drivers has become essential to the safety of the population at large. Laws, not only in regulating the registering and equipment of cars, but also demanding capability of the drivers, were passed. In order to receive a license to drive, a person was required to take a driving examination such as would prove his fitness to operate a motor car.

But it seems that the state of North Carolina, which contains stretches of land where traffic is very light, has not considered it necessary to test its drivers. All that is necessary for a person desiring to drive is to give his name, address, and color of eyes and hair. Obviously, this gives no indication as to whether said person is in any way competent to handle what may be a weapon of devastation and slaughter. This state has secured an unenviable reputation for the number of its automobile accidents. It has become so that few students of this University can drive in the state with any degree of safety whatever. Whenever one ventures into an automobile, he risks death at the hands of some moron driving at a high rate of speed on the wrong side of the road. If he drives at night, he is constantly at the mercy of blinding lights and "one-eyed" cars. Add this to the terrors of those who turn corners without signaling and speed by intersections like the "Century Express" making up time between New York and Chicago, and one wonders that there are people with sufficient nerve to expose themselves to the open road. It is not to be wondered that there are so many accidents and many fatal in North Carolina, but that there are not more.—B.B.P.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

No More

Just to remind you that there was a presidential election only a few weeks back (we think it must have been on November 8 . . . yes it was, now that we come to think of it) we've jotted down several notes on odd scraps of paper here and there and brought them down to the office today.

It seems that when final returns had come in from Sheboygan, Wisconsin, where there had been no candidate for county surveyor, the name of Herbert Hoover was found written in on fifteen ballots. The board of elections certified the whole business, so Hoover did get elected to office after all. A good state for an engineer, this Wisconsin.

And after complete returns from 104 counties in Missouri straggled in, it was found that Herbert Depping, Republican candidate for attorney general, had carried only one, Ozark county. In his campaign Depping had orated enthusiastically in 103 of the Missouri counties, omitting only Ozark.

Letter

We have here on our desk a most interesting letter to the proprietor of the Bull's Head from a former Tar Heel author whose The Three Pelicans is making quite a literary sensation. Since the man is more interesting than the book we'll tell you about him. Name, by the way, is Arthur Styron, of Wilmington.

Our Mr. Styron was at the University in 1911-12-13 and doesn't remember any of his instructors but Drs. Chase and Henderson. From Chapel Hill he went to Sewanee, and after more higher education there went to work as a railroad engineer. War days came on and Styron shipped as an ensign on a sub chaser in the Irish Sea. Later, promoted to lieutenant, he was on the admiral's staff in London, on the Hoover Belgium Relief and on the Peace Commission in Paris. Back to New York studying for a year, he went to Turkey, got mixed up in a war and became a Red Cross representative. After receiving a decoration from the King of Greece he travelled through the Holy Land and Egypt, lived in France a year, and came back to the States to become an Episcopal minister. Became curate of the Little Church Around the Corner and then began writing for magazines and newspapers. "I have written for most of the magazines, about 200 articles and stories," is the way he puts it. Next stop, a biography of Bloody Mary in England.

Life and Letters

By Edith Harbour

This column seems to have a woefully hard time, like a great many people, in living up to (or living down) its reputation. I've heard vague rumors that letters, no matter how lifeless, should be literary. And I do have a penchant for biographies, especially in the first person. The proprietor of one of the local book shops quoted statistics to me once to prove that in a library in Boston, that hub of the universe, home of culture, baked beans and cod, where the Lowells speak only to the Cabots and the Cabots commune only with God, only one biographical tome is removed therefrom for 79 books of fiction taken out and presumably read. All of which merely proves, methinks, that those who select biographical reading matter have discriminating taste just as have those people who prefer solitude to uncongenial companions. And since good biographies are few and far between, my dying advice to all aspiring columnists is that they cater to the lovelorn. Even the depression seems to have affected neither the volume nor the sagacity of Dorothy Dix's advice. One of my pet theories is that she is the most popular as well as the most frequently quoted columnist in the country.

At present I am much engrossed in compiling from an advertising slogan provided by a nationally known manufacturing concern a list of standard words of three letters each to be constructed from the rearranged letters of that slogan. If you think its as easy as it sounds, try it. What is a standard word, anyway? How many of you (now be honest) knew that there were such words as wye, alb, eft, and fap (the latter word meaning somewhat inebriated)? And that reminds me that while meandering over the countryside during the recently gone but not forgotten holidays I saw in the window of a joint known as "Dink's Place" the sign: ROASTD OYSTERS. The Literary Digest, champion of simplified spelling, might be interested in that.

Since there are only 21 more shopping days before Christmas, a season which I dislike because of its gaudy lights and cheap tinsel; since the settlement of the foreign debt is a matter of the gravest importance, affecting as it does the already depressed economic condition of the entire world; since there is much uncertainty as to whether the hold-over Congress will raise the ban or beer and give the farmers relief, Roosevelt's ultimatum—else the calling of a special session of the recently elected "wet" august law-making body; since next Monday will be the most important day on Capitol Hill since war was declared in 1916; since there are many other subjects of interest which my scant intelligence will not permit me to discuss, I will leave the writing of columns to one who is capable of compiling a five star final for an already four-starred historical epic.

Christmas Festival

The Presbyterian church is having a junior bazaar tomorrow afternoon in the Sunday school rooms at 3:30 o'clock especially for the children in Chapel Hill under fourteen years old. Toys selling for from five to fifteen cents will be sold. A feature of the program will be a short entertainment under the direction of Miss Minnie Sue Flynn, one of the teachers in the Chapel Hill schools.

AMONG US GIRLS

By MARY FRANCES PARKER

Along with the other opposition which has sprung up on this campus to various things, has arisen a terrific antipathy on the part of the freshmen coeds to enforced gym. What the innocent freshmen said in reply to my polite inquiries would be censored.

It seems that after having classes all morning, and lab in the afternoon they resent the fact that they have to be athletic in order that the female graduates of the University can become members of the American Association of University Women—which membership, incidentally, carries with it the privilege of residence in the University Club in Paris. This information made no impression on the martyrs. They say they're not thinking of going to Paris, and if they do they want to stay in a hot-cha place. Of such stuff is the Carolina freshman co-ed made.

The only opposition, of course, comes from the freshmen. Those of us who enter here as juniors have already undergone two years of torture and feel cheated when we are denied admittance into the exclusiveness of the A. A. U. W. This year is the first time there has been a large enough group of freshmen girls to inaugurate anything as definite as an athletic program. They should feel proud, and all that sort of stuff, to be the pioneers in such a movement!

Seriously, though, the co-eds who entered Carolina this year seem to have forgotten that all women's colleges have a definite two-year athletic program, participation in which is required for a diploma. The handbook contains specific instructions to bring suitable clothes for athletics, which should have given them a hint as to the possibility of gym. (I pause here to state that in no conditions may a co-ed guage suitability by the regalia worn in the Tar Mag-Yackety Buc struggle.)

Aside from the fact that exercise is the highest essential of health—quoting a former gym instructor—the fact that it is a requisite of the A. A. U. W. gives the athletic program sufficient raison d'être. The freshmen might consider themselves sacrifices upon the altar of progress, and accept the sympathy and liniment which the upperclassmen can offer.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

The Buc Passes

Cleverness, sarcasm and good wit is something allotted to only a chosen few of us. I am not among the select, but I think that the decided lack of those abilities or perhaps disabilities is easily recognized by most of us. Miss or Mr. (whichever the case may be) J.F.A.'s article in the issue of the DAILY TAR HEEL Wednesday last certainly did abound with satirical wit and trite attempts at some third rate humor. I am referring to the article under the "Speaking the Campus Mind" column which bore the very subtle heading of "Panning the Buc." Were this splendid stream of humor that is possessed by that nimble wit J.F.A. added to the staff of the Carolina Buccaneer, I am sure Yale University might really add that publication to its mailing list.

Undoubtedly, the members of the Buccaneer staff deeply feel the seering cut that was given to them by the slash of that merciless pen belonging to our friend, J.F.A. I am sure that were they able to acquire that splendid, swaggering, self-assured talent of no mean ability of the above named person, they would be driving classy cars, would have an air of intellectual enlightenment about them, and I daresay would even venture as columnists for that daily sensation, the DAILY TAR HEEL. The fluent, subtle style of this budding young Winchell is likely to capture the eye of an unsuspecting co-ed but for the vast hundreds who daily ponder over these masterpieces of ink, it can be readily summed up in that old-fashioned phraseology—"Nerts." But lest we ponder too long, it will be fair to remember that it was a product worthy of the mind that conceived it.—E. M. J.

Carolina Has Bright Prospects For Next Season's Grid Team

Seven Letter Men Are Lost to Carolina Varsity This Year; Many Will Return.

PROMISING FRESHMEN UP

Walker, Hodges, Philpot, Underwood, Newcombe, McCaskill, And Chandler Leave.

Carolina's gridiron prospects for next year will be much brighter.

Although seven of the most brilliant stars will graduate, the Tar Heels will still have a large number of veterans returning. Indications are that the incoming sophomores will have more promise than those of this year's team, since the Tar Baby gridsters had a very good year, displaying many freshmen of varsity calibre.

The most difficult problem that the Carolina coaching staff will have to solve will be the rebuilding of the left side of the Tar Heel forward wall. Erwin Walker, end; Harry Hodges, tackle; and June Underwood are the mainstays which will be sorely missed.

Only two men will be lost in the backfield, Stuart Chandler, star fullback, and Norman McCaskill, flashy halfback. Other losses which will be keenly felt in the Tar Heel line include Philpot and Newcombe, guards, and Cozart, end who may not return.

Barclay and Edwin Kahn, this year's starting guards, will be back while Frank Smith and George Brandt, tackle and end, respectively, will also be among the monogram men returning.

Tatum and Collins, tackles Frankel, end, McIver, and Gardner, centers, should be more fine line prospects for Coach Collins. All five of these men saw service this year.

The Tar Heels should not have any worries in the backfield for punters, Woollen, Burnett, and Martin, the three fine punting quarterbacks, are all due back.

From the yearling team, we find some fine prospects, although they still need seasoning. The backs are all light, but are still very speedy.

INTEREST IN MITT TOURNEY IS HIGH

Twenty More Men Report to Coach Allen to Prepare for Intramural Battles.

Twenty more intramural boxers reported for training yesterday at the Tin Can, making a total number of forty aspirants for campus honors.

Many of them drew on gloves for the first time and sparred under the guidance of Coach Archie Allen. Training activities also consisted of limbering up exercises, bag-punching, rope skipping, and shadow boxing to warm them up.

As expected, a great number of the fistic hopefuls were in very poor condition but Coach Allen will undoubtedly have all the kinks and stiffness out of their arms and legs when the bell rings to start the tournament next Wednesday.

Varsity Squad Works

While the intramural men were ironing out their flaws, the varsity team under Head Coach Crayton Rowe was rounded into shape. With the possible return of Hugh Wilson and Peyton Brown to the heavy and light-heavy classes, things are looking a little brighter.

Marty Levinson, Pete Ivey, Sam Gidinansky, Val Edwards were working hard and are rapidly reaching the peak of condition.

Coach Rowe requests that all varsity boxers report at Gerrard hall tonight at 7:30 o'clock for a special meeting.

DAMERON WORKS FRESHMAN SQUAD

Fifty Candidates Compete for Positions as Early Practice Becomes Strenuous.

Over fifty aspirants for places on the freshman basketball team went through their hardest workout of the season to date under Coach Sandy Dameron in the Tin Can last night.

Dameron divided the squad into two divisions, forwards and centers working in one group while candidates for guard positions went through their paces separately.

The players drilled in going under the basket, after which they were set to work on several varieties of pivot plays for the rest of the session.

No equipment has been distributed as yet because of the large number of men who have turned out for the early workouts, but it is probable that Dameron will order uniforms to be given out as soon as he gets a definite line on who is who among his candidates.

OFFICIALS ISSUE ROSE BOWL BID

While University of Southern California Has Accepted Official Invitation, Opponent in Doubt.

The undefeated University of Southern California football team has officially received an invitation from officials of the Rose Bowl association to appear in the annual New Year's day classic once more. Trojan officials immediately accepted.

Although Colgate has been considered in many sectors as the most logical opponent for the Trojan outfit, U. S. C. coaches have indicated a preference to meet Michigan's undefeated Big Ten champs. Big Ten rules, however, are against post-season contests, and it has been decided by officials of the California institution to wait until December 3 to learn whether or not the Big Ten might suspend the ruling. Rules of the Tournament of Roses game allow the Pacific Coast club to select its own opponent.

Co-eds To Consider Adoption Of Fencing

Co-eds of the University will be given an opportunity to decide whether or not fencing is to be included in the newly organized athletic program for women students, at a meeting tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock in room 210 Graham Memorial.

Miss Gladys Angel, director of co-ed athletics and some member of the varsity fencing team will lead the discussion. This meeting will be open to all co-eds interested in making fencing a definite part of extra-curricular activities open to women students.

This is the first year that the women students of the University have been given a chance to participate in athletics. President Frank Graham recently set up an administrative board for the division of physical education for women and they mapped out a program for the year. These efforts are being made primarily for the purpose of completing the requirements for eligibility for membership in the American Association of University Women. The field opposite the arboretum has been given over to the use of the co-eds for this purpose.

Boxing Squad

Coach Rowe requests that all men on the varsity boxing squad meet in Gerrard hall tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

HAVE DONNED FOOTBALL TOGS FOR LAST TIME

The eight players above ended their career as Tar Heel football players last Thursday at Charlottesville and their graduation will leave big holes in the Carolina line and backfield which will have to be plugged next fall by frosh and reserves.

TRACK SQUAD TO HAVE ADVANTAGE

Coach Fetzer to Employ Motion Picture of National Track Meet for Proteges.

Psychologists say nothing is remembered better than lessons impressed on the mind by sight. Well, that's just the sort of lesson Coach Bob Fetzer is going to give his varsity track team this afternoon at 5:00 o'clock in 111 Murphey hall.

The team is to be given an extraordinary opportunity to see slow motion pictures of the 1930 National Collegiate Athletic Association track meet in Chicago.

This meet had such a fine galaxy of stars as Tom Warne, Eric Krez, Harlow Rothert, George Simpson, Frank Wycoff, Eddie Tolan, and many other luminaries of track and field.

These boys will parade their abilities before the entire varsity team this afternoon. Of course, Coach Bob will point out the fine points of this and that star's style.

At this meeting, the coaches will make some important announcements concerning the coming season and its schedule. It is very urgent that all members of the track team and any others interested be on hand for this show.

BOY SCOUTS WILL MEET HERE FOR ANNUAL SEMINAR

(Continued from first page) on "The 4-H Club Plan." The program will include speeches by Dr. Harry F. Crane, Dr. Ernest R. Groves, Dr. Charles H. Mangum, and Dr. Samuel H. Hobbs. The executives will also have charge of the freshman assembly at which time Bentz will speak.

Meetings are scheduled only for the morning on Saturday, the last day. At these sessions addresses by Dr. English Bagby and Dr. Howard W. Odum will be heard. The Graham Memorial will be the meeting place at all sessions.

Co-eds To Clash In Battle Royal Between Floors

Rigorous Training on Part of Participants Is Necessitated By Impending Contest.

Now that the day for the first of the great co-ed battles of the century is here, the girls on the different teams in Spencer will be released from the grueling training which they have undergone for the past several days. Coca colas have been in the discard and black coffee unthinkable. Even nut bars have been banned until to-day—the red-letter day, when they will be served to the contestants between halves. (This does not include the audience!). In fact it is rumored that the majority of the ravenous recruits were enlisted under the promise of refreshments.

The consensus of opinion over the campus seems to be that today's warriors, the second and third floor girls, are evenly matched. Although enthusiasts are inclined to be extremely partial to individuals rather than the team as a whole; the combatants both possess a cyclonic power hardly before realized, and very excessive betting is a dangerous proposition.

The referee for the game this afternoon is Miss Minnie Sue Flynn, girls' athletic director of the Chapel Hill high school. The date for the game between the winner and the fourth floor has not been set.

The final line-ups are as follows:

Second floor: forwards, Hazel Coffield, Janie Jolly, and Marguerite McKinney; guards, Eleanor Bizzell, Sylvia Stetcher, and Mary Waldo.

Third floor: forwards, Dorothy Daniels, Mary Parker, and Grace Bowes; guards, Eunice Mae Pope, Laura Ross and Josephine Orendorff.

Artillery Meeting

The 316th Field Artillery troop school will meet in Davie hall tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

BOXING TOURNEY HAS NEW WEIGHT

Fall Tournament Opens Next Week With Additional Class Division.

A new set of intramural boxing champions will be installed this year in the annual fall boxing tournament, scheduled to begin Wednesday, December 7.

From both the spring and fall tournaments last year Best House emerged victorious. An additional chance will be given other organizations to show their merit in the squared circle this fall as an extra weight has been added. Instead of the old 160-pound division in former boxing tourneys, 155 and 165 divisions have been established.

Winners in the fall tournament, their weights, and organizations are given as follows: Ivey, 115, Mangum; Mowery, 125, Best House; Shuford, 135, S. A. E.; Berbe, 145, Lewis; Gidinansky, 160, Lewis; Barclay, 175, Phi Gamma Delta; and Underwood, unlimited, Best House.

Winners in the spring tournament, their weights, and organizations are given as follows: Stoll, 115, Everett; Mowery, 125, Best House; Graham, 135, Sigma Nu; Jones, 145, Best House; Finklestein, 160, Lewis; and Efland, 175, Best House.

Rockne Cup

A trio of football teams—Michigan, Pittsburgh, or Southern California—have an equal chance of being awarded the Knute Rockne memorial trophy, symbolic of the national gridiron championship. Professor Frank G. Dickinson of the University of Illinois has kept statistics on 110 teams, and he says that only an imperceptible percentage margin separates the Wolverines, Panthers, and Trojans.

TAR BABIES THIS FALL HAVE BEST RECORD IN YEARS

Defeat by Blue Imps Mar Perfect Record; Many Excellent Prospects for Varsity.

Although defeated by Duke's freshmen 19 to 0 in the freshman Big Five championship contest, the Tar Baby football team finished the most successful season in many years.

The yearlings were victors in three games, tied one, and lost one. The Tar Babies opened the season by downing Campbell College 19 to 0. They were victorious over Oak Ridge next 7 to 6, and then came the 6 to 6 tie with State's first year team. On Armistice day the Tar Babies really showed their stuff by easily downing Virginia's freshmen 33 to 12. Hampered by injuries and a general letdown the Carolina freshmen were beaten by the Blue Imps in their final contest.

Coaches Howard and Sapp, who directed the Tar Babies, will send Coach Collins some of the best material, to work with in the next three years, that he has gotten in a long time. The freshmen had at least one strong line, with a number of good subs, and a wealth of backfield material.

Kanner, selected by many as the best high school center in the south last year, will be the very man to fill the shoes of the many great centers that Carolina has had in the past few years.

At the guard position Joyce, Moore, and Shipman starred all year and should be valuable men on the varsity. Coach Collins will have four 200-pounders to work with at the tackles. Evans, Hobgood, Watkins, and Milway are all big and heavy. There was probably more good men out for the ends than for any other place on the team. Barwick and Ellisberg were first string ends but were little better than Arthur, a great pass receiver. Denti, Brown and Brothers were other good ends.

Cox and Womble, although not spectacular players, turned in steady games at quarterback all year. The coaches developed four outstanding halfbacks in Montgomery, Snyder, Pendleton, and Phelps. Montgomery, a brother of Columbia's great quarterback, is a triple threat man and probably the best prospect on the freshman team. Snyder showed a great deal of ability to carry a ball before being slowed up by injuries and should also go places. Phelps is a deadly passer, and Pendleton is a hard hitter both on defense and offense.

As a result of injuries three good fullbacks were developed. McCachern, an all-state full in prep school, is a great punter and a good blocking and defensive back. Sutton, who had little chance to show his stuff as he was injured in the second game, is a good ball carrier, and Nelson who went in when the former two were on the bench with injuries, also has lots of stuff.

NOTED MUSICIANS WILL GIVE LOCAL CONCERT FRIDAY

Stringfield and Grainger Will Be Heard in Program in Memorial Hall.

Offering one of the most unique programs ever presented in this section of the country, Lamar Stringfield, conductor of the North Carolina symphony orchestra, and Percy Grainger, guest artist, will appear in two concerts this week, each musician to be in the triple capacity of composer, artist and conductor.

The first concert is set for tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Durham junior high school auditorium, and the second will take place Friday evening here in Memorial hall, at 8:30 o'clock. Both programs will consist of different compositions, and the public may enjoy both without experiencing a single repetition.

Pulitzer Prize Winner

Stringfield, Tar Heel flutist, conductor, and composer, won the Pulitzer prize for his From the Southern Mountains, and was guest conductor of the National symphony orchestra in Washington as recognition for his splendid work a month ago. His latest work The Legend of John Henry, much publicized as a brilliant symphonic work, is to be presented for the first time in Chapel Hill.

Grainger is noted as pianist, conductor, and composer. He will conduct and play some of his own music, including his Danish Folk Music Suite, on the Durham program. Both Grainger and Stringfield are intensely interested in folk music. Grainger heads the N. Y. U. Institute of Folk Music, while Stringfield is a research associate in the local institute.

Admission for each concert will be one dollar, or $1.50 for both concerts. Members of the North Carolina symphony society may obtain tickets for one half the price of the concert, upon presentation of their credentials. Reserved seats may be obtained at the Junior League shop in the Washington Duke hotel in Durham; and in Chapel Hill, from Felix A. Grisette, secretary of the North Carolina symphony society, room 209, South building.

It is too late for the student entertainment tickets to be exchanged, but students will be given entrance for half price upon showing their entertainment pasteboards.

Opportune Gift Of Land Is Figured In University Location

Hope Chapel, which was destined to become the seat of North Carolina education. New Hope Chapel, a sad relic of the futile efforts of the mother country to establish the Church of England in North Carolina, took its name from the creek near which it was situated. At this time two great roads from Petersburg in Virginia to Pittsboro and south and from New Bern to Salisbury and Greensboro crossed near the eminence of the hill. The chapel was situated on the northeast corner of the cross road. From this little church, Chapel Hill took its name. First it was known as the hill of New Hope Chapel, then New Hope Chapel Hill, and, today, Chapel Hill.

On November 6 the report of the committee shows that the first offer of land from New Hope Chapel was received. In quick order other donations were made. The spot was considered suitable for a school, and by the ninth of the month negotiations were completed.

Columbia Faculty Splits On Football

New York, N. Y., Nov. 30.—(NSFA)—Opinion among professors of the existing intercollegiate football system was made public at Columbia University recently by The Spectator, which published the results of a questionnaire sent to 108 members of the faculty of the university. Views were expressed that ranged from warm approval of the football system to bitter condemnation. In answer to a direct question whether the present system met their approval, thirty-four answered that it did, twenty-nine disapproved, while nineteen others declared that Columbia was much freer from football over-emphasis than many other educational institutions.

The majority of faculty members denied the recent rumor that favoritism was being shown in the grading of football players, although nine said that they would so discriminate "under certain conditions." Many members asserted that they would endeavor to aid members of the football team wherever possible by giving them special tutoring in their subjects.

Engagement Announced

Of interest to students and residents of Chapel Hill comes the news of the engagement of Miss Elizabeth Virginia Zeigler to William Pierson of Baltimore. Miss Zeigler, who lived in Chapel Hill during the winter of 1930 and 1931, is the granddaughter of William Zeigler, founder of the Royal Baking Powder Company and sponsor of two expeditions to the North Pole, and of the late Mrs. William Zeigler, who established and maintained the Mathilde Zeigler Magazine for the blind printed in braille. Pierson, a graduate of the Boys' Latin School of Baltimore, is now attending the Harvard Business School. The marriage will take place in January.

Durham Dons Gala Attire For Christmas

Durham citizens were greeted by an elaborate decoration of their main street the early part of this week.

Western North Carolina mountain laurel and red wreaths constituted the decoration. At Five Points is a large tree trimmed with brilliant colored lights that will be lighted to night when the Christmas season of Durham will be formally opened by Mayor Delos W. Sorrell.

All the downtown stores will be open from 7:00 to 9:00 o'clock Thursday night while the prizes will be presented to the winning merchants for their window and interior displays.

The entertainment committee of the affair is arranging to have either the Duke band or the Durham high school band to furnish music for the occasion.

CONFERENCE WILL NOT ACCEPT ANY MORE MEMBERS

Requests of Colleges Now Seeking Admission to Southern Association Will Be Denied.

Dr. A. W. Hobbs, dean of the college of liberal arts and a member of the executive committee of the Southern Conference, was quoted Tuesday night by Pat Miller, Wake Forest football mentor, to the effect that, as far as the former knew no additional colleges would be admitted to the conference or considered for membership at present.

A recent despatch in the state papers quoted C. P. Miles, director of athletics at V. P. I. and president of the Southern Conference, as saying that Davidson, William and Mary, the University of Richmond, and Loyola of New Orleans would be considered for membership in the select group of Dixie institutions. Action on acceptance of these colleges was scheduled to take place at the 1931 meeting of the Southern Conference, and at that time no action was taken, Miles said.

Miller said that he phoned Dr. Hobbs immediately upon noticing the story and observing that Wake Forest was not in the list of schools seeking admission. At last year's gathering of S. I. C. officials the Wake Forest coach declared that Wake Forest sought admission, and he was told that no additional schools would be granted the privilege of applying for membership.

delegates will have the choice of several interest groups. These groups will be centered around platform speakers and people connected with projects and organizations that are directly concerned with social reconstruction in the south. There will be music and singing and other artistic elements in the conference that will broaden and enrich appreciation, according to conference exponents.

The executive committee in charge of the gathering has estimated that a registration fee of $3.00 a delegate will provide a budget to cover the expenses of the conference. The conference registration will take place Wednesday afternoon, December 28, at the Congregational Christian church in Atlanta, where the entire business of the delegation will be transacted.

The local Y. M. C. A. cabinets are planning to send representatives to the conference. There is also a possibility of delegates going from the University representing various clubs and social orders on the campus.

BULL'S HEAD SHOP IS DESCRIBED BY NATIONAL WEEKLY

Columnist for Saturday Review Of Literature Praises Book Shop and Proprietress.

National literary recognition came to the local Bull's Head bookshop in a recent issue of the Saturday Review of Literature. The establishment was fully described in the "News from the States" column written by Agatha Boyd Adams, a graduate of the University.

This column publishes notes on significant matters related to authors' activities, bookselling, and the trend of reading in the various parts of the country. It aims to present the readers of the publication with a bird's-eye view of the literary situation in a nation-wide sense.

Display of Arts and Crafts

In discussing the shop, which is managed by Mary Dimberger, Mrs. Adams featured the display of North Carolina art and craft work which has been on exhibit for some time. A table that exemplifies the spirit of creative artistic effort in this state was selected as the central point of interest. She described the background of dull blue scarfs, woven by mountain women, for the orange and yellow pottery from the sand hills and the pewter bowls made by a Chapel Hill craftsman.

The literature made a deep impression on the writer. She remarked that among the objects are scattered books by native sons, mostly from the pen of Paul Green. There are also several editions of Carolina Folk Plays, edited by Professor Frederick H. Koch, and the acting edition of Loretta Bailey's native drama, Job's Kinsfolk.

Mrs. Adams suggested in her article that perhaps the most unique item in the display is a mimeographed edition of Lamar Stringfield's opera Mountain Song, which had its first production in Chapel Hill. Continuing to comment on the dramatic material, she stated that Miss Dimberger had merited considerable attention for her sets in the production of Euripides' Alceste, offered by the Carolina Playmakers in the Kenan stadium last summer.

The article revealed that the proprietress of the shop named Alice in Wonderland as the best seller of last season. Mrs. Adams observes, "That surely is news among booksellers."

The Saturday Review of Literature is recognized as one of the leading critical weeklies in the country. Under the vigorous leadership of Henry Seidel Canby it has been an ever increasing stimulus to all phases of literary activity from book-making to book-selling.

Nora Beust Will Speak

Miss Mary Dimberger, director of the Bull's Head, announced yesterday that Miss Nora Beust of the library staff, would be the speaker next Tuesday at the weekly Bull's Head gathering. Miss Beust's subject will be "Recent Trends in Children's Literature." The program will begin at 4:30 o'clock.

U. N. C. Campus Has Few Monuments To Alumni and Officials

vines and moss, and is almost obscured by a bower of trees. As was proved by an experiment conducted some years ago by a University professor, few passers-by are ever aware of its presence.

After the erection of the new monument, the remains of both Dr. Caldwell and his wife were removed from their places in front of New West and were reinterred at the eastern base of the new marker. At the same time, the old sandstone monument was taken from in front of New West and placed in the section of the town cemetery which is used as a burial place for colored people. It now serves as a tombstone for the graves of three old negro servants of the University.

Confederate Memorial in 1912

The only war memorial on the campus is the Confederate monument set back from Franklin street between New Dorms and Graham Memorial. If the length of time it required to erect that monument is indicative of the future, it will be almost fifty years before a World War commemoration appears in Chapel Hill. Not until 1912 was this monument to the 1500 University men who took part in the Civil War dedicated.

Its erection was the result of the joint efforts of the North Carolina division of the Daughters of the Confederacy and the University alumni. It was designed by the noted Canadian sculptor, John Wilson, and was constructed at the expense of $10,000.

The wife of the late president of the University, Edward Kidder Graham, was the only woman honored with a campus monument. Two years after her death in 1916 the huge bowl which stands on Franklin street was erected in her memory by the people of Chapel Hill.

While not strictly on the campus, this memorial to a great friend of the University stands on property owned by the institution. Although the bowl is no longer used for its original purpose, as a watering place for horses, it remains a testimony to Mrs. Graham's interest in community enterprises and her love for dumb animals.

"You Said A Mouthful" Showing At Carolina

Ginger Rogers, musical comedy and screen star, is teamed with Joe E. Brown for the second time in his latest First National comedy, "You Said A Mouthful," showing today at the Carolina theatre.

Miss Rogers, whose beauty and pep act as an excellent foil to Brown in his character role of an artless but lucky boob, was his leading lady in "The Tenderfoot."

An excellent supporting cast includes Preston S. Foster, Farina, of "Our Gang" comedies, Shelia Terry, Guinn Williams and Harry Gribbon. The picture was directed by Lloyd Bacon.

FORMER CAROLINA STUDENT WRITES RECOGNIZED WORK

"The Three Pelicans" Work of Arthur Styron, University Student in Class of '13.

Arthur Styron, whose book, The Three Pelicans, has just come off the press, was a student at the University of North Carolina from 1911 until 1913. He was born in Wilmington of Huguenot parentage and attended the University for two years before completing his course at Sewanee.

Styron's new book has been highly commended. It is a biography of Thomas Cranmer, the colorful and famous archbishop of England under Henry the Eighth. At the present, Styron is working on a book of the nineteenth century south, which will be fictional but at the same time a composite picture of the life of all the Olympians of that period. After the completion of this new work, he will go to England to write a biography of "Bloody" Mary.

Author Broadly Experienced

The author worked on a railroad as an engineer until the war broke out, he joined the navy and was given a commission of an ensign on a submarine chaser in the Irish Sea. He was later promoted to the position of lieutenant. He was on the Admiral's staff in London, a member of the Hoover Belgium relief committee, and on the Peace Commission in Paris. After the war he studied in the General Seminary in New York City. He later went to Turkey, where he became involved in a war and stayed to represent the American Red Cross as field manager on the island of Chios where thousands of refugees from Anatolia were landing. He was later decorated by the King of Greece.

UNIVERSITY ASKS FOR INCREASE IN BUDGET FOR YEAR$1,371,771 Is Amount Asked for Greater University; Increase of $378,000.

Requests for appropriations totalling $1,371,771 for the three units of the Greater University of North Carolina were made yesterday by the advisory budget committee for the fiscal year 1933-34. This is approximately $378,000 more than the allotment of $993,210 which the three schools were to receive from the budget bureau to operate on this fiscal year, but about $77,000 less than the $1,448,800 which the 1931 General Assembly has appropriated for 1932-33.

The 1933 General Assembly will make only one general appropriation for the merged school. Separate budget requests were made for each of the three units—the Chapel Hill unit, State College in Raleigh, and the Woman's College in Greensboro.

Graham Presents Budget
Dr. Frank P. Graham, recently elected president of the consolidated institution, made the request for the Chapel Hill unit. He asked for $691,924 compared to the $504,900 allotted for this year and the $721,000 which had been appropriated by the 1931 legislature. An increase of approximately $187,000 in personnel cost was asked.

Dr. E. C. Brooks made the request for the State College branch. He presented a budget asking for $311,847. Dr. J. I. Foust, head of the Woman's College, presented a budget calling for an appropriation of $360,000.

SCOUT HEADS IN STATE MEET FOR ANNUAL SEMINARR. B. House Delivers Principal Address at Opening Luncheon of Executive Group.

Opening yesterday with a luncheon meeting at which R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, was the principal speaker, the Boy Scout Regional Executive Seminar began its three-day session here. The fifteen Boy Scout executives of this state are present at these meetings to hear many well known speakers, including several prominent University professors.

At the meetings yesterday in addition to that of Dr. Graham, the executives heard addresses by Kenneth G. Bentz of Atlanta, regional executive; Professor Frederick H. Koch of the University faculty; and Reverend Douglas Rights.

Full Day of Meetings
A full day of meetings has been scheduled for today during which addresses will be made by L. D. Harrill, 4-H club leader, Dr. Harry F. Crane, Dr. Ernest R. Groves, Dr. Charles W. Mangum and Dr. S. H. Hobbs, Jr. At a banquet tonight at 7:00 o'clock, Harry F. Comer will be the principal speaker, and following this Bentz will make the second in his series of addresses on "Organization and Administration."

One of the features of today's program will be an initiation of several honorary members into

DAILY TAR HEEL
CONTINUES VOTEStudent Straw Vote For Successor to President Graham Will Continue Until Saturday Night.

THE DAILY TAR HEEL's straw vote on the student choice for a successor to President Frank P. Graham to head the University here will enter its third day with student balloting this morning.

The straw vote, which began Wednesday and will last until tomorrow night, is an attempt of the TAR HEEL to register student opinion as to who should be vice-president of the Greater University of North Carolina.

Balloting in the contest will continue until Saturday night when the votes will be counted and the results will be released Sunday.

COMER TO SPEAK FOR 'Y' MEETING
IN COLUMBIA, S. C.Delegates from Friendship Council and Hi-Y Club Leave for Older Boys' Conference.

Harry F. Comer, general secretary of the local Y. M. C. A., Marcus Lynch, representing the freshman friendship council, and Don McKee of the Chapel Hill Hi-Y club, leave this morning for Columbia, S. C., to attend the second annual inter-state Older Boys' Conference of the Carolinas which will take place today, tomorrow, and Sunday. Comer will be one of the principal speakers during the sessions.

This gathering is sponsored by the interstate committee of the Young Men's Christian Associations of the Carolinas, and has for its theme: "Facing Life." The opening session will begin tonight at 7:30 o'clock following registration this afternoon.

Moseley Faison of Rocky Mount will preside over the congress. Comer's address, "Facing Life," will be given tonight after the regular business of the conference has been transacted.

Discussions Planned
A meeting of the discussion leaders will take place tomorrow morning under the direction of Comer, preceding the election of officers. Short talks by many prominent Y. M. C. A. leaders throughout the two states will be given later and discussions on various subjects relative to school and economic problems will take place. Delegates will attend the South Carolina-Auburn game tomorrow afternoon.

Dr. Henry N. Snyder, president of Wofford College, will speak at the conference banquet tomorrow night. Plans for next year will be made Sunday morning.

Boy Scout Executives
To Talk At Assembly

At the freshman assembly today the fifteen Boy Scout executives from the state of North Carolina will conduct the program. These executives are in Chapel Hill to attend the Boy Scout regional executive seminar which is in session at the University today and tomorrow.

The main speech of the period will be made by Regional Executive Kenneth G. Bentz of Atlanta who is also to address the executives in their sessions. Others on the program will be Executive Steer of Charlotte who will read the Scout oath and Executive Shield of Gastonia who will read the Scout law.

Students Crowded Post Office
For Mail In Years Before 1923Prior to 1923, Chapel Hill Had No City Delivery of Mail, and Students Had to Call at Post Office to Get Mail; Local Post Office Has First Class Rating.

A pushing, shoving mass of students and townspeople in front of the post office on Franklin street caused no sensation in the early twenties. This scene of crushed humanity exemplified the custom, now long departed, of calling for the daily mail. Before 1923, mail was not delivered to the dormitories and had to be called for at the boxes in the lobby.

Just as one of the daily rites of the present generation of students is to frequent the vicinity of the drugstores downtown, so one unalterable custom then was to call at the postoffice for mail. It was looked upon as wholly natural, once each day to make, oneself part of a long queue that endeavored to squeeze into a post office already crowded to capacity.

Steady Flow of People

When the idea of going to town and calling for mail occurred to most people at the same time, it can be readily understood that the crowds in front of the stucco building on Franklin street were not of inconsiderable size. From eight in the morning till five in the evening there was a constant line stretching from the doors of the post office to the corner of Franklin and Henderson streets. After one in the afternoon the line was so swelled by additions that it had to double back on itself to prevent blocking the highway to all traffic.

In November 1923, city delivery was inaugurated. It was about this time that the dormitories on the upper quadrangle were opened for occupancy. With the increase in size of the University the mail delivery situation might have become very embarrassing, resembling somewhat the frantic crowds that line up before the registrar's office at the beginning of every quarter to secure grade reports. But city delivery was begun, and the University provided boxes for all the dormitories.

A throw-back to the time when every one had to call for mail is evidenced by the fact that a number of the townspeople and fraternities that live outside the city limits do not have mail delivered to them.

Post Office Rates High

The post office received first class rating in 1926. Most towns of Chapel Hill's size boast of no more than third class offices. The type of mail that helps swell the total is varied. The University extension bureau sends and receives more material than any single agency on the campus. An extraordinary amount of postal cards pass through the post office, coming for the most part from the business office, the various deans, the library, and the students, who instead of writing letters, often effect a saving by sending postal cards. The number of packages marked "perishable" is extremely large, more than double the amount of this type of mail coming into Chapel Hill than into towns of similar size.

COMMUNITY CLUB
PLANS MEETINGS
FOR THIS MONTHDr. A. P. Hudson and Dr. Raymond Adams of University
To Speak for Group.

The program of the Chapel Hill Community club for December will begin with a general meeting today in the Episcopal parish house at 3:30 o'clock and will be conducted by the educational department. Today's program will be headed by a talk by Professor Raymond Adams, of the University English department, on "Thoreau and Adult Education."

An extensive program has been arranged for the remainder of the month. On Wednesday, December 7, the educational department will meet at the parish house at 3:30. The American home department will have a meeting at the same hour December 9, for the display and discussion of inexpensive home-made Christmas gifts. The health department meets at 3:30 December 13.

Hudson to Speak

Professor A. P. Hudson, of the University English department, will discuss "A Mississippi Folk Tale" at a meeting of the literature department December 13 at 8:00 o'clock in the parish house. The civics department meets December 14 at the same time.

The final meeting of the month will be that of the music department in Hill Music hall December 14 at 8:00 o'clock. A choral program will be conducted by Professor Dyer. The art department will not have another meeting before the holidays.

Dr. E. E. Ericson Heads
University Professors

Dr. E. E. Ericson of the University English department was elected president of the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors at its last meeting held early this week. Dr. A. C. Howell, also of the English department, was chosen secretary of the organization.

As delegate to the national convention scheduled to take place at Yale University in New Haven during the Christmas holidays, Dr. John Manning Booker was designated.

The local group numbers sixty-two professors, while the national organization has an enrollment of several thousand.

The North Carolina Symphony Orchestra, which scored a hit in its first concert this season in Durham last night, will give its second performance in a varied program here tonight in Memorial hall at 8:30 o'clock.

The concert tonight will be under the auspices of the Student Entertainment Committee.

The concert tonight will include classics as well as modern music, the first part of the program being the Marriage of Figaro Overture by Mozart and the Peer Gynt Suite No. 1 by Grieg. The second part will consist of Percy Grainger selections, some of them played, some of them conducted by the composer, and of the Legend of John Henry, Lamar Stringfield's new symphonic work. This composition is being presented tonight for the first time.

All students will be admitted to the concert for half price whether they have a student entertainment book or not. Reserved seats can be obtained at the Y. M. C. A.

Personnel of Orchestra
The personnel of the orchestra, which will include talented musicians from twelve towns in the state, will be composed of the following.

MARY D. WRIGHT
DEBATE PLANNED
FOR THIS EVENINGAnnual Debate Between Literary Societies Scheduled Tonight
At 7:30 O'clock.

The annual Mary D. Wright debate will take place tonight in Gerrard hall at 7:30 o'clock. The subject to be debated is Resolved: That the nations of the world should disarm all forces not needed for police purposes.

The Dialectic senate will take the affirmative, and will have as their speakers Bill Eddleman of Gastonia, and E. R. Oettinger of Wilson. Speaking for the Phi assembly on the negative side will be C. W. Griffin of Williamston, and L. H. Fountain of Tarboro. The debate will last one hour.

The best speaker on the winning team will be awarded the Mary D. Wright memorial gold medal, given each year by P. E. Wright of Landis.

The medal was won last year by Edwin Lanier of the Phi assembly, debating on the question of abolishing the extra tuition fee for out-of-state students in the University.

Paragraphics

"Izzy Einstein Urges Four Per Cent Beer to Rout Liquor" says a headline. At which Dr. Henderson would probably remark, "It's all a matter of relativity."

"The 20th amendment is being ratified as fast as legislatures can get to it," says R. R. Clark in the Greensboro News. At that rate we should have lame duck for Thanksgiving in 1950.

"Co-eds To Consider Adoption Of Fencing," says a TAR HEEL headline. Which would come under the department of social science, we suppose.

David Clark would cease his worry over the University's atheistic teachings if he could see the "holy" socks and shirts the Laundry department forces the students to wear.

"Co-eds To Clash In Battle Royal Between Floors," a headline informs us. We wonder if they are feeding the poor girls enough at Spencer hall.

Cries and Taboos

Opponents of the Student Council's proposal to have classroom honor committees have adopted this unreasonable attitude, that it is not a cure-all for all ills of the honor system and therefore should be dismissed as an impractical plan. Now this certainly is too much to require of any plan devised by human intelligence, nor do those who advocate it exaggerate its merits to that extent. Yet the wisecracks put their heads together, sententiously declare, "It won't work." And with this profound diagnosis of the proposal, they turn deaf ears to the need of this campus for an honor system that will "work."

A member of the faculty, without declaring himself for or against, observed that, in spite of the fact that maintaining the honor system has become a farce, this campus does not lack a code of honor, that it has its own code of honor with which we are all familiar—the code of the squealer, the tattler. And that is one matter which no plan, neither this nor any other, can remedy.

The situation is exactly as described, and there are two possible explanations for it. Either we have superimposed a hypocritical honor system over this other and more ancient code of honor, or we have supinely allowed the latter to grow up under our noses. The former explanation is unacceptable, for the founding of our honor system was almost simultaneous with the founding of this University, and throughout the years, up until the past decade, our honor system has been effective. The latter is wherein the trouble lies: We have, through negligence, allowed a taboo on reporting another's offense to supplant our honor system. It is born of a childish impulse, this refusal to "tell," and it is the kind that would allow a man to remain inactive while his neighbor's house was being robbed.

Until this apathetic attitude is torn out by the roots, we can never hope to maintain successfully student discipline, for student discipline demands that each assume his responsibility of observing the rules and of reporting those who do not. The fear of "tattling" destroys this responsibility and makes its inculcation an impossibility. If the Student Council's plan does anything toward reviving individual responsibility, it will be worth giving a try. But we must co-operate to give it this try. Or shall we continue to cry out, "It won't work?"

Autopsy

By Robert Berryman

HUMOR FOR CYNICS

I am sitting with about fifty others in a small anteroom outside of the dean's office. Inside, the faculty council is forming. It is to decide whether those perspiring outside are to be readmitted—with their deficiencies—to the University for the last term of the year. It is to be remembered that this is the University of Carobama.

One or two of the waiting students are sniveling freshmen. Handkerchief blow several noses often. Others are grim; they do not speak, they sit tensely. Others are laughing; they have been kicked out of "better schools than this" they claim. Still others, like myself, are putting up a smiling front to conceal their true feelings—which are mixed.

I have been told that my chances are fairly good. I have passed three and a half courses and have E'd another. Four passes is all that is required to stay in school. Next to me sits a hulking, yellow-haired freshman. He is one of the laughers. He tells me and others that he does not much care whether he gets back in or not. At home a good job is waiting for him. But the coach insisted that he come down here and sit on a bench, and he is accustomed to do what the coach tells him.

I ask him how many courses he has passed. He answers: "One." Being a freshman, he needs only two passes to enable him to continue. I feel much better. If he has a chance after passing only half the required number how much better a chance should I have who lack only half a course—and also have an E I can work off!

Finally the big light-haired fellow is called into the sanctum. He grins as he leaves us. Some of us ask him to drop back in and let us know how he comes out. He promises to do this.

"He hasn't much of a chance, has he?" I ask a boy sitting near me.

"He sure has!" the boy surprises me by saying. "Didn't you know that his dean is on the athletic council?"

I don't see what that had to do with the matter, but I judiciously keep my peace. I have done a little column work on the college newspaper and several times have pointed out what appeared to me to be foolish actions of certain members of the administration. I found this wasn't appreciated in all quarters. At times even reputable men of authority cannot stand to be told that some of their official actions are ludicrous—even when they are ludicrous. I have discovered this fact, so now I keep my mouth shut.

The big fellow is back, grinning just as widely. "I'm back in school," he tells us in answer to our many questions. "Oh, they just called me in and asked some damn fool questions. One of the guys told me that I had been taking three courses: Football, Basketball, and School. It was just my tough luck, he said, that I had to flunk the School. I did well enough on the others. They told me to run along and try to do better this term."

I felt better, but my feelings change when I am sitting in the hard office chair facing the council. I tell them that I am a recent transfer to the school, I tell them that I have spent the week preceding examinations in the infirmary, I explain my deficiency is slight, I explain that I have not a single class cut against me.

I am told to leave the room while they discuss my case. In a few minutes my dean comes out. "We have decided," he says, "that it would be best for you to stay out of school this term. But don't stop studying. Go home and take some correspondence courses; come to summer school. Then next year you will start with a clean slate. We're sorry we couldn't let you back, but..."

—It is to be remembered that all this happened at the University of Carobama.

THE THEATRE

The Jitney Players in "Arms and the Man," a pleasant play by George Bernard Shaw, directed by David Elliott, reviewed by Ben Napier and Bob Barnett.

In the revival of plays of the general type of Tom Robertson's Caste, it is easy to imagine that a troupe would find it difficult to define that hair-line that separates the mere burlesque from the cleverly simple presentation that permits lines and situations to speak for themselves. In this latter type of presentation, there must be what amounts to a contradiction in terms. There must still remain some trace of burlesque, a slight shade of the operatic, a tinge of the "ham" in order that material and presentation may be more delicately correlated. The Jitney Players, with a charming perspicacity, faithfully adhered to the latter type in their production of Wednesday afternoon. In Caste, they succeeded in creating an atmosphere that might easily give the audience nostalgic yearnings for the days when one could go to the theatre and expect simple hearts instead of split personalities, true blueness instead of Oedipus complexes.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

One for Wilson

When the board of trustees choose a vice-president to direct the University at Chapel Hill, should use every means in its power to induce Dr. Louis R. Wilson, former University librarian, to return to the University.

The board should select a man with outstanding qualifications, who is recognized as an educator in Chapel Hill, in North Carolina, and in the United States; a man who has long been connected with the University and knows every phase of its activities; a man who has undoubted executive abilities.

No one man could be found among those under consideration who is better qualified in these particulars than Dr. Wilson.

Dr. Wilson has long been recognized nationally as an outstanding educator. His call to head the graduate school of library science at the University of Chicago last year was one of the highest honors that can come to a librarian. He has served on the advisory board of editors of the Journal of Adult Education.

"Look at that Baby roll 'em"

YOU would be astonished too, if you could see this machine that turns out 750 Chesterfields a minute... and every one as near perfect as cigarettes can be made.

But please bear this in mind. It is what happens before the tobacco goes into this machine that matters most. Rolling and packaging are important, but not nearly as important as the selection, blending and treatment of the tobacco.

That's why we keep telling you about the tobaccos used in Chesterfields. They're fine, mild, and pure tobaccos. We tell you about ageing and curing the tobaccos... about blending and cross-blending them... because they are things that count.

Chesterfields are milder. They taste better. Prove it for yourself... Just try a package.

Intramural Officials Select All-Campus Football Team

Five Dormitory Players and Six Members of Fraternity Teams Make Up All-Star Group.

A. T. O. ANNEXES TITLE

Dormitories Lose Title to Fraternity League for First Time in Three Years.

Now that finis has been written to the 1932 tag football season and many exciting battles there comes the herculean task of selecting an All-Campus team, together with an All-Fraternity and All-Dormitory contingent.

Some 850 students as compared to 785 of last year, and forty-three aggregations participated in Herman Schnell's popular intramural league, and after a hectic season featured by the weekly upsets, the A. T. O.'s annexed the school championship by conquering Lewis in the finals of the loop play. This is the first time in three years a fraternity team has been able to garner titular honors.

With the realization that even the late Walter Camp could not pick an All-Campus team to satisfy Tar Heel's intramural adherents, Herman Schnell, director of intramural athletics, collaborated with the officials of the league, Frazier, Parker, Stuart, McCachern, and LeGore and chose the fairest team possible.

Selections were based on individual ability, team work, final standing of the player's team, and the attitude toward the officiating.

MANY LONG RUNS MADE THIS YEAR

Robert Gibb Runs 107 Yards to Score for Nevada in Longest Scoring Run of Season.

Robert Gibb, Nebraska Wesleyan back, who took a kickoff by Oklahoma City, seven yards behind his own goal, and dashed 107 yards made the longest scoring play of the fast closing 1932 football season.

Gibb's long run was only one of a great number of beautiful plays during the past year. Herbert McAnly, of Florida, ran 105 yards from scrimmage to score against Sewanee, and Michael Schemick, Thiel, took a punt 100 yards for a marker opposite Bethany. Thomas Cashill, Nevada, brought back the old kicking game by booting a dropkick 55 yards for a field goal.

Eleven men ran back kickoffs more than eighty yards for touchdowns, Johnny Daniel, Tar Heel, counting from his own five yard line against Florida. Thirteen field goals were made from thirty yards or more away, two of them being made by Robert Chase, Brown's great quarterback.

Longest Scoring Plays
The longest scoring plays of the season follow:

Runback of kickoff—Robert Gibb, Nebraska Wesleyan, against Oklahoma City; 107 yards.

Runback of punt—Michael Schemick, Thiel, against Bethany; 100 yards.

Run from scrimmage—Herbert McAnly, Florida, against Sewanee; 105 yards.

Run with forward pass—Allen Rogers, on a pass from—Jim Hitchcock, Alabama Poly, against Mississippi; 68 yards.

Forward pass (no run)—Thomas Johnson to Bill Edgar, Virginia, against Roanoke; 52 yards.

Run with intercepted pass—Ray Rex, North Carolina State, against Clemson; 101 yards.

Run with blocked kick—Ray yards.

Civichems Play Mechanelecs In Game Saturday

Seniors in Engineering School to Decide Championship of Phillips in Football.

In a game which is expected to rival any Carolina-Duke game, a team of seniors of the Chemical and Civil Engineering Departments will meet the flashy aggregation composed of the last year men of the Mechanical and Electrical Departments on Emerson field Saturday morning to decide the tag football championship of the Phillips hall branch of the University. This contest is expected to become an annual affair and will be known as the "tournament of slide rules."

Both Teams Optimistic
Optimism reigned in both camps at a late hour last night. Captain Bitt Brown, erstwhile head of the Civichem outfit, after watching his charges hold secret practice, grinned broadly, pulled up his engineers boots, waved his slide rule and said, "Everything's fine. Although my boys failed to catch any passes at all, in practice, I feel that the game will be different. They can't be any worse."

The Mechanelecs, attending the secret practice of their opponents, were jubilant after watching their work. The Mechanelecs spent some time yesterday working out new plays and it is reported that their hidden ball play worked so well that the manager reported the loss of three balls, two headgears, and T. C. Evans, star halfback after practice.

The referee of the contest will be a prominent young instructor attached to the Civil engineering department, and it is generally conceded that the Civichems will have quite an advantage.

THIRTY-NINE MEN IN MITT TOURNEY

In the eight divisions that will fight in the intramural tournament next week there are thirty-nine men listed, making this year's squad five larger than last year's.

The 125 pound class is represented by eight candidates, the greatest number of all the classes. Next come the 145 and 155 pound groups with seven each.

The 115 and 135 pounders each have five fighters while the 164 and 175 pound divisions have four apiece. The unlimited class has three, the least of the eight classes.

H. B. Mowery of Best House is the only defending champion to return to the intramural wars this year. He was winner of the 125 pound title both in the fall and spring tournaments.

Oak Trees Being Planted

The campus committee under the head of Dr. Coker of the botanical department is planting fifteen small oak trees on the campus between the library and South building.

The primary purpose of these trees is to take the place of the old trees that have been dying.

DURHAM HIGH TO MEET CHARLOTTE HERE SATURDAY

Clubs Have Impressive Records For Year's Play; Durham Won Last Year.

Sporting one of the most brilliant galaxy of backfield stars ever assembled on two school teams, Charlotte and Durham highs will clash here Saturday afternoon in Kenan stadium for the class "A" championship of the state. The tilt is set for 2:30 o'clock.

Marching at the head of the procession will be Charlie Gadd, field general for the Queen City highs. Gadd is a jack of all trades. He punts, passes, and runs. Gadd has been mentioned prominently on several all-star high school picks.

Both Have Stars

Halfback Dallas Morris and Fullback Carl Newman are two more of Coach Walter Skidmore's brilliant hirings. These two lads have teamed with Gadd to form a backfield which has rolled up 111 points, defeated Eastern high of Washington, D. C., Tech high of Atlanta, Ga., and four mighty tough foes in the western conference.

Beverly Ferrell, Norman Hackney, Quarterback Spain, and Fullback Andrews are the lads who will bear the hopes of Coach Stuesey on the Durham bench. This club has an impressive point total of 161 markers to only 7 for all opponents in its quartet of conference frays. As an added attraction, each one of the aforementioned lads save Andrews are veterans with a couple of years experience behind them.

U. T. Holmes on Committee For Language Association

At the meeting of the South Atlantic modern language association in Atlanta last week, Dr. U. T. Holmes of the romance language department, along with Dr. J. T. Hart of Emory University, was appointed on a committee to encourage the spread of Italian language and literature courses in the colleges and secondary schools throughout the south.

BURGER ELECTED VIRGINIA CAPTAIN FOR NEXT YEAR

Will Be Fifth Tackle in Last Ten Years to Be Named Cavalier Leader.

Ray Burger of Covington, Va., who has been chosen to captain the University of Virginia football team during the season of 1933, is the fifth tackle to be elected captain of the Cavalier gridiron squad within the last ten years.

Not only is Burger an outstanding lineman, but he is also a remarkably good student as well. He has been on the "Dean's list" of honor men ever since his first term in the University and this session he was awarded the certificate of intermediate honors for having passed all courses during the first two sessions with an average grade of not lower than 85 per cent. This is the highest academic award that can be won by an undergraduate.

Burger's play at tackle was one of the chief factors in making the strength of Virginia's line this season. Last year the players on the Columbia football squad voted him one of the two best tackles to play against them all fall.

Burger was the largest man on Virginia's gridiron squad this year. He weighs 205 pounds and stands just a fraction of an inch under six feet. He is 20 years of age.

TWELVE FENCERS REPORT TO SQUAD

The Tar Heel fencing team staged its first practice Wednesday in the Tin Can and twelve new candidates reported. These men were given their initial instruction in holding the foil and in stance and lunging.

Though the majority of candidates are newcomers in the fencing field, some of these men have the essential fundamentals necessary for good swordsmen and will undoubtedly develop rapidly in the next two months.

There are still a few men in the University who have had fencing experience either here

Tar Heel Basketball Squad Works Hard In Early Practice

Co-eds In Third Floor Take Win In Opening Game

Second Floor Frails Demolished By Femmes From Above In Fast Game.

Displaying a flashy passing attack and a steady court game, the third floor basketball team of Spencer hall yesterday severely trounced the second floor outfit to the tune of 23-5 in the first woman's basketball game of the season on the co-ed athletic field.

Large Crowd

The spectacle was witnessed by about eighty who waited forty minutes after the scheduled time until a ball could be procured for the contest.

The third floor was decidedly superior in all departments of the game, showing a speedy attack and a steady back court game. A second intramural contest is slated for this afternoon when the third floor will tackle the fourth floor contingent on the athletic field at 4:00 o'clock.

Game Started Slowly

The game started off slowly with the winners taking the lead which they never relinquished throughout the game. They went on a scoring spree about the middle of the second period and kept it up until late in the third period when the second floor's defense stiffened.

Dorothy Daniels and Eunice May Pope displayed stellar work for the third floor at forward, accounting for 21 points between them, while Eva Davis English was outstanding at guard and at forward on the same team. Hazel Coffield, forward, played good ball for the losers.

The game became rough toward the end with a number of fouls being called in the closing minutes, though the teams were quite lady-like at the beginning.

SEASON AFFORDS LOWEST SCORING IN GRID HISTORY
Average Score Per Game Only 12.8 Points; Tar Heels Amass 78 Points to Opponents' 158.

Old Man Depression has registered his toll on football scoring this year as well as financial activities. Composite records of some 159 representative grid clubs in the nation show that 1932 scoring hit the new and unprecedented low of 12.83 points per game. The half dozen new regulations passed last year in the attempt to cut down injuries and better balanced schedules are the things which are chiefly responsible for the lowering of points per game, according to the leading football experts of the country.

Carolina Average Low

This year Carolina tallied but 78 points to 157 for their opponents—a far cry from the flashy "36-point a game" club of 1929. This average showed that the locals made but 7.8 points per game to 15.7 for opponents. The U. N. C. average fell 5.03 points below the average for the 158 other clubs in the compilation.

or elsewhere and they are invited to be present at the practice this afternoon. Practice will be held regularly at 4:30 o'clock every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday.

Coach Shepard Has Eight Lettermen Back to Form Nucleus for Team.

MANY FORWARDS RETURN

Guards Form Most Worry for Coach Who Has to Replace Tom Alexander.

Striving to build a basketball team which can regain the court prestige and glory that once was the 'White Phantoms', the University of North Carolina has eight of last year's ten lettermen back in togs for early practice, but is sorely missing Tom Alexander and Paul Edwards, graduated stars at guard and center.

The lettermen on whom Coach Bo Shepard is banking are Captain Wilmer Hines, Vergil Weathers, Bill Markham and Stuart Chandler, forwards; George Brandt, center; and Dave McCachren, Dave Henry, and Charlie Jones, guards.

Hines, Weathers, and McCachren were regulars with the departed Alexander and Edwards on the 1931 team, which won the appellation of "giant-killer" at the Southern Conference tournament, eliminating Kentucky and Auburn's favorites only to lose the title to Georgia in the finals 26-24.

Weathers is an all-Southern forward, while Captain Hines, who led Weathers and all the rest in scoring last year, was all-state and second all-Southern.

Forwards Plentiful

This is the first year in several that the Carolina basketball team has started practice with so much seasoned material at forward. Coach Shepard's worries have just been transferred, however, to other positions, for

A BOWL of crisp Kellogg's Corn Flakes and milk or cream at breakfast makes your appetite get busy. It's simply delicious. And so good for you! Rich in energy. Easy to digest. Leaves you feeling fit and fresh for the day. Enjoy Kellogg's for lunch too. Great for a late snack. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

The most popular cereals served in the dining-rooms of American colleges, eating clubs and fraternities are made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. They include ALL-BRAN, PEP Bran Flakes, Rice Krispies, Wheat Krumbles, and Kellogg's WHOLE WHEAT Biscuits. Also Kaffee Hag Coffee—real coffee that lets you sleep.

NEW GOVERNMENT COURSE PLANNED BY DEPARTMENT

Government 17, to Be Given During Winter Quarter, Will Be Introduction to Courses.

The department of history and government announces a new course in government (government 17) to be given for the first time during the winter quarter. The course will be given by Professor C. B. Robson and will be open to freshmen and sophomores. It is scheduled for 12:00 o'clock, five hours a week.

The title of the course is "Introduction to Political Science." It is intended as an introduction to the advanced courses in government offered by the department. The course is designed to acquaint the student with the fundamental principles of political thought as a background for an understanding of contemporary political life. It will trace the history and development of the ideas of sovereignty, liberty, representative government, international relations, and such modern theories of government as have been advanced by the Socialists, the Communists, the Fascists, and the Soviets.

Purpose of Course

The purpose of the course is to acquaint the student, by relating systematic theories of government to modern practice, to view present-day political problems and programs in the light of their historical development.

The course is not listed in the catalogue, but further information about it may be obtained from the department of history and government, or from the office of the dean of the college of liberal arts.

Tar Heel Basketeers Given Hard Workout

Edwards will be a hard man to replace at center, and all-southern guards like Alexander some few and far between.

Lineberger and Barber, forwards; Minor, center, and Harris, guard, are the leading candidates up from last year's reserve squad. Harris has especially good prospects and may give Henry and Jones, lettermen, a great race for Alexander's old guard post.

A better than average 1931 freshman squad is sending up several additional prospects, but the guard material which is most needed is small for the most part. Aitken, small and fast, and Kaveny, tall and a dead shot, are leading forward prospects. Glace is making a spirited bid at center, and Zaiser, Jacobs, and Heiderich are the best looking sophomore guards.

Clara Bow Returns To Movies In Show Today

Clara Bow makes her first appearance on the screen after a two year's absence in the Fox picture, "Call Her Savage," showing at the Carolina theatre today.

Miss Bow's first important role in movies was that of the stowaway in "Down to the Sea in Ships."

Others in the cast are Monroe, Owsley, Gilbert Roland, Thelma Todd, and Estelle Taylor. The picture was directed by John Francis Dillon.

In the filming of the picture, the fight between Clara Bow and Thelma Todd turned from acting into reality. It is said that Thelma became jealous because Clara was stealing the picture and decided to try to steal it herself by giving a realistic portrayal of the fight. Therefore she grabbed a handful of Clara's hair and the war began.

The Theatre

As a company, they succeeded so well that one is loath to praise individual performances. There is, indeed, an elan about the composite of their work that made the good performance of each particular actor seem negligible. However, particularly good were Mr. Kradoska as the father and Miss Benedict as the marchioness. Your reviewer, being unaccustomed to emerging from the Playmaker theatre in a mood of praise, must let this scant meed suffice his avid readers.

The Jitney Players are, of course, professionals, but it seems to your correspondent that the success of their work in reviving such plays as Caste and The Duenna is significant to amateurs. Would not the "Little Theatre" groups be more successful in this type of work than in continuing their soul studies of down-trodden people? This department fervently believes that they could not be less successful.

As to the evening offering, it should be stated at the outset that the forte of the Jitney Players is their recreation of the old melodramas, the landmarks of dramatic history. One can hardly imagine a technique better suited than theirs to this type of work. However the presentation of any of the Shaw plays is an entirely different matter. Despite the more recent tendency to sneer at the Shavian fulminations, Shaw is still the dominating figure of the satirical stage. In a period in which all attempts at mockery belong more to the bludgeon than to the rapier school (vide Lewis, the new American) finesse and subtlety are characteristics extremely rare, and, as such, almost justify the continuance of the Shaviomania (the coinage is not original) of the past two decades. Shaw is still Shaw and it is lese-majeste to give him poor production.

The peculiar excellence of Arms and the Man is the lightness of touch in the delineation of the "grand manner" of Sergius & Raina. The absurdities of this "grand manner" are heightened, in the play itself, by counterbalancing of the contrastingly prosaic characters of Bluntschli, and, hence, there is no need for burlesque, however delicate, on the part of the actors. The lines themselves ridicule Raina & Sergius, and any attempt to make this mockery more obvious destroys the flavor of the play. It is unfortunate that Mrs. Cheney as Raina, and Mr. Kradoska as Sergius, employed in their interpretations

HISTORICAL GROUP WILL HEAR PRATT

Mayflower Cup to Be Presented At Meeting of Literary and Historical Association.

Features of the meeting of the North Carolina Literary and Historical Association which convenes in Raleigh at 10:00 o'clock this morning, are talks by Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt of Chapel Hill and Miss Mary Thornton of the library staff. The subject of Colonel Pratt's talk is "The Early Conservation Movement in North Carolina," and Miss Thornton will speak on "North Carolina Bibliography 1931-32."

Cup to Be Awarded

The Mayflower society cup will be presented tonight, by Dr. W. L. Poteat, president emeritus of Wake Forest College, to the resident of North Carolina who has published the most outstanding book during the year. Last year's winner was Dr. M. C. S. Noble of the University education department and chairman of the North Carolina historical commission, for his book, History of the Public Schools of North Carolina. This cup belongs to the North Carolina society of Mayflower descendants and is on display in the state museum. The names and works of the winners are engraved on the original cup each year and a small replica is given for permanent possession.

Another feature of the program tonight is a talk on "The challenge to America" by Dr. Harry A. Garfield, son of president James A. Garfield, fuel administrator under President Wilson and president of Williams College since 1908. The officers for the year will be elected after the final program.

placement with militia or conscript armies on a smaller scale. It sounded on the face of it like a magnificent gesture made in complete good faith. It was adopted by a vote of 430 to 20. But when the motives behind the proposal are revealed and the conditions upon which its acceptance were predicated become known, the old familiar rattle of sabers and the dull clatter of musketry rise with a menacing tone through the brassy-golden plea for peace.

The plan in itself, if adopted by all the nations in a spirit of genuine cooperation, is an admirable one. But the conditions of its acceptance and the debates on the floor of the chamber of deputies make clear the fact that it is founded not so much upon a desire for peace as upon a deep-grained fear and jealousy and hatred of Germany.

So it has been with the majority of such proposals for these many years—sweet music made on a hollow drum. It is all very tiresome and grows less convincing year by year.—Daily Iowan.

the same technique they would have used in The Murder in the Red Barn and succeeded in destroying the fine edge of the acidly perspicacious humor. No other members of the cast committed this fault. Mr. Maroney as Petkoff, Mr. Dowd as Nicola, Miss Love as Louka, and Miss Benedict as Catherine were all competent. However it remained for Mr. Rowland as Captain Bluntschli to raise the level of the production. He interpreted his role with the professional aplomb that one expects of the Players. In addition to clarity of diction he has fine stage presence and no tendency whatsoever to overact. To this department's mind, he gave a really distinguished performance.

ENGINEERS GIVEN AIRPLANE MOTOR

Eastern Air Transport Donates Wright Whirlwind Motor to Mechanical Engineers.

The mechanical engineering department of Carolina was recently given an expensive airplane motor by the Eastern Air Transport, Inc., of Atlanta, Ga. This motor is a Wright Whirlwind, radial air-cooled, and will develop 220 horsepower.

Motor Assembled From Parts

This motor was assembled from spare parts, and was donated to the University by J. M. Halliburton, assistant superintendent of maintenance and supplies and was secured through the efforts of a student of aeronautics who worked with the company.

The Eastern Air Transport has its principal offices in Atlanta. Their air route serves the Eastern seaboard from New York to Miami, and as far inland as Atlanta. Six Curtiss Condor planes, the largest and most comfortable passenger ships in the United States, are included in the fleet of airplanes that run on regular schedules. The Eastern Air Transport has flown over 10,000,000 miles and has carried over 50,000 passengers without a major accident.

This valuable acquisition to the mechanical department will be sectioned and studied by the students, who have already shown much interest in this gift.

Speaking Campus Mind

For two years he served with President Graham as one of the University's representatives on the commission studying the consolidation of the state's institutions of higher learning. It was he who wrote a memorandum to President Chase in 1920 which was largely instrumental in setting in motion the movement which resulted in legislation in 1921 for what became known as the $20,000,000 program for the educational institutions in North Carolina.

Locally he has engaged in a large number of activities and his work along these lines gained him the title of the "busy builder." He organized the University Extension division and was its director, 1912-1920; he assisted in the founding and was first editor of the Alumni Review; and has been connected with almost every phase of the University's work.

His executive abilities are concretely indicated by the growth of the library under his thirty-one years' direction. With the aid of the Carnegie Foundation, he established the present school of library science.

Dr. Wilson is a product of the University and his development has gone hand in hand with the institution. His spirit has been that of the University, which he, as much as any one man, has brought to its present high standing in liberality and prominence.

Besides the aforementioned attributes, Dr. Wilson has the confidence and affection of the faculty and the ability to hold any of its divergent elements in a compact cooperating body—the prime requisite for the vice-president.

The trustees should use any means in their power to call Dr. Wilson to the vice-presidency.

CHILEAN PATRIOT CHOSEN VISITING PEACE LECTURER

Selection of Dr. Charles G. Davila as University Carnegie Professor Announced.

An announcement was made yesterday from the president's office of the designation by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace of Dr. Charles G. Davila as Visiting Carnegie Professor to lecture at the University.

It is the purpose of the Carnegie Endowment to multiply and strengthen the bonds of intellectual and scholarly understanding between different countries by means of the establishment of these professorships which provide for the visits and lectures of eminent men to various universities.

To Interpret Country
Dr. Davila is a famous Chilean journalist, diplomat, and executive. He will come here to lecture in order to interpret his country and South America to the students and faculty of the University. While here he will give a series of lectures and seminars on Inter-American affairs. The first lecture, to which all are invited, is scheduled for Tuesday night at 8:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

Dr. Davila is well known in the United States. He was ambassador to Washington from Chile representing the government of Ibanez whose presidency ceased as a result of the comparatively bloodless revolution of July, 1931. He is recognized as an able diplomat and has received many honors in this country, including honorary degrees from Columbia University and the University of Southern California. He is es-

OPPORTUNITY TO VOTE ENDS WITH THIS AFTERNOON

Only Fair-Sized Vote Cast in Balloting for Vice-President
Which Ends Today.

Today is the final date for students to cast their ballots in the straw vote begun Wednesday by THE DAILY TAR HEEL, to secure student opinion on the question of a successor of President Frank P. Graham to head the University here. The ballot boxes are located in the Y. M. C. A. and in Graham Memorial.

A fair sized vote has been cast so far and students are urged to make use of the ballots printed in the DAILY TAR HEEL to express their views on their choice for the third of the vice-presidents of the Greater University of North Carolina. The result of the vote will be released Sunday.

The appointment of a vice-president for the University, by the board of trustees, is made necessary by the consolidation of the three leading state schools in North Carolina, and the subsequent election of President Frank P. Graham as president of the Greater University of North Carolina, at the last meeting of the board held recently. The two vice-presidents appointed at that time are Dr. E. C. Brooks, former president of State College, and Dr. Julius I. Foust, to direct the Woman's College.

Speakers Well Known

Dr. Jones and Professor White, Guest Speakers on A. I. C. E. Program, Have Wide Experience.

Dr. Webster N. Jones and Professor Alfred H. White, guest speakers on the American Institute of Chemical Engineers program which will take place Monday, have had a wide range of experience in their respective fields of work.

Dr. Jones who is now director of engineering at Carnegie Institute of Technology, and who is also major in chemical warfare reserves had wartime experience as chemical expert with War Trade Board.

Since the war, until 1932, with B. F. Goodrich Co., serving since 1928 as general superintendent of processing.

Professor White, at present head of the department of chemical engineering at the University of Michigan, served as colonel of ordinance department during the war, in charge of technical staff of the nitrate division, which was charged with the erection of the Muscle Shoals and other nitrate plants. He is the author of numerous papers in the fields of fuels, boiler scale and concrete.

LECTURER GIVES IMPORTANT IDEA OF MODERN ART

Visiting Speaker Expresses Belief That American Illustration Is Ahead of Other Nations.

Thornton Oakley, noted illustrator and lecturer, spoke Thursday night in the Hill music auditorium on the subject of "Illustration," using slides of various pen and ink sketches to illustrate his lecture.

Oakley is an illustrator, lecturer, painter, writer, and architect. He was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania with B.S. and M.S. degrees in architecture, and later studied illustration under Howard Pyle, whose pen and ink drawings for Harper's magazine in the early part of this century attracted much attention.

In his lecture, Oakley expressed the belief that American illustration had shown the way to the other nations of the world. He said that the true artist did not strive to create a picture for the illustration alone but for some suggestion of a higher beauty, which the artist might portray. No artist is ever satisfied with his work, according to Oakley, but is always trying to produce something better than his last attempt.

Uses Slides to Illustrate
Most of the slides used were of pen and ink sketches drawn by Pyle for Harper's. Others sketched by noted artists showed the various effects of artificial light on the subjects.

Oakley is in North Carolina on a lecture tour under the auspices of the state art society of North Carolina and the American Federation of Arts. He was brought here for the lecture through the general provision of Mrs. Katherine Pendleton Arrington of Warrenton, who has been active for the past several years in the work of the state art society.

Percy Grainger Believes Individual Activity Increases In Music Field

Versatile Australian Artist and Authority on English Folk Songs, Guest Conductor of State Symphony, Regrets Lack of Support of Native Talent in Anglo-Saxon Lands.

Percy Grainger is no laboratory worker. Everything about the artist who was the soloist for the recent concerts of the North Carolina Symphony confirms this conviction. From his distinctly non-professional appearance to his firmest theories on his art, he is the creator, interpreter, who is ever in closest contact with man and nature, the basic materials of his work.

It is his belief that people are going back to the stage in which they desire to enjoy music by participating in it rather than gazing at highly-skilled and highly priced professionals. Music is on the road to becoming as much a pleasurable and intimate part of life as a game of cards.

Born in Australia

Grainger was born in Melbourne, Australia, half a century ago. After a varied training there, the earliest of which was from his own mother, he embarked on a musical career in London at the early age of eighteen. His excellence as a pianist won him quick recognition and a friendship with the great Norwegian composer, Grieg. So much did Grieg think of the young musician, that he was selected to play the solo part in Grieg's piano concert performed at the Leeds Festival of 1907.

Having established himself in England, Grainger began to display a decided interest in English folk-songs. He has since become a leading figure in the popularization of the native tunes of both that country and Denmark. To him each of these songs is completely individual and its charm and appeal depends largely upon the rendition.

Eighteen years ago he journeyed to this country and now lives permanently in White Plains, N. Y. Commenting upon the American attitude toward folk music, in which he is naturally interested, he said "Anglo-Saxon peoples are all alike. The English, Australians, and Americans have an individualistic view of art. They lack the group feeling. This is shown by their willingness to ignore the native genius in order to pay to hear highly-touted foreign performers."

Influenced by German Attitude

This spirit, which is so completely different from the Germanic tradition which Grainger claims as his own, has tended to restrict the progress of a national art in this country. "We do not think or act," he added, "in any kind of unison." It is quite likely that this situation is a serious obstacle to the formation of a national orchestra subsidized by the federal government.

He believes that the tendency is toward an interest in music itself, in taking part in the performances on a basis of democratic equality with a sense of teamwork as in a football or baseball game.

"Grieg was one of the first to take this democratic attitude," continued Grainger. "He told me that it had always been his ambition to write piano pieces so simply that they could be played in every home in Norway and not merely by professional musicians."

SPEAKER STATES DAYS' REQUISITE

Serious Problems Facing Nation
Offer Added Opportunity,
Says Scout Head.

Kenneth G. Bentz, regional Scout executive for the southeastern states, speaking at assembly yesterday in the Scout executive seminar program, stressed the point that in view of the serious problems facing the nation today opportunities for students graduating from college will be greater than ever before.

The national and international problems are greater and more intricate than ever before in history, Executive Bentz stated, and opportunities are proportionately greater. He especially encouraged students to study in preparation for meeting these problems.

Aim of Scouts

In stating the aim of scouting, Bentz announced the belief that the greatest product of any university or any nation is a group of young men and women, well-trained and sound physically, mentally, and morally.

He mentioned also his desire that students would consider the scout movement and ideals from a university standpoint, pointing to the international significance of scouting. Scouting, according to Executive Bentz, appeals to all peoples and all religions; and although the movement is only twenty-two years old, the scouts outnumber members in all other organizations.

STUDENT DIES OF INFECTED THROAT

Joseph Nelson, Jr., of New Bern, University Freshman, Passes
Away in Infirmary.

Joseph Nelson, Jr., freshman in the liberal arts school, passed away suddenly yesterday morning in the school infirmary after having been sick three days with an infected throat.

Nelson graduated from Newbern high school in 1931. While in high school, he was very active in dramatics, a member of the glee club, an active worker in the student council, and interested in declamation. He was a very prominent boy in the Newbern school and came to the University highly recommended by his teachers.

Although this was his first year at Carolina, "Joe," as he was known to his intimate friends, made a host of fine acquaintances. He took a part in the recent Playmaker production, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Despite the fact that he was in the liberal arts school, Nelson had expressed the intention of eventually entering into the field of medicine.

Deceased was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Nelson, of Newbern, and an active member of the Methodist church.

Funeral services will be conducted in Newbern tomorrow. Frank Rogers, president of the freshman class, and Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, will attend to represent the University.

Receives Award

Dr. Archibald Henderson, distinguished scientist, literator, and historian, who was last night awarded the Mayflower Society cup by the North Carolina Literary and Historical Association for the best original work by a North Carolinian during the year. "Bernard Shaw: Playboy and Prophet," Dr. Henderson's new book on Shaw, is the volume which won for him the society's award.

PERCY GRAINGER CONDUCTS STATE SYMPHONY HERE

Guest Artist and Lamar Stringfield Give Lecture on Selections Played by Orchestra

The North Carolina Symphony Orchestra completed a series of two concerts last night with the presentation of a varied program in Memorial hall, with Lamar Stringfield as conductor and Percy Grainger, noted Australian pianist and composer, as guest artist. The first concert was presented to a large audience in Durham Thursday night.

The first part of the program last night included the Marriage of Figaro Overture by Mozart and the Peer Gynt Suite No. 1 by Grieg. The second part consisted of Percy Grainger selections, some of them played and some conducted by the composer, and of the Legend of John Henry, Lamar Stringfield's new symphonic work. This composition was presented to the public for the first time last night. The Grainger compositions consisted of Spoon River, The Nordic Princess, and Handel in the Strand.

Joint Lecture Given

Prior to the concert last night, Grainger and Stringfield gave a joint lecture yesterday afternoon in the Hill Music auditorium explaining the composition of the selections played at the concert. Stringfield spoke on the legend of John Henry, the story of the contest between the steel driver and the steam drill.

Grainger spoke on folk music in general and the effect of music on life and customs. He expressed his idea of the purpose of music which is to make people more sentimental. He explained how the three of his compositions played last night came to be written. Spoon River is based on folk themes; The Nordic Princess is the bridal song written for his own wedding; and Handel in the Strand is a clog dance based on his variation based on the theme of the German composer, Handel, entitled The Harmonious Blacksmith.

MAYFLOWER CUP GIVEN HENDERSON FOR NEW EFFORT

North Carolina Historical and Literary Association Last Night Announces Award.

Bernard Shaw: Playboy and Prophet, for which Dr. Archibald Henderson was last night awarded the Mayflower Society cup by the North Carolina Literary and Historical Association in Raleigh for the best original work published by a North Carolinian during the year, represents what the author himself regards as the crowning achievements of his literary works to date.

Presentation of the cup was made by Dr. W. L. Poteat, president-emeritus of Wake Forest College.

Receives Cordial Criticism

A massive volume of 832 pages, the book has been widely acclaimed by critics here and abroad and has already gone into its second edition. It is one of eight volumes that Henderson has devoted in whole or in part to the career of Shaw. It traverses the whole of Shaw's career and brings the life of the great Irish wit completely up to date.

The volume includes innumerable speeches, tracts, theatre leaflets, dramatic interpretations, and contributions to obscure publications which have appeared in no other work. Shaw opened his files to the author so that he might have all the material available.

A feature of the book is an authentic description of the entire Shavian movement in the theatre, a subject that has had Dr. Henderson's intensive study for a number of years.

GRANVILLE WILL GIVE RECITATIONS HERE WEDNESDAY

Distinguished English Actor to Appear on Student Entertainment Program.

V. L. Granville, one of the most distinguished actors on the English stage, will appear in Memorial hall next Wednesday, December 7, at 8:30 o'clock. Granville's program will be a costumed recital entitled "Dramatic Interludes."

"Dramatic Interludes" will be a presentation, in costume and make-up, of the principal characters from drama of all time. Such immortal characters as Job, Nero, Lady Wishfort, Andre, Asano, and the Narrator will be included in Granville's interpretation.

In his program will be included the following characters with the plays from which they are drawn: the Narrator and Job from The Book of Job; Strepsiades from The Clouds by Aristophanes; Pernet, the Archer, from The Free Archer of Baignollet by Francois Villon; Hamlet from Hamlet, Prince of Denmark by William Shakespeare; Lady Wishfort, from The Way of the World by William Congreve.

Following a ten minute intermission will come the second group of interludes which are as follows: Uriah Heep, from David Copperfield by Charles Dickens.

Change In Quarters

According to reports the faculty is now seriously considering changing to a semester system in preference to the present quarter plan. On several occasions before has this change been contemplated but each time the quarter system has been found much more suitable.

The faculty has even gone so far this time as to appoint a special committee to investigate the matter and to make a report of its findings at a future meeting. From a personal interview with the various members of the faculty, it seems evident that the sentiment is pretty well divided on the issue. And unless those students favoring the present arrangement express themselves, there is grave danger that the semester system will be put into effect.

Several universities and colleges throughout the country have at one time or another made surveys of this matter, and have published the complete analysis of their work. But in every one of these reports individual opinion is the only authority given for the various conclusions reached.

Consequently where the question seems to boil down to nothing more than a matter of opinion, the advocates of the quarter system need little fear a change to the other arrangement, since the majority of sane opinions are in their favor.

In this age of specialization it would be entirely inconsistent with the general plan of things to change to a semester plan where the student must be nothing short of a jack-of-all-trades to keep up with his work. Under the quarter system the work is concentrated into one short period, during which time the student has to concern himself with only a small number of subjects. As a consequence he is better able to develop himself along the line of these courses before attempting some other field of work.

The old adage of "one thing at a time, and that done well" is quite appropos of the quarter plan. In short the student specializes in his work from quarter to quarter, thus giving himself time to delve deeply into each individual course. On the other hand in the semester arrangement his time is taken up with so many courses that he has a chance to get only a smattering of each of his courses.

From practically every angle that the matter might be considered the quarter plan is unquestionably the most logical. And especially is this true from the standpoint of the amount of concentration the student can put on each course.

To adopt a semester system would be nothing short of a backward step for this University to take.

If the results of the recent election are indicative of a trend, the anti-prohibitionists have won their fight for repeal. The Democratic party went to the polls with an outright repeal plank in its platform. Now that the Democrats are in power, Vice President-elect Garner, speaker of the house, proposes to hold his Congressional colleagues to the promise of their party.

Repeal being a future certainty, both statesmen and laymen should turn their attention to the next problem at hand: to devise a plan to regulate the sale of legalized liquor in such a way that it will yield the maximum of profit to the federal government and at the same time promote temperance.

In looking around for models after which to pattern the American system of liquor control, Congress will find plans of all types and degrees of effectiveness: the English, the Swedish, and the Canadian systems. Of the many variations of the Canadian system, the plan used in the province of Quebec is probably most satisfactory, both in its returns to the province treasury and in encouraging temperance.

The thirsty citizen or visiting American in Quebec can get distilled liquor and wines through the stores and mail order department of the Quebec Liquor Commission. In licensed hotels and restaurants he may get wines and beer with his soup and fish and spinach. On hot days and cold nights, he can drink as many mugs of beer as it takes to cool him off or to warm him up, in licensed taverns. If he likes to blow the foam from his own stein at home, he can get bottled beer in licensed groceries.

Beer and wines are cheap and easy to get. But whiskey and other spirits are expensive and more difficult to obtain. As with any other indulgence, the citizen of Quebec must suit his drinking taste to the fatness or leanness of his billfold.

In drafting the plan, it was provided that the lieutenant-governor was to appoint the liquor commission. Its members are not subject to control or intimidation by local politicians. Under a local-option arrangement, any territory in the province may be wet or dry, as its citizens vote. In wet districts, the commission has full power to grant and to deny licenses to taverns, hotels, and grocery stores. Private profit in liquor has been abolished and all surplus profits are appropriated by taxes to the government.

This system commends itself to the United States, in the certain event that the Eighteenth Amendment will be repealed.

However, in adapting any system to our particular situation, care must be exercised that its usefulness is not ruined by repeal fanatics or bone-dry prohibitionists. Any plan that is drafted must not be too extreme in either direction. A mean position must be reached, else another experiment noble in purpose but ineffectual in practice might result.—E.C.D.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

Kiss

Straw ballots have always served as pretty conclusive criteria in the premature settlement of questions weighing upon nations and races. Last year the TAR HEEL with its Disarmament poll managed to almost completely disarm the several international powers. The Daily Princetonian straw poll re-elected President Hoover by a sizeable majority. The Literary Digest poll felt differently about the matter and gave the election to Mr. Roosevelt. But here we draw the line on straw ballots and recommend for immediate oblivion the polls conducted at Northwestern and California State Teachers College which sought the opinions of co-eds on the "Decline and Fall of the American Kiss." Thirty-six students at the California institution declared that they found kissing a gentleman friend on the night of the first date "sensible and generally satisfactory." The ladies at Northwestern were equally divided for and against osculation though on a purely diplomatic policy.

This, we warrant, is only another indication of the crumbling of rare old American institutions. Too many straw ballots have brought out the truth about lots of things we held in reverence, including Disarmament, Hoover and Roosevelt.

This is certainly the last straw—ballot.

Beer

The Chemical Industries Club of McGill University has decided that things in the organization have come to a pretty pass. Assiduous in their desire to investigate conditions in Montreal industrial concerns, the group conducted a tour through several large city-breweries to investigate the methods and chemical procedure in brewing beer, the real stuff. After traversing several large breweries and receiving free samples of the products of each concern, the class began to enter wholeheartedly into the spirit of the thing and pretty soon it was just a good old fashioned party.

When the tour was over, the club took a vote as to the best machinery and apparatus as well as product in town, but nobody could remember much about it. Fresh

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

One of the Old School Speaks

I personally approve of about all of the recommendations made by the Brookings Institution such as consolidations of state departments and general reform of the state and local governments, but I have always been very much opposed (possibly somewhat for sentimental reasons, but I have considerable sentiment for my alma mater) to the consolidation of the University with State College and particularly North Carolina College for Women. I agree that it might have been wise to have had a common purchasing agency or business department, but further than this I am unalterably against the consolidation. I have been quite surprised that the Carolina alumni have made practically no objection to the plan. The principal objection seems to have come from the State College alumni who seem to be afraid that State College is to be made a junior college and its engineering department transferred to Chapel Hill. Recently when President Graham was elected head of the consolidated institution apparently to appease all parties concerned the recently elected board of the "Greater University" (?) gave out a statement of policy in which it was set forth that State College would be maintained in its present dignity and that the engineering schools at both State and Carolina would be maintained as presently constituted. I question then, why consolidate at all? I rather anticipate that there will be considerably more disturbance raised by Carolina alumni when the full force of the change comes upon them. Personally I am opposed to the large middle western type of co-educational institution and the present trend appears to me to be leading inevitably to such a result. The question of co-education arose rather acutely when I was a student at Chapel Hill and the student body at that time was overwhelmingly against co-education. I worked hard at the time obtaining signatures to a petition against the movement. It was decided then that the policy of the University would be not to allow women to attend classes in other than the professional schools and to take courses open to undergraduates in the last two years of their study which were unavailable at North Carolina College for Women. This was obviously a compromise and it is my understanding that the doors are now thrown wide open and the women firmly entrenched at Chapel Hill. While I was still at the University the trustees decided to build the present women's dormitory instead of using the money for a men's gymnasium. The gymnasium has not been built yet. The action of the trustees in building the women's dormitory instead of the gymnasium created no little resentment among the students at the time, for the gymnasium was and still is sorely needed.

With Contemporaries

We'll Pull Your Beard, Mr. Shaw—

America seems at last to be about to claim just deserts after years of patient suffering and neglect. The Incomparable Master of Wit, George Bernard Shaw, has almost weakened against the entreaties of his English fellow-countrymen to pay a visit to the United States, land from which the milk and honey which grace the Shaw family table have flowed since the days when George was nursing the first frail bristle on his now bewhiskered face. The bearded philosopher has made much making little of our feeble efforts toward civilization, and now he is almost ready to condescendingly pay us a "five-minute" visit this summer, supposedly to get some first-hand knowledge of our excellent inferiority.

Specifically, he warned the London newspapers that America might soon have the opportunity of paying homage to his efficacious personality in words of the following tenor:

"Next year I shall be on the high seas and perhaps in the neighborhood of the United States. I may even land for five minutes."

And now America needs must diligently educate herself before the coming of the summer months in order that she will not offend her renowned visitor and perhaps arouse the old gentleman to new heights of satirical witticisms.

She must guard and protect the sacred solemnity of the Englishman's tea, and take care that some conscientious American does not recall that Socrates also wore a beard, and drank poison. Let us have none of the wild tooting of steamship whistles and fog horns blaring out a disgusting American welcome as His Highness treads the gangplank. She must muzzle the arrogant manufacturers, gag the crude mid-westerners, and drive from the streets all the little young Americans who chance to be occupied by chasing the eagle dollar.

If we could arrange a full-fledged fox hunt for the gentleman in which the fox was finally disposed of in the good old English manner, then we might strike close to George's heart. But imagine our embarrassment if some impudent American stripping would retaliate to Shaw's "Jolly time," and "Tally-ho" with a "Hi-de-hi" and a "Ho-de-ho."

The great condescender closes his newspaper interview thus: "I understand that the population of the United States is in the neighborhood of a hundred million, and any announcement of my intentions would be dangerous, for the whole of the population would rush to the spot where I landed, and thus disorganize the country."

About the only reason we can find for the excessive concentration of population on the occasion of Mr. Shaw's visit would be the huge vacuum created when the illustrious personage steamed into the harbor.—Purdue Exponent.

Charlotte and Durham high school football teams will clash this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in Kenan stadium for the class "A" grid championship of North Carolina.

Coach Walter Skidmore's Charlotte highs will be seeking revenge this year against practically the same Durham team that upset the Queen City lads for the title last year. After defeating Goldsboro for the championship in 1929; Raleigh, in 1930; Charlotte suffered a humiliating defeat at the hands of the Bulldogs last year on a muddy field. This is the fourth year in succession that Charlotte has borne the colors of the western conference.

Bees Slight Favorites

Again this year the Bees will reign as favorites to cop the crown; but with the keen rivalry between the two schools, even the wisest of sport savants dare not venture a pre-game verdict. Charlotte has a distinct advantage in weight, although Quarterback Hackney and Halfback Howard Spain of Durham are slated to give enough momentum to the Cigarette City boys to offset this advantage.

In the lineups of the two clubs will be found some of the leading contenders for all-state high school positions. Charlie Gadd, field general, and Dallas Morris, right half, are Charlotte's leading candidates for all-star honors, while Captain Howard Spain, Hackney, Germino, and Bryan on the Durham club form the chief threats.

Charlotte arrived yesterday for a final workout, but the nearby Durham lads will not arrive until just before the starting gun.

ENTHUSIASTS BID FOR TOURNAMENT

Invitation for Conference Tournament Will Be Presented At Officials' Meeting.

Basketball enthusiasts in this section of the Southern conference are hoping that the efforts of the Raleigh Junior Chamber of Commerce to bring the 1933 conference basketball tournament north will be crowned with success at the annual meeting of officials of the conference scheduled for Knoxville in the near future.

Supporters of the plan to stage this year's tournament in Raleigh argue that holding the contests there would not only strengthen basketball in this sec-

Though the Tar Heels haven't collected any gold footballs for this year's work, several of Chuck Collins' men lead the state in different phases of the game. Bill Croom, for instance, with his 76-yard gallop against Virginia for a touchdown was the longest gain from scrimmage among North Carolina backs. . . . Returning a punt for 62 yards against Davidson, Charlie Woollen dominated this department of the game among the Big Five ball toters. . . . and Johnny Daniels' 95-yard meander through the Florida team on the kickoff was the outstanding play in this phase of the fall past-time among the state backs.

Coming as a surprise to football followers was the announcement that Pitt would play the Trojans in the Rose Bowl contest this year. Michigan's fine team was thought to be the favorite of the Californians with Colgate next. Undefeated and with impressive victories over Army, Notre Dame, Stanford, and Pennsylvania, the Pitt club boasts the best record of any eastern team. . . . and incidentally the west coast had better get busy if it wants to boast sectional superiority this year—already Fordham has licked St. Mary's and Oregon State, while Pitt has shoved Stanford aside—if Notre Dame licks the Trojans, which isn't improbable and Alabama vanquishes St. Mary the Pacific fans will have to take the back seat this year in inter-sectional scrimmages.

Auburn's outstanding choice for all-American honors Jimmy Hitchcock, not only plays a mean game of football but also his baseball antics are highly valuable to the Alabama Poly school. Last spring a score of major scouts tried to sign him up, and the Chicago Cubs even went so far as to offer him a bonus of $3,000 for signing his name to a contract.

Seniors on Vanderbilt's football team have formed an "All for one club" and have declared that no matter where they may be they'll have a yearly meeting—Pete Gracey, popular choice for all-American center, is the president. . . . it's too bad players can't be influential in enticing their brothers into coming to Carolina—look at the team we'd have if Captain-elect Lassiter of Yale and Captain-elect Montgomery of Columbia were in the backfield.

The city of Raleigh has already arranged to allow the use of its auditorium, whose level hardwood floor will hold a regulation-size court and several thousand spectators. All angles of the situation have been covered, and Raleigh is anticipating playing host to the contestants for conference honors when the date rolls around in February.

FRIEDMAN-HARRIS WILL PARTICIPATE IN INDOOR MATCH

Two Carolina Tennis Stars Will Compete in National Junior Indoor Championships.

For the first time the University of North Carolina will be represented in the National Junior indoor championships to be held during Christmas week in Atlantic City, N. J. The University will send two players to this tourney, Bernie Friedman of Philadelphia, and Harvey Harris of Raleigh.

In preparation for this event, Coach John F. Kenfield has been working daily with these two players in the indoor court at the west end of the Tin Can.

In Friedman and Harris Carolina has two of the finest junior players in the country, and both are expected to make fine showings at Atlantic City.

For Harris it will be his first venture on the hard board courts, and his practice the last week has been almost entirely devoted to getting accustomed to the change in light and adapting his game to the much faster indoor style of play.

Friedman Experienced

On the other hand, Friedman is a veteran of both boys and junior indoor play. The Philadelphia boy made an enviable record last winter in the tourney losing out to Marco Hecht, University of Pennsylvania star, in the finals, and teaming with his conqueror to capture the doubles crown.

This season the competition is expected to be especially keen with a field surpassing all preceding ones. Besides the defending champion, Hecht, his doubles partner, Friedman, and Harris, Frankie Parker, national junior outdoor titleholder, and Jay Cohn are expected to compete.

CONFERENCE MEETS TO CONSIDER BILLS

Proposal to Employ Commissioner of Athletics to Be Considered at Meeting.

One of the most important bills up for discussion in the annual Southern conference meeting in Knoxville, Tenn., December 9 and 10 will be the proposal that a commissioner of athletics be adopted for the S. I. C. This measure was voted down a year ago.

The plan is not a new one, and it has been discussed pro and con by Dixie officials. The chief argument against it this year will be the fact that the annual cost of a commissioner, headquarters offices, and all would amount to about $10,000 a year; and many S. I. C. institutions are in a bad way financially.

It is reasonably certain that some modification concerning the rule about broadcasting games will be affected.

The only other change which is scheduled to make a great difference is the probable shift of the basketball tourney from Atlanta to Raleigh. Raleigh has a new World War Memorial auditorium, seating around 5,000, and the Capital City of North Carolina is also a basketball center, being within a radius of thirty miles of all three Tar Heel members of the conference.

Engineer Teams Ready To Meet In Game Today

Mechanelecs and Civichems Settle Differences in Battle Royal Last Night.

There was much strife and turmoil in Phillips hall last night as the Mechanelecs and the Civichems selected their respective players and bribed the officials.

The Mechanelecs did not want to have any officials, but their opponents would not hear of such a thing—they wanted a gentle game, or they would not play at all. The result is that A. R. Hollett will act as the referee, E. W. Winkler will officiate as head linesman, R. F. Stainback agreed to be the field judge, and W. J. Miller was selected as the time-keeper. Miller is out of town so the game will be minus a time keeper.

The Mechanelecs called a secret practice yesterday, so secret that no one showed up, and the practice had to be called off. They also wish to inform the public that the star halfback, "Snakehips" Evans, has been found and will appear in the game.

The chemical and civil outfit held a practice and ran off all their new plays, with the aid of calculus and mechanics. Captain Pitt Brown announces that his team will win by three touchdowns.

Incidentally, the game is to be tag football game and will be played at 11:00 o'clock this morning on Emerson field.

Henderson High To Meet Local Team

Henderson negro high school's powerful football team will meet the Orange County Training School's fast outfit on Emerson field next Saturday for the negro championship of North Carolina. Tickets will sell for 25 cents.

The proceeds of the game will go toward the salary of the nurse who serves the negroes in Chapel Hill. The negro population is responsible for part of the nurse's salary, and they have arranged the game, in co-operation with the health department of the Community club, to help meet this obligation.

FIRST TWO FIVES SEE FIRST ACTION IN SNAPPY DRILL

Captain Hines, Weathers, Henry, Jones, and Glace Make Up Team in Scrimmage.

Coach Bo Shepard put his varsity teams through their first real scrimmage yesterday in the Tin Can in the stiffest workout held this year. The first two teams scrimmaged two reserved fives.

In the absence of Dave McCachren, star guard, who is out due to an injured thumb, Dan Jones teamed with Stud Henry to make the first team guards. Jack Glace, sophomore, was at center and the two veterans, Captain Wilmer Hines and Virgil Weathers, were at the forward posts.

The second team showed Harris and Webster at guards, with Minor at center and Markham and Aitken working as forwards.

Yesterday's scrimmage was the first time the first two fives have played under the new rules although they have seen these regulations govern tussles between reserve teams for the past two days. The rules were added to the rule book this summer and are intended to speed up the game, preventing a lot of last minute "freezing" of the ball.

Team Shows Power

The first team showed flashes of real power yesterday though the passing was bad and the shooting was somewhat off. These weaknesses were not so prominent that they cannot be remedied with diligent work and all indications are that the White Phantoms will be right January 5 when they meet Guilford.

Coach Shepard announced yesterday that there would be no practice today but work would be resumed Monday at 4:00 o'clock.

PITT'S INVITATION SURPRISE TO ALL

Southern California Surprises When It Picks Pittsburgh as Tournament Opponent.

Coming as a surprise to everyone, even the team selected, Southern California invited Pittsburgh to oppose them in the eighteenth annual Rose Bowl tournament at Pasadena, January 2.

Michigan had been the favorite to represent the east but had to delay in order to get permission from the Big Ten officials to play a post-season contest. Most people considered Colgate as having a better chance than Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh was selected because of the extremely difficult schedule that they have completed this year. The Panthers played ten games and were opposed by teams from nearly every section in the country. They were held to scoreless ties by Ohio State and Nebraska but won over Army, Notre Dame, Stanford, Pennsylvania, Carnegie Tech., West Virginia, Duquesne, and Ohio Northern.

SCHOOLS' GROUP CLOSES SESSIONS

Important North Carolina Educators Present at New Orleans Meeting.

The meeting of the annual convention of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools ended this week in New Orleans. Dr. Joseph Roemer of Peabody College was president of the association this year.

North Carolina commissioners for the association are: for secondary schools, Dean N. W. Walker of the University school of education; Dr. J. Henry Highsmith, state director of public school supervision; Dean Holland Holton of the school of education, Duke University; L. R. Johnston, principal of the High Point high school; and Headmaster Wright of the Oak Ridge military institute; for colleges, President W. P. Few, Duke University; T. J. Wilson, Jr., registrar of the University; and K. R. Curtis, superintendent of the Wilson schools.

Have Annual Duties

The purpose of the association is to set standards for colleges and secondary schools and to check accredited institutions annually. North Carolina has approximately ninety secondary schools on the accredited list.

Several years ago the association adopted a resolution requiring all secondary schools on the accredited list to provide a full-time librarian in each school. The librarian is required to meet certain certificate requirements. This regulation goes into effect next year.

MORNING SESSION ENDS SCOUT SEMINAR MEETING

North Carolina Boy Scout executive seminar will close its three-day session here, with a luncheon today. Last night executives, who had not been previously made members of the Alpha Phi Omega national scouting fraternity, were initiated into the organization as honorary members.

The social feature of the seminar was a banquet last evening at which members of the local chapter of Alpha Phi Omega were guests of the executives.

The speakers on the today's program will be Dr. English Bagby and R. B. Vance.

HOLDER OF CHARLOTTE FACES ODD SITUATION

It won't be with a dry eye that Mac Holder, Charlotte high school halfback, takes the field today against the Durham high gridsters in the class "A" title encounter.

Mac was the Durham high school field general last year who wrought havoc in the eastern class "A" conference; and when the Bulldog signal barker met Charlotte in the contest of last year for state laurels, he broke away in the final quarter on his 40-yard stripe and stepped away for a touchdown. Holder's marker made the final score 13-6, thus beating his teammates this year.

His alleged unpopularity with his former subjects must be very largely a myth, as the government in Madrid has kindly relieved Alfonso of all his stocks and bonds.—Detroit News.

Co-eds Postpone Second Battle Between Floors

Injuries Cause Postponement of Fray Which Will Be Played This Morning.

The second of the famed "battles between the floors," Spencer hall basketball contests, was postponed yesterday when the hard-hitting co-ed contingent from the third floor had failed to recover sufficiently after its victory over the second floor Thursday.

The third floor girls were scheduled to play the fourth floor team yesterday but the squad had suffered minor injuries in the game Thursday which would handicap their speedy game.

According to advices received late last night, the two teams will line up on the co-ed athletic court at 10:30 this morning for the contest.

The fourth floor contingent is in prime shape and are all ready for the fray, which will determine the championship of Spencer hall. Their sisters below, confident of their power as shown in swamping the second-floor crew, expect to experience no difficulty in the game today.

Percy Grainger Says Individual Activity Is Increasing In Music

(Continued from first page) sicians. My compositions are written so they can be played by music lovers, whether they are amateurs or professionals. I have tried to make them as inclusive and not as exclusive as possible. We want to know what both the inner world and outer world are doing. If either is ignored, music in life becomes lop-sided."

Praises Local Work

Grainger was delighted to see Lamar Stringfield's work in the Chapel Hill program. He expressed the opinion that all concert programs should contain works which are the results of local genius. Stringfield's compositions, he stated, had not been written on the spot, but were actually the outcome of local feelings and traditions. He believes that these two things should always be kept in mind: local feeling and inspiration balanced against cosmopolitan culture and experience.

Himself closely connected with the academic progress of music by his association with the music department of New York University, he had warm praise for the advances that the schools are making. "The high schools, and colleges are definitely contributing in the south to the manifest awakening of popular interest in music. He also commented on the increased activity of professional and semi-professional groups as an important contribution to the movement.

Composer, conductor, and artist, he expressed his philosophy of his work when he said "It is to catch the freedom of spirit of the rhythm of nature that we are working." To this end, he has set himself in determining opposition to the constricting features of the classic style and heartily favors the experiments of the moderns.

Local Drive For Sale Of Christmas Seals Will Get Underway Monday

Intensive Campaign, Endorsed by Local Persons, Will Be Launched To Aid American Tuberculosis Society in Stamping Out Disease Locally and Nationally.

Students of the University and townspeople will again have the opportunity of contributing to the work of the American Tuberculosis Association this year through an intensive local drive for the sale of Christmas seals which will begin next Monday.

The work of the national organization is recognized as one of the most helpful and has materially aided in decreasing deaths from tuberculosis.

Proceeds Used Locally

The proceeds collected in the local campaign will for the most part go toward stamping out tuberculosis in Chapel Hill. Of all the money secured from the sale of these stamps, seventy-five per cent remains in the locality. This, together with donations from other sources, helps to serve the needs of local sufferers, though even these funds are short of the necessary amount.

The largest lump sum collected locally goes toward the salary of a nurse who examines school children, inspects homes, makes suggestions to mothers for the care of their families, supervises the care of home patients, all the way lessening the toll of the disease.

Another large portion goes to the keeping of one or more patients in sanatoriums and providing medical attention and nourishing foods for numerous others who remain at home.

Receives Local Endorsements

The campaign has received high endorsement from a large number of local persons. Mayor Zeb P. Council of Chapel Hill states: "As mayor of Chapel Hill I wish to urge the people of my community to invest as much as possible in these Christmas Seals. I say invest—for what better use can we find for our money in these times when it is so scarce, than in the improvement and protection of the health of our families."

"As health officer of Chapel Hill," said Dr. S. A. Nathan, giving his endorsement, "I wish to call attention of the people to the value to the community of the health program as carried out by Nurse Compton in her work. Any increase of funds for her use in this task means just so much more benefit for our locality."

Origin of Seal Idea

This idea of using an extra stamp on Christmas mail, the proceeds from its sale to be used for the aid of those suffering from tuberculosis, came from Einar Holboell, a Danish mail clerk.

After talking the idea over with friends, he finally succeeded in gaining the attention of the king and queen who agreed to back his plans. The first year of campaign was rewarded with the securing of enough money to build a children's hospital.

A stamp on a letter from Denmark to Jacob Ries aroused American interest. Miss Emily Bissell of Wilmington, Delaware, is credited with taking the initiative in this country in 1906. The first year of the work was rewarded by the collection of $3,000.00 which equipped a small hospital.

For several years the seal sale was conducted by the American Red Cross and then jointly by the Red Cross and the Tuberculosis Association. When the Red Cross adopted the roll call as its methods of raising funds to be used for general relief work, the task of collecting money to be used for the prevention of tuberculosis was left to the tuberculosis association.

Modern Journalist

Upon returning to Chile after the downfall of the Ibanez regime, Dr. Davila resumed the direction and publication of Hoy (Today), an example of up-to-date journalism. In investigations he found his country suffering acutely from the depression. He decided that certain drastic changes were necessary to enable Chile to meet the desperate circumstances of the unemployment and economic crisis. At the request of many friends and with their aid, he effected a sudden coup d'etat and was brought to power as Provisional President on June 4, 1932. He served as such for three months. Upon relinquishing his power as president, Dr. Davila took up a residence in the United States.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH TO GIVE BAZAAR TUESDAY

The Presbyterian church is conducting a Christmas bazaar Tuesday, December 6, at 3:00 o'clock. Christmas articles, made by members of the auxiliary of the church will be on sale, in addition to food. A member of the local chapter of the Red Cross will be on hand to sell tuberculosis Christmas seals. A story hour will be conducted during the afternoon for the small children so that the mothers will be able to shop.

Development Of Folk Drama Spreading Fast

The Little Theatre movement, based primarily on the development of folk drama, is spreading rapidly in the south, according to Professor Frederick H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers and southern director of the National Theatre Conference, who is back from a lecture tour which included several large centers in the south.

Using as his general theme, "The Making of an American Folk Drama," he spoke at Memphis before the annual convention of the National Council of Teachers of English; at the University of Chattanooga, where he was the guest of President Alexander Guerry, and in Nashville, Tenn. He found flourishing Little Theatre groups in all these centers. His tour took him as far as the University of Cincinnati. While there he was the guest of the mayor and city manager at a dinner given in his honor.

For the twenty-seventh consecutive year Professor Koch is to give his annual reading of Dickens' Christmas Carol in Memorial hall here Sunday night, December 11, at 8:30 o'clock.

This event is a part of the work of the Student Entertainment Committee, and it will be the final presentation of the year on the Student Entertainment card.

"American Madness" Shows At Carolina

A hotel, bank, railroad station, and trains provide the units for the background of the Columbia picture, "American Madness," featuring today at the Carolina theatre.

Walter Huston has one of the leading roles, that of a modern financier, who is both courageous and careful in making his bank symbolize leadership and assurance. He believes that banks hold the solution to economic depression, and he acts boldly on the this belief. Kay Johnson, native of New York, and of English and Scotch ancestry, has another of the prominent parts. Constance Cummings, seen Wednesday in "Washington Merry-Go-Round," Pat O'Brien, and Gavin Gordon are included in the cast.

Last Dance This Term Will Be Given Tonight

To-night the order of the Grail will give a dance, the final one of the term, in Bynum gymnasium from 9:00 o'clock until midnight with Jack Wardlaw and his orchestra providing the music. The dance is open to upperclassmen only.

The decorations to be placed in the gymnasium will be confined to white and orange drappings, and is under the supervision of Percy C. Idol and Milton Barber. Bynum gymnasium is being used for the function to-night instead of the Tin Can because a smaller attendance is expected than at previous dances. C. C. Hamlet, treasurer of the Grail, said yesterday.

The University dance committee will be in charge of the dance to-night.

Comprehensive Exams Will Take Place Today

The fall quarter's comprehensive examinations for seniors will be conducted by the different departments of the University at 9:00 o'clock this morning.

The passing of one of these examinations, which are given each quarter, is a requisite for graduation.

The English department's examination will be conducted in 201 Murphey while the commerce and economics examinations will be given in 113 Bingham.

Council For Student Expression To Bring Lecturers To Campus

Five Clubs Pool Efforts to Secure Prominent Speakers on National Problems.

LIST CONTAINS EIGHT MEN

Powers Hapgood, Ernest Gruening, Gordon Ward, and Norman Thomas Included.

Eight lectures prominent on the social and political horizon will appear on the lecture platform here during the winter quarter if the plans of the newly organized Council Student Expression meet with contemplated success. Five campus organizations have recently banded together to form the Council, which, in cooperation with the League for Industrial Democracy, will launch a series of lectures running from January 12 to March 2.

Men of such importance as Powers Hapgood, Ernest Gruening, Hubert C. Herring, Gordon Ward and Norman Thomas are on the list of speakers who will present various views on taxation, unemployment, utilities, and trends in industrial organization. It is planned to obtain local and state speakers to present conflicting sides of the question at each of the lectures, and a tentative list of men and women prominent in the affairs of the state has been drawn up by the Council.

Sponsored by Five Clubs

Organizations sponsoring the movement at present include the Dialectic Senate, the Philanthropic Assembly, Epsilon Phi Delta, the Y cabinets, and the campus Socialist club. Numerous other organizations have signified their willingness to join and it is expected that more

PHI DEFEATS DI IN ANNUAL DEBATE

L. H. Fountain, Phi Representative,
Wins Mary D. Wright Medal
As Best Speaker.

Debaters from the Phi assembly, C. W. Griffin of Williamston and L. H. Fountain of Tarboro, were victors in the annual Mary D. Wright debate between the Di and Phi societies, conducted in Gerrard hall last night, defeating the Di team of Bill Eddleman of Gastonia and E. R. Oettinger of Wilson.

L. H. Fountain, speaking last for the victors, was awarded the medal as the best speaker. The following query was debated, Resolved: That the nations of the world should disarm all forces not needed for police purposes. The Di spoke on the affirmative and Phi representatives on the negative.

Professors E. W. Metzenthin, E. E. Ericson, and R. B. Sharpe were judges for the contest.

COMMITTEE WILL MAKE SELECTIONS HERE THIS WEEK

Candidates to Represent North Carolina Will Be Chosen
By Rhodes Group.

The North Carolina state committee for the selection of Rhodes scholarships will meet Saturday morning, December 10, in Graham Memorial at 9:30 o'clock. At that time nominations will be made by the committee for the two candidates to represent North Carolina in the final election of the district in Atlanta, Monday, December 12.

These scholarships, which are some of the most valuable ones offered American students, are awarded on a basis of character, scholarship, leadership, and athletic participation.

Friday night, prior to the election on Saturday, the thirteen candidates representing six institutions will meet with members of the selection committee at dinner in the Duke union.

Candidates

The North Carolina candidates are: R. Mayne Albright of the University, Robert W. Barnett of the University, Charles G. Rose, Jr., of the University, Beverly R. Thurman of the University, Edward O. Guerant of Davidson, Duncan Daniel McBryde of Davidson, Leiland McKeithan of Davidson, Charles K. Bradshaw of Duke, Merrimon Cunningham of Duke, David H. Parsons, Jr., of Guilford, Samuel Smith of Guilford, Everett G. Couch, Jr., of N. C. State, and J. F. Mathews of Wake Forest.

The members of the selection committee are: Josephus Daniels, chairman, Dean W. C. Davidson of Duke University, Professor G. R. Vowles of Davidson College, President H. S. Hilley of Atlantic Christian College, and Professor C. P. Spruill, Jr., of the University.

At present, there are two North Carolina Rhodes scholars at Oxford: Grady C. Frank of Duke University, elected in 1930, and Dean Rusk of Davidson College, elected in 1931. Frank, who is specializing in mathematics, has not only made an excellent scholastic record but was elected captain of the Oxford tennis team last year.

FORENSIC SQUAD TO TRY OUT FOR DUBLIN CONTEST

Group Will Meet in Memorial Hall
Tomorrow Night to Prepare for Debate December 15.

The try-outs for the Dublin debate will take place tomorrow evening at 9:00 o'clock in 213 Memorial hall. The preliminary contest is open to all students of the University and contestants will deliver five minute addresses.

Although in the meeting with the Irish debaters, December 15, University men will uphold the negative side of the question, Resolved: That nationalism is a bar to peace and progress. Those speakers trying out Monday may take either side of the question. Three judges will select two University speakers to oppose the two representatives of the University of Dublin. The judges have not been definitely announced but it is probably that they will be members of the faculty committee on debating who are Professors W. A. Olsen, E. J. Woodhouse, and G. M. McKie.

The Dublin debate is the biggest event of the debating year at Chapel Hill, and previous years have seen a very heavy attendance at the event, which will take place this year December 15.

N. B. Adams To Speak To Philological Club

Members of the Philological club will convene for the third meeting of the year in the graduate lounge at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday. Dr. N. B. Adams, of the Romance language department, will read a paper on "Notes on Plays in Madrid in the 1830's." Dr. W. J. Wiley, also of the Romance language department, will speak on "The Sixteenth Century French of Ovid's Arts Amatoria."

The Philological club meets once a month, at which time papers on literary and linguistic topics, embracing the humanities, are read. Classics in English, the Romance and Germanic languages are discussed.

Kemp Battle Blames War of 1812 for Recklessness of Students in Period Between 1815 and 1830; Escapades Are Reminiscent of Hallowe'en Jokes.

Carolina men were apparently not all gentlemen in the first part of the nineteenth century. The complimentary term was evidently won after a term in Carolina's history which might almost be called a period of violence. Judging from sketches pertaining to the lives of students in the years following the War of 1812 until about 1830, misconduct of students was a constant, worrisome problem for the professors, who frequently suffered from the mischievous and often malignant pranks of reckless young men.

It was no uncommon occurrence for a group of students to band together on a night to make "raids" on the property of a teacher whom they particularly disfavored. Usually the gatepost of the fence around his home was stolen and destroyed. Often the pickets of the fence were broken off. There is one instance where the buggy of a professor was removed from his barn and hidden.

VAN HECKE WILL EXPLAIN REVISION OF CONSTITUTION

North Carolina Club Will Conduct Discussion on Proposed Changes
Tuesday Night.

The next meeting of the North Carolina club will take place Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock in the library room of the department of rural social economics. The feature of the program will be a discussion of the report recently submitted by the constitutional revision committee for proposed changes in the constitution of North Carolina. This discussion will be lead by Dean M. T. Van Hecke of the University law school.

Van Hecke will explain why the constitution needs revising and will discuss the merits and defects of the particular changes under consideration.

The purpose of these meetings of the North Carolina club is to discuss questions of special importance in the state and membership is open to all students and members of the faculty who are interested in the economic, social, and civic affairs of the state.

Friendship Council To Sell Christmas Seals

Christmas seals will be sold by the freshman friendship council this year in cooperation with the local Red Cross, of which Mrs. F. H. Edmister is personal director. The proceeds of the sale will be given to the state fund for use in the fight against tuberculosis.

At the regular meeting of the council tomorrow night, each of the thirty-nine members will be assigned a floor or section of a dormitory on the campus for his territory to which to sell the seals. The Y. M. C. A. is also seeking to get the cooperation of the fraternities on the Hill in subscribing to a generous portion of the Christmas stickers.

The sale has been annually carried on by the freshman group for several years, and gratifying results have usually attended their efforts.

R. B. House Wins Tar Heel Poll For University Vice-Presidency

Lectures Tomorrow

Dr. Webster N. Jones, director of the college of engineering in the Carnegie Institute of Technology, will be the principal speaker at a Chemical Engineers' Day celebration to be staged at the University tomorrow.

NOTED CHEMISTS LEAD SEMINARS HERE TOMORROW

Chemical Directors From Carnegie and Michigan Guests at Chemical Engineers' Day.

A celebration to be known as Chemical Engineers' Day, which may be made an annual event, will be staged here tomorrow by the chemical engineering students of the University.

The celebration will comprise seminar discussions and formal lectures. Venable hall will be thrown open for inspection. The public is invited to attend any or all of the meetings. Special invitations have been extended members of the North Carolina section of the American Chemical Society, the American Institute of Chemical Engineers, and the Sigma Xi society.

Day's Speakers

The principal speakers will be Professor Webster N. Jones, director of the college of engineering at Carnegie Institute of Technology, and Professor A. H. White, head of the chemical engineering department of the University of Michigan.

Professor Jones will address a seminar group in Venable hall at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning, and will deliver the principal address at a dinner meeting at 6:30 o'clock in Graham Memorial that night.

The topic for Professor Jones' morning lecture will be "What Industry Expects of Young Chemical Engineers," to be given in Venable hall, and his subject for the night address will be "The Processing of Rubber."

Professor White, who will speak at an 11:00 o'clock seminar in Venable hall, will discuss "Recent Developments in Fuel Gas."

Other seminar meetings will include lectures by Professor A. M. White of the University on "Agitation, a Little Understood Unit Operation"; and by B. L. Johnson, a graduate student of the University, who will discuss "The Structure Method of Crystal Analysis."

Interfraternity Council

There will be a meeting of the interfraternity council Monday evening at 7:00 o'clock in Graham Memorial.

Present Executive Secretary
Leads Nearest Competitor
By Twenty-Two Votes.

THIRTY MEN NOMINATED

Dr. L. R. Wilson and Dean H. G. Baity Are Second and Third in Balloting.

Receiving almost double the votes cast for his nearest opponent, Robert Burton House, executive secretary of the University won THE DAILY TAR HEEL's straw vote for vice-president of the University. The tabulation taken yesterday showed only light balloting.

The large number of men put forward and the small number of votes received would indicate that there is a wide divergence of student opinion as to who should succeed President Graham. It also indicates that there is not among the students of the University a great movement to promote any one candidate.

Sought Student Opinion

The object of the poll was to register student opinion on the choice of a vice-president of the greater University to succeed President Frank Porter Graham as head of the University in Chapel Hill.

Dr. L. R. Wilson, former University librarian, now dean of the graduate school of library science at the University of Chicago was second with 25 votes, being led by House by 22 ballots.

Dean H. G. Baity of the engineering school was third with 21 votes while 17 were cast for Professor E. E. Ericson of the English department and 15 for Dean of Students F. F. Bradshaw to make them fourth and fifth respectively.

DR. PELL RESIGNS OFFICE AT SOUTH CAROLINA SCHOOL

Graduate of University Retires
After Thirty Years of Service at Converse.

With a record of some thirty years of splendid service behind him, Dr. Robert Paine Pell, a member of the class of '81 of the University, has resigned the presidency of Converse College.

Dr. Pell, a classmate of other distinguished educators such as Aycock, Alderman, McIver, and Noble, will become president emeritus of the South Carolina institution January 1, and by act of the Board of Trustees he and Mrs. Pell are to have a home on the college campus as long as they live. The board gave lengthy exposition of his work and appreciation of his influence in announcing his resignation.

Served Thirty Years

Dr. Pell was president of Chitara College, known as Presbyterian College for Women during his regime, from 1896 to 1902; and he has served as head of Converse ever since that time. He contributed materially to the development of high standards in both institutions; and he early developed Converse from an institution of high school and commercial grade work with two years of college to a standard college ranking as one of the best female schools in the nation.

Born at Washington, N. C., Dr. Pell received his bachelor's

David Clark for Vice-President

The faculty and student alarmists on the campus are considerably wrought up over the fact that they have, in their own minds, "definite proof" that the Clark-Tatum element in the state is solidly behind the movement which originated the plan of the greater University, and which is putting Graham at its head. They claim that the office to which Graham has been elected is nothing more than a nominal one carrying no powers or responsibilities whatsoever. He is being given the office, according to these shallow-thinking soothsayers, for no other reason but to put him and his progressively liberal educational policies on the "shelf."

Where these blind individuals could have possibly conceived such a wild hallucination is beyond the power of any sane person to imagine. It is so inconceivable even to consider, that were these theories not propounded by supposedly right-minded persons, one would be immediately led to believe that the state hospital for the insane is shy some of its inmates.

To believe these alarmists in this absurd contention of theirs, one might just as well believe that David Clark will succeed Frank Graham as Vice-President of the branch of the greater University here at Chapel Hill. And in view of the fact that Clark polled four votes in the recent TAR HEEL straw ballot, it is a foregone conclusion that he will be Graham's successor here.

These alarmists certainly have a strong power of imagination. But it is indeed unfortunate that there are not more people in the nation with their ability. For with their imaginative power of making an impossibility an actuality, the United States could have long ago realized the existence of the Prosperity of which the Republicans have for so long boasted, even though actually it is still "just around the corner."

Ring In The Old

The old argument as to whether the quarter system or the semester system of course study is better is one which will probably never be settled. Most of the colleges in the country have adopted the latter system, whereby the academic work is divided into half years, with individual courses meeting three times a week. This University at one time used the semester system, which it has since forsaken for the quarter system. But this latter schedule with a year comprising three quarters (or three periods of three months each), with individual courses meeting five times a week, has come in for considerable criticism. Proposals have been made to return to the semester system, now in use by so many universities.

Although the adoption of the semester system would greatly simplify the complicated enough problem of transferring credit, the quarter system seems to have advantages which make its retention advisable. The system whereby classes meet every day has helped students to keep up in their daily work. A system of mid-year and final examinations involves the danger which students have difficulty in avoiding of letting their work slide so that it piles up at the time of the examination period. A check up three times a year prevents this and also informs the student as to his progress or delinquency often enough for something to be done about it. Another advantage comes in the case of illness which may cause a student to lose time and get so far behind that any idea of completing his courses has to be abandoned. In this case, when the student returns to work, he finds that he has lost only one-third of a year instead of an entire half year. In the last analysis, the question as to which system should be used at this University should be placed in the hands of the students and the faculty who work under the system. The opinions of these bodies is by no means easy to obtain or even to estimate. Students, however, seems to be satisfied with the schedule now in existence. It gives them more of a sense of security than they would feel under the semester system. There seems to be a desire for the satisfaction which comes from work done, passed off and completed. There seems to be a feeling that mid-years and whole-year finals would require an exhaustive review that would not be welcome.—B.B.P.

A Chicago University co-ed translated "Arma virumque cano" as "I Cry for the arms of a man." And Chicago is the second largest city in America!

The New Republic book critic must have collaborated with the TAR HEEL city editor who in a headline in yesterday's paper termed Henderson's recent book as a "new effort."

No Depression Here

"Who said there was a depression?" hopelessly question the Carolina student as he parted with the necessary two dollars and eighty-five cents required to journey to Greensboro via the Carolina Coach lines.

He might have asked indignantly, and had he done so would have been quite justified. Just why bus fares to points of interest around Chapel Hill should exceed railroad rates is indeed an interesting problem.

The overhead expenses of the Carolina Coach lines, or any bus lines, for that matter, are not ever comparable to those of their chief rival, the railroads. They have reached their present stage of development not alone through efficient management of finance and organization, but through what might be termed breaks of the game. They use state highways, built and maintained by taxes obtained from the state. They pay taxes for their maintenance only to the extent to which they use them, and seldom to even that extent.

The railroads, on the other hand, have been forced to purchase rights of way for proposed routes, lay their own rails, build their own bridges, and drill their own tunnels. Nor is that all, maintenance, depreciation, and taxes on their routes are shared by no one but the owners. Even so, until recently at least, the owners of such routes have ranked with America's richest. When we consider these facts it is little wonder that bus lines have come to rival transportation by rail.

The question, however, which remains a mystery to us is why our own local coach lines can not offer cheaper rates to certain neighboring centers which are at present more cheaply approachable by rail. Unquestionably they do offer good service without various inconveniences of the often slower method. Nevertheless, we sincerely believe that a reduction of various rates is not out of order, and besides offering a much desired and well deserved service to Carolina students it would result in a more extensive business for the company in question.—L.M.J.

A scene which might well have been entitled "The Height of Incongruity" was brought to our attention recently when one of Proff Koch's playmaker cast was seen walking down Franklin street with a Vanity Fair in one hand and an all-day sucker in the other.

Frater Patter

Is it aid or a direct route to mental laxity that the frater gives a pledge when helping him with his academic work?

The freshman entering college is presented with an outlook vastly different from that to which he has been accustomed in prep school. He is intimidated to a great degree by the ostensible difficulty of his courses and allows this intimidation to prey on his mind.

During rushing season the freshman has heard much of the help that he will receive from the fraters, some of whom are invariably described as geniuses in some field. After pledge day has come and gone, the pledge finds to his dismay, upon seeking some enlightenment as to just where a comma belongs, that the fraters are—virtually to a man—unwilling or entirely incapable of illuminating the dark ignorance surrounding him. Often the unwillingness is a cloak behind which is hidden flagrant unacquaintance with the simple principles of the elementary freshman courses.

If the condition described prevails, the pledge is indeed very fortunate, for he is taught at this early date in his college career to dig things out for himself and really learn them. Behold, however, the unfortunate first year man who upon seeking aid from an upperclassman in the writing of a theme receives not genuine instruction and constructive criticism, but a finished theme written in a style and tone entirely foreign to the limitations of a man whose high school training is such that a composition of this quality is virtually impossible.

After the generous and public spirited frater has bestowed him with a theme, two courses are open to the freshman. He can either attempt to reduce the theme to his own level by translating the four-syllable words into those of one (which leaves him with a theme quite as obviously spotted as a leopard skin) or else he may try to rewrite certain sentences into the pidgin of which he is capable (which again leaves him with a paper that is in spots as smooth as the floor that he has just finished waxing and in others as rough as the notorious western front). Of course there is always the extremely naive pledge who thinks that he can turn in verbatim a theme written by a junior and get away with it.

May we suggest that if the fraters be of so little patience as to be incapable of really instructing the freshmen, that they refrain from causing irreparable injury to the latter's minds by developing in them a feeling of dependence and preventing them from performing the celebration necessary for the proper reception of fundamental and important principles of learning.—O.S.S.

THOSE NEW BOOKS

Dog-lovers, as well as the Mothers-of-young-children, have had a delightful time oh-ing and ah-ing and chortling over several volumes for the very young displayed on the BULL'S HEAD Christmas table.

There is Angus Lost, the adventures of a sad faced but exceedingly intelligent Scottie pup. Michael Who Lost His Train, is "a friendly Sealyham terrier with big feet, brown eyes and a fine strong tail for wagging."

The Gold Fish Under the Ice is a story by Christopher Morley. Frisky, a curley, mongrel dog befriends the goldfish imprisoned by winter in the depths of the skating pond. There are several Morley digressions—the red imp in the radiator cap, and the G. S. S. G. B. club (Go to Sleep as Soon as you Go to Bed)—no member is allowed to say "Good Night" more than five times.)

Miss Beust, of the Library School will be the guest of the BULL'S HEAD Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. Children's books are a particular hobby of hers. After the talk she will be glad to offer any advice as to selections of books as gifts. Christmas is the time of year when we all have nostalgic longings for a return to childhood. We consider ourselves lucky if we have younger brothers and sisters, nieces and nephews, or small friends still in the grades on whom we can indulge our tastes. These weekly readings are open to the public, which, in Chapel Hill, is to say, faculty, students and townspeople.

Don Shoemaker, reading over our shoulder suggests that we head this week's Ye Wimsy-Wamsy Booke Colymune. We relinquish the typewriter to him for the space of a paragraph while we recover.

HARVESTERS by Phillips Russell (Brentano's), $3.50; reviewed by Don Shoemaker.

Harvesters, a series of short biographical sketches is Phillips Russell at his best. With seven figures, Frederick Caesar, Leonardo da Vinci, Copernicus, Luther, Cortes, Watt, and Jefferson, as his harvesters, Russell develops them to the extent of showing the richness of their harvest in thought and deed as effecting the destiny of the race. Russell seems to adhere to no chronological system, yet in touching the cardinal points in the career of each, he instills a certain compactness in each account. There is, of course, no sparing of the typical witticisms which accompany any of Russell's work. It would be mean praise to say that Harvesters is but entertaining reading. Indeed, it sparkles with fine writing that characteristically never betrays itself as such.

The Event of the Week, bookishly speaking, is the arrival from the Oxford Press of The Odyssey of Homer. This translation by T. E. Shaw (Lawrence of Arabia) the Press announces "Is not for scholars alone but for everybody." We are particularly fond of the passage referring to that, "great breaker through the line, Achilles."

Student Expression Group

There will be a short meeting of the Council for Student Expression this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock on the second floor of the Y. M. C. A. The purpose of the meeting is to sign a contract to sponsor a series of eight lectures to be presented on the campus during the winter quarter. All members are requested to be present.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

Not Up to Standard

The partial consummation of the objects set forth by the Consolidation Commission of the University of North Carolina system brings up the serious problem of finances—a particularly lively one here on account of the straits through which the University is being forced to sail. However, complacent students may be concerning matters other than football, food, and fraternities, it should be brought to their attention that not only the high standard of work reached here but also the very continuance of certain phases of it are being jeopardized by the cuts which it seems impossible to avoid unless drastic steps are taken. Certainly the influence of the student body as voters or members of voters' families should be brought to bear on short-sighted legislators in this connection.

A study of the most recent budget commission report will reveal interesting conditions in regard to comparative costs of operating the branches of the University at Chapel Hill, Raleigh, and Greensboro. Taking the year 1931-32 as a basis, we find that students in the different schools are not accorded the same financial assistance from the state, the cost per capita here being erroneously (I cannot help concluding this) estimated at $213, at State, $180, and at N. C. C. W., $186. I say that the legislature appropriates considerably less than $213 per student here for reasons which the following table will make plain:

|-----------------------|-------------|
| Expenditures | $1,339,234 |
| Receipts | 765,634 |
| Nominal appropriation | 573,600 |

However, the state realizes a profit on the Consolidated Service Plants:

| | |
|-----------------------------------|-----------|
| Serv. Pnts r'cpts | $674,550 |
| S. P. costs | 586,999 |
| S. P. profits | 87,551 |
| Re-appropriated to the University | 43,584 |

|--------------------------|------------|
| Profit to the state | 43,967 |
| Actual cost to the state | $ 529,633 |

From this, the proper point of departure, one reaches the conclusion that students at the University at Chapel Hill are given only about $196.50 each as compared to $180 and $166 at State and N. C. C. W. respectively. This is an extremely low rate in the light of advanced and specialized work done here. The Service Plants were established on account of the students, and profits should actually supply them with educational needs. It seems that these profits are not now going to them, but to the general funds of the state. Laundry profits here are $21,000 ($1,700 at State; $17,650 at N. C. C. W.); Book Exchange profits $30,000 (none operated at State; co-operative, or at least non-profit, at N. C. C. W.). Since the institution must have money, it is perfectly right and proper that the Service Plants (those named, as well as light, water, and telephone service) should make a profit, but if by false arithmetic this profit is appropriated on paper and is really held back, costs of service to students should be lowered. None of the profits at State and N. C. C. W. are held back from the school, and many schools operate service plants on a non-profit basis.

Please understand that this is not a controversial letter, nor does it charge anyone with improper action—by no means does it. I simply want light on this matter of real costs, and want the standards of the University maintained. I should also like a profit-sharing system established if the state is going to take profits to itself. In connection with my recent letters concerning laundry prices, let me say that I would not object to the present exorbitant prices, however, if profits actually went to the operation of the University. But what of $43,500 out of $87,500! This will never do. The other branches do not suffer similarly. C. L. Y.

Charlotte High Defeats Durham Grid Team 13-0

Queen City Eleven Wins State Class "A" High School Football Title.

GADD PLAYS BRILLIANTLY
Charlotte Star Runs, Passes, And Kicks, Playing Stellar Game Throughout.

Charlotte high school's undefeated grid team was crowned champion of the North Carolina class "A" high schools yesterday before 3,000 fans at Kenan stadium by virtue of a 13-0 victory over a fighting Durham squad.

Charlotte outweighed the Durham team but did not take advantage of that fact until the third quarter when it took control of the play and continued to outplay the Bulldogs throughout the remainder of the game. The Durham team outplayed Charlotte by a close margin in the first half but lost their power once they got within Charlotte's twenty yard marker.

First Half

Gadd and Holder started off for Charlotte by making a first down but lost the ball on the following play when Connell made a bad pass which was recovered by Germino of Durham. The game developed into a kicking duel between Gadd of Charlotte and Hackney of Durham with neither boy having an edge. However Mize, Bulldog guard, blocked one of Gadd's punts on the Charlotte twelve yard marker but Charlotte recovered. Gadd then kicked to Durham's thirty yard line where Hackney fumbled and Helms recovered for Charlotte as the quarter ended.

Charlotte took the ball on Durham's thirty. Gadd attempted a pass over the goal to Holder but Hackney came back fast and knocked it down. The kicking duel started again and was again ended by a Durham player, Cheek, who blocked one of Gadd's punts. Durham kicked again after a few running plays. Gadd tried to gain through the Durham line but Germino and Bryan featured in stopping him. Gadd attempted a pass but Ferrell came in fast to intercept the ball and return it ten yards to his own forty-eight yard line before he was downed. Durham was hitting the center of Charlotte's line for short gains as the half ended.

Second Half

From the start of the second half Charlotte's superior weight began to show as Gadd took the ball for repeated gains off tackle and around the ends. Gadd came down to the Durham ten yard line of fairly long gains, but Charlotte lost ground when Connell passed the ball back and there was no one to receive it. Gadd kicked over the goal. Durham took the ball and kicked to Charlotte's thirty-one yard line. Then on a lateral play Morris to Gadd, the Charlotte captain made fifteen yards. After two tries at the line the lateral play was again used and Gadd brought the ball to Durham's seven yard marker as the third quarter ended.

Charlotte's First Score

The same lateral play was used to start the quarter and Gadd went over for the first touchdown of the game. The kick by Morris was wide.

Charlotte kicked to Durham who began to pass. Gadd intercepted twice and advanced the ball to Durham's thirty. On the same lateral play they had been using, Gadd went to Durham's four yard marker and then Holder took it over the goal. Morris kicked the point to make the score 13-0. Durham received the kick and tried to pass again but Gadd intercepted. The game ended with the ball in Charlotte's possession in mid-

PUGILISTS WORK TO GET IN SHAPE

Prospects Are Bright for Coming Boxing Season With Many Veterans Returning.

Coach Crayton Rowe ended another week of work on his varsity boxers Friday and the men showed a marked improvement in condition and power. There is much room for improvement in this particular, and if the mittmen are to travel three fast rounds this winter, diligent training is absolutely essential.

So far, it appears Cliff Glover will handle the 115 pound class. Glover, who fought only once last year in a dual meet but turned in a good performance, has been showing up nicely in his training bouts. Pete Ivey has also done some fine work and there is a chance that he will get the spot.

Marty Levinson, now in his senior year, is certain to be the regular 125 pounder. Marty has compiled one of the finest ring records ever made at Carolina and, from all appearances in his training, he will add more glory to it this winter.

Quarles Looks Great

The 135 pound division will be graced with the presence of Carolina's platinum blonde, Norm Quarles. This boy was undefeated last year as a freshman and any opposing boxer who gets in with him will know that he has been in a fight. He is in perfect condition and at this time seems to be the cream of the boxing crop.

The 145 pound class may be represented by Nat Lumpkin, now a junior, and the 155 pound group by Lee Berke. Among fighters of the latter weight, Frank McIntosh is doing nicely and he may give Berke a stiff argument as to who will be fighting when the season starts.

Sam Gidinsky will probably be unchallenged in the 165 pound spot. He is a classy fighter and Coach Rowe will be counting heavily on him to come through this winter.

Heavies a Problem

The light-heavy and heavy divisions still present big problems. Val Edwards is training hard but because of his inexperience it would be difficult to say just how he will fare. He is a 175 pounder and with a couple of fights behind him, he will probably develop. Exactly the same thing can be said of Jim Carruth, heavyweight, who likewise lacks ringmanship.

Gentry Cavalier Mentor

Fennton Gentry is now the freshman boxing coach at the University of Virginia. Gentry was last season's captain and former light-heavyweight champion of the Southern Conference. He graduated from Virginia last June, and is now a student in the graduate school.

High Spots

Gadd was easily the mainstay of the Charlotte squad and carried the ball at least three out of four times. His kicking, passing, and defensive work was also a feature of the game.

Bryan was the outstanding linesman. He stopped the Charlotte backs on the line of scrimmage time and again. Cheek of Durham blocked two punts and played a fairly steady game otherwise. Brady and Strong were the best Charlotte linesmen.

Hackney led the Durham offense aided by Captain Spain, Andrews, and Ferrell.

CIVICHEMS WHIP MECHANOLECS IN CLOSE STRUGGLE

First Game of Annual Tournament of Slide-Rules Ends With Score Of 7 to 0.

In a hard and strenuously fought game the Civichems and the official defeated the Mechanolecs yesterday morning 7-0. Both teams had a varied collection of trick plays, and these worked to perfection.

The outstanding stars for the Mechanolecs were Zelley, Evans, and Cowhig, while Froneberger and Brown were the fair-haired boys for the opposition. Froneberger and Evans engaged in a punting duel, with the former having a little better average for the day's work.

This game was the first of a series of annual games that is to be called the "tournament of slide-rules," and both teams are already making plans for the mammoth clash next fall.

The Mechanolecs, still confident that they are better than the team of the Civil and Chemical departments, have asked for a return game, but no definite plans have been made.

TRACK SQUAD TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF FINE WEATHER

Coaches Work Squad on Fundamentals as Demonstrated by National Champions.

Coaches Fetzer and Ranson, the track mentors, are taking advantage of the fine weather at present and are calling for all varsity and freshman track candidates to report daily for light workouts on Emerson field.

The track and field aspirants are working on the fundamentals easily, studying the form and fine points of the stars via the cinema production of the National Collegiate athletic association meet in Chicago in 1930. This picture was shown last Thursday afternoon in Murphey hall.

At this gathering, Coach Bob Fetzer outlined the plans for the coming track season, calling attention to the splendid spirit that has been exhibited by the members of the track team during the past few years, building for Carolina an exceptionally fine record. He expressed hope that this year's squad, in face of an exceedingly hard schedule, would come through with the same fine attitude which would make possible continuance of the fine dual record and enable the Carolina tracksters to look to a better advantage in outdoor conference meets.

The Tar Heels won dual meets last year from Navy, Virginia, Duke, and Pennsylvania State. The Carolina tracksters also hung up the state title in the outdoor championship meet, the Southern Conference Indoor title, and then the National Mile Relay title at the Melrose Games, in their campaign last year.

BOWLING ALLEY HEADS PLAN NIGHT FOR CO-EDS

Monday evening has been set aside by the management of Graham Memorial for the reservation of the bowling alleys for the co-eds of the University. All co-eds are cordially invited to try out the alleys free of charge. If a sufficient number of them are attracted, one night each week the alleys will be reserved for their use.

Phi Mu Alpha Tonight

The Phi Mu Alpha, national honorary music fraternity, will convene for its regular monthly meeting in Graham Memorial at 9:30 o'clock this evening, by order of William L. Hunt, supreme councilman of the local chapter.

GRAPPLERS WORK HARD TO PREPARE FOR STIFF MEETS

Schedule Shows Six Matches for Varsity and Five for Frosh; No Northern Trips.

Coach P. H. Quinlan, wrestling mentor, is pressing the work on fundamentals and new holds for his varsity and yearling mat proteges hard.

Although the first match is not until January 16, the Carolina wrestling coach wants to have his old men and rookies in top form by this date. This event marks the invasion of the State stronghold by the combined Tar Heel varsity and freshmen teams.

At present the monogram men are showing the new men out for varsity and freshmen teams the rudimentary holds and tricks of the mat game. Every day a hard twenty-minute calisthenic drill starts the afternoon workouts; then the boys get down to hard tiffs on the mat.

Prospects Bright

Coach Quinlan should be optimistic over the coming season with eight letter men, Captain Idol, Auman, Hiller, Hussey, Lawson, Mathewson, Spell, and Conklin, along with some fine prospects on the yearling squad.

The complete varsity and freshman schedules which were released yesterday from the Athletic Director's office include no northern trips or meets with northern teams. It seems that the cuts in appropriations has affected the northern schools also. Duke had contemplated giving up wrestling as an intercollegiate sport, but the Blue Devils thought better of the idea and will have a team this year.

The schedule is as follows: Jan. 16—N. C. State, there, varsity and freshmen. Jan. 21—V. P. I., here, varsity and freshmen. Jan. 28—V. M. I., here, varsity and freshmen. Feb. 4—Washington and Lee, there, varsity and freshmen. Feb. 18—Duke, there, varsity; Oak Ridge, here, freshmen. Feb. 25—Davidson, here, varsity.

EIGHTY FRESHMEN TRYOUT FOR QUINT

No Scrimmaging So Far and Coach Dameron Is Unable to Name Likely Team.

As a result of the close of freshman football practice, the freshman basketball squad has increased by about twenty, bringing the total number of candidates reporting for basketball up to about eighty.

So far the yearlings have not been scrimmaging and as a result, Coach Sandy Dameron stated that he was unable to name any outstanding candidates for the first team. The Tar Babies have been divided into two groups which have been practicing on alternating nights. These two groups have been further divided into groups of forwards, centers, and guards.

As practice has been started earlier than in former years, the candidates are not being hurried and will be given time to get in the best of shape before any teams are picked. The practices so far have been made up mainly of a long warm-up drill, and pivoting, shooting, and passing drills.

Dormitory Service Men

Dormitory service men will meet in Graham Memorial tomorrow night at 7:00 o'clock at the regular monthly meeting. Reports, discussion of work, and other business will be on the program.

FOURTH FLOOR OF SPENCER DEFEATS THIRD FLOOR 18-12

Second Basketball Contest Among University Co-eds Results in Hard-Fought Game.

By steady guarding and accurate shooting, the fourth floor of Spencer hall defeated the third floor yesterday in the second contest of the woman's basketball tournament by the score of 18 to 12.

After assuming the lead early in the first quarter, the winners proceeded to pile up a margin which they never relinquished throughout the game, the score standing 12 to 6 at the half.

In the second half, the losers tightened their defense and fought on even terms with their opponents until the final whistle.

Mary Vardell and Vivian Grissett were outstanding on the offense for the winners, while Peggy Harris was a constant threat to third floor forwards. Eunice May Pope was the big gun for the losers, scoring all but two of her team's points.

The game started off in a very quiet way, but assumed football tactics in the latter periods which added much to the interest.

| Fourth Floor | Third Floor |
|-----------------|--------------|
| Grissett (8) f. | Pope (10) |
| Vardell (10) f. | Stetcher (2) |
| Perrow f. | McKinney |
| Harris g. | Orendorff |
| Barnett g. | Ross |
| Roberson g. | Bowes |

Negro Schools Sharpen Razors For Game Here

Orange Team Claims Title But Henderson Charges Fraud And Demands Playoff.

The grudge battle of the century is expected to draw hundreds of students and faculty members to Emerson field next Saturday afternoon when the Orange County Negro Training School of Chapel Hill and the Henderson Negro team lock in mortal combat on the gridiron.

It's this way: Henderson won the eastern division title, Chapel Hill won the central division, Winston-Salem won the western division title. Then Chapel Hill downed Winston-Salem and Henderson to establish a good claim to the state title. But Henderson demurred and charged that the Chapel Hill victory (8-0) was unfair because the officials stopped the time watches when Chapel Hill neared the Henderson goal, permitting the ultimate winners to score. So both aggregations are out to fight for a clear claim to the state title.

Sponsored by the senior cabinet of the Y. M. C. A., proceeds of the title match will go to the Chapel Hill Negro Health Fund, which maintains a trained Negro nurse in the village.

Many members of the Chapel Hill squad are employed in various rooming houses and fraternities, as are the irrelatives. William Stroud, a quarterback, is employed at the Chi Psi house. The mother of the left end, L. B. Alston, works at Spencer hall. The father of Clarence Merritt, is house man at the Sigma Nu fraternity house. Clarence is the Training School's flashy left halfback. John Strayhorn, stellar left end, is employed at the Phi Gamma Delta house. The father of Frank and Prince Haskins, is an old University employee.

BOXING TOURNEY ENTRANTS SHOW FORM IN PRACTICE

Men Rapidly Attaining Fighting Form for Matches to Begin Wednesday.

The end of the week finds candidates for the eighth intramural boxing crowns reaching top shape for the annual fall bouts which will begin in the Tin Can Wednesday night. Forty-three men have signed up so far and prospects for another series of hard fought bouts are good.

Only those men who have never fought in either freshman or varsity bouts will be eligible to enter the competition, and the rivalry among the new but ambitious pugilists is keen.

Lewis tops the list of team entrants with six men, followed by Zeta Psi and Best House with five each. Alpha Tau Omega has four entrants and Aycock, Everett, and Beta Theta Pi each have two men entered.

Best House Favored

Best House, the defending champion, looks like a good bet to retain its title with a team of Mowery, defending featherweight champion, Crawford, Hartgrove, Aman, and Sutton, but A. T. O., champion two years ago, has a former bantamweight champion in Alan Smith and two other promising boys in the featherweight division, along with Ryan in the 145-pound class.

Lewis, however, is favored to give Best House its stiffest fight, for the boys from the lower quadrangle are represented in every class but the 115, 125, and heavyweight division and will present leading challengers in Val Edwards, 165, and Atkins, 145.

The bantamweight and featherweight classes promise the fastest action with at least three able scrappers competing in the 115-pound division, and a champion and former champion battling against another in the featherweight.

SHOULD CHANGE NAMES

Here's an all-American team that's a cross between the printers' devil and a lexicographer's nightmare. Ed Mitchell, sports editor of the Greensboro Daily News was noticing the bases upon which several female fans have picked their all-star clubs; and so he offers this one: Petosky, Michigan, and Pilconia, Temple, at the flanks; Uzdavinis, Fordham, and Sokolis, Penn., at tackles; Steponovich, St. Mary's and Keckich, Indiana, at guards; Del Isola, Fordham, center; Kadlic, Princeton, Melinkovich, Notre Dame, Chung-Hoon, Navy, and Vuchinich, Ohio State, in the backfield.

MARIE DRESSLER HEADS PROGRAM OF WEEK'S FILMS

Boris Karloff, Constance Bennett
And Janet Gaynor Star in Local Theatre.

That inimitable laugh duo, Marie Dressler and Polly Moran, make their latest co-starring appearance Monday at the Carolina theatre in "Prosperity," a story written especially for them. Marie and Polly are seen as mothers-in-law, constantly quarreling, bickering, and interfering with the domestic life of Norman Foster and Anita Page, their respective son and daughter.

George Raft and Nancy Carroll co-star in "Undercover Man" Tuesday.

"The Mask of Fu Manchu," filmization of Sax Rohmer's famous mystery story, with Boris Karloff in the role of the sinister Asiatic, will be shown Wednesday. An imposing cast includes Lewis Stone, Karen Morley, Charles Starrett, Myrna Loy, Jean Hersholt, Lawrence Grant, and David Torrence.

Thursday, Constance Bennett appears in "Rockabye."

Charles Farrell's latest appearance, and his tenth starring role opposite Janet Gaynor, in "Tess of the Storm Country," showing Friday. "Tess" deals with the romance between a sea-captain's daughter and a millionaire's son on the Maine coast.

"Hell's Highway," RKO-Radio's picture of the chain gang, coming Saturday, deals with the brutal treatment of prisoners in American penitentiaries and convict camps. It treats of the same matters treated statistically in the last report of the American Prison Association.

RESEARCH INTO UNIVERSITY FILES EXPOSES PRANKS

H. Haywood in this manner, assured him that all his friends were sustaining the attacker as having acted properly.

Conflicts between students over girls constituted much of the misconduct of the period. In 1818 William Anthony, a student from Virginia, accused Simon Jordon, a young member of the faculty of having insulted him when they had together escorted Miss Betsy Puckett one Sunday afternoon to Mounty Carmel, about four miles from the village toward Pittsboro. Claiming to be of age, Anthony tried to resign from the University in order to fight a duel. Although he was not allowed to withdraw, he armed himself with three pistols, a dirk and a club, and attacked Jordon when he met him on the street. The instructor defended himself until assistance arrived.

At a patriotic banquet February 22, 1818, George Washington's birthday celebration, student carousing broke into an open fight. According to accounts on faculty records, weapons were drawn. Amidst furious fistuffs and knife play one student, whom the record terms "a peace-maker," was stabbed in the arm.

The recklessness of this extravagant period according to Dr. Kemp Battle in his History of the University, may be laid to the influence of the War of 1812. The war seems to have had a peculiar effect upon the young men of the era, imbuing them with a disregard of laws and a desire for free expression. Innumerable petty rules set down by the faculty were deliberately violated, often to the regret of the students, for the records of the times show an unusually large percentage of suspensions and expulsions.

SPANISH FILM SHOWS AT CAROLINA TONIGHT

The Romance language department is presenting a Spanish cinema, La Fiesta del Diablo, at the Carolina theatre tonight at 9:00 o'clock. In the east is Carmen Lairabeer, celebrated Spanish actress. The Spanish picture is adapted from an American-made production, The Devil's Holiday, in which Fredric March and Nancy Carroll starred. In the United States the Hollywood production of the novel, which ran serially in one of the leading American periodicals before its publication in book form, was a tremendous box office success. The competence of the leading lady, Carmen Lairabeer, has been largely responsible for its success in Spain.

Student Expression Council Will Bring Speakers To Campus than a dozen campus groups will be enrolled in the Council before the first lecturer arrives.

The Council, organized from an executive committee selected from several of the sponsoring organizations, has elected Vernon Ward as chairman. Don Shoemaker is publicity director for the group.

Various organizations have underwritten a portion of the financial program of the group, which calls for a guarantee and payment of several large installments prior to the first lecture. The remainder of the revenue of the Council will be realized through the sale of season tickets to the group of eight lectures. Only a limited number of these will be available.

The program proposed for the year will include:

January 12: Powers Hapgood, Columbia Conserve Co., Indianapolis, "The American Scene, 1932." Suggested speaker on the same platform is Jonathan Daniels, assistant editor of the Raleigh News and Observer.

January 19: Dr. John D. Gray, "Behind the Bank Failures, Socialization of Credit." Guernsey Hood, chairman of the banking commission of North Carolina is the tentative speaker who will present his aspect of the situation.

January 26: Harry Laidler, executive director L. I. D. and author of Concentration in American Industry, "Trends in the Labor Movement; Organization of the Unskilled; Industrial Unions vs. Craft Unions." John W. Edgerton, president of the American Association of American Manufacturers, Bernard Cone, and Henry P. Kendall may be obtained to represent the other side of the question.

Gruening Will Lecture
February 2: Ernest Gruening, editor of the Portland Evening News (the man who "ran Insull out of Maine"), "What Price Power?" W. S. Lee, president of the Duke Power company, suggested speaker.

February 9: Gordon Ward, extension specialist in Agricultural Economics at V. P. I., "Men and Land." Ralph Page, Aberdeen banker and Clarence Poe, Raleigh editor of the Progressive Farmer, suggested speakers.

February 16: Winifred Chapel, secretary, Methodist Federation for Social Service, "Breaking the Breadlines." Mrs. W. T. Bost, Raleigh, suggested speaker.

February 23: Hubert C. Her-ring, executive director of the commission on cultural relations with Latin America, "America in the Independent World."

March 2: Norman Thomas, candidate for president 1928, 1932 on the Socialist ticket and executive director of the L. I. D., "The Program for Action—America Plans."

Engineers Pick Cain For Associate Editor

At the meeting of the American Society of Civil Engineers Thursday night, John Cain was elected as the associate editor of the Carolina Engineer from the civil department.

This magazine, a revival of a 1927 publication, was revived by the vote of the four engineering departments some time ago at a joint meeting. The staff is composed of an editor in chief, four associate editors from the four departments, and a business manager; at the joint meeting George Gorham was elected as editor in chief, and Noah Zellely was selected by the group as the business manager.

The election of Cain leaves three associate editors to be elected at the next individual meetings of the Electrical, Mechanical, and Chemical departments.

Honorary degrees have been conferred upon him by Austin College and the Universities of North and South Carolina. He is an honorary member of the Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic fraternity, at both of the latter two institutions.

NELSON ROBBINS JOINS RANKS OF BENEDICTS

Mr. and Mrs. A. O. White of Randleman announced yesterday the marriage of their daughter, Ruth, to Nelson Robbins, a student at the University.

The wedding, which took place last November 26, at Asheboro, was performed by Reverend R. S. Truesdale, Methodist minister in that city.

Robbins is a member of THE DAILY TAR HEEL staff, writing a weekly column, "The Ink Well," and working on the city desk. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Robbins of Randleman, and he is a member of the senior class, expecting to remain in Chapel Hill until June when he will receive his degree. The bride is a graduate of Randleman high school, and is widely known for her talent as a pianist.

FORMER CHILEAN PRESIDENT WILL LECTURE TONIGHT

Dr. Charles D. Davila Will Speak Here Before Audience From Duke and University.

Arriving in Chapel Hill this morning, Dr. Charles G. Davila, ex-president of Chile and visiting Carnegie professor, will lecture before invited members of the combined faculties and student bodies of Duke and the University in Gerrard hall tonight at 8:00 o'clock. Dr. Davila is here in Chapel Hill for about a week and during that time will hold a seminar on the subject of inter-American affairs.

The purpose of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, which is sponsoring Dr. Davila's trip here, is to strengthen the bonds of understanding between different countries by the establishment of professorships which will provide funds for the visits and lectures of eminent men to various universities and colleges.

Served as Ambassador During President Ibanez' term of office Dr. Davila was ambassador of Chile to the United States until the revolution of 1931. Realizing the grave condition his country was in as a result of the depression, Dr. Davila effected a coup d'etat and was made president of the country last June. Remaining in office three months Dr. Davila returned to the United States where he has taken up residence.

Dr. Davila among other honors has received degrees from the University of Southern California and Columbia. The ex-president and one-time ambassador is an outstanding advocate of economic co-operation between Chile and the United States.

GRANVILLE WILL GIVE RECITATIONS TOMORROW NIGHT

Famous English Actor Will Appear on Program of Student Entertainment Series.

Coming from a successful tournament the world famous English actor, V. L. Granville, will give one of his dramatic presentations here tomorrow night in Memorial hall under the auspices of the Student Entertainment Committee.

Granville will bring with him his own stage manager. Characters of wide variety follow each other in rapid succession during the hour and a half that Granville will be on the platform. Scenes from the great dramatic writings of all time are enacted, each with a complete change of costume.

Rumor False

At a late hour last night the Daily Tar Heel was unable to substantiate any rumor to the effect that a Carolina student had died of throat infection in a Durham hospital. Checking with Durham newspapers and the McPherson hospital, it was revealed that A. B. Boynton, removed there last week for observation, was "improving," according to hospital attaches.

EXTENSION HEAD TELLS FUNCTIONS OF DEPARTMENT

R. M. Grumman Speaks of Activities of Extension Division in Chapel Program.

Russell M. Grumman, director of the extension division of the University, spoke on the work of the extension bureaus in chapel yesterday morning, emphasizing the correspondence courses open to students who may be unable to remain at the University next quarter.

The purpose of the extension division, as stated by Grumman, is to extend the work of the various schools of the University throughout the state and to place the courses in higher education in reach of those who are unable to enter or continue college.

Large Number Enrolled More than 1,000 students are enrolled in the correspondence classes this year, according to Grumman, some of them residing in other states and in a few foreign countries. Another feature of the division mentioned is the extension library service, which sends reading courses and study outlines to correspondence students.

In addition to these services, staff members of the division are always available for lecture courses anywhere in the state.

Among the activities which will be sponsored by the extension division this year are the tenth annual dramatic festival, to be held next spring; the twenty-first annual state high school debating contest, to be held here next spring; and several athletic activities.

Philological Club To Meet This Evening

The Philological club will conduct its regular monthly meeting tonight at 7:30 o'clock in the lounge of the Graduate club. Dr. N. B. Adams, of the Romance language department, will read a paper on "Notes on Plays in Madrid in the 1830's." Dr. W. J. Wiley, also of the Romance language department, will speak on "The Sixteenth Century French of Ovid's Arts Amatoria."

The object of the club is to stimulate original investigation in language and literature and to afford an opportunity for the interchange of views on subjects relating to such work. At each meeting papers are read and discussed.

NELSON FUNERAL RITES CONDUCTED

Haywood Weeks and Frank Rogers Attended as Official Representatives of the University.

The funeral services for Joseph H. Nelson, Jr., freshman in the liberal arts school, who died suddenly last Friday morning in the school infirmary after having been sick for three days with an infected throat, were conducted in the Centenary Methodist church in New Bern Sunday afternoon.

Frank Rogers, president of the freshman class, and Haywood Weeks, president of the student body attended as official representatives of the University. William McG. Parker, sophomore, and Al Newberry, freshman, who live in New Bern, were among those who acted as pallbearers. Glen Best, a close friend of the Nelson family, also attended the funeral.

Flowers were sent by the student body and freshman class.

WOOSLEY ELECTED VICE-PRESIDENT OF ECONOMICS GROUP

Southeastern Economics Association Announces Election of Dr. Woosley to Important Post.

Dr. John B. Woosley of the department of economics and commerce has been notified of his election as vice-president of the Southeastern Economics Association for the year 1932-33. Dr. Woosley will be in charge of the program for the session of the association which will meet next fall in Atlanta.

Other officers of the association are: president, Dean J. B. Trant of Louisiana State University; secretary, Professor M. G. Evans of Emory University; treasurer, Dean R. B. Brooks of the University of Georgia; editor of publications, Professor M. H. Bryan of the University of Georgia; vice-president in charge of membership, Professor E. G. Hawk of Birmingham Southern College; vice-president in charge of research, Professor J. W. Martin of the University of Kentucky, and vice-president on the executive committee, Dean T. R. Snavely of the University of Virginia.

Experimental Productions Prove Invaluable To Student Writers

Actual Staging of Plays Shows Young Playwrights' Defects in Their Work Which Goes Unnoticed in Script; Performing in Experimental Play Thought to Be an Adventure.

The curtain is rung down. There is a flurry and bustle in preparation for the next play. Participants are wildly confused. Many of the amateur actors are taking parts in several plays and have difficulty remembering which part they are to play next. A chair is tipped over with an alarmingly loud crash. Someone swears loudly. A nervous girl screams. The sets for various plays blend into a grand mixture of wood and paint. Directors run about, frantically seeking to quiet the crowd behind the scenes.

This is but a mild, hasty, kaleidoscopic view of the trying conditions under which experimental plays are produced by the Carolina Playmakers. The extremes of confusion which are reached when novice actors and directors offer their wares are describable in terms of the infernal.

Despite the discomfort and disorder associated with this

DRAMA FESTIVAL PLANS ANNOUNCED

Carolina Dramatic Festival Will Conduct Its Twentieth Annual Contest This Spring.

Schools and communities in North Carolina desiring to enter original plays in the statewide dramatic contest here next March should submit them before December 20, it has been announced by Mrs. Irene Fussler, secretary of the Carolina Dramatic Association.

Registration for production contests in the tournament should be in the office of the Carolina Dramatic Association by next January 16.

Churches which are interested in entering religious plays should send a notification of the play they wish to present as soon as possible. Rules and regulations concerning the drama festival will be sent upon request. Only one-act plays which last no more than forty minutes are acceptable.

NEW COURSES TO BE TAUGHT HERE SECOND QUARTER

Public Administration Course Under Dean Jackson Will Be Given This Winter.

A quartet of new courses will make their debut in the University curriculum for the winter quarter.

Public administration 101 will appear for the first time under Dean Jackson. This course is open to advanced undergraduates and graduates. Prerequisites are five courses in history, government, sociology, economics, or a bachelor's degree. It will meet five hours weekly.

Government 17, to be taught by Professor Robson, is the latest offspring of the already top heavy history department curriculum. This course is open to any freshman or sophomore. It will meet five times weekly.

French 55, formerly a course meeting three times weekly, has switched to a full five hour a week course.

Philosophy 62, which is slated to be an intensified study of Plato and Aristotle, will be taught for the first time by M. H. Williams.

COATES DIRECTS INSTALLATION OF STATE OFFICIALS

Men Are Conducted Into Office in Program Supervised by Government Institute.

The first of a series of formal public installations of local officials ever conducted in North Carolina took place throughout the state yesterday. These eventful programs were under the auspices of the Institute of Government, with Albert Coates, professor of law at the University, as the guiding hand.

Raleigh was the scene of the principal ceremony. Participating in the Raleigh program were Chief Justice W. P. Stacy of the North Carolina Supreme Court; Governor-elect J. C. B. Ehringhaus; Republican gubernatorial nominee Clifford Frazier of Greensboro; Kemp D. Battle of Rocky Mount, president of the North Carolina Bar association; Judge Junius G. Adams of Asheville, chairman of the organization committee; and Professor Albert Coates, director of the Institute of Government.

The Raleigh program, which got under way in the Wake county courthouse at 7:45 o'clock, was broadcasted by radio station WPTF to an audience estimated at more than 200,000.

Virtually all the state's 100 counties, Professor Coates has been informed, have arranged formal installation ceremonies for new officials. Some were yesterday morning, while others took place in the afternoon and evening. Justices of the Supreme Court and judges of Superior Courts, wherever they were available, will participate in administering the oaths.

Electrical Engineers Back From Convention

Fisher Black and John Hunter of the electrical department have returned from the American Institute of Electrical Engineers convention that was held in Knoxville last week. A number of papers pertaining to the problems of the A. I. E. E. was presented and discussed by the delegates.

Saturday morning was devoted to an inspection of several hydro-electric plants in and near Knoxville to enable the delegates to study the power plants in them.

The delegates attended a banquet and dance Friday night at the Hotel Farragut.

COMMITTEE WILL SUGGEST MAN TO SUCCEED GRAHAM

Committee of Board of Trustees Will Meet Monday to Recommend Vice-President.

The executive committee of the University Board of Trustees will meet in the office of President Frank Graham next Monday, to recommend a successor to President Graham to act in the capacity of vice-president of the Greater University of North Carolina in charge of the Chapel Hill branch. Faculty members and the president will be consulted.

A comptroller for the Greater University will also be recommended. The committee will present the names of the recommended candidates to the board in early January for approval and choice.

Three Vice-Presidents

Under the scheme of consolidation, there will be three vice-presidents in the Greater University, each of whom heads one division. Dr. E. C. Brooks was appointed head of State College, and Dr. Julius I. Foust was chosen vice-president in charge of Woman's College in Greensboro. President Graham's elevation to the presidency of the Greater University left the vacancy here.

A number of persons have been proposed for the post, but no great moves to promote candidates have been apparent. In the poll of THE DAILY TAR HEEL which ended Saturday, R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, was the choice of the campus for Graham's successor. However, several faculty members and several men who have left the University within the past three years have been suggested.

VACATION PERIOD TO BE EXTENDED ADDITIONAL DAY

Christmas Holidays Will End January 3, According to Announcement by Graham.

Christmas holidays of this year have been extended one day so that the vacation period will end January 3, President Frank P. Graham announced yesterday. Registration for juniors and seniors will commence December 12 and continue through December 17, while freshmen, sophomores, and new students will register January 3.

Original Schedule

The vacation was originally scheduled to end January 2 with the registration of new students and class work for the winter quarter. Following the change classwork will begin January 3. All registrations in the December 12-17 period will be made through the office of the dean of the school or college in which the student is entered.

All students are requested to take special notice of a more complete schedule for registration which will appear in an early issue of the DAILY TAR HEEL. This schedule runs in conflict with the slate published in the catalogue.

Phi Assembly to Meet

The Phi Assembly will elect its officers for the next quarter at 7:00 o'clock. No resolutions will be discussed.

Misplaced

"Rugged Individualism"

"North Carolina ranks second among the states in farm population, third in number of farms, and well up in the total production of farm products." This excerpt from a recent issue of the University News Letter shows just to what extent North Carolina is an agricultural community and just what percentage of our population is dependent upon the soil for a living.

"But," continues the article, "she ranks twenty-eighth in number of co-operative marketing and purchasing associations, thirty-first in number of members, and thirty-eighth in estimated business done." And North Carolina prides herself on her progressivism!

The farmer receives little return for his produce at present. During the past year especially have prices been exceedingly low. Stories are still current about how the prices of cotton and tobacco scarcely paid for the fertilizer required to raise them. Yet the North Carolina farmer will not organize and make a concerted attempt to restrict production and thereby bring prices up to par; nor will he enter into group buying associations to lessen the burden of his expenditures. Instead, he clears more land, plants more seed, and hopes that by raising more products he can increase his income and offset low prices. And when prices steadily go downward, he calls on the legislature for help.

No such aid can be depended upon to remedy the situation. If the farmers of this state would make their businesses more profitable, they must follow the example of other agricultural states and organize into co-ops. Some steps have been taken in this direction, notably the meeting of the North Carolina division of the Southeastern Council in Charlotte some weeks ago, and the work of this organization, though its policies may be somewhat comprehensive and diffuse, should at least point out the economic problems that North Carolina farmers are facing. From that point on, it is up to them to organize and help themselves to boost prices.—A. T.D.

A senior at Georgia Tech took the same course twice in the same room. He passed the course both times under the same professor and never discovered the error. Evidently the professor didn't either.

Only fifteen Nebraska students have filed applications for loans in spite of the fact that the University has money to give away. Well, they might contribute it to Congress to help balance the budget.

Christmas Beer

On a test vote forced by Speaker Garner in the House of Representatives yesterday, a resolution to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment was defeated by six votes short of the necessary two-thirds majority. Speaker Garner declared, previous to the opening of Congress, that yesterday's poll would be the only one taken during this session.

However, the vote is significant as an indication of a positive trend towards repeal. It is evident, considering the absence of twenty-one members of the House, that the resolution was possibly defeated by absentees who could not reconcile personal dryness with party wetness.

At the conclusion of the House session yesterday, Democratic floor leader Rainey announced that no other vote would be taken on repeal at this session, and that a future special session might be necessary. Congress will turn its attention to the more vital issues of the budget, farm relief, and foreign debts. In planning its revenue program, the Ways and Means committee of the House will, during the next week, hear discussion of a bill to modify the Volstead act.

To pass a measure legalizing beer within the limits of the provisions of the Constitution will require only a majority vote. Evidence of the majority necessary to pass a beer bill was shown by the almost overwhelming vote given to the repeal resolution.

Pending only the final report of the Ways and Means committee, it is a foregone conclusion that the United States will get beer for a Christmas present.

As for repeal, Speaker Garner and Representative Rainey seem certain of the course that they are pursuing. They have been criticized for their precedent-breaking effort to push through repeal on the first day of the session. Actually, they know that the wet-dry dispute has come to a head, that there is little need for delay on a question whose every ramification has been exhaustively inquired into since 1928. They know further that every Congressman, except those who cannot decide between conscience and the ballot box, has definitely made up his mind for or against repeal.

Yesterday's vote was not exactly an effort to force the resolution down the throat of a balky, shifty Congress. It was rather intended to find out on the first day what the sentiment was, in order that this highly controversial question might be disposed of, that it might not interfere with the important program that Congress has ahead of it.

Having discovered that the lame duck gang is not ready for repeal, Leader Rainey will await the arrival of the all-new 73rd Congress, with its recent mandate from the people who cast their ballots for the Democratic repeal platform.

As for the present Congress, it will now go ahead with its scheduled program, including the beer bill. And sometime in the spring the new Congress will pass a repeal resolution: Beer for Christmas. Liquor for April Fool's Day.—E.C.D.

Truth at the Danger Line

A phase of education little touched upon yet of vital importance is the relation of teaching to the social structure. The teaching of the fundamentals presents no grounds for controversy in a literate nation, for it is upon reaching the higher branches of learning that we are faced with the gigantic task of reconciling the ideals of education with the demands of orderly government. This is most acute in the study of sociology, economics, current events, government, and history.

The aim of education is presumably the seeking and the imparting of Truth. On the face of it this seems a fine and noble aim that should arouse no objections. But upon deeper consideration the full crushing weight of the problem becomes evident. Let us suppose that every college and every high school in the country were suddenly to commence to teach history as the men and women who have devoted their lives to its study know it to be. Let us suppose that all the text books were suddenly to appear with the truths of our recent and present political and social history.

The misgovernment of our large cities, the conditions of their magistrates' courts, the details of the Tea Pot Dome, and the operation of the Spoils system would be a dangerous dish to set before our millions of youths. If the full corruption and graft common to the political systems were to become their knowledge the results would be highly alarming. And if the futility, the greed, the stupidity, and the horror of war as it really is known to them, where would we turn for our highly necessary cannon fodder? There would be nothing gained by inflaming the imagination of youth against a structure upon which we depend for safety and security, yet the demands of truth insist that they should know all.

There is a constant complaint that there is not enough reality taught under our present system. What is meant by reality is somewhat uncertain, but if it means truth—beware. The teaching of realities can have but two results. One a hate and a rebellion against the status quo or worse than that the hopeless despair arising from the realization that loyalty to ideals do not pay in this life.

And so our thousands of educators follow their profession seeking always the happy mean between the imbecile policies of Fascist or Soviet education and the teaching of the dangerous Truth in its entirety. Theirs is the most difficult of problems and the most painful of compromises, the compromise of truth with the demands of policy.—J.F.A.

The Syracuse University football squad used thirty-two miles of adhesive tape this past season. Which, statistically speaking, might well represent the amount of paved roads in Georgia.

In Far-Scattered Places

It has been said—and perhaps rightly—that religion is the furthest thing from the mind of the average college student. One might go further and say that this generalization can be applied almost equally to other young persons of college age. Churches are not drawing young people—this is certain.

Why this condition should prevail constitutes a problem of great interest. It is a problem to which church members should devote by far the bulk of their thought. Church suppers, missionary work, pastor's aid groups, choir practice, and other phases of so-called religious life are all very well, but they are stressed to a degree which does not correspond to their true worth. The Sunday school, which primarily concentrates upon the religious training of the child is invaluable in its particular objective, but too little consideration is given to the later years.

As the adolescent continues to acquire new and highly attractive interests in the ever-expanding world, the appeal of the church school becomes less and less forceful. His family ties grow progressively weaker; school associations, the first job, the opposite sex begin to fill ever larger patterns upon the field of his social consciousness. Religious experience becomes dull and lacking in zest. Ritual and ceremony shed their former attractiveness like trees their leaves in autumn. A tendency to drift "away from the fold" becomes evident. To a certain extent the young people's groups such as the Christian Endeavor, Epworth League, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., and Y. M. H. A. counteract this tendency, but the primary appeal is made to love of sport and social contacts. There is little deep-seated religious spirit manifest in these groups.

Meanwhile the older generations sit back in woeful contemplation of the Devil's apparently victorious campaign, little understanding the vitally changed conditions of life under which the country's youth finds itself. Formerly the church was perhaps the most interesting place one could go because of the lack of other more attractive social settings. Now with the advent of the automobile, the radio, and the motion picture, the church must become subordinate.

Naturally enough, this apparently irreligious trend among young people sets up repercussions of a rather serious nature in the home. A Fundamentalist-Modernist antagonism now is found in almost every family circle.

How are the churches coping with this turn of affairs? The answer is, they aren't coping with it. In some isolated instances there are ministers who are modern in their viewpoint and lacking in dogmatism. Here and there more stress is being laid upon applied religion and less upon ritual and cant. Occasionally one will come upon a group of young people led by an inspiring individual; that group is probing motives, reconstructing spiritual values, and approaching the true goal of the great teachers. Here, in these far-scattered places, the hope of organized religion lies.—V.J.L.

OUR TIMES

Resolutions

We have here on our desk a list of resolutions which the North Carolina Collegiate Press association proudly writes it "passed at the fall convention" in Wake Forest recently. The N. C. C. P. A., the very essence of all that is radical and reactionary in this conservative state, outlines its resolutions: "(1) That the 1932 Fall Convention of the N. C. C. P. A. goes on record as extending its thanks to the Wake Forest administration and students, to the Castle Theatre, and to the companies furnishing transportation. (2) That the N. C. C. P. A. favors a salary for editors and business managers of college publications... feeling that they sacrifice more time and have more definite duties to perform than any other officials of a student body and that such recompense would materially improve the quality of publications through an increased incentive to work for the position and the greater responsibility to the student bodies. (3) That the N. C. C. P. A. (catchy, isn't it?) lends its wholehearted support to a campaign by college editors to obtain information in the college papers... That with the new ideas and enthusiasm gained at this meeting of the — (you know what) the members of the association will look toward larger and better publications to submit at the spring convention..."

These resolutions, we feel, indicate a sharp turn to the left. The N. C. C. etc. treads on dangerous ground in this radical commitment. It transcends all the bounds of decency and conservatism which the students of this state represent. Atheism and Bolshevism pervade its ranks. Pul-l-e-ze, Mr. Atumtay.

Scram

One Mr. Daniel Willard of the Baltimore & Ohio, whose tacit attitude toward White House reporters is most disturbing in Washington press circles, is our candidate for any medals or prizes lying around that have not yet been distributed.

On being interviewed after leaving a Hoover conference the other day, Mr. Willard, perennially tight-mouthed, surprised reporters by responding to their inquiry "what was the purpose of your visit to the White House?"

And the Willard response: "I have found in my travels around the country that there is a nation-wide confusion as to when Indian Summer begins and when it ends. I believe such confusion should be ended and I came to solicit the President's help in getting through a Congress a bill defining Indian Summer and establishing by law the date on which it begins and ends."

This, we warrant, is the answer to the cross-word puzzle fanatic's dream. A perfect two hundred and seventy-three letter passage for "scram."

With Contemporaries

Strictly Masculine—

With an attitude strangely mid-Victorian, Johns Hopkins university has ruled that no woman will be allowed to take part in any major campus activity in the future. The undergraduate council passed the motion as a result of objections from students, alumni and activity heads after a woman student had been chosen editor-in-chief of the campus magazine.

Although the newly chosen editor was allowed to retain her position, the masculine contingency of the school saw to it that their privileges would be protected hereafter. The theory seems to be that Johns Hopkins is a man's school—with some women attending—and it is to be kept a man's school.

This policy seems unfair in the sense that all duly enrolled students are members of the student body entitled to compete for any honors there may be. More than one school that is theoretically co-educational has this policy more or less in the

THE UNITED STATES IS LOCATED IN THE TEMPERANCE ZONE

POOR BILL BONER—he just can't think straight. He thinks a person is safe from contagious disease if he is intoxicated!

But no college man ever pulls boners with a good pipe between his teeth. There's something about a pipe and tobacco that soothes a man, helps him think straight. That is, of course, if he uses the right tobacco. A recent investigation showed Edgeworth to be the favorite tobacco at 42 out of 54 leading colleges.

If you're not already an Edgeworth smoker, there's new smoking satisfaction waiting for you. Edgeworth's blend of fine old burleys is distinctive, different. You'll know—after the first puff.

You can buy Edgeworth tobacco anywhere in two forms—Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed and Edgeworth Plug Slice. All sizes—15¢ pocket package to pound humidifier tin. Or, if you would like to try before you buy, write for a free sample packet. Address Larus & Bro. Company, 120 S. 22d St., Richmond, Va.

ORATORIO SOCIETY WILL SYMBOLIZE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

"When the Christ Child Came"
Will Be Chief Choral Presentation by Group.

The executive committee of the Chapel Hill Oratorio Society, consisting of Mrs. R. H. Wettach, president, Professor George McKie, O. A. Richardson, and Mrs. H. R. Totten, has completed the final arrangements for the performance of the society in the Hill Music auditorium, Wednesday night, December 14.

"When the Christ Child Came," by Joseph Clokey, a modern American composer, will be the chief choral work presented on this program. To symbolize the spirit of Christmas, the organization, under the directorship of Harold S. Dyer, will sing a number of European Christmas carols. The audience, with the chorus, will conclude the program by joining in singing several of the old traditional Christmas carols.

The soloists will be Dr. Robert T. Clark, of the Duke University faculty, tenor; Dr. G. A. Harter, bass; Mrs. G. A. Harter and Mrs. R. H. Wettach, contraltos; and Mrs. L. C. McKinney, soprano. Mrs. A. S. Wheeler is the accompanist for the society and will be at the piano. Professor Nelson O. Kennedy will play the organ.

The poem which Clokey has set for choral performance is from the pen of Laura Spencer Porter. It is narrative in character and has the distinction of being the most atmospheric of all poems dealing with the story of the Nativity. The music of Clokey, in the vein of all his recent compositions, is produced with voices and instruments united. The Oratorio society has been working on this composition since early October.

Red Cross Aiding Many Needy Families Here

The local chapter of the American Red Cross is helping 510 needy families in the county and has obtained employment for 175 men, according to an announcement by Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt. It has been able to give help in every case reported so far.

The Kings Daughters are in charge of those cases within the limits of Chapel Hill and Carrboro and the welfare board is taking care of the ones in the county. This board is composed of Colonel Pratt, George Lawrence, and Miss Robinson of Chapel Hill and Miss Bevins of Hillsboro.

Nora Beust to Give Reading

Nora Beust of the school of library science will talk this afternoon at the weekly meeting of the Bull's Head, in the Y. M. C. A., at 4:30 o'clock. Miss Beust's subject will be "Recent Trends in Children's Literature." Miss Mary Dimberger, director of the Bull's Head, will lead the program.

Remove C.C.'s Thursday

The regular fall quarter examinations for the removal of composition conditions will be given at 4:00 o'clock Thursday, December 8, in Saunders 111. Students are reminded that no prepared theme is required in advance of the examination.

World News Bulletins

House Rejects Repeal

By a margin so narrow that a change of six votes would have shifted the result, the House of Representatives yesterday defeated the Garner prohibition repeal resolution. The vote was 271 in its favor to 144 against. A two-thirds vote was needed to approve the resolution, since it was for amendment of the constitution.

CHAPEL HILL PREPARING CHRISTMAS DECORATIONS

Within a few days it is promised that Chapel Hill will burst into full array and the signs of Christmas will be seen about.

Cedar from the surrounding community, brilliant colored lights, and unusual designs will make up one of the most attractive displays of Christmas decorations in the state.

Complete plans have not yet been made, but will be in the next few days.

Last year local Christmas decorations received most favorable comment, not only from citizens of the town, but also from state and out-of-state visitors.

It is certain that the work of beautifying downtown by the University Service Plants will be finished by December 8.

Bazaar Planned Today

A Christmas bazaar is to be conducted here this afternoon at 3:00 o'clock by the Presbyterian church. All the articles sold will be made by the members of the auxiliary of the church. Christmas seals will also be sold by a member of the local chapter of the Red Cross. Mothers are invited to bring their children. There will be a story hour conducted at various times during the afternoon for the children's entertainment.

New Alumni Club Formed

A new alumni club of the University of North Carolina was organized last month in Clumbia, S. C.

Officers elected were: Dr. James T. Penney, zoology professor of South Carolina, president; Paul M. Patterson, M. A., vice-president; Frank B. Grier, Jr., secretary-treasurer.

ORIGINAL DRAMAS TO BE PRESENTED

Five Original, One-Act Plays to Be Given in Playmakers Theatre Next Week.

Five original one-act plays will be experimentally produced Wednesday, December 14, in the Playmakers theatre, before an invited audience.

Marguerite McGinnis will direct her play, Coal, a tragedy of the West Virginia coal fields. In the cast of the play are: Muriel Wolff, Ed Martin, and Jane Knight.

Mrs. Sara Huntley and Henry Page constitutes the cast of Their Elders Pay, a play of youth of 1932.

Honora Wade, a tragedy by Eugenia Rawls will be directed by Marion Tatum. The cast includes: Foster Fitz-Simmons, Loretta Bailey, Eugenia Rawls, and Jane Knight.

Miriam's Mother, a play about church people, was written and will be directed by Betty Bolton. Appearing in the drama are: Mrs. Sara Huntley, Elmer Oettinger, Rene Prud'hommeaux, Betty Bolton, and Muriel Wolff.

Jo Orendorf and Elmer Oettinger comprise the cast of Back Door, a folk comedy by Wilbur Dorsett.

(Continued from page two) background governing its actions. Michigan has for years borne the reputation of a school discriminating against its women students, and only recently has extended them many of the privileges women in other educational schools enjoy.

Unfortunately, it is common enough to find race discrimination in our colleges and universities, but it is unusual to find a modern school adopting this ante-bellum attitude of "women-can't-do-that." The mildest thing that can be said of the Johns Hopkins move is that it is old-fashioned and incidentally more than a little ridiculous—Indiana Daily Student.

KOCH TO READ DICKENS' WORK AGAIN THIS YEAR

The annual reading of Charles Dickens' immortal ghost story, A Christmas Carol, will be given by Professor F. H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers next Sunday night, December 11, at 8:30 o'clock in Memorial hall. Special stage settings and lighting effects will be prepared by Sam Selden for the occasion, and Christmas carols will be sung between the staves.

Professor Koch will give this same reading at the Burlington Little Theatre in Burlington, at Tarboro, and at Norfolk, Virginia this month.

Di Senate to Elect Officers

Election of officers for the winter quarter will be in order at the weekly meeting of the Di Senate in New West tonight at 7:00 o'clock. The program will also include the initiation of new men.

The officers for the fall quarter have been Charles Rose, president; George Steele, sergeant-at-arms; Mason Gibbs, clerk; Bill McKee, critic; Ben Gentry, treasurer; and Howard Lyon, president pro-tem.

Nygard Appointed Assistant

J. Wallace Nygard has been appointed assistant psychologist of the bureau of mental health and hygiene of the North Carolina state board of charities and public welfare with headquarters here in Chapel Hill. Nygard comes here from the Wayne County training school in Michigan, where he was employed in the research department.

SALON ENSEMBLE TO GIVE CONCERT

Orchestra Under Direction of Thor Johnson Will Play in Kinston Thursday.

The Carolina salon ensemble, composed of fifteen students of the University, will present their first out-of-town concert at the high school auditorium in Kinston, Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock.

The program will consist of eight numbers, including solos by David Bennett on the flute, Dan Fields, violin cello, and Paul Schallert, French horn, with John Murphy as accompanist. Thor Johnson will conduct the ensemble.

This organization makes various trips outside of Chapel Hill each quarter for concert purposes. The Kinston program is the first this year, but tentative plans have been made to appear in Greensboro, Durham, Winston-Salem, and other cities in the state during the winter and spring quarters.

ALUMNAE GROUP PASSES RESOLUTION ON MERGER

The passing of a resolution expressive of opposition to certain phases of the consolidation of the three chief state educational institutions, and an address by Dr. Julius I. Foust were the features of the conference of officials of the Alumnae association of the Woman's College of the University which convened in Greensboro Saturday.

The resolution passed by the alumnae, with only a few dissenting votes indicated that they wanted the name president kept as the title for the heads of the three institutions. It stated further that they wanted these three heads and the chief executive to be responsible for the guiding of policies of the institutions and that they desired a joint committee from the three schools to engage in an informal discussion of the consolidation.

Dr. Foust reviewed the history of consolidation in Mississippi, Kansas, Oregon, Georgia, Montana and Florida and showed that the plan had not been a success in every instance. He pointed out that North Carolina could probably gain by this program of consolidation if the state did not go too fast with it.

NORTH CAROLINA CLUB WILL MEET TOMORROW

The North Carolina club will meet tomorrow night in the library room of the department of rural social economics at 7:00 o'clock instead of 7:30 o'clock as was originally scheduled.

The program will be featured by a discussion on the recently submitted report by the constitutional revision committee for proposed changes in the Constitution of North Carolina. Dean M. T. Van Hecke of the law school will lead the discussion in explaining why the constitution needs changing, and in discussing the merits and defects of the changes considered.

Orchid in Full Bloom

The Cattaleia orchid that the botany department has been growing for the past five years is now in bloom at Davie hall.

GRANVILLE WILL GIVE RECITATIONS TOMORROW NIGHT

Commodore hotel for the Century Theatre Club and at the Brooklyn Academy of Music were great successes from every point of view. He has given seven recitals for the University of Pennsylvania, and at each one, hundreds have been turned away for lack of room.

Of his performance at the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, the Philadelphia Forum says: "It was by far the most remarkable performance of its kind that we have ever seen; to be able to create the illusion of so many and so different characters not only requires talent but genius."

Student Canvass To Be Made By Y.M.C.A.

An "every student canvass" will be conducted by the three Y. M. C. A. cabinets in the dormitories Thursday night, according to an announcement made yesterday by Bill McKee, president of the senior cabinet. Fraternities will discuss the matter of contribution of their meetings this week.

The proceeds of the canvass will be given to the Orange county relief fund, of which George Lawrence is supervisor. Since students are not contributing in their home towns, it is felt that a heavy contribution will be made on the campus. Further plans will be announced later.

Besides outright contributions, officials are counting on receiving for the fund refunds on laundry deposits from those students fortunate enough to have them.

UNIVERSITY PROFESSORS HEAD STUDENTS' TRIPS

Professors W. B. Sanders and L. M. Brooks, of the Sociology department, headed a group of twenty students in a visit to the Caswell Training School and the Farm Colony for Women at Kinston, last week. On the return trip, the group stopped at Goldsboro to visit I. O. O. F. Home for Children.

At the institutions, the superintendents emphasized the educational aspects of the work being done.

The sociology class in social pathology, and Professor Sanders' class of family case work, made up the party visiting the institutions.

Andy Kerr's Crack

Pittsburgh will play Southern California in the annual tournament of Roses, New Years Day, and there has been considerable comment on the preference of the Trojans for Pitt over Colgate and Michigan. The best pun came from Andy Kerr, Colgate coach, who said: "Colgate is undefeated, untied, and undefeated."

ANNUAL ALUMNI ASSEMBLY WILL CONVENE FRIDAY

Officers of Sixty University Alumni Associations Invited To Annual Assembly.

Officers of the sixty local University alumni associations have been invited to attend the annual Alumni Assembly here December 9. Officers of permanent class organizations and other alumni associated in any manner with the projects of the alumni organizations have also been extended an invitation to be present at the gathering.

The program for the meeting this year will be condensed into one evening session instead of being extended over two days as has been the custom in the past. This will permit alumni to attend without taking time from their offices or businesses.

Opening Session

Commencing with a banquet meeting at 6:30 o'clock in the Graham Memorial Friday night, the gathering will get under way after a short business session which will be presided over by Kemp P. Lewis, president of the General Alumni Association for the past two years. President Frank P. Graham will be the speaker. His address will be on the situation of the University as it faces a new biennium.

Among the business of the gathering to require the attention of the annual meeting will be the reports of the executive secretary and the general treasury, both of which will be in printed form and will be distributed as a part of the January issue of The Alumni Review.

Other business will consist chiefly of nomination of candidates for important alumni offices. This slate will be presented to the paid-up members for final balloting immediately following the December 9 gathering. Officers for which nominations will be made follow: president, first and second vice-presidents; and one of the trio of alumni members on the University Athletic Council.

Officers of Association

Officers whose terms expire this year are: K. P. Lewis, president, of Durham; R. G. Stockton of Winston-Salem and Hugh Dortch of Goldsboro, first and second vice-presidents respectively; and Dr. Foy Roberson of Durham, Athletic Council representative. Also the Alumni Assembly will elect a group of directors-at-large who will succeed R. Grady Rankin of Gastonia and Tyre Taylor of Raleigh, whose terms expire this year.

A nominating committee was appointed last month by President Lewis with instructions to present to the assembly a slate composed of two nominees for each office. Members of this committee are Luther H. Hodges, Leaksville, chairman; Henry London, Raleigh; and Francis O. Clardson, Charlotte.

OVER FIVE HUNDRED ADULTS TAKE COURSES

A total of 534 persons in twenty-seven communities are taking advantage of classes in adult education, according to Russell Marvin Grumman, director of the University extension division. These classes are under the auspices of the extension department.

Approximately 900 class registrations have been made, which represents a slight increase over last year's total. Ten instructors have been employed to teach the courses.

All classes correspond exactly with those given qualified students of the University and include courses in science, literature, education, and music.

GRANVILLE WILL INTERPRET MANY FAMOUS PERSONS

"Dramatic Interludes" Will Be Given on Student Entertainment Program Tonight.

V. L. Granville, distinguished actor of the legitimate stage, will appear here tonight at 8:30 o'clock in Memorial hall under the auspices of the Student Entertainment Committee. Granville's program will consist of a costume recital entitled "Dramatic Interludes" which will be a representation, in costume and make-up, of the principal dramatic personages of all time. He will present his interpretation of such immortal characters as Job, Nero, Lady Wishfort, Andre, Asano, and many others equally renowned.

Granville will bring with him his own stage manager. Impersonations in wide variety follow each other in quick presentations. Granville has drawn considerable praise from dramatic critics in papers all over the nation. He elicited the following praise from the Philadelphia Forum: "It was by far the most remarkable performance of its kind that we have ever seen; to be able to create the illusion of so many and so different characters not only requires talent but genius."

His Program

In the first part of his program he will give these characters which are listed with the plays from which they are drawn: the Narrator and Job, from The Book of Job; Strepsiad, from The Clouds, by Aristophanes; Pernet, the archer, from The Free Archer of Baionnet, by Francois Villon; Hamlet, from Hamlet; Prince of Denmark, by Shakespeare; Lady

PLAYMAKERS BILL FOUR NEW PLAYS FOR PRESENTATION

Second Public Productions of Year to Be Offered by Playmakers This Week.

Four new plays, Creek Swamp Nigger, Davy Crockett, Four on a Heath, and Stumbling in Dreams, written by students in Professor F. H. Koch's English playwriting courses, will be presented Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights of this week as the second public production of the Carolina Playmakers for this season.

The first of the plays, Creek Swamp Nigger, by Harry W. Coble, is taken from a ballad of the low coast negroes in Georgia. The ballad was originated when a Georgia negro, called "Bo-Cat," took his wife to the deep waters of Hell Gate, murdered her and threw her body into the water. The play is built around the same theme, with the scene laid in the Pee Dee section of South Carolina.

Play About Crockett

The second production revives the character of Davy Crockett—adventurer, statesman, candidate for the presidency of the United States, and martyr of the Alamo—who has become little more than an obscure legend.

The author of the play, John Philip Milhous, is native to that part of the country which was in Crockett's time the Tennessee

DAVILA WILL ADDRESS INTERNATIONAL GROUP

K. C. Frazer, faculty advisor of the International Relations club, stated yesterday that all members of the club are urged and invited to attend the series of lectures to be given by Dr. Carlos G. Davila. The lecture program is announced in this issue of the DAILY TAR HEEL.

SPEAKERS CHOSEN TO PARTICIPATE IN IRISH DEBATE

Carolina Will Meet the University of Dublin in Forensic Battle on Nationalism.

In the try-outs, last Monday night, for the debate with the Irish debaters of the University of Dublin, John Wilkinson and A. S. Kaplan were selected to represent the University. The subject, which is "Resolved: That nationalism is a bar to peace and, or progress," will be debated Thursday evening, December 15, in Gerrard hall.

Those trying-out for the debate were Don Seawell, Bill Edleman, John Wilkinson, and A. S. Kaplan. The selection of Wilkinson and Kaplan was made by Professors W. A. Olsen, E. J. Woodhouse, and G. M. McKie, faculty representatives on the debate council.

Wilkinson holds the Mary D. Wright medal for debating and the Bingham debate medal. He was one of the speakers in the Oxford debate during his first year here.

Members of the team chosen to represent the University of Dublin are James J. Auchmuty, scholar, moderator, and bachelor of arts, of Longford, Ireland; and Garrett E. Gill, B.A., LL.B., barrister-at-law, of the city of Dublin.

The Irish debaters are touring America and are debating with some of the leading universities and colleges of the country; and according to reports "Irish wit" is expected to play a part in the debate.

The foreign debaters will spend Thursday night in Chapel Hill, and will conclude their tour Friday night in a debate with George Washington University at Washington.

This series of Irish debates in America, this fall, is sponsored by the National Student Federation of America.

Each year Carolina conducts one foreign debate. The debate last year was with Oxford. This is the first time that the University has debated the University of Dublin.

GEOLOGY MUSEUM TO OPEN NEXT QUARTER

The geology department plans to open a geological museum to the public next quarter in New East building.

The material for exhibition will not be completely arranged within the year, but collections will be added from time to time and loan exhibits of special interest will be shown for short periods during the year.

Applicants to Meet

Applicants for the medical aptitude test will meet Dr. J. N. Bell this afternoon at 5:00 o'clock in 206 Venable for the purpose of discussion the nature of previous examinations of the past two years. Friday, December 9, at 3:00 o'clock is the time set for this year's examination.

COMMITTEE WILL MAKE STUDY OF SEMESTER PLAN

Dean Hobbs Heads Body Chosen To Report Findings on Proposed Change.

Appointment of a new faculty committee to study a switch from the present quarter system to a semester arrangement of the academic year was announced yesterday by President Frank P. Graham.

This committee will study the problem and make a report on their findings. Considerable comment has been aroused in regard to the feasibility of such a switch, and now definite action is being taken to make a thorough study of the proposition.

Dr. A. W. Hobbs, dean of the college of liberal arts, heads the committee. Other members are as follows: D. D. Carroll, dean of the school of commerce; J. M. Bell, dean of the school of applied science; N. W. Walker, acting dean of the school of education; H. G. Baity, dean of the school of engineering; J. G. Beard, dean of the school of pharmacy; W. W. Pierson, dean of the graduate school; G. R. Coffman, head of the English department; W. M. Dey, head of the romance languages department; J. W. Lasley, of the mathematics department; George Howe, of the classics department; W. C. Coker of the zoology department; T. J. Wilson, Jr., dean of admissions; C. T. Woollen, business manager of the University; and F. F. Bradshaw, dean of students.

Group Chooses Universities On Excellence In Graduate School

American Association of Universities, of Which University Is Member, Awards Membership Only to Schools of Highest Scholastic Achievement.

The American Association of Universities, an organization of which the University became a member in 1922, is the Phi Beta Kappa of universities on this continent. Admittance to this select group of twenty-nine educational institutions is the goal of every progressive university.

From the program of the association, it is clear that when scholastic institutions rate each other, their graduate schools weigh heaviest in consideration. While the undergraduate work of universities is an important feature, in the eyes of the association it is the graduate school standard that gives the truest index to the calibre of the individual school.

University Prominent in Society During the ten years which it has held membership in this society, the University has served in the capacity of vice-president, president, and on the executive committee, and is, at present, on the committee on the classification of universities and colleges in America. The apex of its activity in the organization was reached last November when the annual convention was held in Chapel Hill in conjunction with the inauguration of President Frank Graham.

At this time Dean W. Whatley Pierson of the University graduate school, permanent delegate to the association, defined its work by stating, "Its purpose often leads the association to the consideration of the whole range of educational problems; since, if the graduate school depends

DR. HENDERSON IS MOVED BY ACTION TOWARD EINSTEIN

Local Professor Resents Action Of United States Consulate Against His Friend.

Dr. Archibald Henderson yesterday expressed deep regret about the treatment of Albert Einstein, his personal friend, by an official of the American Consulate in Berlin. Einstein had gone to the consulate to obtain a visa for his passport and was asked several questions concerning his political beliefs. Upon insinuation that he was a communist and an anarchist, Einstein became angry and proposed to call off his visit to America.

Dr. Henderson said that such an international figure as Einstein should be free from the technicalities of Ellis Island, and should not be bothered with politics; he should be entirely independent of petty regulations and politics when he was doing so much to stimulate the young people and investigators to make their contributions to knowledge.

Henderson added that it was undoubtedly a technicality that was hard for him to understand and believe, but the action taken by the American official is very humiliating to every citizen who desires that the United States take a leading part in the intellectual affairs of the world.

Dr. Henderson concluded by saying, "I am extremely regretful that the incident happened, and I hope that it will be cleared up satisfactorily."

L. M. BROOKS SPEAKS TO Y. M. C. A. CABINET

PROVED ORATORS AMONG THOSE IN LEGION CONTEST

Past Winner of Legion Contest And Wright Medal Speaker Among Contestants.

Nine contestants have entered the try-outs for the choice of a speaker to represent the University in the fifth annual state oratorical contest sponsored by the American Legion.

Although the date has not been announced definitely, it is probable that the choice will be made Wednesday, December 14, at 3:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

Two of the contestants have already distinguished themselves in public speaking at the University—L. H. Fountain, winner of the Mary D. Wright memorial medal this year, and E. E. Griffin, winner of the state Legion contest last year.

The final contest, when representatives of all the colleges in the state will meet, will be conducted in Raleigh in the Needham Broughton high school building, January 20, 1933.

Annual Contest

The contest is sponsored annually by the American Legion for the promotion of patriotism and Americanism in North Carolina. The subject on which the contestants will speak, not longer than fifteen minutes, according to the rules laid down by the Legion, this year is "Public Education in North Carolina—Its Past and Its Future."

Four prizes are offered to winners of the state contest: a gold medal and seventy-five dollars to the best speaker, fifty dollars to the second best speaker, twenty-five dollars to the third, and fifteen dollars to the fourth.

Dr. George McKie of the English department and of the faculty committee on debating, is in charge of the preliminary contest which will be conducted here at the University.

FRESHMAN EXECUTIVE BODY MEETS TONIGHT

DAVILA'S CAREER VERY COLORFUL AND INTERESTING

Former President of Chile Who Speaks Here Tonight Successful Revolutionist.

Carlos G. Davila, who was first president of the Student Federation in Chile, will speak to University students in Gerrard hall tonight and tomorrow night on problems of relations between the United States and South American countries. He will discuss the Monroe Doctrine and economic problems. Further, each afternoon he will lead informal round table discussions at 4:00 o'clock in Bingham hall, which will be open to all interested students.

Tonight the subject of Davila's talk in Gerrard hall at 8:00 o'clock will be "The Monroe Doctrine." Tomorrow he will speak on "Economic Relations Between American States." Friday night he will address students on the subject: "Cultural Reciprocity Between the American Peoples."

In the informal round table meetings each afternoon he will lead a discussion of South American trade problems, investments, and currency. Davila is at present a visiting professor at Columbia University and is a past president of the Republic of Chile.

At chapel period Friday morning, Dr. Davila will speak on "Student Life in Chile," a subject with which his broad experience as first president of the Chilean Student Federation makes him well informed.

During the presidency of Ibáñez he served as an ambassador to the United States and was able to come into direct contact with the working of the Monroe

PHILLIPS RUSSELL TO GIVE COURSE IN CREATIVE WRITING

University Is One of Few Colleges in Country Maintaining Creative Writing Class.

Dr. George R. Coffman, head of the English department, announced yesterday that those students desiring to take the course in creative writing (English 53) under Phillips Russell during the winter quarter should arrange for interviews with Professor Russell at once, as the class is necessarily limited in numbers. The course is restricted to juniors and seniors.

English 53, to be given in the winter quarter, deals with creative and experimental writing alone, and no text-books are required. Experimental writing is done in all fields of composition, ranging from verse to fiction, and not excluding plain prose composition.

The University of North Carolina is one of a few colleges or universities in the country which maintains a class in creative writing.

Dr. A. C. Howell, of the English department, will repeat English 52 during the winter quarter. English 52 is an advanced course in expository writing, open to juniors and seniors, and sophomores who have completed the two required courses for the second year. English 52 is limited to twenty-

Hosanna

When December rolls around each year the time comes to note in these columns little munifices to humanity that will make Christmas bigger and better. We are thankful for many things. We are thankful that "present-day youth is ten times as courageous, chivalrous, and brave as the youth of yesterday" (Sir Wilfred T. Grenfell). We are pleased that little Latvia only owes the United States $111,000 this December 15, and that she might pay it.

We give thanksgiving that "Marriage" is the subject of a college body parley to be held this year at Wesleyan University, feeling, indeed, that someone should be looking into the marriage question for a change. We take particular delight in the discovery of the Association of Unemployed College Alumni that "diplomas cannot be eaten."

We are amused and gratified to hear that the co-eds of Western Reserve University think that "someone else would be better fitted for the job" when it was suggested that Rudy Vallee judge a beauty contest at that institution. We are thankful that Russell T. Sherwood has been found and now wonder whether Justice Crater shot Arnold Rothstein. We are thankful that seventy-seven pupils at Hugh Morson high school in Raleigh made the honor roll during November, and that Professor Albert Einstein will be allowed to enter the United States. —D.C.S.

For a Cooperative Bank

There seems to be a crying need in Chapel Hill for a bank which will render courteous service to students of the University. The existence at present of a banking monopoly is deplorable, for, even though Chapel Hill has a small permanent population, the continual existence of students attending the University throughout the year makes necessary some depository where students can maintain active accounts. As a matter of strict business, it is obvious that student accounts are of no consequence to a bank, that is, there is no profit involved. It is in this way only that one can explain the conspicuous lack of courtesy which is in evidence at the local bank. Only because of the law which prevents a bank from refusing small accounts does the local house accept any student accounts at all.

It would seem, then, that the situation calls for immediate remedy. There is need of a bank or trust company which would be willing to handle small student accounts for their convenience. A nominal sum could be charged for service rendered. Better still, a cooperative bank could be formed of University men existing solely for students, their accounts and loans. At present, the loan end is handled by the office of the dean of students, while the deposit end is allowed to drift as it may. Needless to say, local business men would rather handle checks on a local trust company than on a multitude of banks in towns, large and small, in various parts of the country. Such an arrangement would allow students to transfer their accounts from home banks and would considerably lighten the burden of the Y. M. C. A. Book Exchange, which seems to be at present one of the few places where a student's check is honored without suspicion. —B.B.P.

The Child Is Father Of The Man

The first series of formal public inaugurations ever conducted in this state were held last Monday, and they presented to the public the first open move made by the Institute of Government in its effort to improve the present status of state government. The Institute of Government, headed by Albert Coates, professor of law at the University, was organized not only to stimulate an interest in governmental affairs, but at the same time to offer some means for the training of the younger generation in means and methods of government.

The long list of distinguished names that partook in the main ceremony in Raleigh, among whom were Chief Justice W. P. Stacy and Governor-elect J. C. B. Ehringhaus, indicates not only the sanction but the encouragement of North Carolina's progressive leaders. Yet encouragement alone never brought success. The goal of such an idealistic dream can be reached, if ever, only by beginning at the beginning. In taking under its wing the North Carolina Federation of Students, the Institute has begun with its right foot forward; but an endeavor to inspire the aged-in-the-wood politicians with patriotism without instilling it in the youth has the appearance of futility.

Under the backing which, ostensibly at least, the Institute possesses, something of good should certainly be accomplished. The Institute working in connection with the Public Administration department of the University and similar departments elsewhere could accomplish far more than by putting on a show in Raleigh. —V.C.R.

New Fields To Conquer

Alabama's trips to the coast, Georgia's prowess against Yale, Duke's scheduling of Ohio State and numerous other inter-sectional games played by southern teams have led many friends of the University to wonder why this school does not participate in competition beyond the sphere of the Southern Conference and the Big Five. There are real advantages to be gained by engaging teams from other sections that we are entitled to enjoy. To begin with it undoubtedly makes the University better known throughout the nation. Right or wrong, there can be no denying that many colleges whose names are on every tongue gained their fame by virtue of no scholastic excellence, but through their elevens. One sign of a school's greatness is its ability to rise from an institution of sectional importance to one of national renown. The field of sport is one that exerts a tremendous influence upon the American people and is a perfectly worthy medium through which to gain the recognition of the entire country.

This suggestion is offered with a certain amount of humility born of our record this year. It is in no way a hint that our present competitors are unworthy of us. The teams we have played are those of fine schools and are composed of real sportsmen. Contact with them has been of value and enjoyment to Carolina. But we might enjoy a broadened contact by dropping various southern teams for a year and substituting in turn teams from other parts. One inter-sectional game a year would not endanger our friendly relations with Conference teams and would greatly broaden our contacts elsewhere.

Whether we might hope to defeat teams of other sections is immaterial. But we would enjoy winning, and there are many elevens of our own strength in the east and elsewhere that could furnish us with keen and equal competition. Inter-sectional games will bring the University increased recognition and will furnish our players opportunity to oppose men from other parts. And it will bind with the wholesome cement of sport, friendships with colleges throughout the nation. So why not step out of our little circle and join our friends of the Southern Conference in their campaigns to strange territories? —J.F.A.

The Midnight Hour

(Annual Edit)

Midnight sessions are among the most enjoyable experiences in college life. No class room discussion can possibly take the place of the friendly, rambling, soul-revealing sort of argument that most of us carry in our memories as the choicest part of our undergraduate days. Count not that time lost, which is stolen from studies, and dull, profitable education to drag discussion through interminable windings while the room is filled with the atmosphere of philosophy and tobacco smoke, and the hands of the alarm clock, which is to ring at seven, slowly move around to four o'clock in the morning.

That is the time when friendship is tempered and tested, when toleration and fair-mindedness are taxed to the limit, when Utopian schemes are advanced to reform religion, college politics, or the social system. That is the time when generous or impractical impulses have full sway, when man meets man without the deceiving mask of manner and custom, on a basis of complete acceptance and equality. That is the time when a man forgets that he has always considered it immodest to expose his own feelings and beliefs, and when he speaks the thoughts that are in his mind with full assurance of understanding. That is the time when friends are made whom we mean to keep through life.

Finally, the conversation lags and dulls, and the host shows by nods and yawns that he is sleepy, and he opens the door to say "Good night" with a lack of politeness that at any other time would surely arouse resentment. One then takes his feet off the furniture and dumps the ashes from his pipe on the floor, departing to leave the cool night wind to blow away the tobacco smoke, and the host to snatch a few hours sleep before daylight.

The midnight hour is the supposed mythical education that one gets from heart-to-heart contact with his fellows. It is the course in human psychology which is not based on scientific laws nor book theorems; it is the period of broadening one's mind, intellect and most of all, sympathy. If there is one thing in a college education that the commuter misses, it is that learning acquired from midnight hours of discussion, confiding and confession. It is that hour of life with one's associates that should make the parent and the students themselves realize what they are losing by living at home away from the atmosphere and contact of the human feeling of the College. —Columbia Spectator.

Employment Among the A.B.'s

A survey just completed through questionnaires returned by 1,233 of the Nebraska University's 1,310 1932 graduates provides a detailed picture of the way the world treats the finished product of modern education in this day when jobs are scarce and people still get hungry three times a day.

Of 766 men and 467 women replying to the questionnaire, 37 per cent have jobs. By itself this figure is not very impressive. But when it is considered that some 116 now taking graduate work here or elsewhere and the women who make no attempt at a "career" are counted among the unemployed, it is apparent that Nebraska '32 has fared reasonably well for these times.

Other interesting facts which are brought out in the returns are these:

Of these who have jobs, 31 per cent were members of a fraternity or sorority while in school. Of the total graduating class, however, only 21 per cent were Greeks. The Greeks it seems had the best luck job hunting.

The Phi Beta Kappa employment figure was 38 per cent—only one per cent greater than the average for all those replying.

Of those graduates now married, 41 per cent have jobs. A wife, it would seem, is a greater asset in job hunting than a P. B. K. key.

Men had 8.5 per cent better success than women in getting work.

Finally: Graduates prepared for one of the professions found jobs more plentiful than did those educated in the "general cultural" curriculum. —Daily Nebraskan.

Last night he spoke to University students on the subject of "Inter-American relations." This meeting served for the regular gathering of Epsilon Phi Delta, the Cosmopolitan club; and the International Relations club, which utilized the occasion to hear Dr. Davila discuss problems in which they are vitally interested. The graduate school through Dean W. W. All-Southern Team Picked By Coaches Shows Unique Lineup

Students Have Hard Job Placing Generous Backfield Talent in South for Contest.

BALLOTS ENDS SATURDAY

Choice Must Be in by Saturday Night; Prizes Will Be Announced in Later Issue.

Balloting in the DAILY TAR HEEL contest for the choosing of all-State and all-Southern teams continues today and will run on until Saturday afternoon. The votes will be judged Saturday night and the winners, with their prizes, will be announced in Sunday's paper.

Though several all-Southern teams have been published in the various daily papers, the team selected by the conference coaches is unique in that it differs in many respects from these.

Several linemen and backfield stars are on the official eleven that have been neglected in the big newspaper polls. The placing of the backfield material in the south which is the best ever developed in this section, is causing a lot of speculation among student choosers. The coaches saw these men in action and observed them in every particular, and consequently, they are better qualified to name the best men for each position than any one else.

Definite announcements as to the prizes to be awarded by the local merchants interested in this vote, will be made in a later issue of the TAR HEEL this week.

TWO BIG COACHES LEAVE OLD JOBS

Alonzo Stagg and Pop Warner Leave Chicago and Stanford; Warner Goes to Temple.

Yesterday two of the most highly ballyhooed football coaches in the United States, either changed positions or were out of jobs due to alumni sentiment against them. Coach Glen "Pop" Warner, famous mentor at Stanford University, and Amos Alonzo Stagg, the old maestro of football and coach at Chicago University, were definitely laid on the shelf.

Warner's famous system was enough reputation to cause a grand scramble among smaller colleges for the choice of the nation's unemployed coaches. Temple University, Philadelphia, put in the highest bid, reputed to be somewhere between $15,000 and $17,000 and clinched their bid for a new coach of their Owls.

Coach Stagg who had been the athletic director at Chicago for the past forty-one years had no fine ballyhooed reputation to rely on for another job and has been regarded as jobless by sports writers for the past few weeks. However, Stagg was not definitely deprived from his job until yesterday when Metcalf, the new head of athletics at Chicago, notified him that he would not and could not be retained as football coach for another year.

Stagg has had five schools to offer him jobs as their head coach, but it is unknown whether he will take up one of these bids or go into the business world in which he has had no experience. The "grand old man" put himself out of an honorary job, created by the athletic officers who wished to quiet sentiment, when he said that he would rather not be connected with Chicago than to be considered a "nuisance."

Lecture on Chess

A chess club lecture will be given tonight at 7:30 in the lobby of Graham Memorial. All members are urged to be present.

Those who like to see fast basketball from start to finish should find great delight in the changes in the rules for 1932-1933. The two major changes are the "ten-second rule" and the "three-second rule," each of which was designed to stop stalling in the final minutes and to speed up the game in general.

The "ten-second rule" allows the team holding the ball ten seconds in its back court. It must, within ten seconds, advance over the center line, and this sally must result in a try for goal. If the ball is gotten in the opponents' half of the court, the team holding the ball is allowed to go back to its territory once. Violation of this rule will change possession of the ball out of bounds.

The "three-second rule" was designed primarily to curb the center or pivot play. It states that a player in possession of the ball in the opponents' free throw lane and with his back to the goal must pass or dribble out within three seconds. Violation of this rule also changes possession of the ball.

It is the opinion of the writer that these new rules will do much to increase the popularity of basketball, for there can be no doubt but that the fans will more and more see an offensive type of basketball. For one thing there will be no more dilly-dallying around in the back court in the last few minutes of play.

The Southern Conference will do well if the basketball tourney site is shifted from Atlanta to Raleigh. A change is needed, and Raleigh seems to be the most logical place. The facilities are better and the city is basketball crazy, and from a financial standpoint as well as the fact that Raleigh is a more central place, the conference will be benefitted.

In recent years the tournament officials have not been too well pleased with Atlanta's facilities and there is more than an even chance that the tournament will be played at Raleigh this year.

INVITATION MEET IN BOWLING SET FOR NEXT WEEK

The management of Graham Memorial announced yesterday that an invitation bowling tournament will take place on Wednesday, December 14. Entries for this tournament will be closed this Saturday.

At present, John Brewer leads all scorers with a mark of 218 out of a perfect score of 300. A list of those eligible for the tournament so far has been released by the manager of the alleys. They are: Brewer, Hudson, L. Parker, Atwood, Tracy, A. Thomas, Sloan, Edwards, Lovill, Tolbart, Frazier, Somers, Morris, J. W. Scott and Bradt.

Those who roll 140 or more by closing time Saturday are eligible for the tournament. The rules of the tournament as will be set by Willis Sansenbach, national junior champion of North Carolina, and who is now manager of the alleys, will be announced later in the DAILY TAR HEEL.

INTRAMURAL MITT TOURNEY BEGINS IN TIN CAN TODAY

Forty Men From Twenty-Two Organizations Fight in Eight Divisions.

The intramural boxing tournament will get under way today at 4:00 o'clock in the Tin Can with forty-three men representing twenty-two dormitories, fraternities, and town residences in the battle for campus titles.

Weighing-in will be attended to this morning by Assistant Coach Archie Allen at Bynum gym, and pairings for the bouts will be made there. No man will be permitted to fight if he does not report to Coach Allen sometime between 10:30 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. today for the ceremonies of weighing-in and pairing.

Have Eight Divisions

For the first time in the history of Carolina's intramural tourney, eight divisions will be fighting. Up until now, only seven fighting weights have been allowed; but the new class, as yet unnamed, serves to close the wide 15-pound gap between the welter and middleweight classes, giving a boy weighing around 155 pounds a distinct division in which to fight. The eight classes entered will be the 115, 125, 135, 145, 155, 165, 175, and the

WHITE PHANTOMS SHOW IMPROVED PLAY YESTERDAY

Coach Shepard Works Squad in Fast Session; McCachren and Brandt See Action.

The varsity basketball squad held another hard workout yesterday afternoon in the Tin Can. Coach Bo Shepard scrimmaged his whole squad, giving his first two teams extra long sessions.

After the usual preliminary exercises, Coach Shepard had his first team of Glace at center; Hines and Weathers, forwards; and Jones and Henry, guards work against a reserve five. The play of the varsity showed a marked improvement over the last scrimmage exhibition, as the attack began to click and the passing and shooting was much better.

Injured Men Work

Dave McCachren, a flashy guard, who has been out with an injured finger, returned to action yesterday and took part in the scrimmage. McCachren showed flashes of his old self and when that finger heals completely, the Carolina guard play will be settled once and for all. George Brandt who has not recovered entirely from the injury to his eye in the Virginia game was out yesterday and worked for a while with the first combination at center.

Blend... AND YOU GET A DIFFERENT TASTE

Cross-Blend..

AND YOU GET A BETTER TASTE

That's the reason Chesterfield not only blends but cross-blends its tobaccos.

Blending mixes the tobaccos together. Cross-Blending welds them together... into one tobacco of milder, more pleasing taste! And what's more, a taste that's uniform, always the same.

It's like creating a new and better tobacco for cigarettes. It makes Chesterfields milder, gives them more fragrance... and makes them taste better.

LOCAL SYMPHONY GROUP WILL GIVE CONCERT SUNDAY

Vesper Program in Music Hall Will Be First Appearance of Year.

Making its first appearance this year, the University Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Harold S. Dyer, will present a vesper concert Sunday afternoon, December 18, at 4:00 o'clock in the Hill Music hall.

More than fifty musicians representing students, faculty, and townspeople have for the past several years united to compose this organization. The program for this concert contains the following numbers:

Egmont Overture by Beethoven; selections from the Nutcracker Suite of Tchaikowsky, commemorative of the Christmas season; Minuetto by Bolzoni; the Siegfried Idyll of Wagner; and the complete Capriccio Espanol of Rimsky-Korsakoff.

The orchestra is to be augmented by the services of Miss Alice Hundley of Durham, harpist. The Rimsky-Korsakoff number is scored heavily for harp, and the Nutcracker Suite of Tchaikowsky utilizes the harp in the cadenza in the last of this suite, the Valse de Fleur. As is customary with all concerts given in the Hill Music auditorium, there is no admission charge and the public is invited to attend.

PROJECT GROUPS APPOINTED FOR LIBRARY ROUTINE

Announcement Made of Three Committees to Work on Various Problems.

A trio of committees has been appointed to work on projects and routine of the University library, it was announced yesterday from the president's office.

Professor Robert B. Downs, of the library department, will head all three committees. The three committees are the library book committee, the library budget committee, and the bibliographical aids committee.

Other members of the book committee are as follows: Professors Bernard, Dey, Murchison, H. V. Wilson, Mackenney, and MacMillan.

Other members of the library budget committee are: Professors A. W. Hobbs, Bell, Carroll, Baity, Walker, Pierson, Van Hecke, Manning, Jackson, and Beard.

Members of the bibliographical aids committee are: Professors Pierson, MacNider, Harter, Coffman, Knight, Vance, Zimmerman, Van Hecke, and W. C. Coker.

T. J. Wilson Returns

Dr. Thomas J. Wilson, Jr., registrar of the University, will return today from New Orleans where he has attended a meeting of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the Southern States. Dr. Wilson represented the University during his ten-day attendance of the various sessions.

E. A. Abernethy Visits

Dr. and Mrs. E. A. Abernethy and Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Comed returned last night from a short visit to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Nelson, parents of Joseph Nelson, Jr., University freshman who died in the infirmary last week.

Dormitory Club to Meet

Y MAKES CANVASS OF STUDENT BODY

Cabinets Make Plans for Sending Delegate to Student-Faculty Federation in Atlanta.

Dormitories are being covered by members of the freshman friendship council in the annual Christmas seal campaign conducted by them under the auspices of the local Red Cross. Members, assigned beats, will turn in all receipts and give reports at the Y. M. C. A. by 5:00 o'clock this afternoon. The Red Cross chapter has covered fraternities and campus boarding houses.

At the council meeting Monday night, plans for sending a delegate to the student-faculty convention in Atlanta were made. A nominal charge will be levied on all members to sustain the expenses of the delegates trip. James Craighill was appointed chairman of a committee to raise the necessary funds.

It was decided that the next meeting would be a social affair and would take place at the regular time in Graham Memorial. A program planned by Edwin Lanier, self-help secretary, will be presented at that time.

Night Football At Last Comes To Long Suffering Carolina Students

It Seems, However, That Pine Trees in Lower Quadrangle Suffer Approximately as Many Injuries as Players in First Tilt Played Here Under Artificial Light.

Shades of Thomas Alva Edison! His great gift to mankind has recently made possible a new nocturnal sport on the athletic fields of the University. But not the Athletic Association nor any of the coaches of the various teams have introduced the revolutionary athletic innovation. It remained for the ingenuity of the members of the lower quadrangle dormitories to inaugurate their own special brand of night football.

Although the varsity has completed its schedule and the tag championship rests safely within the confines of the A. T. O. house, the boom of the soaring punt is still a familiar sound on the campus. The ever-lessening hours of daylight have in no way impaired the enthusiasm for the football that is still being played on the quadrangles between Ruffin and Grimes, and between Everett and Graham.

Close Score

A particularly hard-fought game was recently in progress on the green-sward between I. and G. dormitories. After hours of play the score was approximately 106 to 107. The sun had gone down, and shadows were creeping over the field. When neither side could see the ball, fumbles and mis-plays became annoyingly numerous.

To end the game with such a close score was clearly against the principles of both ball clubs. It has long been the policy of the participants in such games to fight to a bitter, if sometimes futile, finish. However, in this case it would not be long before inky darkness would settle down on the field and preclude absolutely any further playing. The captains came together and conferred on the problem which threatened the honor of the opponents.

INTRAMURAL MITT TOURNAMENT BEGINS IN TIN CAN TODAY

unlimited, with four pounds allowed for overweight in the first seven.

The popularity of the new division is proved by the fact that it has seven men entered for the tourney, ranking second to the 125 pounders which have eight, the greatest number entered.

Lewis dormitory will have six men fighting to bring titles back there, and Zeta Psi and Best House will have five each. A. T. O. comes next with four, and Aycock, Everett, and Beta Theta Pi each will have two. Nearly every other fraternity and dormitory will have at least one entrant.

Tourney Develops Talent

In addition to having a reputation for producing furious fighting and lots of thrills, the intramurals are also watched intently because of the frequent emergence of many fine varsity and freshman team prospects. John Warren, Noah Goodridge, Archie Allen, and numerous others have come through the tourney to gain future ring glory. Goodridge and Allen later winning Southern Conference championships.

The 125 pounders, who promise to furnish some of the hottest competition, will have a four-cornered riot when Max Frucht, J. A. Crawford, Alan Smith, one-time intramural champ, and Baxter Mowery, last year's winner, get together; but one of the remaining four boys in this division may pull a surprise and steal their thunder.

In the other divisions, things are so evenly matched that no one looks better than another.

posing teams. The somewhat stupefying result of their prowess was that time was taken out by both sides and the players left the field. Apparently the forces of darkness had triumphed.

Not so! The never-say-die spirit manifested itself in the solution of the mystery. Fiat Lux! Shortly after the dispersion, from every window on the west side of Everett two electric lights were trained on the battle ground. Chapel Hill was receiving its baptism of electrically illumined gridiron play.

Game Carried On

The struggle continued. The players were no longer butterfingers, and many long passes were completed. Then at 9:00 o'clock the contest came to an abrupt close when a 120-pound guard attempted to take out a tall pine tree he had mistaken for a charging linesman. The injured player was carried off the field, and by mutual consent the hostilities ceased. The lights had shown themselves efficient, but hardly any more safe-guard against injury than the rays of the sun.

As at the first performance a large crowd of spectators is expected to witness the second showing of the football-spotlight-hounds, which is due to be presented sometime during the latter part of the week. As yet, the originators have displayed a decided unwillingness to license other such groups with the privilege of using their invention. It is also held upon good authority that the captains of the teams have received no complaints from the inmates of the dormitories to the effect that the new enterprise has proven a distraction from their scholastic efforts.

STUDENT DISCOVERS GEOLOGICAL CLAY BEDS

C. F. Rawls, a geology student of the University, recently discovered a new bed of bentonitic clay in the Roanoke, Virginia area while doing geological field work there.

This bentonitic clay is a weathered volcanic ash layer formed by the fall of volcanic ash in the Ordovician sea. Rawls brought with him samples that he found in a layer about two feet thick lying interbedded with sandy shales along the west foot of Catawba mountain. They had been preserved from erosion by marine sediments which were deposited over them.

KOCH WILL READ CHRISTMAS CAROL

This Year Will Mark Twenty-Seventh Observance of Annual Custom.

Professor Frederick H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers, will give his annual reading of A Christmas Carol, Dickens' immortal Christmas story, in Memorial hall Sunday evening, December 11, at 8:30 o'clock.

Professor Koch has presented his version of the Carol over one hundred times before all types of audiences in the north and south; including a presentation in New York City where Charles Dickens himself read it some sixty years ago. This year's reading will mark the twenty-seventh year during which Professor Koch has appeared with the Dickens story as an annual custom.

Contrary to precedent, this reading will not take place in the Playmakers' theatre, but is being moved to Memorial hall at the request of the faculty. During recent years increasing crowds have rendered the theatre inadequate for the Christmas Carol audiences.

First Reading

Appearing before a group of University of North Dakota people twenty-seven years ago as a young professor fresh from Harvard, Professor Koch affirmed that everybody ought to read Dickens' Christmas Carol every Christmas. At the request of the dean of women he read it to them, and has been reading it to appreciative audiences every year since.

The setting and lighting for this performance is being designed by Professor Samuel Selden. A large Christmas tree on each side of the stage will constitute the chief decoration.

In accordance with custom, a quartet composed of Mr. and Mrs. George Lawrence and Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Harrar will sing old English carols between the staves.

Professor Koch is reading the Carol in three other performances this season. Tuesday evening, December 13, he will read in the Burlington Little Theatre of Burlington, N. C.; Thursday, December 15, in Tarboro; and Friday, December 16, in Norfolk, Virginia.

Sax Rohmer Story At Carolina Today

"The Mask of Fu Manchu," pictured version of another of the Sax Rohmer mystery stories, is showing at the Carolina theatre, with Boris Karloff in the role of the sinister Dr. Fu Manchu.

The plot of the story deals with the quest of a group of English scientists for the hidden tomb of Ghengis Khan, the great Asiatic ruler who almost conquered Europe. Dr. Fu Manchu also seeks this tomb in order to seize a buried talisman, proclaim himself the re-incarnation of the leader and starts an Asiatic uprising against Europe.

Included in the cast are Lewis Stone, Karen Morley, Charles Starrett, Myrna Loy, Jean Hersholt, Lawrence Grant, and David Torrence.

FIRST ISSUE LAW REVIEW OF YEAR COMES OFF PRESS

Magazine Contains Report of Constitution Commission and Legislation Proposals.

The December issue of the North Carolina Law Review, published quarterly by the law school of the University, was released yesterday. This number, with which the Review enters the eleventh year of publication, contains the report of the North Carolina constitution commission as well as articles by members of the Law Review board of editors. J. H. Chadbourne, a member of the faculty of the law school, is the editor-in-chief.

The members of the staff were entertained Monday night at the home of the editor and at this time the first issue of the current year, just released from the press, was distributed to the staff members.

The first article in this issue, The Report of the North Carolina Constitution Commission, is the report of that commission to the governor recommending the adoption of the new proposed constitution of North Carolina. The report is prefaced by the letter of transmittal from Governor Gardner to the members-elect of the General Assembly. Dean Van Hecke of the law school says of the proposed constitution: "It is characterized by a greater freedom of action for the general assembly, subject to a veto power of the governor. It provides an enlarged flexibility and autonomy for the courts and perpetuation of the present tendencies toward centralized control of education and local finance."

The next section gives a series of proposals for legislation in North Carolina, prepared by faculty members of the law school. The proposals discussed are: checks on failed banks, comparative negligence, evidence, home site statutes, uniform sales acts and wage assignments and small loans. The following law students contributed comments on recent cases of interest: Robert A. Hovis, A. E. Garrett, Jr., W. Carey Parker, Wilson Barber, Ivern E. Erb, Cecil L. Piltz, W. E. Anglin, William Medford, E. M. Perkins, Frank P. Spruill, Jr., and A. T. Allen, Jr.

Yackety Yack Request

All staff division heads of the Yackety Yack are requested to finish their present assignments before leaving for the holidays, announced Nutt Parsley yesterday.

Any other students having business to negotiate with the annual are also asked to see Parsley before Friday of this week.

Association Host at Tea

Another of the weekly teas given by the Woman's association of the University will take place this afternoon from 4:30 to 6:00 o'clock in the reception rooms of Spencer hall. All students and faculty members are cordially invited.

Official Student Ballot For Vice-President Today

FACULTY TO MAKE NOMINATIONS FOR VICE-PRESIDENTProfessors' Choice Will Speed Up Work of Trustees' Board in Selecting Carolina Head.

The faculty of the University is attempting to expedite the work of the trustees' committee which will meet here Monday to consult with the faculty on the selection of the vice-president of the Greater University of North Carolina to head the branch here.

At the suggestion of Dr. H. V. Wilson, head of the zoology department, every member of the faculty wishing to make a nomination for the vice-presidency may make it in writing and turn it in to the committee.

Time a Factor

Dr. Wilson, in making the suggestion, pointed out that there are over ninety professors in the University, and if five minutes were allotted for an interview with each, the committee would spend seven and one-half hours. Such interviews, he said, would hardly do more than register a nomination.

The letters of nomination, addressed to the trustees' committee, will be turned in to R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, before Monday.

The committee of the Board of Trustees to confer with the faculty on the selection of the vice-president will meet in President Graham's office at 10:30 Monday morning.

DR. DAVILA SEES
BRIGHT FUTURE IN AMERICAN PEACEEx-President of Chile, Brought Here by Carnegie Endowment, Traces Peace Efforts.

Addressing about two hundred and fifty students and members of the faculty last night in Gerrard hall, Dr. Carlos Davila, ex-president of Chile and former ambassador to the United States, outlined the history of the various peace movements and attempts towards peaceful solution of differences that have been organized in the Americas.

In introducing Dr. Davila, Dean Pierson told of the purpose of the Carnegie Endowment for international peace through the auspices of which Dr. Davila is at the University. The Carnegie Endowment is trying to multiply and strengthen the ties between countries by the scholarly understanding of their differences and troubles.

Resume of Peace Efforts

Dr. Davila prefaced the body of his talk, entitled "Quest for Peace in the Western Hemisphere," with a summary of the leading international attempts at peaceful solution of disputes and arbitration of international difficulties, including the Kellogg pact, the League of Nations pact, the Hague conferences, and the Pan-American conferences.

Continuing Dr. Davila remarked that there have been more than 250 treaties of arbitration for the settlement by

Regarding The Need For Representative Student Straw Ballot

—AN EDITORIAL—

To those who bewail the obvious lack of student expression in matters of paramount importance to the welfare of the University, the heartless and ineffective response to THE DAILY TAR HEEL vice-presidential poll early this week is a matter for wholesale discontent. Desiring to elicit the true opinion of undergraduates in a poll which might have some effect on the committee responsible for the selection of the vice-president to head this division of the Greater University, all efforts to receive a truly intelligent response have been fruitless.

Evading the sincere motives of this publication in conducting such a poll, many sought to make a joke of the whole venture, and many ridiculous and utterly insane ballots were cast which served to cloak the poll in a supercilious light. Hardly more than one hundred students cast their preferences in a manner that should befit a literate American undergraduate. The results were surprising and disastrous to the motivation of the poll.

With this in mind THE DAILY TAR HEEL launches a second poll this morning, conducted under special representatives of the student council. Balloting will be done in a strictly orthodox method, and each voter will be required to proceed in the manner utilized in spring elections.

The responsibility of the success of the new poll rests directly upon the student body. A man must be chosen to represent the Chapel Hill branch of the Greater University whose past record and potential abilities will make him eligible to carry on the fruitful efforts of his astute predecessor. THE DAILY TAR HEEL, of course, finds no fault in the ultimate selection of the previous poll, but seeks only to decry the procedure and attitude assumed by voters who failed to realize the seriousness of the situation.

The student body of the University is entirely within its rights in demanding that it be given an opportunity to express its preference in a sane and open minded manner. THE DAILY TAR HEEL, feeling that its birthright as a true organ of student opinion cannot be denied, hereby offers this opportunity to the student body.—D.C.S.

MONTHLY REVIEW WILL BE ISSUED BY FRESHMAN CLASSMaterial for New Publication to Be Selected From Work
Submitted by Class.

Beginning with January, 1933, a paper, tentatively titled the Freshman News Review will be issued once a month until the close of the spring quarter. The Freshman News Review will contain about twenty-two hundred words an issue, selected from the written work submitted to the English department.

Each instructor in freshman English will select from the month's work (in the case of the January issue, from the work of the first quarter) a few themes, essays or articles submitted to him as a part of the regular English work, and will turn them in to the editorial committee, composed of M. P. Wells, J. W. Scott, George F. Horner, and Dr. Harry K. Russell. The editorial committee will select the articles, themes, or essays from the papers submitted to them for use in the publication.

The idea for this paper for the freshman English department here originated with Dr. A. P. Hudson, head of the freshman English department, who used the system with considerable success at the University of Mississippi, founding a paper of this sort which is still in active existence.

It is expected that such a publication will stimulate a great deal of interest in English work, as it will give students an opportunity of seeing what is being done by other students with virtually the same material, and will be an incentive to more careful work on the part of students who are anxious to have their work published. In addition to this, class discussion and

MANY UNIVERSITY
ALUMNI TO MEET
HERE TOMORROWDr. Graham to Address Representatives of Sixty Local Alumni Associations.

More than 500 alumni of the University have been invited here tomorrow night for the annual General Assembly of the University Alumni Association, which will begin with a supper at 6:30 o'clock in Graham Memorial.

Representatives of sixty local alumni clubs and fifty permanent class organizations are included among those expected. Many other prominent alumni, including trustees, state officials, and leading business men, have been invited to attend. Many have indicated their intentions of being present.

President Frank P. Graham will be the principal speaker at the gathering, which will have as its central theme a consideration of the University's situation as the institution faces a new biennium. K. P. Lewis of Durham will preside over the meeting as president of the Alumni Association.

In addition to the address of President Graham, the usual business of the Alumni Assembly will also be conducted Friday evening, rather than having the business session on Saturday morning as in past years.

Nominations for officers of the association for 1933 will be made and two nominees for each alumni office will be presented by mail ballot to the membership of the association immediately following the assembly.

These offices include the president, first and second vice-presidents, who will serve terms of one year each, and an alumni representative on the University athletic council, who will serve a three-year term.

REGISTRATION TO BEGIN NEXT WEEKRegistration for Upperclassmen
And Professional Schools to Start Next Monday.

Registration for the winter quarter of all students except freshmen and sophomores will take place next Monday, December 12, and continue through noon Saturday, December 17, in the offices of the respective deans. The two lower classes and all new students will not register until January 3. Classes for the winter quarter will start Wednesday, January 4.

All students who register must receive permits from the registrar's office before registration. Juniors and seniors who have majors must see the heads of the major departments for directions before going to register.

Alphabetical Arrangement

For those who register before the Christmas holidays, the upperclassmen, the following alphabetical arrangement will be carried out: students with names beginning with "A" through "C" on Monday; "D" through "H," Tuesday; "I" through "O," Wednesday; "P" through "S," Thursday; and "T" through "Z," Friday. Students who are unable to get permits or cannot register on these days for other important reasons will do so Saturday morning.

For the benefit of those who are in doubt as to their class standing, juniors are defined as students who had passed 15 courses at the opening of the fall quarter.

GRAHAM EXPLAINS
BUDGET PLANS TO JOHNSTON ALUMNINew Officers Named at Meeting Are
J. D. Barbour, President, and
G. A. Martin, Secretary.

Dr. Frank P. Graham and J. Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary of the University, attended the meeting of the Johnston county alumni association Tuesday night in Smithfield. One hundred and sixteen members were present at this meeting which was their annual gathering for the election of officers. Dr. Graham was the principal speaker of the evening.

He spoke to the alumni on the biennial request of the University for financial support as presented to the budget commission of the legislature. He stressed the fact that the current budget of the University is twenty-two and a half per cent less than that for 1928-29. This is, he explained, contrary to the impression given out by the state papers in their reports on that subject. While it is true that the request for '33-34 is somewhat in excess of the amount obtained for this biennium, that amount was cut forty-three per cent smaller than the budget of the '28-'29 period.

The new officers of the Johnston county association are: J. Dwight Barbour, president, and Grover A. Martin, secretary.

COUNCIL TO SEEK STUDENT SUPPORT
FOR LECTURE SETStudent Expression Group Plans
To Start Series on Political Questions January 12.

With plans for the contemplated winter lecture series of the Council for Student Expression rapidly nearing completion, efforts will be made this week by the executive committee of the organization to obtain student and faculty subscriptions to the season series, planned to begin January 12.

Advance literature on the eight lecturers and their topics will be distributed before the end of the fall quarter, and it is hoped that sufficient interest will be aroused to dispose of a limited number of season tickets before the holidays.

A tentative list of speakers from industrial, political and economic ranks in the state has been presented and will be definitely agreed upon within a few days. At present, twenty-eight prominent authorities in these fields are under consideration, since the objective of the Council is to present both sides of the eight controversial topics in an open forum discussion. Speakers, supplied by the League for Industrial Democracy, will include the following authorities: Powers Hapgood, Dr. John H. Gray, Harry Laidler, Ernest Greuning, Gordon Ward, Winifred Chappel, Hubert C. Herring and Norman Thomas. The series will extend through the first week in March.

LODE NEAR TOWN

A Chapel Hill negro, Guy Snipes, and George Davis, Chapel Hill white man, were caught in a cave-in yesterday morning in the gravel pit on the north-east edge of Chapel Hill. They were rushed to the Duke hospital, but the doctors were unable to save the life of the negro, who was suffering from internal injuries. Davis suffered head lacerations, concussion of the brain and a possible fracture of the skull. Hospital attaches reported his condition as critical.

Both men were employed by the town of Chapel Hill and were engaged in removing gravel from the pit to be used in construction work.

Student Paper Feels That Campus Opinion Will Influence
Trustee Selection.

In an attempt to find the serious and candid expression of the students as to their choice for the vice-president of the Greater University here at Chapel Hill, THE DAILY TAR HEEL with the co-operation of the Student Council is sponsoring today, tomorrow, and Saturday, a second straw ballot.

The names of those persons who received more than five votes in the first ballot will appear on a printed form as nominations, while a blank space will be left for those not appearing on the ballot.

The poll will be conducted at the Y. M. C. A. in the same manner as the student elections each year, with some person officially appointed by the Student Council holding the poll during the day from 9:00 to 5:00 o'clock.

First Ballot Unrepresentative

Because of the fact that the first ballot conducted on this matter was too small to represent the actual opinion of the entire body, the TAR HEEL has deemed it necessary to carry on this second vote.

Likewise, it was brought out through an investigation that several votes which were disre-

VAN HECKE NOTES
PLANNED CHANGES
OF CONSTITUTIONDean of Law School Addresses
North Carolina Club on Proposed Revisions in Laws.

Dean M. T. Van Hecke of the law school spoke at the meeting of the North Carolina club, Tuesday night on the subject of the proposed revisions of the state constitution, criticizing and pointing out the probable effects of the revisions.

General characteristics of the revised constitution were given by Van Hecke to be these: the state legislation is to be unusually free from binding details and rigid dictates of the constitution, the chief check on its action being the governor's veto; a more centralized control of state affairs will be established; and a shorter ballot will be used in state elections.

History of Constitution

Dean Van Hecke also traced the history of constitutional revisions in the state from the constitution of 1868, which he stated as being thrust upon the state by "carpet-baggers" and northerners who were little concerned with the best interests of the state, to the present revision.

In conclusion Van Hecke pointed out that the state legislation has adequate power to enact all important measures, and that it should not be unduly hampered by the governor's veto, which will be much more effective than before.

Reprehensible Comprehensibles

The efficient survey of a whole field of study, supposedly within the range of the Senior is indeed a laudable undertaking, but to most persons the idea of an all embracing examination is almost completely incomprehensible.

The magnitude of the impending crisis overwhelms the victim and he frantically pushes away the inevitable in a blind effort to avert sudden catastrophe until at last he faces the gruesome shadow and struggles with it valiantly in the derisive emptiness of the night. Sometimes he is sorely beaten (because of the tension which it is impossible to subtract from the situation) and just as frequently he is victorious and confidently sets out to reap the harvest of his toil. Only for an instant, however, is he conqueror, for the mental strain co-existent with the exam is enough to demolish entirely any of the benefits of his work after the immediate danger is past.

It is conceded that great skill in one thing is very much to be desired, but a review of this kind overemphasizes the importance of the major study and has a paralyzing effect upon the individual to the extent that it makes all other subjects appear trivial. Extensive preparation takes time from his other courses and anxiety caused by lack of it prevents concentration upon anything at all.

Under the present system when check-ups are instigated quarterly to ascertain the amount of knowledge that has been gained in the past three months, comprehensive examinations seem superfluous.

Psychologically and scientifically spaced learning is more rapid, incisive, and longer retained than that brought about by constant application; and thus it would seem that periodical quizzes alone would produce better results, by far, than the average comprehensives.

The motive behind the mammoth test is no doubt excellent but the method and the general consequences are decidedly deficient.—P.A.H.

The Boy Who Cried Wolf

The sound of the burglar alarm of the local bank bursting forth last Monday night and ringing serenely on virtually unnoticed brings to mind the age old story of the "Boy Who Cried Wolf." The boy, so the story goes, tending his sheep on the hillside, sought relief from the monotony of life by crying "Wolf, wolf." The sound of his cry brought the men running with their sticks and clubs to beat off the wolves, only to find that there were no wolves. Then one night a wolf came to take its meal from the boy's flock. Excited he rushed to the camp crying out that his sheep were attacked, but the men paid him no attention. And so the boy lost his sheep.

The unconcern with which not only citizens of the town but the police force as well receive the gong presents a delightful opportunity for any aspiring Jesse James or Jimmy Valentines. The local police force satisfied its professional curiosity by casually glancing in the door on passing, feeling sure, perhaps, that Arsene Lupin would rise up from behind the cage to wave, if he were there.

The Bank of Chapel Hill is rated as one of the soundest banks in the state, containing the money of the local merchants, townspeople, and students. Yet it permits its public alarm to cry "wolf" so that if the wolf ever does arrive he will get no attention. They, too, may lose their sheep.—V.C.R.

OUR TIMES

Laundry

The heated interchange of letters to the editor over the laundry question in "Speaking the Campus Mind" suggests to us two little stories having to do with the laundry situation which we pass along today.

Several months ago a friend of ours bought a lovely big bath towel, the kind that's bigger than a tent and as soft as a bear rug. If you don't believe that sober minded people can become attached to such an inanimate object as a bath towel, let us set you right, for Mr. X admired this towel with a passion greater than love of self, life, or happiness. One day he sent the towel, which now becomes the central figure in our drama and shall be called "Edgerton," to the University laundry. Wednesday the clean laundry returned, but no Edgerton.

It worried Mr. X, for Edgerton had become his sole raison d'être. So our friend pinned about for several days and finally wrote an impassioned note to the laundry begging that the whereabouts of Edgerton be ascertained and that he be returned "immediately." Two days later Edgerton came back via a special truck with a nice little note pinned to his border, clean, hearty, and glad to be home.

And pouring over our treasure box of souvenirs the other day we came across a circular from the laundry department to fraternity houses stating, "Please don't write the name of your house in Latin . . . we don't understand Greek."

Buc

This column, which confesses that Buccaneer baiting has been a constant source for pusillanimous padding herein, respectfully suggests that the ensuing Christmas number of the campus humor magazine is one of the best in years, judging from proofs of copy and drawings.

And the business staff reports six full pages of advertising, an almost unprecedented figure.

Books

We feel that the Oklahoma Daily has the book critic racket analyzed in excellent style: "Glossary for readers of book reviews; 'Book of the Year'—any novel of more than 300 pages, containing two or more seductions."

'Genuine Contemporary Classic'—any book of which the publisher has an oversupply of unsold copies.

'Magnificent Reading'—English prose without split infinitives.

'Realistic masterpiece'—any novel that begins thus: "Wash . . . Wash . . . Wash . . . All she did, day after day, was wash, wash, wash, lousy underwear and eat greasy potatoes."

'Uncensored'—unimportant.

'Undoubted sensation'—third person re-write of "What Every Young Girl Should Know."

Life and Letters

Swan Song?

My one constant reader asked me why I quit writing columns. I don't know the answer to that one. It may be that my public is merely an editorial wastebasket, but I have wondered what has happened to the columnists of late. Surely all of us can't have been writing columns that weren't fit to print. Have you ever noticed how briskly the columnists parade forth in the fall; how, for some reason or other, they stop writing columns one by one; and the practically column-less papers of the spring quarter? It's an old, old story. But really, except for a bit of humor for cynics whose writer requested his readers to remember that that particular incident occurred at the University of Carobama (in all probability it occurs at every university throughout the length and breadth of the land) there hasn't been a nice, spicy column in a month. The perfect columnist would probably be one who was perfectly content with the status quo (Latin phrases again!), but who would want to read the blissful outpourings of such a columnist? Who wants to read any column, anyway? Any columnist who is contemplating emulation of the fabled death song of the swan might be interested to know that a cygnet in one of the mirrored lakes of France was named for Walter Damrosch that it might sing the better, but it pined away and died, poor thing. It is also well to remember that Galsworthy's was probably the only hugely successful Swan Song and that a famous Indian chief once said in his farewell address: Who is there to mourn for Logan? Not one.

Fads and Fancies

It was O. O. McIntyre (there's a columnist for you) who remarked not long ago that nine out of every ten books published in our day and time were the utterest trash. It is the gullibility of the American public which accounts for the amazing success of many a best seller. It is that same gullibility which, when fancy dictates, accepts a fad, elevates it to a position of prominence, and then discards it for something newer. Be not the first by whom the new is tried, nor yet the last to lay the old aside. And in nothing is the gullible American public so fancy-free as in the choice of amusement, the method of whiling away an empty hour. How many vocabularies were improved by the crossword puzzle and how many homes wrecked (neglect of household duties in favor of crossword puzzles was adequate grounds for divorce, you remember)? What became of Tom Thumb golf? Who re-wound all of the yo-yo strings (children cried for it)? Consider the Bango craze which lingers still among the school children. And now, if you'll pardon me, I'll spend the next three hours completely fascinated by the task of putting together the latest addition to my jig-saw puzzle collection.

AMONG US GIRLS

By

MARY FRANCES PARKER

This thing of being a co-ed is no easy life. It's just about as hard as writing a column every week! Rarely do we ever get credit for our real accomplishments—such as getting D's on courses when the male members of that class get A's—and breaks seldom come to the appreciative members of the Women's Association.

Yet we struggle along, and occasionally something nice does happen. At present the DAILY TAR HEEL is sponsoring a contest, the co-ed winner of which will receive the cutest vanity. I don't, however, think the TAR HEEL expects us to pick out a team all by ourselves. The boys are willing to help us—almost too willing. In fact they really feel hurt if they aren't asked their opinions.

And now that we've taken up athletics in a serious sort of way, we get only a condescending sympathy from the better half of this University. They will not take us seriously. They think that we must have our little whims, and they let us indulge in our feeble attempts at being something on this campus.

They're quite nice about it. They offer advice which we accept in the spirit in which it is given. There is no hint of derision in their attitudes or remarks. We're just co-eds, and as such we have certain privileges. And as such, we're excused for a great many things that would otherwise arouse considerable antagonistic comments. One thing about us is that when we start anything we go out for it in a big way. This idea of basketball has just about demolished any idea we might have had of finishing that term paper. We fling books to the four winds and rush madly out to the Woman's Athletic Field, where we gigglingly knock each other down to get the ball for our side.

If I appear on crutches today and someone asks me the reason for them, I shall consider myself justified in annihilating him.

Cabinets To Canvass To Help Relief Fund

The sophomore and junior senior cabinets of the Y. M. C. A. will conduct an "every student canvass" tonight, the proceeds of which will be turned over to the Orange county relief fund. The sophomore body will have charge of the campaign in the fraternity houses, and the junior-senior organization will canvass the dormitories and other residences. Bill McKee, president of the Y will be the director.

Officials feel that the students are not contributing in their home towns, they will be willing to donate here on the campus. A large donation is expected. It is also hoped by the leaders that those students having refunds on laundry deposits will contribute them to the fund.

George Lawrence is the director of the Orange county campaign.

We're willing to let any nation claim the honor of winning the world war that will agree to pay the war debts.—Thomaston Times.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

Lost and Found Situation

If the opinion of the student body in regard to lost and found articles were known, it would probably be that the University is sadly in need of an organization to take care of such articles. At least those persons who have been so unfortunate as to lose property on the campus would say that there is a distinct need for a good lost and found bureau, for few of the many articles lost on this campus are recovered by the losers.

I do not suppose that it is generally known that the Y. M. C. A. operates a lost and found service in its outer office; if it is known, evidently the students do not consider it sufficiently strong or well enough organized to warrant their patronization. However that may be, there seems to be a universal practice on the campus for persons who find property to keep it. Very few articles are turned in to the Y. M. C. A.

There is some reason for this undesirable condition; either the student body is lax in this phase of honesty or there is some other reason for the trouble. A Y. M. C. A. committee has been investigating the matter, and the results of the investigation are somewhat as follows: The committee is convinced that the fault lies, not in the honesty of the student body, but in the lost and found service. It seems that students do not have confidence in the lost and found service. Because of this lack of confidence, a student, when he finds an article, keeps it with the intention of personally returning it to the owner. But the trouble lies in the facts that the finder, whether or not he makes an attempt to communicate with the owner, never seems to be able to get in touch with him.

The committee plans to remedy this deplorable situation by reorganizing the lost and found service, and notifying the entire student body of its presence. Under the new organization, the person who finds any property of any value at all on the campus will immediately take it to the lost and found bureau in the Y. M. C. A. outer office. There his name will be taken and if, after two weeks the owner has not claimed the article by giving an accurate description of it, the article will be returned to the person who found it. Thus the rights of both the person who lost the property and the person who found it will be given fair consideration.

The student body is asked to consider this matter seriously, and to cooperate with the lost and found bureau to make this service, which will in time probably benefit every individual on the campus.

Official Student Vote For Vice-President

garded in the first poll because of the fact that they had been obviously cast as a result of considerably campaigning, were official and should have been tabulated in the final results. Ballots which had been cast for Dean F. F. Bradshaw, Dean H. G. Baity, E. E. Ericson, and R. B. House, were the ones disregarded, and had these been recorded in the first tabulation the order of the poll's selection for the first five men would have been: R. B. House, E. E. Ericson, Dean H. G. Baity, Dr. L. R. Wilson, and Dean F. F. Bradshaw, with House leading Ericson by a bare margin.

Balloting Significant

Because of the weight that the results of this poll are likely to have with the selection committee, THE DAILY TAR HEEL is especially anxious that an accurate vote be secured. And three Student Council members have been selected to open the ballot box and tabulate the results.

The names appear on the ballot with respect to the number of votes received in the first poll. Those persons whose names appear on the ballot in order are: R. B. House, E. E. Ericson, H. G. Baity, L. R. Wilson, F. F. Bradshaw, A. W. Hobbs, R. W. Linker, R. D. W. Connor, Addison Hibbard, Archibald Henderson, and Frank P. Graham. Those who received less than five votes in the first vote are: J. M. Saunders, English Bagby, O. J. Coffin, W. C. Jackson, C. T. Murchison, H. M. Wagstaff, George McKie, J. M. Bell, Meno Spann, T. J. Wilson, Jr., H. V. Park, George Howe, Paul Green, N. W. Walker, J. W. Scott, W. F. Prouty, W. S. Bernard, C. C. Crittenden, and J. C. Beard.

MONTHLY REVIEW WILL BE ISSUED BY FRESHMAN CLASS

criticism of the published work is expected to point out errors in technique in writing, both in the published papers and in those unpublished to which the same comments apply.

A suggestion now under consideration by the teachers of freshman English is that the students in the classes have a share in selecting those papers which will be submitted to the committee for the final selection. Should this suggestion be adopted, which seems probable at the present, the instructor would read perhaps half a dozen of the papers to the class, members of which would vote upon these which seem to be best adapted to use in the publication. In the case that a decision cannot be reached the decision will rest with the professor of the class, and, finally, with the committee of four.

This publication will not be issued in competition with the Carolina Magazine, as it will be published at the expense of the English department, and circulated only to students of freshman English.

Intramural Boxing Tournament Draws Big Crowd For Matches

Fast Action in First Day's Fights
Keeps Spectators in Constant Tumult Throughout.

TOURNEY CLOSES TONIGHT

Semi-Final Bouts Begin This Afternoon at 3:30 O'clock and Finals at 8:30 O'clock.

Before a crowd of nearly 600, the intramural boxing tournament got started yesterday afternoon at the Tin Can, and gave the crowd all the action that it expected and plenty more.

The winners of yesterday's bouts go into the semi-finals which will begin this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The finals will be held tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

In the only 115 pound bout of the day, Blalock of Grimes outpointed Hartgrove of Best House, while in the three 125 pound frays Frucht of Lewis beat Parker of A. T. O., Smith of A. T. O. beat Howell of Manly, and Mowry of Best House beat J. Edwards, also of Best House, all three bouts going the three round limit.

Six 135 Pound Bouts

The 135 pounders put on six contests with Kalb of Everett stopping Robinson, Beta Theta Pi, in the third and taking his second match of the day over Crane of Lewis by a decision. Kingdon, A. T. O., won his first bout by a decision over Dossbach, Phi Kappa Sigma, in three whirlwind rounds, but lost his second to Olman of Everett. Glenn of Zeta Psi showed a snappy left and pounded out a decision over Rogers of Chi Psi, while Garrison of Everett knocked down Plusser, T. E. P., in the first and finally took the decision.

Gillie of Best House stopped McKee, Pi Kappa Alpha, in the first round, and Ogburn, untied, got a technical knockout over Ryan, A. T. O., in the third. Sutton of Best House and Dean of Lewis were even at the end of three, but Sutton got the duke at the end of the extra round. All three bouts were in the 145 pound division.

Mehaffy Beats Causey

Causey of Beta Theta Pi and Mehaffy, Mangum, put on a vicious fight in the first of the 155 pound matches and both boys were nearly out several times during the fray. Mehaffy's hand was raised at the end. In the only other fight of this weight, Pratt, Zeta Psi, won on points from Tolson of the same fraternity after both boys had been knocked down, Pratt in the second and Tolson in the third.

V. Edwards, Lewis, dropped Ressler, also of Lewis, twice in the third and got an easy decision in the sole 165 pound duel of the day, while Phipps of Kappa Alpha trimmed Bonyun, Chi Psi, in the one 175 pound match fought.

The judges were Nat Lumpkin and Herman Schnell, Marty Levinson was referee for the first half of the afternoon and Norm Quarles the last, and the announcer was Jim Lothian.

DUKE BACKS HAVE GOOD GROUND GAINING AVERAGE

Duke University backs averaged 3.4 yards every time they ran the ball in the past gridiron season. In 415 tries, Wallace Wade's proteges gained 1,408 yards.

Lowell Mason, captain and quarterback, carried the pigskin more than any other Devil. Nick Laney, luminary at halfback, established the mark for the highest yardage gained among ball carriers; and John Brownlee, his halfback mate, had the best average of the squad, marching 139 yards on thirty-one attempts to average 4.5 yards per play.

VOLS DROP U. N. C. FROM GRID CARD

Carolina and Georgia Tech Not Scheduled by Tennessee For 1933 Season.

The proposed nine game football schedule recommended to the Carolina authorities seems to have solved itself without any worries on the part of the Tar Heel graduate manager of athletics. The big stir has been caused by Tennessee not scheduling Georgia Tech for 1933 football card and dropping Carolina from its list of opponents.

This relief was definitely completed by graduate manager of the Vols' athletics, Parker, who says: "The Georgia-Tech game is off; North Carolina has been dropped from the schedule, and it is quite definitely decided that Tennessee will play an inter-sectional contest."

It seems that the reason for the Tar Heels not figuring on the Vols' football schedule is that Tennessee would be forced next fall to appear in North Carolina before both Duke and Carolina grid teams within a period of two weeks. The inability to arrange a meeting with Georgia Tech is due to the fact that the two schools' openings do not coincide.

STUDENT COUNCIL TAKES ACTION ON EIGHT OFFENDERS

Bad Check Rule and Disorderly Conduct Are Reasons for Majority of Cases.

Haywood Weeks, president of the student council, announced yesterday that the following eight cases had been acted upon by the student council this year:

Case No. 1: A freshman and two sophomores guilty of dormitory disturbance were placed on dormitory-conduct probation through the spring quarter.

Case No. 2: A sophomore reported for yelling across the dormitory court was reprimanded for his conduct and assurance made that he would co-operate in the future with the student council in maintaining quietness in the dormitories after study hour.

Case No. 3: A law student was placed under a suspended sentence of suspension from the University in the event of having another check returned for reasons within his control.

Case No. 4: A freshman guilty of dormitory disturbance was put on drinking, conduct, and dormitory probation through the remainder of the current school year.

Case No. 5: A junior who failed to promptly obey the student council rules in connection with returned checks was reprimanded and admonished to pay strict attention to the rules in the event of a repetition of the case.

Case No. 6: A law student guilty of drunkenness and disorderly conduct was placed on drinking and conduct probation for the remainder of his residence as a student in the University.

Case No. 7: A law student was suspended from the University until the beginning of the next law school semester for violation of a suspended sentence placed upon him by the council for an excessive number of returned checks.

Case No. 8: A junior was given five days in which to make good a returned check under penalty of suspension from the University.

SORORITY SEXTET DEFEATS SPENCER FOURTH FLOORERS

Virginia Yancey Leads Pi Phi Scoring Attack With Total Of Twenty-Two Points.

Setting a fast pace with a total of twenty-two points, Virginia Yancey led the Pi Phi basketball team to an undisputed victory over the fourth floor of Spencer hall, yesterday, in the third game of the co-ed basketball tournament, the Pi Phi's winning 32 to 16.

The two teams fought through the first quarter on even terms, but from the beginning of the second quarter it was obvious that the Pi Phi's had the superior team. The half found the Pi Phi's leading by a wide margin which they continued to increase until the end of the game.

Virginia Yancey and Betsy Harding were the mainstays on the Pi Phi offense while Mary Frances Parker played a sensational game at guard, keeping the fourth floor sharpshooters at bay during most of the game. Mary Cowles was the outstanding player for the losers, scoring all but two points of her team's total score.

The game was a listless affair during the first half, but increased in interest during the last half as the players applied the pressure by the knock-down drag-out method.

SALON ENSEMBLE TO GIVE CONCERT

Thor Johnson to Direct First Out-of-Town Ensemble Concert of Season at Kinston.

The Carolina salon ensemble, under the direction of Thor Johnson, will present its first out-of-town concert of the year at the high school auditorium in Kinston tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

The program will consist of the Don Juan Overture by Mozart; Angelus (from Scenes Pittoresques) by Jules Massenet; Ungarische Phantasie by F. Buchner, a flute solo by David Bennet; Ballet Music No. II (from Rosamunde) by Franz Schubert; Japanese Sunset by J. Deppen; Grandfather's Wooden Leg by Clokey-Hazelman; Elegie by Massenet; La Cinqtaine by Gabriel-Marie, a violin-cello by Dan Field; Serenade by Titi, a flute and French horn duet by Bennett and Paul Schallert with orchestral accompaniment; and American Patrol by Meacham. John Murphy will be accompanist for the solos.

ADMINISTRATIVE BOARD TO MEET THIS AFTERNOON

The administrative board of the school of public administration will meet in the president's office this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock. Material for consideration at the present meeting will be placed in the hands of board members prior to the meeting. It was announced by Dean W. C. Jackson.

P. R. HAYES GETS POST ON CAROLINA ENGINEER

At the meeting Tuesday night of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Alan McLean spoke on the topic "Racing Planes," and George Gorham spoke on "Recent Developments in the Automotive Industry."

P. R. Hayes was selected as associate editor of the Carolina Engineer from the mechanical department.

ONLY ONE CHOICE FOR EACH STUDENT

CHAPEL HILL WILL MEET HENDERSON NEGRO TEAM HERE

State Championship for Colored Eleven Is at Stake in Game Saturday.

Confidence reigned in the Orange County Training School camp last night as the gridiron squad of the institution began the finishing touches on its preparation for the big game with Henderson, Saturday, at Emerson field.

Chapel Hill, with victories over Sedalia, Greensboro, Winston-Salem, Henderson and Raleigh, now claims the Negro championship of North Carolina, contested only by Henderson, who aver that the Chapel Hill victory was the result of an underhanded time keeper. They complain that when Chapel Hill neared their goal line, the time keeper halted his watch sufficiently to permit a score. The Orange county outfit is silent on that matter, stating only that Henderson is "due for another licking."

Ed Martin, Carolina quarterback is coaching the Training School backfield while Gus McIver is training the line. Neither of the coaches could be reached last night for a report on the progress of their team, but it was understood that the boys are in number one shape for the big contest.

The game is being sponsored by the University senior 'Y' cabinet, the proceeds of a small admission tariff to go toward maintaining a Negro nurse in Chapel Hill colored residential sections. The kickoff is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock. Officials are all members of the 1932 University football squad and include Chandler, Walker, Croom, and Underwood.

DUKE MITTMEN TO BOX TAR HEELS IN FEBRUARY MATCH

Five Lettermen Back in School as Duke Boxers Begin Practice for Season; Lloyd Returns.

A quintet of lettermen including Captain Fred Lloyd, Southern conference bantamweight champion, will be back at Duke this year to negotiate the 1933 boxing campaign for the Durham institution.

Duke will meet Carolina at Duke in the last fistic fray of the Devil's season, February 18. The Blue Imps will meet Carolina freshmen at a date yet to be announced.

The remainder of the 1932 Duke slate follows: January 14—Virginia at Charlottesville; January 27—State at Duke; February 10—Catholic University at Duke.

VARSITY MATMEN IN HARD PRACTICE FOR FIRST MEET

Seven Lettermen in School and Another Slated to Return as Grapplers Begin Training.

Carolina's varsity wrestlers are being pushed hard by Coach H. P. Quinlan, despite the fact that the first meet is more than two weeks after the Christmas holidays. The Tar Heel mat coach is not optimistic over the seven lettermen in school and one expected to return and is working for reserve material.

The wrestlers are working out daily in the Tin Can, brushing up on fundamentals, and learning new holds. The sessions are opened with more than twenty minutes of fast calisthenics. Then the boys pair off and wrestle among themselves, supervised by lettermen and Coach Quinlan.

Lettermen Back

The varsity monogram men now on hand are: Captain Idol, Hussey, Matthewson, Auman, Conklin, Hiller, and Spell. Wayne Woodard, 185-pound grappler, who made his letter last year, is not in school at present but is due to return after Christmas.

All men who participated in the recent intramural wrestling tourney are urged to report for daily practice in the Tin Can by Coach Quinlan. Although the squad looks good on paper, there is need for reserves, and this should be an incentive to all men contemplating joining the ranks of varsity or freshman grapplers.

ORIGINAL ONE-ACT PLAYS ON DRAMA BILL FOR TONIGHT

Playmakers Present Student Plays at 8:30 O'clock in Last Performance of Quarter.

Final preparations were completed last night for the bill of original one-act dramas which will begin a three nights' run at the Playmakers theatre this evening. The performance is scheduled for 8:30 o'clock tonight.

The dramatic organization has been at work on the plays for the past month and promises a treat for local play-goers. All of the presentations originated in the playwriting classes of the University and undergraduates are their authors.

The first play, Swamp Creek Nigger, by Harry W. Coble, receives its theme from a ballad of the low coast, negroes in Georgia, while Davy Crockett, by Phillip Milhous, deals with the life of the frontier statesman.

Four on a Heath, written by Foster Fitz-Simons, is a fantasy with four hanged men as characters. The final drama, Stumbling in Dreams, by George Brown, deals with the natives of Tin Pan Alley.

Cultural Relations Needed To Improve Pan-American Outlook

Dr. Carlos Davila, in Interview, Points Out That Middle Classes of South America Still Entertain Idea That United States Has Imperialistic Leanings in Their Direction.

(By Joe Sugarman)

A sense of humor rules Dr. Carlos Davila. Even when commenting on international problems, this distinguished diplomat and ex-president of Chile, who is now delivering a series of lectures at the University, is so human in his relation to world affairs that the jocularity in his voice almost belies the seriousness of his observations.

He seemed to enjoy startling the interviewer with the statement that the educated class of Latin-Americans firmly dismisses the idea that the United States has imperialistic designs on their countries. "You see," he said with a smile that exhibited a row of flashing teeth, "we stand by Mr. Hughes' statement at the sixth Pan-American Congress. We believe that you consider us on an equal basis with yourselves and will act accordingly."

Latins Misunderstand Policy
"The real trouble in Latin-American relations is that the masses of both continents are opposed to a policy which the United States has not had for twenty years. It is a psychological attitude that is difficult to explain. However the popular mind of South America would be surprised to learn that there is so much anti-imperialistic sentiment in this country. Latin-Americans, in general, are convinced that they are more opposed to the United States' policy than any other people," he laughingly concluded.

This middle class feeling against the United States puzzles Dr. Davila. In view of the fact that the balance of trade between this country and South America has almost without exception been in favor of the latter, that his continent has benefited so tremendously by the investment of American capital, and that the participation of the United States in South American business was invited by the southern nations, he is at more or less of a loss to explain the situation. Half-sighing, half-smiling, he tried to settle the question by recalling Owen D. Young's statement, "We are too rich to be loved."

Improve Cultural Relations

Drawing to the edge of his chair, Dr. Davila warmed to the subject in which he is most deeply interested. "If we can improve the cultural relations between the races, the international outlook will be brighter," he said. "Despite the activity of European nations in South America there is no active propaganda against them such as is directed against the United States. Why? Because the nations of the world have a thorough knowledge of our culture and understand us."

"But in the United States," he went on, "whoever thinks of having his book translated into Spanish? That is the first thought of the European author. We can combat this propaganda only by an exchange of the language, customs, and culture of the two peoples. When this is achieved, the false ideas of the mass minds will be destroyed."

Universities Differ

One of the greatest differences between Latin-America and the United States, centers, Dr. Davila believes, around their universities. "Down there we have nothing like this Chapel Hill," he remarked with an indicative wave of his hand. "Our universities are practically all in the cities. The students are unorganized socially; they attend classes much as do high school pupils in this country; they leave the building, do not mingle with the faculty, and immediately become part of the city in which they live instead of a portion of the university unit."

It is the lack of social unification that contributes appreciably to the students' interest and influence in politics. "They have no spirit that you call Alma Mater, isn't it?" said the ex-ambassador hesitatingly. "Thus they become citizens earlier and because of the generally unstable conditions feel that active endeavor in politics can effect revolutionary changes."

Dr. Davila chuckled when he remarked that no government has ever had a happy time with the students. "They are invariably opposed to the party in power, no matter what it represents. Yes, as far as the government is concerned, they are nuisances?" However, a growing tendency toward athletic and dormitory life in South American universities presages a more unified and scholastic spirit.

Difficulties Face Chile

The future of Chile is naturally of vital interest to the one-time president of that nation. A slightly troubled expression crossed his face as he discussed the grave difficulties facing the country. "No matter what they call their government it will be a state Socialism. Not a Marxian Socialism, you understand, but one in which the state is in command of the processes of production and credit. The present president, Alessandri, has largely the same governmental concepts as Premier Herriot of France."

"The first thing that we have learned from the depression is that we cannot depend upon two or three products for economic existence. When I was in office," reflected Dr. Davila, "I attempted to inaugurate new industries such as mining potash, gold, and other metals, and the manufacture of wood pulp. This policy will have to be maintained by subsequent governments, for Chile no longer supplies the bulk of the world's copper and nitrate."

His cheerful mood returned when he spoke of the general intra-Latin-American situation. After discussing the various steps to peace, he rose to depart for one of his many Chapel Hill engagements. As he was about to leave he smiled once more and said "Yes, we are not through our troubles down there. We are like a family; we are all brothers, but we still fight. Nevertheless, we know that we are all one."

HEAD OF DEPARTMENT TO ADDRESS ENGINEERS

A meeting of the A. I. E. E. is scheduled for tonight at 8:00 o'clock in Phillips hall. The principal speech will be made by Professor W. J. Miller, head of the department, on "Fundamentals of Rate Making."

A report of the recent A. I. E. E. convention in Knoxville will be given to the group by the delegates, Fisher Black and John Hunter.

ALPHA KAPPA DELTA WILL MEET TONIGHT

Alpha Kappa Delta, honorary sociological fraternity, will conduct its regular monthly meeting tonight at 7:30 o'clock in the club room of the Alumni building. Dr. R. M. Brown, sociology department, will speak on "Employment Relief," and Dr. W. C. Jackson will give a talk on the school of public administration.

NEXT QUARTERS' OFFICERS CHOSEN BY DI SENATORS

McKee to Succeed Rose as President Next Quarter; Lyon Elected For Spring Quarter.

Bill McKee was unanimously elected president of the Dialectic Senate for the winter quarter at the weekly meeting Tuesday night. He will succeed Charles G. Rose. Other officers who were elected are Bill Eddleman, president pro-tem; Jules McMichael, critic; Ike Minor, clerk; and Clarence Lamb, sergeant-at-arms. Howard Lyon was unanimously accorded the office of president of the senate for the spring quarter.

Nine members were formally initiated at the executive session. The new senators are Arthur Block, Hugh Daley, John Morrison, Thomas Hood, Parks Austin, J. C. Greer, Archibald Scales, James Craighill, and Ernest Hunt. One of these new men, Austin, was voted into membership immediately before the induction, the others having been previously elected.

To Support Lectures

The senate passed by a narrow margin a motion to subscribe twenty-five tickets to the series of lectures to be brought to Chapel Hill in January under the auspices of several campus organizations which will feature several nationally prominent speakers in the eight programs. Seventeen senators reported that they would attend the entire series.

A letter was read by the clerk from the "Scul and Circle," which requested the use of the hall on Tuesday nights for use as a meeting place. A committee was appointed by President Rose with Senator McMichael as chairman and consisting of Senators Blackwell and Hammer to investigate and report on the project.

Committee Reports

Reports from various committees on the quarter's work were given. Senator McKee, chairman of the constitutional committee, reported that one amendment, that referring to the article in the constitution regarding the payment of dues by the sixth meeting, was added. Reports by Senator Minor of the finance committee and Treasurer Gentry were both accepted. According to the latter, eighteen new members have been added to the senate during the quarter.

NELSON AUTOPSY REPORT RECEIVED BY DR. ABERNETHY

Report From Duke Pathological Staff Attributes Death to Hemolytic Streptococcus.

Dr. E. A. Abernethy, University physician, gave the DAILY TAR HEEL the following report on the autopsy of Joseph Nelson, Jr., prominent member of our freshman class from New Bern, who died in the infirmary last Friday morning.

"Yesterday morning I received a preliminary report on the autopsy, made at my request, with consent of the family, by the pathological staff of Duke University, of Joseph Nelson, Jr. The report states that the immediate cause of death was an infection of the blood stream by the hemolytic streptococcus. The organism entered the blood stream from infected tonsils probably fifteen hours before death."

"This type of blood stream infection is fortunately quite rare. As far as medical science has been able to determine, it is practically always fatal in a few hours."

Signed:

Eric A. Abernethy, M. D.,
University Physician.

After receiving this report from the Duke hospital Tuesday morning, Dr. Abernethy visited the boy's family and family physician in New Bern and delivered the report.

JACKSON GREER CHOSEN SPEAKER OF PHI ASSEMBLY

Resolution Introduced by Hutchinson Opposing Action Against Einstein Is Passed by Phi.

Lee Jackson Greer of Wilmington, was unanimously elected speaker of the Phi assembly for the coming quarter at the regular meeting of the assembly Tuesday night. The other officers elected are: Emmet C. Willis, speaker pro tem; L. H. Fountain, sergeant-at-arms; Charles Bond, reading clerk; Dave Mosier, assistant treasurer; J. R. Farlow, chairman of the ways and means committee; and C. W. Griffin and A. J. Ellington, members of the committee. J. P. Temple who is treasurer, was elected last spring to serve throughout the entire year.

Following the election of officers the resolution: Resolved: That the Phi assembly go on record as condemning the content of the Woman Patriot corporation's petition against Professor Einstein's coming to the United States and the action of the United States consulate in upholding this petition; was introduced by L. L. Hutchinson. John Wilkinson and Edwin Lanier also spoke in favor of the measure. The assembly, by a unanimous vote, was in favor of the resolution.

ANNUAL MEETING OF ALUMNI WILL CONVENE TONIGHT

Gathering Will Begin With Banquet in Graham Memorial At 6:30 O'clock.

University alumni, representing sixty local associations, will gather tonight for their annual meeting at 6:30 o'clock in Graham Memorial. President Frank P. Graham will make the principal address of the evening.

The meeting this year has been condensed into one session instead of extending over several days in order to allow more alumni to attend without making it necessary to spend too much time away from their business.

Banquet Tonight

The meeting will begin with a banquet which will be followed by a short business session. Kemp P. Lewis, president of the General Alumni Association for the last two years, will have charge of this, President Graham will then speak on the situation that the University faces upon approaching a new year.

The business that will require the attention of the annual gathering will be the reports of the executive secretary and treasurer, the nomination of candidates for the outstanding alumni offices, and the election of directors to succeed Grady Rankin of Gastonia and Tyre Taylor of Raleigh whose terms expire this year.

The officers whose terms expire this year are: K. P. Lewis of Durham, president; R. G. Stockton of Winston-Salem and Hugh Dortch of Goldsboro, first and second vice-presidents respectively; and Dr. Foy Robertson of Durham, athletic council representative.

WILSON RETURNS FROM SESSION OF UNIVERSITY GROUP

University Registrar Is Member Of Commission on Institutions of Higher Learning.

Dr. Thomas J. Wilson, Jr., registrar, represented the University of North Carolina at the annual convention of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools in New Orleans, last week. Dr. Wilson returned to Chapel Hill Tuesday.

He went to New Orleans three days early to attend the meeting of one of the association's two commissions, the commission on institutions of higher learning, of which he is a member. Dean N. W. Walker, of the University, is a member of the other commission, that pertaining to schools of intermediate education.

Name Changed

Among important business transacted by the association at the meeting was the changing of the name from the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of Southern States to the present title. Another feature of local interest was the induction of Queens-Chicora College into membership.

North Carolina was one of the original members of the association, which was organized in 1895. The other colleges that were members at the founding were Vanderbilt, Sewanee, Mississippi, Washington and Lee.

Extend Entrance Date For Dramatic Contest

Original plays to be entered in the state contest to take place at the University in March may be submitted as late as January 16, instead of December 20, the time limit first set, officials of the group announced yesterday.

The time limit was extended on account of the semester term in many of the schools. Mrs. Fussler stated that every effort will be made to return the manuscript to the authors promptly after the judges have selected those for production, so that groups may have sufficient time to prepare the play for the Dramatic Festival in March.

WOLFE APPROVES STATE INSURANCE FOR UNEMPLOYED

In Address to Rotary Club Professor Declares This Type Of Relief Inevitable.

Unemployment insurance as one means of solving problems for the millions of jobless in this country was advocated by Dr. H. D. Wolfe of the University school of commerce in an address before the Chapel Hill Rotary club at its regular meeting this week.

"Since a certain amount of unemployment is inevitable, its cost should go into the cost of producing goods and services, just as we figure depreciation," Dr. Wolfe asserted.

The speaker said there had been pretty definite opposition to unemployment insurance in this country, that it had been characterized as a sort of dole.

Despite the defects of the system, England would not think of doing away with its unemployment insurance, Wolfe said.

Disease Toll Heavy

Pointing out that there are now around eight million men and women in this country who have been unemployed for from one to three years and that pellagra and tuberculosis are taking a heavy toll, Dr. Wolfe said that until comparatively recently "we have not looked upon unemployment as a social responsibility."

"But we have had a real change in our social thinking on problems of unemployment," he said.

Illiteracy Commission Will Gather Saturday

It was made public yesterday that the state commission on adult illiteracy will meet in Raleigh, Saturday, according to an announcement by R. M. Grumman, secretary of the commission.

Actor Says, However, That Englishmen Are Not Interested In American Lecturers.

By Donoh Hanks

"English actors do not come to America any more than American actors go to England," stated V. L. Granville, the distinguished British actor, in an interview Wednesday night previous to an amazing performance of his "Dramatic Interludes" at Memorial hall. In reversing a common American opinion, Granville turned in disgust from his laborious task of making up his face in his dressing room for his performance a few minutes later.

"American actors and actresses of the American stage are probably more popular in England than English actors in America," he declared. "Even American movies are as popular as British films." When asked why so many English dramatic actors tour America immediately upon achieving success in England, Granville answered that as often heard in England is the question "Why do American actors and actresses come to England?"

Granville Also Author

Granville is not only an accomplished actor, but an author of some note. Although proud of his English birth, he is bitter toward other Englishmen, other than actors, who come to America with the purpose of lecturing. "Americans are gullible

Local Barber Offers Services To State Of Alabama For Sustenance

Griffin, Cut-Rate Barber in Strowd Building, Claiming Three Years College Preparation at Furman, Shows True Missionary Spirit in Offer to Head of Alabama Schools.

In this great center of education where a retention of the present scale of salaries for instructors is a source of much worry, there is one citizen who has a true missionary spirit. Herbert Griffin, a cut-rate barber who operates a little one chair shop in Strowd building, has offered to teach in any state which cannot afford to pay its school teachers, asking only his room and board in return.

Last month Griffin, who is from Fairmont, read in a newspaper that country schools in Alabama would soon have to close on account of insufficient funds. Acting in the spirit of education, since barbering is not so profitable anyway, he sent an application to the state superintendent of education at Montgomery, Alabama.

Griffin's Plan

Griffin's idea was that grateful parents of the pupils in his school might gladly offer their homes to him, so that he might board with one family one week, with another the next week, and so on, at no expense to the state. To Griffin's great chagrin, the Alabama department of education, instead of accepting his application, referred his letter to the Associated Press, which promptly printed it throughout the country.

"School children cannot prevent the depression," he says; "therefore teachers should teach without any salary when it is necessary." He thinks "the right kind of education (excluding Mohammedanism, Buddhism, etc.) is one of our greatest civilizing influences."

MONROE DOCTRINE IS TOPIC OF TALK

Visiting Speaker Says That Policy Has Been Characterized As Both Good and Bad.

"The Monroe doctrine has become the scapegoat of international affairs, the subject of all kinds of misrepresentation and misunderstanding," asserted Dr. Carlos Davila, ex-president of Chile and former ambassador to the United States, in his address on "The Monroe Doctrine" in Gerrard hall Wednesday night.

"The Monroe doctrine has been given to the public as a series of contradictions: Now as an omen for Peace, and now as a dire menace; now as the lamb, and now as the lion," the distinguished South American diplomat and editor asserted. "It has been likened unto the dove legend, and to the hideous vulture."

This was the second of a series of lectures Dr. Davila is delivering here under the auspices of the Carnegie endowment for international peace.

He gave his third lecture last night on "Economic Relations Between American States" and the final talk on "Cultural Reciprocity Between the American Peoples" will be delivered tonight in Gerrard hall. There will also be a round table conference this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in Bingham hall. Dr. Davila will address the students in assembly today on student life in Chile.

Vice-Presidential Vote Continues After Heavy Ballotting Yesterday

Davila To Talk On Chilean Student Life

Dr. Charles G. Davila, former president of Chile, will address the student assembly at the regular assembly period this morning. His topic will be one concerning student life and problems in Chile.

Dr. Davila was at one time a president of the Student Federation of Chile, and is extremely well qualified to discourse on the subject.

All students of the University, townspeople, and others interested are cordially invited to attend the program. Mayne Albright, ex-president of the student body, will preside.

Play Added To Bill For Next Wednesday

The State Rests, a satire on legal justice by Peggy Anne Harris, has been added to the bill of experimental plays to be produced on Wednesday, December 14. The tentative cast for this drama which will be directed by the author includes Ted Wright, Elmer Oettinger, Jimmie Thompson, Everett Jess, Lee Ballentine, and Peggy Anne Harris.

The other five one-act plays on the bill are: Coal, a tragedy of the West Virginia coal fields, by Marguerite McGinnis; The Elders Pay, by Sue Roberson; Honora Wade, a tragedy by Eugenia Rawls; Miriam's Mother, a play about church people, by Betty Bolton; and Back Door, a folk comedy by Wilbur Dorsett.

Daily Tar Heel Continues Vote To Secure Student Choice For Vice-President.

ELEVEN NAMES ON BALLOT

Student Council in Complete Charge of Polls as Well as Tabulation of Votes.

With a heavy balloting recorded on the first day, THE DAILY TAR HEEL continues the straw ballot to secure the choice of the student body for vice-president of the Greater University here at Chapel Hill. The polls will be open from 9:00 to 5:00 o'clock at the Y. M. C. A. and is being conducted by students officially appointed by the student council. Special ballots have been printed, carrying the names of the eleven men who received above five votes in the first vote held last week.

First Vote Too Small

As a result of the fact that the first poll held last week was too small to be representative of the opinion of the entire student body, THE DAILY TAR HEEL in co-operation with the student council is sponsoring this second ballot.

The fact was also brought to light as a result of an investigation into the matter that several votes which had been thrown out, especially some cast for E. E. Ericson, H. G. Baity, R. B. House, and F. F. Bradshaw.

GRANVILLE GIVES VARIED PROGRAM WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Distinguished English Actor Offers Well-Balanced Presentation in Memorial Hall.

V. L. Granville, the distinguished English actor, presented his "Dramatic Interludes," a well-balanced and varied presentation in make-up and costume from the drama of all periods, in Memorial hall, Wednesday night, before a large and appreciative audience. Granville said, as a prelude to his program, that the stage as an educational feature had a definite bearing on the progress of man. It was his opinion that the stage will always exercise a great influence over people.

Portrayed Characters

Granville portrayed noted characters in drama from the Bible up to the present period. His portrayal of Job was characteristic of his talent and ability for the role of serious drama, and the role of Lady Wishfort was an excellent interpretation of light humorous comedy.

The fine acting and the period costumes were raised to even a higher point of excellence by the remarkable lighting effects that were used.

Another feature of the evening's entertainment was the actor's ability to quick changes in costume and make-up, which he accomplished with only the aid of a very small red light attached to his make-up box.

Distorted Seers

To those of the student body who heard V. L. Granville's interpretation of Aristophanes' famous character, Strepsiades, the old man's remark that in his day "youths were well behaved, as was becoming of them" gave food for thought. Strepsiades represents the older generation of two thousand years ago, yet equally he might be the picture of a modern father lecturing to his collegiate son. It seems to be a universal fallacy that each generation looks askance at the succeeding generation, forgetful all the while of its own youth. The old, having settled down to a steady mature life, see the young fitting away their time in what they are wont to call "frivolity," and so seeing throw up their hands in holy horror.

Yet strange as it may seem civilization has survived some four thousand years. Not survived merely, but gradually grown in ideals, morals, and culture. And stranger still to some, it portends to survive many more thousand years.

America has just passed through a period at which its morals, not only among the young but the old as well, have been most lax. Whatever the causes of this laxity, it has brought forth much pessimistic comment and all manner of dire predictions as to the future. If only these pessimists would realize that they are looking with a distorted sight, if only they would endeavor to understand the trouble and try to help where it is necessary, they would be doing much more to save the world for posterity.—V.C.R.

A Cool Head

The now comparatively peaceful complexion of the international situation is due for an unprecedented jolt in five or six days when debtor nations must pay their obligations to the United States. The debt situation, put on the shelf during the late turbulent presidential campaign, has now become a political medicine ball for newspapers and statesmen alike. Dogmatism reigns supreme on both sides, and it is evident that this nation is fully prepared through the agencies of subtle propaganda and vociferous oratory efforts, that Uncle Sam will jump off the deep end in a fever heat. The cloud of steam resulting may cast not a halo, but rather an impenetrable cloud about the now hazy situation.

Somewhat in the neighborhood of one hundred and fifty millions of dollars is the due to be exacted by Uncle Sam this fifteenth of December. Compared with our deficit, our debt (nee veterans' relief), and the several appropriations of the navy and war departments, the debt is but a baby whitecap in a maelstrom. Yet, of course, it is a matter of principle. The present attitude of the debtor nations is one of recalcitrant obstinacy when the matter of future payments is merely whispered.

Our solons agree that the debts must be paid.—The Chamber of Deputies is emphatic in stating that no possible majority in favor of payment would be realized within that body. England demurs. Italy accedes. Latvia prances. And the debt merry-go-round wheezes on.

Should our Congress be crass enough to demand payment and in the final analysis, should Parliament and the Chamber reciprocate adversely, international good will will be plunged into a pretty mess. Default will spell economical doom. A demand will precipitate default and throw the ensuing burden upon the people.

May Uncle Sam keep a cool head.—D.C.S.

To Be or Not to Be

If it is true that the officials of the University are considering a reversion to the antiquated system of dividing the college year into semesters, instead of quarters, then the student body should rise up to defend the present system.

Speaking from the standpoint of one who has had experience under both systems, it seems that no fair comparison can be made between the two. The semester system had its rise in the old order of things and has only its age to commend it; the quarter system is a product of the new scientific regime, and gains its support from the forces of rationalism and pragmatism, rather than from traditional sentimentality.

The fact that under the quarter system, the student's work is presented in a unit permits both intensity and extensity in the field of study; intensity in that the student is enabled to concentrate his endeavors within a limited sphere until he has mastered the subject matter; extensity in that, during the course of a year, or, four years, a wide variety of subjects are covered.

Another advantage of the quarter system is that, if a student is forced to drop out of school, for any reason whatever, he may do so without loss of credit for the work already accomplished, for that unit of work is completed. Under the semester system, this is impossible, except in unusual cases.

Aside from specific reasons, our quarter system is much more satisfactory in general than the older semester division of the year. The quarter system is becoming more and more popular among colleges and the question awaiting decision is whether we shall relinquish our place as a moulder of modern and efficient policy, or regress to the archaic methods of yesterday; whether we shall be guided by reason or tradition.—W.A.S.

American Actors Very Popular In England

enough to pay to hear English lecturers," he charges. They want to hear lecturers from England in the same way that they like to hear grand dukes of Russia, who, if left to any other initiative, would be no more than doormen for hotels."

One observes few American lecturers in England. The reason, he explains, is that the English people are not interested unless the man has accomplished a great deal. As likely as not, the actor joked, the lecturer would have a falsetto voice which would bore the listener into forgetfulness.

The English are, however, interested in foreign actors. Granville cites Talullah Bankhead, American motion picture actress, whose boundless English popularity elevated her to scintillating stardom in America. In reference to his own coming to America, Granville quizzically says of himself, "I am in America, because I—I am an actor."

Entered Stage in Ireland

Granville entered stage life in Ireland. Going on the stage was distinctly against his father's wishes, so that his story of success reads like fiction. After graduating from King's College in London, which is his home, he compromised the matter with his family and entered an art school. Unable to withstand the irresistible lure of the stage, he ran away to join a stock company at Londonderry, in which he began by playing small roles.

As he was carefully making up his face for his first appearance before a Carolina audience, the distinguished artist talked of his life. "I remember very little of my first night," he said, as he applied a few dots of rouge. "I was scared to death. The lights were blinding, and when I could see, the few white faces in the audience frightened me. I got through it somehow."

Through the use of make-up, which is responsible for the amazing character effects which Granville produces with lightning speed for his audience, his face was gradually assuming a youthful appearance which belied the fact that the man looks at least fifty without his make-up.

Granville's first few shows were with a repertoire company, so he had a new part every night. Here he gathered much of the skill which ranks him among the foremost character actors in the world today. He soon left the stock company however, seeking a more dignified theatrical position, which he found in London. Through his long years of numberless productions, he has worked up to his one-man show, which surpasses many more involved productions, and ranks him with the foremost actors of the day.

and Trinity College (now Duke University). At the present day, the association consists of almost every school of the better class in the southern states from Virginia to Texas. This includes all good secondary schools, private and public, junior colleges, and larger senior institutions.

Purpose of Group

The association was formed for mutual protection and enlightenment. The purposes were to elevate scholarship and devise plans for making the entrance requirements identical for different colleges, and to develop preparatory schools. The association has attained immense importance, and is recognized all over the country as one of the leading educational bodies of its kind.

Institutions from North Carolina which are members of the association are the University, N. C. State, Davidson, Duke, Wake Forest, N. C. C. W., Meredith, Greensboro College, Salem, Catawba, Lenoir-Rhyne, Guilford, Queens-Chicora, Eastern Carolina Teachers' College, Mars Hill Junior College, and St. Mary's school. Elon and Flora MacDonald are both part members of the organization.

Crowd Of A Thousand See Bouts Of Tourney Finals

Spectators Witness Eight New Mural Champs Crowned in Tin Can Last Night.

ONE KNOCKOUT RECORDED

Olman, 135-Pounder, Loses on Technical Knockout to Kalb in Third Round.

The finals of the intramural boxing tourney were run off last night at the Tin Can before a crowd estimated at a thousand, and every fight on the program was replete with action and thrills that drew cheering from the spectators time and again.

The new champions all had to engage in hard battles before they earned their titles, none of the fights being one-sided. The victors will be given a banquet by Dean Paulsen, and the winning houses will receive points toward the possession of the intramural cup.

In the 115-pound championship tussle, Blalock of Grimes was shaded by Eustler of Sigma Nu in three fast rounds featured by some beautiful boxing. The first round was even, but Eustler had the second by a hair. He traveled at full speed in the last to clinch the decision.

Crawford of Best House gave Frucht of Lewis all he could handle in the 125-pound title match, but Frucht came strong in the third to take the verdict. The bout had the spectators on their feet most of the time.

Kalb of Everett won in the 135-pound division over Olman of the same dorm by a technical knockout in the second. Olman suffered a deep cut over the eye and Referee Marty Levinson was forced to stop the fight.

Sutton of Best House and Gillie, also of Best House, both 14-karat sluggers, put on a two-man revolution for the 145-pound title. These boys thrilled the fans with a bout devoid of science but with one that had such furious fighting that it was almost impossible to follow the blows. The boys were even at the end of the third, but Sut-

TEAM READY FOR FRACAS SATURDAY

Coaches Martin and McIver Rest Case, But Prospects for Trial Tomorrow Are Bright.

With razors sharpened and shins plastered, the doughty Orange County Training School grid terrors are ready for Henderson, whom they meet at Emerson field, Saturday afternoon for the Negro football title of the state.

Both coaches of the Chapel Hill team have been silent on prospects for the game, each one shifting the responsibility for a commitment when interviewed, but it is understood that Chapel Hill is favored to win by eleven knockouts. Team members are likewise silent in the face of invectives hurled by the Henderson team, stating only that somebody is "goin' to get a tall lickin' on Emerson field Saturday afternoon."

Kickoff at 2:30

The kickoff time has been set for 2:30 o'clock. When the whistle blows, Coaches Martin and McIver will send their strongest team into the fray from the start. The tentative backfield, according to all information that could be obtained yesterday, includes Merritt and Jones at halfback, Stroud at fullback, and Haiskin at quarter.

Tickets for the fracas are being distributed by the senior Y cabinet, sponsors, and the proceeds will go toward the upkeep of a colored nurse for Chapel Hill negro residents.

FRESHMEN HOLD PRACTICE GAME

While No First Team Yet Chosen, Dameron Sends Several Quints Into Scrimmage.

After two weeks of passing, shooting, dribbling, and pivoting drills, Coach Sandy Dameron picked out some teams and held his first freshman basketball scrimmage of the year.

No First Team Chosen

Dameron indicated that no first teams had been picked and that all of the candidates would be given a chance to show their stuff before the first game. The teams were given a few simple plays which they drilled on and used in the scrimmage.

The scrimmage was unusually fast for early season and many of the Tar Babies showed signs of developing into Tar Heel stars. The form of the guards was especially outstanding.

There will probably be many changes in the lineups before the first game and a few real players who haven't gotten their mid-season form as yet will displace some of the starting men. However to date Jim McCachren, brother of last year's star varsity guard, Red Phelps, Melvin Nelson, Quincey Whitaker, Bill Rankin, and Murry Kanner have done the best work.

STATE COLLEGES MAY RELINQUISH TEN-GAME SLATE

Carolina and Duke Only Two of Big Five Teams That Played Ten Games This Season.

After staggering on the brink of destruction for over a decade now, the decrepit and worn out system of ten-game football schedules has apparently been definitely abandoned in North Carolina.

Carolina and Duke University were the only gridiron clubs in the state to play a half score contests this year; and now since Duke has dropped Washington and Lee, and Tennessee has dropped Carolina, it looks like nine tilt slates are in vogue.

Other Schools Play Nine

State and Davidson negotiated nine games this season, while Wake Forest, the final member of the Big Five, had but eight encounters. All indications are pointing to the fact that all of these schools are planning to stick to their 1932 layout for next year.

What looked like a future Thanksgiving rivalry, with W. and L. was stopping after a trio of contests, Duke being victorious in all three. Dispatches from Duke have it that a nine game slate is agreeable to Devil officials; and in the event that no other opponent takes the place of the Generals, it is very likely that Duke will end its season on the Saturday prior to Thanksgiving.

Vols Help Tar Heels

Tennessee facilitated the desire of Carolina coaches not to meet Duke and Virginia successively, and so it is very highly probable that the Tar Heel schedule will be juggled around in order to play the Duke game some time before the Virginia set-to.

Trojan-Irish Tilt

Over a hundred thousand fans are expected to attend the Notre Dame-Southern California classic to be played in the Los Angeles Olympic stadium tomorrow. Trojan Officials said recently that the "sold-out" sign would probably have to be hung out before Hunk Anderson's boys even arrived.

CAROLINA SENDS FOUR DELEGATES TO CONFERENCE

Questions on Football Rules to Be Discussed at Southern Conference Meeting.

Carolina will be well represented at the Knoxville meeting of the Southern conference officials this afternoon, sending four able men to carry the Tar Heels' colors. Coach Bob Fetzner, track coach and director of Carolina athletics; Dean Allen Wilson Hobbs, faculty member of the Carolina athletic council; Bo Shepard, assistant graduate of athletics; and Coach Chuck Collins, head of football, will comprise the Carolina delegation to the Southern conference seminar.

Several very important questions are due for discussion, and all Dixie will look with interest on the movements of this meeting. Many sports writers and even the officials of the conference, itself, have said that this meeting will be the crisis of the group of schools. By the actions taken at the convention, the Southern conference family may prosper or die.

Selection of City

One of the most important topics to be discussed which will interest all fans of basketball in North Carolina will be the selection of the tournament city for this year. A strong movement started by the schools in the northern part of the conference has clamored for a change from Atlanta as the site for the conference cage tourney. Coach Gus Tebell, University of Virginia coach and member of the conference committee on basketball, has fostered the change move and has suggested that Raleigh, be the most logical city for the next tournament. The tournament has been provided for by the Raleigh Junior Chamber of Commerce which guarantees that ample funds for the support of the tourney will be provided. Raleigh has just opened a War Memorial auditorium which can accommodate any large size basketball tourney.

There is another topic up before the Knoxville group. This is the consideration of enlarging the Southern conference family. Wake Forest, Davidson, Richmond University, Emory and Henry, and Loyola, are schools desiring entrance into the conference. However, there is still another group which wants to do away with the group entirely, separating into several smaller conferences.

Also there is the subject of eligibility rules governing the athletes who "work" during the summer months, making money to go back to college in the fall. This will be thoroughly discussed, say the Tulane athletic authorities, who are still incensed from the ineligibility of "Poppa" Felts.

More schools want a definite limitation placed on the financial status of these athletes. Some contend that a boy who plays in a collegiate band, making easy money, is more guilty of professionalism than a boy who plays in more than the allowed three games of semi-pro baseball a week. Still other officials want limits placed on the salaries that these summer athletes may obtain whether they are crooners or life guards.

The convention must also list its recommendations to the national football rules committee, as based from their findings of the new brand of football as played under the new rules in the south. Wallace Wade, former Alabama coach and now at Duke, is sponsoring further changes in the time out limitations and substitution rules.

Five Prizes Announced For All-State, All-Southern Picks

Four Local and One Durham Merchants Offer Prizes For Selections.

CONTEST ENDS TOMORROW

All Choices Must Be in by 7:00 O'clock Tomorrow Night; Interest Is High.

The all-state and all-southern contest being sponsored by THE DAILY TAR HEEL closes tomorrow night and all choices are to be in by 7:00 o'clock. Much interest in the contest is being shown by students, and the six prizes to be awarded the winners have caused a lot of comment.

Five Prizes Announced

The Carolina theatre has offered a week's pass; Pritchard-Lloyd has a carton of cigarettes for a winner (Lucky Strike, Camel, or Chesterfield); Campus Confectionery will give a necktie; and Carolina Barber Shop will give a shampoo; and Randolph-MacDonald and Stetson "D" have not definitely named their prizes. Then the glove compact which the Durham office of Balfours is donating to the co-ed who names the winning all-state eleven.

The two official elevens which are to be model all-star teams have been chosen and both are different in their class from the mythical selections published in state and southern newspapers.

The placing of backfield material for the all-southern team is the big problem there and choices for the center of the line have caused much debate for the all-state team. Two backfield berths on this later eleven are practically settled but the other two positions are causing no little trouble.

VOLS TO RETURN TO HILL IN 1934

Tennessee Game Postponed Until 1934 to Avoid Two Successive Trips to Section.

Further word comes from the Tennessee athletic authorities says that the Tar Heels will reappear on the Vols' football schedule in 1934, playing at Kenan stadium, Chapel Hill.

Carolina was wiped off the Tennessee schedule for the fall of 1933 when the Vols' athletic directors deemed it unwise to make two trips into North Carolina, playing Duke and Carolina over a period of two weeks. Georgia Tech will also be stricken-off the Tennessee football card.

Next fall would mark the return of Tennessee to Chapel Hill, but this meeting in Kenan stadium must be postponed another year.

VARSITY JAVELIN TOSSERS RETURN FOR COMPETITION

With Promising Material Coming Up From Freshman Team Prospects Are Bright.

With an imposing array of javelin tossers slated to return for Carolina's 1933 track club, chances for success in that event this spring are rising daily.

Ralston LeGore heads the list of returning men in this event. LeGore is the holder of the University record, the state record, and the Southern conference record in this event. Only a junior this year, LeGore is on tap to turn in a spectacular performance after his experience last year.

Sets New Record

The old javelin record was held by Jeff Fordham at 181 feet, 11 inches; and LeGore bettered this mark with a record of 208 feet, 7 inches. The new record holder has some 190 pounds to put behind his throws for Bob Fetzner's club this spring.

Stuart Chandler, all-state football back, is another lad who is expected to do great work with the spear this spring. Carolina's superlative griddier also bettered Jeff Fordham's old record with a throw of 187 feet in the Virginia meet.

Frank Armfield, a High Point youngster, who won his numeral last year, will be another addition to the javelin squad. Frank is small, but he gets around powerfully quick.

Charlie Hubbard, a mate of Armfield on last year's yearling club, is another man who is expected to improve perceptibly. C. O. Spencer, a rising junior, is expected to perform work of a higher order this year.

NEEDY FAMILIES IN COUNTY AIDED BY RELIEF WORK

Welfare Officer Reports 515 Needy Families in November; December Estimate Increases.

Five hundred and fifteen needy families, in Orange county, were aided during the month of November, according to G. H. Lawrence, superintendent of county welfare. The sum of $4,525.95 was expended.

Lawrence estimated that the number of dependent families would increase in December, to 550. He stated that approximately $7,425.00 will be needed for the work this month, and that only $4,294.51 could be hoped for.

The welfare work of the county is carried on by township committees, headed by Lawrence, who is assisted by Miss Dorothy Robinson. Central headquarters for the work is in Chapel Hill.

Lawrence stated that the continuance of federal funds depended upon the local support.

Two hundred men in the county are at work on eleven projects, which are mostly road work undertakings. They are paid the equivalent of ten cents per hour in groceries and clothing. The number of days that the men work depends upon the size of the family.

University Graduates Like College Abroad

A half dozen of recent Carolina graduates are studying medicine at the University of Edinburgh in Scotland.

James Kauffman, '31, of Brooklyn; Harold H. Teitlebaum, '32, of Jersey City; Bertram S. Oxmain, '31, of Brooklyn; Joseph Heller, '31, of Brooklyn; Philip Kauffman, '32, of Brooklyn; and I. H. L. Shlestein, '32 form this group of Carolina alumni studying in the ancient stronghold of learning.

Latest reports have it that Scotland's adopted Tar Heels are teaching the cooks to make corn pone, corn fritters, and hot cakes, "three essential dishes unobtainable elsewhere in Edinburgh," according to dispatches.

Other items in their communications have it that they think the rainy weather is terrible, but this is a "minor incident to the ambitious medical student," and they think Edinburgh with its some 4,000 students and its 350 years of history is "another great University."

House Nearly Doubles Vote Of Nearest Competitor In Ballot

Eight Hundred and Fifty-Seven Students Cast Vote in Daily Tar Heel Straw Ballot.

ERICSON PLACES SECOND

Poll Indicates Representative Student Opinion on Choice of New Vice-President.

Robert Burton House, executive secretary of the University, received almost double the vote cast for his nearest opponent to lead THE DAILY TAR HEEL straw vote with 219 votes to determine student opinion on the choice of a vice-president of the Greater University as head of the University here, results tabulated last night showed.

Eight hundred and fifty-seven students cast ballots in the poll which was conducted by THE DAILY TAR HEEL under the supervision of the student council.

Ericson Second

Dr. E. E. Ericson of the University English department was second with 121 votes. Dr. L. R. Wilson, former University librarian now located at the University of Chicago, was third with a total of 89 votes.

Dr. F. F. Bradshaw, dean of students, with 72 votes and Dean H. G. Baity of the engineering school, with seventy followed as fourth and fifth respectively.

Fifty-seven votes were cast to keep President F. P. Graham, who was elevated to the presidency of the Greater University, a month ago, as head of the local institution.

The poll was conducted to ascertain representative student opinion on the question of a successor of President Graham to direct the University here. A similar poll was conducted last week but was considered too

RHODES AWARDS GROUP TO CHOOSE NOMINEES TODAY

North Carolina Selection Committee Will Choose Candidates for Scholarships.

The North Carolina committee of selection for the Rhodes Scholarships will meet at 9:30 o'clock this morning in 213-214 Graham Memorial for the purpose of selecting this state's candidates for these awards. The two men selected here today will appear in Atlanta next week in competition with candidates from five other states before a district committee for the final selection.

State Candidates

The North Carolina candidates for these awards are: R. Mayne Albright, Robert W. Barnett, Charles G. Rose, Jr., and Beverly R. Thurman, all of the University; Edward O. Guerrant, Duncan Daniel McBryde and Leland McKeithan, of Davidson; Charles K. Bradshaw and Merriam Cunningham, of Duke; David H. Parsons and Samuel Smith, of Guilford; Everett Couch of N. C. State, and J. F. Mathews of Wake Forest.

The members of the selection committee are: Josephus Daniels, chairman, Dean W. C. Davidson of Duke, Professor G. R. Vowles of Davidson, President H. S. Hilley of Atlantic Christian College, and Professor C. P. Spruill, Jr., of the University.

DORMITORY CLUB HAS NEW NAME

Smokers for Dorm Students Begun This Year Will Be Continued Next Quarter.

At the meeting of the dormitory club Wednesday, the name of the organization was changed to the Inter-Dormitory council, the reason being given that its services and powers are those of a council rather than of a club. Also the new council has been given a furnished office on the mezzanine floor of Graham Memorial by the manager, Mayne Albright, it was learned at the meeting.

Dormitory smokers will probably be given for the students in each dormitory after the Christmas holidays, it was decided. The smokers will be given once a week in Graham Memorial, and students in each dormitory will probably give small contributions for refreshments.

It was announced that, in accordance with requests of the council, mirrors, towel racks, and improved lights are being placed in dormitory wash rooms.

Bad Checks Decrease In Size And Number

A material decrease in the number of bad checks over any other month, and a decided decrease in the amount of the checks involved was revealed in the report of the bad-check committee for November, according to William Medford, chairman of the committee.

The number of checks returned to students during November was 166, and the amount involved was $977.55. All of the bad checks have been taken up, except eleven.

During the month seven students have been placed on probation for bad checks, and one student had been suspended.

Initiation Requirement Tangles Pledge And Snake In Wild Ride

Gullible Neophyte Journeys to Raleigh to Procure Reptile and After Hazardous Experiences Returns Only to Discover That It Was Not Needed for Ceremony.

To demand the performance of seemingly impossible feats of a pledge during initiation has long been a favorite sport with fraternities. But the recently discovered story of the pledge who took his brothers' command too literally bids fair to surpass most of the stock tales retailed by the members of the various lodges.

Impishly these particular brothers enjoined the neophyte to betake himself to the woods and not to return without a snake. Having been told that the reptile was imperative as a part of the initiation ritual, the student concluded that he must have a snake but thought it rather foolish to look for one in the woods.

Decides to Bum

This cerebral activity resulted in his standing a little later on the curbstone in Chapel Hill bumming a ride. Finally he was picked up and was speedily carried toward the capital city, ever farther and farther away from the local snake-ridden hills.

Once in Raleigh, he went to see his friend, the curator of the state museum. Confiding his dire distress, the pledge made it quite emphatic that he wanted a snake, "an awfully gentle one, a little one. Please, sir, I don't want one that might be vicious."

Promising to lend him one temporarily, the curator looked

PARISH HOUSE TO EXHIBIT ETCHINGS

Elizabeth O'Neill Verner, Well Known Charleston Artist, Will Have Her Works Shown.

The etchings of Elizabeth O'Neill Verner, the Charleston etcher, will be placed on exhibit in the Episcopal parish house next week. Among them will be what she calls her Plantation Series, made up of scenes and characters of plantation life in the lowland country of South Carolina. One is "Noon on the Combahee," another is "Providence Church," and there are several portraits of negroes.

Recently Mrs. Verner's etchings were shown at the Print club in Wilmington, Delaware.

A tea will be conducted in her honor at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. E. Caldwell on Rosemary lane. Members of the art department of the community club and others interested in art are invited.

Mrs. Verner will arrive in Chapel Hill today for a week's visit at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Jack Hamilton.

W. J. Miller Addresses Last A. I. E. E. Meeting

At the monthly meeting of the A. I. E. E. conducted at Phillips hall Wednesday night the principal address was made by Professor W. J. Miller, head of the department on the topic "Fundamentals of Rate Making." The delegates to the annual convention of the A. I. E. E. gave a report of the convention's work to the group.

An associate editor was scheduled to be elected for the Carolina Engineer but this was postponed until next quarter because of the lack of a quorum present. However, Fisher Black was appointed in this capacity until the election.

FALL RUSHING RULES RETAINED FOR WINTER

Rushing will be conducted at the opening of the winter term in the same manner and under the same regulations as during the fall term, Irvin Boyle, president of the interfraternity council stated yesterday. The exact dates of the period for the various fraternities to interview new men has not been determined, but will be decided at the first meeting of the council in January.

ALL REGISTRATION WILL TAKE PLACE BEFORE HOLIDAYS

Christmas Recess Will Begin December 21 and Classes Will Begin January 3.

All registration of University students for the winter quarter will take place before the Christmas holidays, according to the revised schedule issued by the faculty committee on registration yesterday.

Seniors, juniors, and graduate students will register Monday through Friday of next week while sophomores and freshmen will register after Saturday, December 17, and before noon Wednesday, December 21. Freshmen and sophomores in the engineering and pharmacy schools will arrange their schedules with their deans at times to be announced later.

Classes January 3

The Christmas holidays, which officially begins at noon, December 21, will end January 2, and classwork for the winter quarter will start Tuesday, January 3. On this date all bills become due, but the registration committee has arranged an alphabetical schedule for the payment of the charges.

Juniors, seniors, and graduate students whose names begin with A through C will register Monday, December 12; D through H, Tuesday; I through O, Wednesday; P through S, Thursday; T through Z, and students in the schools of medicine, library science, and pharmacy (except freshmen) will register Friday.

Beginning Saturday, December 17, and running until noon, December 21, will be the period of registration for freshmen and sophomores, except those in the engineering and pharmacy schools who will make other arrangements with their deans, to register.

Procedure for Registration

The procedure for registration outlined by the committee is listed as follows:

DOUGLAS SHOWS FILM OF VENEZUELA TO STUDENTS

Dr. John G. Douglas of the geology department entertained the members of Sigma Gamma Epsilon, geology fraternity at their regular meeting last night by showing several reels of film that he made in Venezuela.

Dr. Douglas was stationed at Manicabo, Venezuela, for five years as paleontologist for the Gulf and Lago petroleum companies. The pictures made in this district showed various methods of drilling for oil and views of general interest.

Greater University Head Shows That Increased Budget Is Absolutely Necessity.

PRESIDENT DEPLORES CUTS

Funds Asked for Now Are Less Than Half of Those Petitioned for in 1929.

"The present budget request for the University for an appropriation of $691,924 for maintenance is $771,143 less than the appropriation of $1,463,067 for maintenance asked for in 1929," President Frank P. Graham told alumni assembled here last night from all sections of the state for their annual general assembly.

Dr. Graham said that "in 1929 the University asked for maintenance an amount which was almost a hundred thousand dollars more than double the request now made. This present request is $202,505 less than the $894,429 actually received from the state in 1928-1929.

"The appropriation of $721,000 made by the legislature for this year, which was about a 20 per cent cut of the previous appropriation, suffered a further cut of 30 per cent in the allotments of the State Budget Bureau which carried the University this year to the destructive level of $504,700. The $691,924 asked for the coming year is thus almost $30,000 under the legislative appropriation for this year."

Graham Outlines Budget

President Graham, who was the principal speaker, outlined the University's budget request for the next biennium. Over 125 alumni, representing more than sixty local alumni associations and fifty class organizations were in attendance.

PI KAPPA PHIS OF THREE STATES TO HAVE CONVENTION

Local Chapter to Entertain Two Hundred Guests This Afternoon and Night.

Two hundred members of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity will arrive today to represent eleven chapters in a convention of the fraternity here.

Members are expected from institutions in North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia, including Davidson, North Carolina, State, Duke University, Roanoke College, Washington and Lee University, University of South Carolina, Furman, Wofford, Presbyterian, and Charleston College. The convention today is to take place on the anniversary of the founding of Pi Kappa Phi.

National Head to Speak

National president of the fraternity, Dr. A. Pelzer Wagner, of William and Mary College, will be guest speaker. Addresses will be made by John D. Carroll, of Lexington, S. C., who is past president of the national organization, and Dudley DeWitt Carroll, dean of the school of commerce here.

Following an official business session this afternoon, the visiting Pi Kappa Phis will be entertained with a banquet at the house of the local chapter. Entertainment will continue tonight at the Carolina Inn.

No Part in Education

In an editorial* entitled "In Defense of R. O. T. C." the editor of the Oregon Daily Emerald attempts to offer his answer to the question, "What place has the R. O. T. C. on the campus?" From the standpoint of excusing military training in general the editorial succeeds fairly commendably. But it completely overlooks the last three words in the question, namely, "on the campus," and as a consequence it fails to show any direct relationship such training has to a student's college education.

The editorial quite logically points out that war should be attacked "not at its processes but at its origins." But having made this statement it fails to follow this truth to its ultimate conclusion.

In trying to use this statement to defend R. O. T. C. the editorial has unconsciously pointed out the essential defect in any type of military training. And like all the other types R. O. T. C. is itself concerned only with a training in the "processes" of war. As a consequence it cannot be expected to "attack" war but only to attempt to end it after it has once begun.

War does not originate in the fighting and warfare itself, but rather in the strained relationships between individuals. Because of this fact the task of attacking war falls directly in line with the duties a normal college education is expected to perform. In college, to put it crassly, the student should learn the rudiments of dealing with his fellow-man. If his education fails in this respect, its essential purpose is defeated.

An education is by its very nature an attack on the origins of war. And it is nothing short of an admission of its own failure for a college to include in its curriculum a course in R. O. T. C. After all, the training a student receives in R. O. T. C. is put into use only after everything his college education stands for has fallen down.

An R. O. T. C. unit at any college might well be looked upon as a white flag of surrender, and a good indication that the educators of that institution have fled their posts, being too weak to stand their ground.

Chicago, Columbia, Near the Millennium

Awakening from their erudite slumbers, two of our largest American universities have apparently gone materialist in keeping with the demands for modern, "practical," education. The University of Chicago, for one, recently granted a Master of Science degree to a candidate (presumably a woman) who wrote a thesis on "Four Methods of Washing Dishes." And Columbia, renowned as a center of liberal thought, has conferred a Doctorate of Philosophy on a student whose dissertation was on "The Duties of School Janitors!"

But why go to college to learn how to wash dishes or fire furnaces? First-hand information about either of the subjects is available without the expense of tuition, and four years' time can be spent much more profitably in washing dishes than in enumerating the methods involved. By no means possible can we conceive that any such thesis is either a contribution to higher learning or a boon to housewives. And as for the doctor of janitorial philosophy, he could be of much more service to humanity by following the profession to which he seems to be inclined.

But if Columbia and the University of Chicago must hand out degrees for such elevated nonsense, why limit it to their graduate schools? Why not modify their curricula to the standards set by these research papers? Surely it would be much more advantageous to equip the greater number of undergraduates with practical training in the little things in life. They might institute a few new courses, such as "Elementary Concepts of Lawnmowing," or "Cultural and Aesthetic Values of Cooking Cabbage."

Now that modern education has decreed oblivion for the classics, it is not surprising to find degrees being awarded for research into dish-washing methods or the duties of janitors. The present trend seems to indicate that the American University will eventually become a pragmatic Utopia.—A.T.D.

Wresting Liquor From Politics

Any liquor control plan that is adopted by Congress after the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment should take liquor out of politics, stamp out bootlegging and promote temperance. Drinking is more a matter of taste and the means to satisfy that taste than it is a political issue. It is even more a whim of the appetite than it is a question of conscience.

A national enforcement or regulation commission will be essential to any plan for the legal sale and manufacture of liquor. Such a commission should be appointed by the President; its composition should be bi-partisan and it should be given complete authority to carry out the provisions governing the dispensing of liquor. Politics should be kept out of its appointment and out of its operations, as far as possible.

In setting up a legal liquor business, Congress should set the prices for liquor reasonably low, at the sacrifice even of some revenue, and the standards for its manufacture high. Whether the idea is liked or not, the government or its approved agencies must enter into competition with bootleggers in the sale of liquor. Bootlegging is an established business. If the government hopes to "muscle in," it must sell good liquor cheap. Further it must be prepared to take any too aggressive a competitor for a nice long ride. Enforcement costs will certainly not be, nor should they be, lowered during the first years after prohibition.

In regulating the sale of intoxicants, Congress should make beer and wines cheap and accessible for the citizen of modest means and taste. As one Senator testified before the ways and means committee, good beer never hurt anybody. But distilled liquors should be expensive—not prohibitive in price—and difficult to get, especially in large quantities. Drunkards and minors should be blacklisted in liquor sales places.

Reviewing the abuses of the prohibition era, abuses which were inevitable from the nature of the American citizenry, it is evident that Congress must take liquor out of politics, fight the bootleggers with their own weapons, and make of our people a nation of beer-drinkers and cocktail-sippers rather than corn-liquor-guzzlers. Let us have no more of experiments noble in purpose but futile in practice.—E.C.D.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

English

The king's language has went democratic, and we think that everybody should make their protest, or maybe try and do it. At a meeting of language teachers at Memphis they went on record as favoring the Leonard report, which is a pamphlet named "Correct English Usages" and says that it is o.k. for people to use such grammar as "It is me," "Who are you looking for?", "None are expected," "Go slow," "It is awfully cold," "Loan me a pencil" and etc. Anybody can use split infinitives, use a preposition to end a sentence with, or anything else they want to do. "Language was made for the man, not man for the language" is sure a pretty good idea, and that's what the National Council of the American Teachers of English say, anyway.

There is a hundred more approved usages which is alright too, but we got to go slow on space.

Rasputin

A gullible friend of ours from Chicago reports that as he was hunting through the Loop district for a good movie attraction, a sign over a theatre blazing "Rasputin . . . First Showing" drew him into a stuffy little movie house. He paid a dollar for a reserved seat and sat through six reels of silent film made ten years ago for Soviet propaganda, sound effects supplied by a tinny piano under the screen.

Pun

This column wishes that some one would be kind enough to place us in a position to use our latest "Between the Davila and the deep blue sea."

Censored

We have here a report for the year ending June, 1932, from the Motion Picture Division of the New York State Treasury department, a group of men who concern themselves with clipping objectionable shots and dialogue from the cinematic attractions shown in the Empire state. Last year, for instance, the Division scanned 1,652 miles of film, which, we have figured, would just about stretch from Tuckahoe, N. J., to somewhere in Mississippi.

Three hundred and twenty-six films came in for deletions. There were 2,580 eliminations made, classed variously: Scenes, 1,487; titles, 1,093.

The public was saved: 315 indecencies, 266 inhuman shots, 1,116 sequences tending to incite crime, 811 immoral or tending to corrupt morals, sacrilegious shots, 72.

At least, the movies are getting nicer. Last year 3,031 eliminations were made. But, of course, Clara Bow had not come back.

With Contemporaries

In Defense of R. O. T. C.

Again the question "What place has the R. O. T. C. on the campus?" has been raised by Chester E. Flory. This time he chides the editor with looking backward. Has Mr. Flory ever looked backward to the time of 1914 and 1918 when untrained Frenchmen and Americans were thrown against mechanized troops?

Has he ever talked with any of the men in the veterans' hospital in Portland or in any of the other units of the rehabilitation program? Has he ever carefully investigated the origins of the World War and the manner in which Germany and the United States were drawn into it? Has he ever tried to find out how responsible soldiers of China were for their war with Japan at Shanghai?

If he has, he will undoubtedly answer the question "What place has the R. O. T. C. on the campus?" on his own accord. If he has, he will attack war not in its processes but at its origins.

The French troops in 1914 were trained and equipped for warfare as waged in 1871. In their bright blue and red uniforms and with old rifles they marched against the Germans in their grey uniforms and with their machine guns. Though the French were valiant and determined, they could not stand up against the German rain of steel. It is still one of the modern marvels that the French stopped the German war machine at the Marne.

Then in 1918 Yankee troops were thrown into the lines after a few months of training. With the exception of a few regular army officers and national guardsmen, there were no commanders who had received much training in reading maps, in leading large bodies of men or patrols under night conditions. There are numerous accounts of units being practically annihilated because the leaders were untrained in reading maps and led their men into positions where they were under allied as well as German fire.

At Walter Reid hospital in Washington, D. C., in 1919 and 1920 were several hundred men mangled by the war. Many could tell stories of being led by poorly trained officers. They could tell of seeing men, poorly trained in bayonet, trying to defend themselves in close combat. They could tell of poor artillery equipment that dropped shells on the allied troops rather than on the German lines. They could tell of clerks, taxi drivers, farmers, college students, and men from all other walks of life, who had only a few weeks, at the most, of training in defense against gas, trying to get their masks on in time to save themselves from death due to seared throats and lungs—death that was too short in coming.

It is these things that the R. O. T. C. is striving to prevent. True, the students receive only a superficial training. But this will prepare them to get the most from the few weeks of intensive training they will receive in case of mobilization.

This presupposes that another halocaust such as that of 1914-18, if not even worse, will occur within the lifetime of these students. Is such a thing impossible, though? If it is not impossible, should not these men who will have to take part in it, be prepared?

The World War, outstanding students of history have become convinced, was not caused by anything that happened solely in 1914. Rather, it was caused by a series of events, some of them ante-dating the Franco-Prussian War of 1871. These were political, economic, and military in nature. The military causes probably could have been ironed out had it not been for the political and economic factors.

Rather than attack soldiers, who are merely the instruments of political and economic institutions, Mr. Flory might well devote his attention to these two basic factors in the cause of war. He might tell that soldiers are the ones who have to make the supreme sacrifice, if not of life, of faith in humanity.

First Aid for unbroken joints

How to keep silt and sand from clogging telephone cable ducts was one problem put up to engineers at Bell Telephone Laboratories. No known method of joining sections of vitrified clay conduit effected a seepage-tight joint.

With scientific thoroughness, telephone men made many tests under service conditions. They devised a bandage of cheese-cloth, waterproof paper and mortar. Easily made and applied, this mortar bandage is tight against silt and sand. It prevents clogging, greatly simplifies the installation of new telephone cables and the removal of old ones.

Through solving such interesting problems, Bell System men work steadily nearer to their goal—telephone service of highest possible efficiency.

North Carolina Mentor Wants Game Returned to Students' And Coaches' Control.

Chuck Collins is the new president of the Southern Conference association of football coaches.

The election of the Tar Heel mentor came last Thursday at Knoxville immediately after he had unleashed a fiery criticism against Dixie gridiron officials, "autocrats" of the field as he termed them. Collins said that officials had been taking "the game into their own hands and were "grandstanding" entirely too much.

Hinting toward his own experience in the Duke game, Carolina's coach suggested that officials be called into a conference on the playing field upon a coach's questioning a decision. Offering a substitute for the present fifteen-yard penalty inflicted upon a team of a coach who enters the playing field, Collins presented a plan by which such a team is penalized only a timeout.

Collins Breaks Ice

For quite a while it has been expected that dissatisfied coaches would censure officiating methods of the past season, but Chuck was the only one to express his views on the deplorable situation. When he commenced his timely invective against officials on Dixie gridirons, A. R. Hutchens, secretary of the officials association, was sitting near him, but said nothing.

Collins, later questioned as to his stand, said that his suggestions were merely his own; and he had not put them in the form of a motion. He said that some movement of this sort had been under way previously, and that the arbiters had improved perceptibly; but of late the officials had been taking too much power.

He said: "I want to suggest a movement to give the game back to the students and the coaches and take it away from the officials."

QUINLAN DESIRES HARDER PRACTICE FOR MAT SQUAD

Wrestling Mentor Disappointed By Lack of Attendance at Work-outs in Tin Can.

Coach P. H. Quinlan, wrapped up in a heavy topcoat, supervised the varsity wrestling work-out yesterday. The grappling mentor has been in bed, confined with a bad cold and yesterday was the first time that he had been down for wrestling practice this week.

The wrestling coach expressed disappointment at the way some of the most promising mat candidates have not been coming out for practice. There has been irregular attendance by some aspirants who were supposed to have the inside track on their respective weights. Coach Quinlan is only considering the men who have been coming out regularly.

The grappling mentor wants it known that he wants harder workouts in the few remaining days prior to the holidays, because he believes that this training is very essential in that it brushes up the memory of some of the old men and gives a fine foundation for the rookies. Each day missed a lot of time is lost which will be hard to regain he stated.

NEGRO FOOTBALL GAME EXPECTED TO BE SCOREFEST

Ideal Weather and Importance Of Contest Should Make For Tough Battle.

With a clear sky and a dry field giving promise of an ideal setting for a veritable scoring fracas, the Orange County Training school gridmen tapered off with a light work-out yesterday afternoon and pronounced themselves ready to meet Henderson here this afternoon.

The Negro title of the state is at stake, for though the Chapel Hill school has established what appears to be a clear claim, Henderson maintains that the Orange county school won the title due to a deliberate miscalculation by the time keeper. In that battle Chapel Hill was victorious by an 8-0 count, yet they state that they will trounce Henderson by an even larger score on Emerson field this afternoon.

Game Begins at 2:30

The kickoff is set for 2:30 o'clock. Coaches Ed Martin and Gus McIver have been putting the Orange county boys through stiff practice sessions all week and state that their charges are in excellent condition for the fray. Dopesters maintain that there will be plenty of scoring, since the stakes are large and conditions excellent for a fast passing attack on the part of both teams.

The Training school lineup will include the following: at ends, Robert Strayhorn and V. Stroud; tackles, Green Durham and Henry Atwater; guards, B. Barbee and John Markham; center, Prince Haskin; halfbacks, Clarence Merritt and William Jones; quarterback, Frank Haskin; fullback, Jesse Stroud.

Stroud Predicts Easy Win

Stroud is captain of the Orange county aggregation and seems to be one of the most enthusiastic prophets for victory. He picks his team to win by at least three touchdowns.

The contest is being sponsored by the senior Y. M. C. A. cabinet, which will turn the proceeds over to the colored nurse maintained in the village for Negro inhabitants. Tickets will be sold by cabinet members to townspeople, students, and faculty members.

Haey Pulls for L. S. U.

United States Senator Huey Long, who was so delighted to learn about L. S. U. being the only undefeated and untied club in the south, wasn't disconcerted when told that many experts declared that Tennessee had won the Southern Conference title. "Hell," he snorted to a reporter in Washington recently, "Louisiana State University is the champion. You're just wasting your time, young man, just wasting your time. Everyone knows there isn't any official champion, but if there were..."

ONLY ONE CHOICE FOR EACH STUDENT

STELLAR TACKLE WILL RETURN TO STATE NEXT YEAR

Charlie Cobb, After Year on New York Police Force, Plans to Play Football Again.

Charlie Cobb, star tackle, who captained a State College football team in his junior year will return to the college next fall. This addition will give the Wolf-pack the finest pair of tackles in the state in Cobb, who was prominently mentioned for all-southern honors in his last year, and Rudy Seitz, another fine tackle, who will play his last football for State next fall.

Cobb, who hails from Newark, N. J., did not return this fall, although he had another year of eligibility. He obtained a job with the New York state police, and chose to make some money which he said was one of the main reasons that he did not return to college this fall.

Stroupe, Cobb's team mate, started school with the former State captain, along with Cumiskey, star fullback; however, the eligibility of this once highly press-agented trio is over, save, of course, Cobb. Stroupe was Cobb's buddy in the U. S. Marine Corps, and saw active service in Nicaragua.

KENTUCKY LOOKS LIKE BIG THREAT IN CAGE THREAT

Hard Luck Has Trained Wildcats For Two Years, But They're Still Clawing.

It looks like Carolina's strongest competition for the Dixie basketball championship this year will come from Kentucky. Five veteran cagers from the University of Kentucky will be attempting this season to shake off a jinx that has followed them for two straight years.

In 1931 and 1932 a powerful Wildcat squadron came bouncing down to Atlanta with high hopes of copping the Dixie cage title; but each year Coach Adolph Rupp's boys were repulsed. Carolina did the trick last year in the semi-finals; and in 1931 the Blue Grass lads lost a close duel in the finals to the championship Maryland outfit, 29-27.

Not a single player has been lost to the 'Cat team of this year—which, by the way, is an all-Kentucky club. Captain Forrest Sale, either a center or a forward; John De Moisey, also either pivot man or forward; Darrall Darby and Howard Kreuter, both veterans, are returning at forward this year; and Ellis Johnson, a regular last year at guard, form a veteran combine around which to mold this year's club. In addition to this aggregation, averaging six feet three in height, Rupp has enough star sophomores to start another college.

TENNIS COURTS IN TIN CAN RECEIVE MUCH USE DAILY

Bernie Friedman, Tar Baby Tennis Star, Showing Good Form in Practice Games.

The indoor tennis court at the east end of the Tin Can has been in constant use every afternoon this week and probably will be used as much next week.

Bernie Friedman, Tar Baby tennis star, has been practicing several hours every afternoon with Coach Kenfield and Harvey Harris in preparation for the National Junior Indoor Tennis championships. The matches will be held in the Seventh armory in New York City.

Harvey Harris, also a promising junior player, had previously intended to enter the tourney also, but has abandoned the trip.

In practice this week Friedman has shown excellent form. In a practice set with Coach Kenfield yesterday, Friedman showed an exceptionally good forearm which caught the coach unaware several times. According to Coach Kenfield, Friedman is now showing the form which carried him to the runner-up position in the National Outdoor Tourney for Juniors, this summer.

INTRAMURALS TO BEGIN QUINT PLAY EARLY NEXT YEAR

Schnell Urges Groups Planning To Enter Teams to Do So Before End of Quarter.

January 9 will mark the opening of the 1933 intramural basketball season. At this time dormitory and fraternity leagues will swing into action in pursuit of the titles won last year by Ruffin and S. A. E.

Although no formal announcement has been made as yet, the books are now open for teams desiring to enter the court races. Managers wishing to put their organizations into competition should see Herman Schnell, director of intramural athletics, any day next week between 2:00 and 4:00 o'clock in the intramural office at Emerson stadium.

The tentative plans for this season's intramural basketball schedule call for each team entered to take part in eight contests over a period of six weeks. At the end of the regular campaigns, play-offs will be staged in the event of ties and the winners in each league will meet for the campus championship.

Meet to Interpret Rules

Basketball coaches and officials from all schools in North Carolina's collegiate Big Five will gather next Tuesday at Duke University for a rules interpretation meeting.

Football Team Selection Contest To Close Tonight

I Only Heard

By Morrie Long

That Southern Conference coaches admire a man who can "take it as well as dish it out" is evident in their selection of Chuck Collins as president of the Southern Coaches Association for next year. Facing adverse public sentiment after a poor football season, Collins won the respect of the student body and many others by the manner in which he took his beatings. And now with Collins as headman, it's a certainty that the officiating of next year will be of a higher order than some seen around these parts this past fall.

In the Brooklyn Polytechnic we came across a story about Collins when he played at Notre Dame. In the heat of one of the fiercest mid-west rivalries between Notre Dame and Wisconsin, Crowley of the Ramblers was breaking away for numerous gains. During the course of the battle an official dropped his gun and Chuck picked it up and put the Chicago trademark in his belt. A minute later Crowley cavorted some eighty yards for a touchdown, Collins went up to Captain Harmon of the Badgers and handing him the revolver calmly said: "Here, maybe you'll be able to get Crowley with this."

Maybe Pinkey James of Duke's football team is a gift to all-Americans. Maybe not. But anyhow he has claim to the all-American rooming and captain record. While at Kiski, James and Cliff Montgomery of Columbia used to trade shirts as roommates. Also at Kiski Joe Gaulius of Ohio State and James used to be roommates, while this past season Pinkey had to contend with Freddie Crawford of Duke as his "study-mate." All these men made the official second all-American this year, and Montgomery and Gaulius are captain elects with Crawford a potential possibility.

North Carolina State is planning to have an intersectional game next year, preferably with Manhattan College of New York City. Now that the Vols have dropped Carolina from its football schedule, it might be feasible if the Tar Heels branch out a little and encounter an intersectional foe. Excellent games could be arranged with northeastern contingents, and an outstanding game would add to the profits of the athletic association. Virginia and Georgia have been meeting intersectional opponents these last few years... why not Carolina?

Big hearted Stan Zbysko, one of the toughest in the wrestling business, has consented to appear for charity. He will take on any three college football teams, Notre Dame, Pitt, Northwestern, North Carolina, Yale, in the country and pin the entire 33 men to the mat within three hours. The proceeds of the matches will go to charity. It's hard enough to get Jim London within miles of the Pole, let alone a flock of collegians.

Rumors floating around the campus have it that Johnny Phipps may enter West Point next year. One of Collins' best backs, Phipps is expected to do big things for the Tar Heels' cause next year. It is the hope of many that Johnny will wait another year before enrolling at Army.

Best Southern Conference Pick Wins Passes; Best State Team, Cigarettes.

CO-EDS TRY FOR COMPACT

Feminine Entrants Have Been Getting Expert Advice for Their Selections.

Tonight is the deadline for choices in the Tar Heel all-State and all-Southern contest to be in the boxes. The ballots will be collected at 7:00 o'clock this evening and the winners will be decided and published in tomorrow's paper.

The first prize, that for the winner of the best all-Southern pick, is to be seven passes to the Carolina theatre. The second prize which goes to the winner of the all-State pick, will be a carton of cigarettes donated by Pritchard-Lloyd. The other three prizes; a necktie from Randolph-MacDonald, a sweater from Stetson "D", another tie from Campus Confectionery, and a shampoo from the Carolina Barber shop, will be awarded the second and third best picks to each of the all-State and all-Southern choices.

Co-ed Tactics

The co-eds have been fretting over the glove compact offered for the best all-State selection all week, and varsity players along with other close followers of the gridiron, have been called into conference. Thursday night one young lady had collected five picks from her boy friends and was going to poll the votes and get one club. The contest officials are wondering if this wouldn't have been an effective way to obtain the official teams.

WHITE PHANTOMS FINISH WEEK OF FAST WORK-OUTS

Wilmer Hines Directs Basketball Practice; Coach Shepard Is Still Out of Town.

With Wilmer Hines, captain, doing the directing, the varsity basketball team finished a fast week of practice yesterday afternoon. Coach Bo Shepard is still out of town but will be back to direct the squad when it resumes work Monday.

Captain Hines ran the whole squad through scrimmage, driving the first two teams especially hard. The entire team looked greatly improved but still have many minor weaknesses to iron out before the first game. Ike Minor, who is making a strong bid for the center position, was given workouts with nearly every five out and showed that he will make the going hot for the other centers.

First Team Squad

Hines and Virgil Weathers, forwards, Ivan Glace, center; and Dave McCachren and David Henry, guards, made up the first team, while Dan Jones, guard; Snooks Aitkens, forward, and George Brandt, center, alternated with them during practice. Brandt, who has been out with a bad eye, showed improved play and will give Minor and Glace plenty of competition for center.

Next week Coach Shepard will give the squad some of the hardest workouts they will have all season in order that they will not lose their ability during the short rest over the holidays.

Playing under the new rules, the White Phantoms were not hampered and showed that they would be able to play the same fast game as last year when they went to the finals of the Southern Conference.

The opening game is with Guilford, January 5.

EDUCATION PAPER GIVES STATISTICS ON SCHOOL WORK

Study Reveals That Twenty-Three of Every Thousand Adults Have Degrees.

Twenty-three of every 1000 adult Americans are college graduates, and 125 of every 1000 are high school graduates.

These statistics, compiled on a nation-wide scale by the Federal Office of Education in Washington, appear in the December issue of The High School Journal, monthly publication of the school of education in the United States reported are:

The chances of a boy or girl going to high school, which were only one in twenty-five in 1890, are now one in two.

The chances of a boy or girl going to college, which were only one in thirty-three in 1900, are now one in six.

One of every four Americans attended some kind of school during the past year.

Of every 1000 pupils in the fifth grade, 610 enter high school, 260 graduate from high school, 160 enter college, and fifty graduate from college.

Cost Statistics

Ten cents per day paid by every person of voting age in the United States would pay the entire bill for public education. Cost per year for each child is: elementary, current expense, $67.82; high school, $144.03; college and university, $500.

Costs per school day per child in public elementary school, thirty-nine cents; in high school, 80.9 cents.

Costs per hour per child in public elementary school, 7.8 cents; in high school, 16 cents.

Pledge And Snake Mix In Hectic Ride

relieving himself of his troublesome companion, the lad ran to the car and started to clamber in. Simultaneously the snake gave an unusually disturbing twist and the paper prison bulged and cracked.

"What in the world's in that sack?" asked the amazed coach. Hesitant, the boy answered, "Just a snake. A gentle snake, though."

"Great God!" The coach jumped half way out of his seat. "Let me see that snake."

Exhibits Reptile

Sheepishly the pledge opened his paper sack and revealed a horrid green and yellow coil, squirming at the bottom of the sack and ominously thrusting its impudent wide-open mouth up towards them. The coach looked doubtful.

"Close that sack! You say the snake is gentle?" he asked.

"That's what the curator of the state museum told me," replied the student.

Admonishing him to keep the sack on the floorboards well over near the door of the car, the coach finally acquiesced and brought the boy on to Chapel Hill.

Proudly did the weary pledge display the fruit of his labors to the brothers. Amazedly they stared at the loathsome, reptile which glared back at them. And it was a puzzled pledge who was commanded to put the snake in a box and lock it in the closet of his room.

"They never did use the snake," complained the now Greek-letter man. "I guess they never had seen one like him and were afraid of him. I finally returned him to Raleigh. I sure was glad to get him back, and I still don't want to know anything about snakes."

University Praised At Alumni Meeting

the General Alumni Association, presided over the meeting, which was held in Graham Memorial. Following Mr. Graham's address there was a round table discussion of the crisis which the University and other educational institutions and agencies of the people now face.

Officers of the General Alumni Association for the ensuing year were nominated and will be voted upon by mail ballots.

Dr. Graham said the present budget request, if granted, would represent a cut of 22 1-2 per cent from the 1929 level, which, he pointed out, is a greater cut than the average sustained by the state universities of the country during this period and is far greater than the average reductions in the endowment income of the endowed universities.

U.N.C. Has Low Per Capita Cost

"In our request," he said, "the University of North Carolina, nationally recognized as in the first rank and already among the lowest in per capita cost to the state among state universities and the lowest in per capita cost among the universities in the Association of American Universities, asks for an appropriation that represents a percentage reduction greater than that sustained by the general run of American colleges and universities."

"Looking all across America we find that a disproportionate shock has been borne by the state educational and humanitarian institutions and the public health and welfare agencies of North Carolina. Since 1929 the University of North Carolina as typical of them all has suffered a total appropriation cut of 43 6-10 per cent."

"The present total budget requests for all three units of the Consolidated University is more than $100,000 less than the request made in 1929 for the single unit at Chapel Hill," Dr. Graham said.

These three institutions and their sister educational institutions of North Carolina have sustained cuts approaching 50 per cent during the period of the depression, he showed.

Cuts Are Destructive

"Such deep, cumulative, destructive cuts are not wise economy in the long run building of youth and the commonwealth," he declared. "We have had hysterical runs on banks and those who made the runs saved little in the long run for themselves and hurt the state in vital places. Will continued runs on the schools, institutions, and agencies of the common life save the state or do much other than damage to life and hopes of the people in that long run process of building a more justly balanced state?"

"We must meet fiscal deficits but we must not keep piling up social deficits in the common life of the people. We must balance budgets in a depression by long run financing of the gigantic burdens of a collapsed prosperity. We must balance books but we must not unbalance the life of the people and the hopes of youth for a better chance in a fairer world."

"Our problems are so complex, our burdens of debts, deficits and the depression, are so stupendous that we cannot hack our way out. We must hold on to the value of the great investments we have made and not run out on those investments and lower the quality of the life for which the investments were made. What a tragic human waste is there! We must preserve the value of our great investments in the resources of youth and the equal chance."

"We cannot pinch our way out. We must create our way out. We must pay off the long running debt by the long run building up of the capacities and powers of the people and the hopes of their children for a chance equal to the chance of any children in the world."

Purposes of University

"The purpose of the University of North Carolina is: to give the youth of North Carolina an opportunity for physical, intellectual, and spiritual development and leadership on equal terms with the youth anywhere in the world; and second, to cooperate with all the resources and all the people of our state in the building of a more diversified and productive economic order, a better balanced and juster social life, and a more intellectually creative and a more spiritually beautiful civilization."

"In carrying out this purpose the University of North Carolina has opened its life this present year to 2,614 students now in residence at Chapel Hill, 1,800 students in the summer school, and 4,750 students estimated for the year in the courses of the extension division or a grand total of over 9,000 students enrolled for courses in this manifold University. This does not include the thousands of others who participate under its supervision in local club studies, interscholastic debates, cultural and athletic contests and civic and community programs. The manifold resources and activities of this University will reach with vigorous power into every county and town in the state with the very stuff and stimulation of the intellectual energies and spiritual life of the people. This is now far more widely true of the Consolidated University of North Carolina."

U.N.C. Receives Commendation

"This University of North Carolina was the first state university to open its doors and stands among the first in America in the distinction of its faculty, standards of work, quality of scholarship, research, and productive output. It holds high membership in the Association of American Universities in which only twenty-nine have qualified for membership. As the great service agency of the whole people of a commonwealth, the Macon Telegraph, the Chattanooga News, the Richmond Times-Dispatch, the World's Work, the New York Times, and Mr. Ellery Sedgwick, editor of The Atlantic Monthly, have recognized its preeminence in the south and its high distinction in America."

"Dr. Edwin Mims of Vanderbilt and President Baker of the University of South Carolina have paid tribute to its leadership in the south. The American Council of Learned Societies through its official publication declared that 'the leadership of the new research movement in the south was traceable to one institution, namely, the University of North Carolina.' In a Sunday feature article in the New York Times it was declared that 'for a great many years there has gone out from Chapel Hill a vibrant wave of light and healing comparable to that which shone in another day from the library window at Monticello.'"

"Harold J. Laski, an honor graduate of Oxford University, one of the preeminent political scientists of the world, who has taught at Harvard, Yale, and the University of London, recently pronounced the University of North Carolina in its intellectual democracy and quality of life as one of the two or three most distinguished universities in America."

"Fletcher Sims Brockman, religious statesman in two hemispheres and long a leader of the Student Christian movement, after a recent sojourn on the campus of the University said,

Group Will Attend State Y.M.C.A. Cabinet Meeting

Bill McKee, Ike Minor, and Tom Nisbet, of the senior Y. M. C. A. cabinet, and J. D. Winslow, of the sophomore cabinet, leave this morning to attend the monthly state Y. M. C. A. cabinet meeting in Greensboro. An all-day discussion session will be in order.

This is the first all-state meeting this year, although it was planned to take place every month. Fall football schedules interfered with the attendance and caused the indefinite postponement. Archie Ward, of N. C. State, is president of the state cabinet and will lead today's meeting.

Pi Phi's Entertain at Tea

North Carolina Alpha of Pi Beta Phi entertained at a tea yesterday afternoon at their house from 4:30 to 6:00 o'clock. Approximately seventy-five co-eds attended, including the members of Chi Omega, co-eds belonging to national sororities not represented on this campus, and other friends.

Infirmity List

W. L. White, James Fuller, Craig Wall, Sydney Franklin, Ralph Weatherford, George Steele, Jr., Eleanor Lockhart, and R. R. Reynolds, Jr., were confined to the infirmary yesterday.

Boynton Leaves Hospital

A. B. Boynton, University student who has been sick with a septic sore throat in McPherson's hospital at Durham, was released Thursday afternoon.

"No educational institution in the world is illustrating more sincerely the wholesome life of intellectual freedom, courageous idealism, and spiritual strength than the University of North Carolina."

"Such is the institution at stake in this budget."

Faculty Shapes Thought

"At heart of the state is the University and at the heart of the University is the faculty. The faculty is the spring from which flows the unending stream of University life, carrying in its living waters the cultural heritage of the race, the traditions and ideals of the college, the substance and methods of thinking, the standards of work, and the spiritual values of life and personality. The life of the University goes up or down with the faculty. It has been adjudged by competent observers throughout the nation that the University of North Carolina has a faculty of the first rank at the lowest cost of any comparable faculty in America. More than a score in recent years have received offers ranging from $1,000 to $10,000 more than they receive at Chapel Hill. We have cut them twice and many repeated offers have been rejected again."

"The building up of a faculty is a matter of decades. Its tearing down can be a matter of one year or a biennium. Makers of budgets are also makers of the state. This requested budget, cut 22 1-2 per cent from the amount actually received in 1928-29 would play its part in the building of youth today and of North Carolina tomorrow."

small to be representative. The balloting may be regarded as a fair indication of student opinion on the question as over one-third of the student body cast ballots during the two days of the poll. The vote is one of the heaviest ever cast in a straw ballot here.

Voting Yesterday Light

The voting yesterday was considerably lighter than that of the preceding day. Three hundred and sixteen ballots were cast yesterday as compared with 541 Thursday.

In the vote Professor R. D. W. Connor, of the history department, took seventh place with Dean Addison Hibbard, formerly of the liberal arts school here, eighth and Dr. Archibald Henderson of the mathematics department, ninth.

Additional Results

Other results were: tenth, Dean A. W. Hobbs of the liberal arts school, 33 votes; eleventh, R. W. Linker of the Romance language department, 31; thirteenth, Dean W. C. Jackson of the school of public administration, 6; fourteenth, J. Obie Harmon, manager of Swain hall, 5. J. Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary, Professor E. W. Zimmerman of the commerce school, and Professor F. H. Koch of the English department received two votes apiece.

Receiving one vote were: Dr. A. C. Howell of the English department; Dean N. W. Walker of the school of education; Dr. T. J. Wilson, Jr., registrar; Dr. J. M. Bell, dean of the school of applied science; Dr. W. W. Pierson, dean of the graduate school; Dr. Meno Spann of the German department; Professor J. B. Woosley of the economics department; Dean D. D. Carroll of the commerce school; Professor J. T. Dobbins of the chemistry department; Dr. F. P. Gaines, former president of Washington and Lee University; Dean M. T. Van Hecke of the law school; Dr. E. C. Metzenhain of the German department, and "Sarge" Keller of the athletic department.

"HELL'S HIGHWAY" IS SHOW AT CAROLINA

RKO-Radio's significant story of the chain gang, "Hell's Highway," is featuring at the Carolina theatre today, starring Richard Dix.

The picture treats dramatically of the same matters treated statistically in the last report of the American Prison Association. That report shows that overcrowding, bad food, bad ventilation, unsanitary, vault-like cells that are "human fling cabinets often bulging with two or three prisoners in a space unfit even for one," cause riots, or make convicts desirous of wreaking vengeance upon society.

FRATERNITY MEN HAVE CONVENTION AND DANCE HERE

Local Chapter of Pi Kappa Phi Entertains Nearly 200 Visiting Delegates Yesterday.

Nearly 200 members of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity convened here yesterday for an annual convocation of eleven chapters in North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia. Business sessions were conducted at the home of the local chapter yesterday afternoon. Following a banquet last night, the visiting fraternity men were entertained with a dance at the Carolina Inn.

National Head Speaks

National head of the organization, Dr. A. Pelzer Wagner, of William and Mary College, was present to deliver the principal address to the visitors. Dudley DeWitt Carroll, dean of the school of commerce here, addressed the convention and awarded scholarship keys to five leading scholars in the eleven chapters represented. John D. Carroll, of Lexington, S. C., who is past president of the national fraternity, was among the delegates. Other activities yesterday afternoon covered group discussions of fraternity problems.

The convention took place on the anniversary of the founding of the fraternity. Jack Poole, member of the local lodge, commemorated the founders with an address.

Charlie Boulanger and his orchestra, who played for the fall German club dances here, supplied the music for the ball.

Sponsors for the ball, with their escorts, were Miss Dorothy Dillon of Raleigh with Graham McLeod of Raleigh, Miss Elizabeth Whitehead of Wilmington with Jack Poole of Raleigh, Miss Mary Kinser of Tampa, Fla., with Donoh Hanks of New Bern, Miss Paige Howard of Greensboro with O. W. Kochitzky of Mount Airy, Miss Charlotte Winborne of Marion with Alfred Williams of Warrenton, and Martha Johnston of Charlotte with Thomas Spencer of Charlotte.

First Women Students Scorned By Resentful And Jealous Men

Present Relations Between Carolina Men and Co-eds Very Different From Animosities Aroused by Entrance of Four Women In 1897; Co-eds Soon Entered Activities.

The presence of some chic bit of collegiate femininity strolling across the campus domain of the Carolina man no longer brings a quickening of his heart or a palpable feeling of resentment. Co-eds, brightly garbed and occasionally beautiful, have brazenly dared to enter an institution which for over one hundred years was dedicated exclusively to the education of males.

Today the women students find themselves mingling with the opposite sex in a relationship that varies from complete indifference upon the part of the men to a situation of apparent equality. However the present co-ed may bewail her present rating, it is in no wise as severe and prejudiced as that which the pioneer women students at Carolina suffered.

Co-eds were admitted to the University for the first time in the fall of 1897. On February 21 of that year the trustees of the institution ruled that women were to be enrolled, but that they

Theatre Will Present German Movie Tonight

Die Reine Wahrheit, a German movie, will be shown at the Carolina theatre at 9:15 o'clock tonight. Dr. Spann of the German department will give explanations in English throughout the picture, to aid those who are unfamiliar with German.

The interest in foreign movies which is rapidly growing throughout the United States is also evident here. The co-operation of the local theatre with the University's foreign language departments make it possible for these pictures to be shown in Chapel Hill.

CUNNINGHAM AND McBRYDE WIN IN RHODES CONTEST

Davidson and Duke Place Men in Competition for Rhodes Scholarship to Represent State.

Duncan D. McBryde of Davidson College and Merrimon Cunningham of Duke University were selected yesterday by the North Carolina committee of selection as the state candidates for the Rhodes Scholarships. McBryde and Cunningham will appear next week in Atlanta in competition with candidates from Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, and Tennessee before a district committee for the final selection.

The North Carolina candidates for the awards were: R. Mayne Albright, Robert W. Barnett, Charles G. Rose, Jr., and Beverly R. Thurman, all of the University; Edward O. Guerrant, Duncan Daniel McBryde, and Leland McKeithan, of Davidson; Charles K. Bradshaw and Merrimon Cunningham, of Duke; David H. Parsons and Samuel Smith, of Guilford; Everett Couch, of N. C. State, and J. F. Mathews, of Wake Forest.

These scholarships, which are some of the most valuable such awards offered American scholars, are awarded on a basis of character, scholarship, leadership, and athletic participation. (Continued on last page)

Professor Frederick Koch Recalls Occasions Of Reading Dickens' Carol

Starting in North Dakota Professor Koch Has Read "Christmas Carol" in All Sections of Country Under Varying Conditions; This Is Fifteenth Time in Chapel Hill.

"Everybody ought to read Dickens' Christmas Carol every year before Christmas," commented Frederick H. Koch, then a young instructor at the state University of North Dakota, to a group of his friends gathered at supper in the university commons a few days before the holidays.

The dean of women, one of the party, spoke up: "Well, if you feel that way about it, you ought to read it for us." Thus, on the Sunday before Christmas, twenty-five years ago, Koch gave his first public reading of Dickens' immortal ghost story.

To Read Here Tonight

Tonight, at 8:30 o'clock in Memorial hall Professor Koch, now famous for his interpretation of A Christmas Carol, will read it for the fifteenth time in Chapel Hill. He has read it in various other sections of the country, from Dakota to New England and throughout the south, in tiny villages and in New York City, in churches, schools and opera houses.

Always people crowded to hear him read this famous Christmas story. Professor Koch recalls that in the North Dakota town when he read it for the third time special street cars were run to handle the throngs who wanted to attend the reading; students hung over the rail-ters of the gymnasium and children sat on the floor in front of the platform where he was. "One time," said Professor Koch, "When I looked out into the big darkened room at the close of the interview with Marley's ghost, I was startled by a row of eager childish faces staring at me over the edge of the reading table."

Traveled Through Snow

One more than one occasion Professor Koch was bound in by blizzards and had to drive many miles by sleigh in order to fill an engagement.

Once he drove thirty miles in a sleigh to a little town on the main railroad line where he hoped to be able to get a train. He found, when he arrived, that the passenger trains were still tied up. He told his plight to the engineer of a freight, that he had an engagement to read, and that he did not want his audience disappointed. The engineer said, "Are you the fellow that reads the Christmas Carol every Christmas? Well, I've heard you myself and I'll get you there in time." So Koch rattled away in the caboose of the freight to the town where an expectant audience awaited him. On another occasion he rode in an hand-car to keep from breaking an engagement to read this fascinating ghost story.

LEADING CITIZENS PRAISE WORK OF STATE INSTITUTE

Ehringhaus and Battle Commend Institute of Government; New Officers Inducted.

Public installations of officers last week were in order for over four-fifths of the state's 100 counties, according to reports received here recently by Professor Albert Coates, director of the Institute of Government, which sponsored the occasion. This movement has gained considerable favorable comment from political leaders all over the state.

This was the initial time in the history of the great state of North Carolina that public installation of officers had ever been conducted in the presence of the people that elected them. Ceremonies took place at various places at different times; and apart from the radio audiences, it has been estimated that between 35,000 and 40,000 taxpayers and citizens witnessed the presentation of incoming county officers.

Both Parties

"Republicans and Democrats joined together without regard to party affiliations and in a number of counties outgoing officers participated in the ceremony of presenting incoming officers. High school and college classes in government were in attendance in many places," said Professor Coates.

Two of the University's most prominent alumni, Governor-elect John C. B. Ehringhaus and Kemp D. Battle, president of the North Carolina Bar Association, have expressed their hearty approval of the work of the Institute. (Continued on last page)

GROUP TO CONFER WITH FACULTY ON VICE-PRESIDENCY

Five Prominent Trustees Will Gather Tomorrow to Make Recommendations.

Five prominent North Carolinians will gather here in the President's office tomorrow morning for the purpose of considering faculty opinion on the selection of a successor of President Frank Porter Graham as head of the University here.

This committee, established by the board of trustees at their meeting in November and appointed by Governor O. Max Gardner, is composed of Hon. Josephus Daniels of Raleigh, John Sprunt Hill of Durham, A. W. McLean of Lumberton, A. M. Dixon of Gastonia, and Judge John J. Parker of Charlotte.

The group will confer with faculty members and receive their opinions on a successor for President Graham.

Nominations Made

To aid the work of the group, it was suggested that faculty members turn in written nominations for the position to R. B. House, executive secretary of the University. A number of these nominations have been received and are expected to reduce the work of the body substantially.

The committee, after the consideration here, will make recommendations to the board of trustees, and this group will then select the third vice-president of the Greater University. The board has already picked Dr. E. C. Brooks for the vice-presidency in charge of State College and Dr. J. I. Foust in the same capacity at the Woman's College at Greensboro.

Friendship Council To Hear Bradshaw

Dean F. F. Bradshaw will be the principal speaker tomorrow night at a social meeting of the freshman friendship council. The meeting will take place at 7:00 o'clock in Graham Memorial. All members are urged to be present.

Among other attractive features of the program will be the rendition of several musical selections by the crack Y. M. C. A. trio, composed by Wofford Humphrey, Claude Freeman, and Bill Allsbrook. Light refreshments will be served during the program.

REHEARSALS TO TAKE PLACE FOR FORENSIC BATTLE

Group Will Meet Monday Night; Debate Scheduled Thursday Evening on Nationalism.

Preliminary rehearsals for the debate with the University of Dublin will be conducted at the regular meeting of the forensic group Monday night, at 9:00 o'clock, in 214 Graham Memorial.

John Wilkinson, who participated in the Oxford debate his first year here, and A. S. Kaplan represent the University, and will present their arguments at the meeting Monday night.

The debate council of the University conducts one foreign debate each year. This will be the first time that the University has met the University of Dublin. Among the foreign debates of recent years the local debaters have met the forensic squads of Oxford and Cambridge.

Debating started in the University in 1892, and was conducted only in the south. Gradually it grew until the first trip, which was to Kentucky. Each year now the University makes three trips, one in the south, one to the north and one to the west.

The debate with Dublin will be conducted Thursday evening, December 15. The subject is "Resolved: That Nationalism is a bar to Peace and or Progress."

Many Educational Institutions Headed By University Alumni

University, Women's College, East Carolina Teachers College, Appalachian State Teachers College, and Wake Forest in This State Are Headed by Carolina Graduates.

In addition to lawyers, merchants, chiefs, and the remainder of the familiar rhyme, the University has long been active in producing college presidents. The large number of alumni who now occupy executive positions in various educational institutions amply testifies to this school's worth as a training ground for future educational leaders.

Not a few of these figures have lately been brought to the public attention by their frequent appearance in the daily press in connection with the consolidation of the higher educational system of the state. Chief of these is, naturally, President Frank P. Graham, '09, for the past two years head of the University. As a result of his appointment to the presidency of the greater University, it is possible that another alumnus may be called to succeed him at Chapel Hill.

Under President Graham in his new role will be Dr. Julius

NOMINATIONS OF OFFICERS MADE BY ALUMNI BODY

Balloting Will Close and New Officers Will Be Announced January 1.

Officers for the General Alumni Association of the University were nominated at the Alumni Assembly taking place Friday evening in the Graham Memorial. The ticket named included two candidates for each of the principal officers, and will be submitted to the alumni members by mail ballot at once. The balloting will close and officers for 1933 will be announced January 1.

Named to make the race for president were Agnew H. Bahnsen, of Winston-Salem, and Judge John J. Parker, of Charlotte.

Carter Dalton, of High Point, and Dr. H. B. Haywood, of Raleigh, were nominated for the first vice-presidency, while Leo Carr, of Burlington, and Ray Armstrong, of Goldsboro, were selected as nominees for the office of second vice-president.

Roberson on Council

Dr. Foy Roberson, of Durham, was the only nominee for the expiring position of alumni representative on the University Athletic Council. He will, therefore, be declared selected.

Two directors-at-large were elected by the alumni, these being John G. Proctor, of Lumberton, and Stahle Linn, of Salisbury. They defeated Ben F. Aycock, of Fremont, and James S. Ficklen, of Greenville.

The nominations were made by a committee composed of Luther Hodges, of Spray, chairman; Henry M. London, of Raleigh, and Francis O. Clarkson.

Directors of the association to represent districts were elected at the meeting of the alumni board Friday afternoon. These were R. A. Spauld, Jr., of Winston-Salem, and Thomas Turner, Jr., of High Point, who were re-elected; and Ralph C. Maultsby, of Greenville, S. C., and John H. McMullan, of Edenton.

I. Foust, '90, executive of the North Carolina College for Women since 1907, and recently, delegated vice-president of that school. Dr. Foust succeeded the late Dr. Charles D. McIver, '81, the founder of the college.

As might be expected the majority of the alumni who have become college presidents have assumed charge of North Carolina institutions. Nevertheless, besides President Graham, the only other University man who heads one of the Big Five schools is Thurman D. Kitchen of Wake Forest College who attended the University medical school for a year.

The coalition effected to form the Greater University of North Carolina seems to have been favorably regarded in educational circles. At present, in imitation of this alliance, it is projected to merge the Greensboro College for Women and Davenport College, at Lenoir another woman's institution. These (Continued on last page)

The Campus Voice

In the poll conducted Thursday and Friday by the DAILY TAR HEEL under the legal supervision of the student council, more than eight hundred students were given ample opportunity to express their preferences in the selection of the new head of the Chapel Hill branch of the Greater University. Every precaution was taken to elicit only unbiased and unpartisan opinion. The appeal was to the sanity and integrity of the student body in demonstrating that student opinion should have its place in determining the executive who should guide the University through its trials and struggles.

The response is gratifying, principally in that a large majority of the undergraduate student body took this opportunity to express through such a large ballot the conviction that such a selection is within their rights. It is increasingly gratifying that one man should receive such a large vote, indicating that there is a compactness of student opinion on this campus.

Only through such a poll can the preferences of a student body be recognized. This factor evidences the sincere interest of the students in such a selection and recommends itself heartily to the committee on selection of our new vice-president.—D.C.S.

Good Earth

Among the beneficial results of the depression from whose gloom we are now emerging is the very decided trend of population away from the cities and back to the farm. Before the period of the depression the agricultural element was decreasing at an alarming rate. Millions, motivated by a desire for a better living and lured by luxury and excitement attributed to urban life, were pouring into the cities leaving their wake deserted farms and untilled fields. A decade or less ago we heard most discouraging predictions that at the rate of migration then existing it would not be many years before the number of farmers would be insufficient to supply our millions with food.

The depression with all its attending evils has reversed the tide. Within the first few months of this year over a half a million people returned to the land and to the occupation of farming. They followed some hundreds of thousands that had gone before and that had realized also that the cities were not all they had seemed. They had learned from painful experience that while agriculture held little prospect of riches it might be depended upon at least for food and shelter. They realized that the city was for many a place not of pleasure and easy living but the stronghold of poverty and suffering. The farm house and the meager rewards of farming they found to be preferable to the bread line, the flop house, and the soup kitchen. And so the trek began back to the friendly soil that had yielded them food and work.

Their return is highly encouraging. It terminates for a time at least a movement that might have had dire consequences. It reduces greatly the great pathetic armies of the unemployed dependent on charity and the public. It means that millions will return to wholesome and necessary occupation and have seen the myth of the city's joys dispelled. Greater than these will be the realization that the farmer's salvation lies not in desertion but in cooperation. Several times have efforts been made to organize them in some way to guarantee fair treatment and better reward for their arduous toils. These have all failed. Now with labor and capital drawn up in well knit ranks the farmer will learn that he must follow suit or perish. Cooperation among them will certainly come and with let us hope some fairer distribution of wealth and power and a square deal for the man forgotten, neglected and misused—the American farmer, still the backbone of the nation.—J.F.A.

SOME MINOR MEANDERINGS

Needle in the Hay Ballot
Hi! Diddle, Fiddlement,
Who'll be Vice-President?
First straw ballot was a lark—
Four votes cast for David Clark!
On the Socialists, a pox.
Did someone stuff the ballot box?
Both Randolph parties bolt their tickets,
And O. J. runs like a child with rickets.
Football coach also gets vote,
Which the counters failed to note.
Student Council takes up fight
To make everything come out all right.
Both ballots won by ablest man,
Whom the radicals can't even pan.
But when the trustees take up matter,
Will they pay heed to student chatter?
Will the gentlemen take any note
Of the official student vote?

The illustrations are way over and above anything put out here in America. There is one article on "Real Life in the Middle Ages" which will make you want to pin on a wimple and play on a lute. Heigh Ho!

INVITATION TO THE WALTZ by Rosamond Lehmann (Holt) $2.50. Reviewed by Nelson Lansdale.

This is a novel which deals with a brief period in the life of its main characters. A most important period in the life of a girl—the week of her formal entrance into society. The setting is English.

A few characters are genuinely Miss Lehmann's own—Olivia, who tries desperately to seem sufficiently appreciative of her presents on her birthday, and whose reactions to her first ball are the substance of the book; her sister Kate, who is older, more experienced, and who understands everything; and her curiously wise little brother, James. And there are the usual stock characters—gruff old Sir John and majestic Lady Spenser; the radical young poet, Peter Jenkin, who scorns the society he is, at the moment, frequenting; an aged eccentric, her uncle Oswald; and her mother, of the higher class bourgeoisie, whose reverence for nobility is no novelty.

It is perhaps fortunate that Rosamond Lehmann does not have a mind keen for the dramatic situation. In Northanger Abbey Jane Austen, with her endless dramatization of incidents which have no dramatic essence, bores the modern reader almost to the point of yelling "What of it?" and throwing the book out the window. Miss Lehmann has been wise enough to realize that any week in a girl's life is chiefly important to the girl. She tells her story simply, directly, and, above all truthfully, and the reader is not bored. He is not, for one thing, asked to consider Olivia's success or failure at her first dance of equal importance to the battle of Waterloo.

Most Americans will marvel at the sheltered life young English ladies of family lead. In America, when young girls begin attending sub-deb functions at the tender age of twelve, their "coming-out" affair rarely finds them with neither suitors nor social experience. They can well thank their stars that they are spared so much agony of apprehension at so crucial a period in their lives.

This Tuesday at 4:30, Bradford Bissel, a graduate student of the University will present a showing of batik work, describe the process of manufacture, and tell about Java from whence it came.

He has spent several years in that country, which, according to Van Loon in his Geography, is "supremely favored by Nature ... the soil, if treated at all kindly and understandingly will yield three complete harvests every twelve months. There is the climate, which although hot enough to favor the cultivation of every known tropical plant is not excessive and which is ... more agreeable than that of New York or Washington during the summer. A fatalistic attitude has been developed by the man who tills his fields, whose ancestors ever since the beginning of the world have tilled the same fields, whose children will till these same fields, and who none of them ever want or expect to go without sufficient nourishment." And yet the author insists he is not trying to describe an earthly paradise! Mrs. Pheobe Barr has kindly consented to demonstrate the wearing of the native costume. As usual, the public is most cordially invited to attend these weekly "at-homes" of the "Bull's Head."

THE THEATRE

(Reviewed by Ben Napier)

The several productions on the recent bill of the Playmakers were as varied in quality as in subject-matter. Like the girl with the curl, those that were good were very, very good and those that were bad were horrid. In reviewing the latter ones, this reviewer confesses that it would be all too easy and enjoyable to indulge in caustic language at the expense of Creek Swamp Nigger and Stumbling in Dreams, but, on reflection, he realizes that the only possible good that might come from such a course would be to discourage their respective authors from foisting any more of their brain-children on the campus at large. And knowing Playmaker imperviousness to any but favorable criticism, he believes that such a contingency is too remote to justify the effort.

It is in a spirit of resignation only, then, that your reviewer points out that the first of these—Creek Swamp Nigger—was chiefly melodramatic instead of tragic, that the element of suspense was simply not present and that that tour de force of a playwright—a struggle and murder on the stage—was laughable rather than impressive. It should also be remarked that the absurd histrionics of the actors did nothing to alleviate the situation.

The second play, Mr. Milhous' Davy Crockett can not be so glibly disposed of. As a studio production it gave definite promise of being a fine play. Mr. Milhous has a decided flair for lovely lines and dramatic situations and is capable of depicting emotion in a way that is moving and free from all sentimentality. It may have been that his material simply was not adaptable to the limits of a one-act play, or, on the other hand, that he is not yet sufficiently capable in dramatic technique but, at all events, the fact remains that the work, as a play, was not good. Despite this fact, the scenes between Mary and Davy are memorable. Their sustained dramatic effect and their lines, inherently lovely in themselves, combined to make one forget the other faults.

This department hopes that other works of Mr. Milhous will be on subsequent production programs of the year. As to the actor, it should suffice to say that Miss Tatum as Mary gave a performance that was up to her usual high standard, that Mr. Fitz-Simons, although an unusual playwright, is not quite ready to step into the shoes of Alfred Lunt and that a Mr. Barrett gave the second worse performance of the evening.

Mr. Fitz-Simons' Four on a Heath forces this department to a nearly complete volte-face. In a previous review, it was dismissed as fairly good. Now, with the accentuation of good production, this fantasy becomes of such a high order as to force the amende honorable. It is excellent and ranks with the best the Playmakers have ever produced.

The author was not content to give an original Lord Dunsany-like twist in choosing his subject-matter. For good measure he sustained the original effect by excellent lines and then, at the last, proved his knowledge of dramatic values equal to the power of his imagination. His play was unquestionably the finest of the evening. Excellent direction and effective lighting helped of course, and this department is grateful to both the Playmakers and Mr. Fitz-Simons for evoking, in the normally sentient members of the audience, that all-too-rare delight that a fine play brings.

The next little opus, by dint of its juxtaposition with a good play (as well as by dint of being just a lousy play itself) was very nearly nauseating. Hackneyed situations, broad attempts at comedy, and a general ineptness characterized it.

Mr. Novins as Jo struggled valiantly to improve the standard of the production (in doing so, he gave the best male performance of the evening) but there are things impossible even to a perfectly cast, good actor. A propos of this production, it is regrettable that the director did not point out to Mr. Brown, who played Don that there are other ways of characterizing ingenuousness than by bending the body forward and taking a scoop at the floor with one's hand. The reviewer might forgive him his singing had he not attempted his personification of a sentimental steam-shovel. He is without doubt the poorest actor that ever trod the Playmaker boards.

Winners Of Contests Are Picked From More Than Three Hundred Selections

"Red" Matheson Is Awarded First Prize For His All-Southern Choice.

NISBET WINS SECOND PRIZE
Submits Best All-State; Black, Hutchison, Cox, Watts, and Sutton Also Win.

From more than three hundred ballots which were submitted in the DAILY TAR HEEL all-state and all-Southern contest run during the past week, "Red" Matheson won the first prize, of six passes to the Carolina theatre, for his all-Southern selection. Tom Nisbet won the second prize which was to go to the best all-state choice. This prize was a carton of cigarettes.

Nisbet Misses Guards
Nisbet, in winning the all-state choice missed the two guards but placed Underwood at center and had the correct backfield. He coincided with the official team with the exception of the left and right guard where he picked De Angelis and Stanko respectively, instead of Rives and Shock.

Miss Nettie M. Black won the glove compact offered the co-ed with the best all-state choice. Miss Black's pick showed Stanko and Barclay at right and left guard respectively with Espey at center.

No one submitted a perfect choice. The official all-state team was hard in that Underwood, Rives and Shock were on the team and all the contestants figured that "Red" Espey should have been on the first team somewhere, and consequently moved him to a guard or a tackle pushing Shock or Rives out. In the all-Southern choices, the tackle and guard positions, along with the correct placing of the backs caused trouble. Leyendecker and Frank were the stumbling blocks in the line, almost everyone picking Crawford and Hupke over them for first choice.

The other winners were: Paul Hutchison, second prize for his all-Southern pick, who wins a sweater; J. H. Cox, second prize in the all-state competition, who wins a necktie; C. G. Watts, third prize for his all-Southern team, also wins a necktie; and Bunk Sutton, who won third prize in the all-state pick wins a shampoo. The winners may obtain their booty by calling at THE DAILY TAR HEEL office tomorrow afternoon at 2:00 o'clock.

Wolflets to Box Tar Babies

North Carolina State College freshman boxers will open their season against Carolina yearlings here January 21. Following this encounter Bill Beatty's charges will clash with Duke's Blue Imps in Durham the next night; and February 4 will find the Wolflets pitted against Oak Ridge in Raleigh.

Bradford Bissell, graduate student in the University, will speak at the weekly meeting at the Bull's Head Tuesday afternoon, on "Java."

Named Co-Captain

Gump Atrial, star end on the Auburn Plainsmen for the past season, who received the unanimous vote of the coaches in the south for the right wing post. Atrial was named co-captain with Johnny Cain of The Daily Tar Heel selection announced today.

COACH TUTORING FROSH FIGHTERS ON BOXING SQUAD

All Candidates Expected to Be in Shape by Opening of Season Early in January.

With the freshman boxing team having four tourney winners, three runners-up, and several semi-finalists on hand, Coach Archie Allen will be ready for all comers when the season starts early in January.

The light-heavyweight class remains vacant, but there is a chance that several boys will bid for it after examinations and the holidays are all over.

Injuries and poor condition, usually a coach's greatest worry, have not bothered Coach Allen so far. There are still a few boys who tire quickly, but with a few weeks of training left before the first meet, they will have a chance to iron out all their kinks. While a few injuries have hit the squad, they were of a trivial nature.

Gene Eustler, winner of the 115-pound tourney title, will probably work in that division on the frosh team, and Harold Blalock whom he defeated in the finals will also be there to start if he is needed.

In the 125-pound class, Max Frucht, tourney winner, will get the call. Lewis Barnes, who did not fight in the intramurals because of a slight injury, will soon be back at practice and may see some action in the coming meets.

The 135-pound division is somewhat uncertain because of the presence of two first-rate fighting men. Ben Kalb, tourney winner, and Jim Flaherty who did not fight, leave Coach Allen in a quandary, and he may have to shift Kalb to the 145-pound class.

In the latter class, Carl Gillie is a fine prospect and he is certain to fight frequently in the meets. Gillie lost the title to Sutton in the tourney finals by a shade.

Red Mehaffy may be used as a 155-pounder, while Mort Ellisberg will be seen as a 165-pounder. Ellisberg did some fine fighting to win the 175-pound tourney title, but, as he is able to make the 165-pound limit, Coach Allen has decided to use

THIRTEEN TEAMS QUIT CONFERENCE TO DIVIDE GROUP

U.N.C., Clemson, U.S.C., V.M.I., Duke, V.P.I., Virginia, W.&L., State, Maryland Remain.

Dixie now has two major collegiate sports conferences.

A baker's dozen schools in the southern end of the old conference withdrew affiliation from the old group Friday in Knoxville at the deathbed meeting of the old Southern Conference. L. S. U., Tulane, Ole Miss, Mississippi State, Alabama, Auburn, Georgia Tech, Georgia, Sewanee, Tennessee, Vandy, Florida, and Kentucky are the seceders. This group will be henceforth known as the Southeastern Conference.

The remaining institutions—Carolina, Clemson, South Carolina, V. M. I., V. P. I., W. & L., Virginia, Duke, N. C. State, and Maryland—will continue to be known as the Southern Conference. This "Big Ten" of the South Atlantic sector will be headed by C. P. Miles of V. P. I. as president; Dr. A. W. Hobbs, dean of the college of liberal arts here, will serve as vice-president; and Forest Fletcher of W. & L. is to be secretary. Chuck Collins will remain as head of the coaches in the northern group.

Dr. John Tigert, president of the University of Florida, delivered the ultimatum for schools in the new Southeastern Conference: "Since in our judgment the time has arrived for a more compact organization of the administration of athletics it seems wise for a division of the Southern Conference to be made solely on geographical lines."

Dean Hobbs seemed to have a "let 'em go" attitude about the whole matter. "We are going to be two separate groups. You may talk about your accepting the same rules as we have, but we are going to be two different conferences," said the U. N. C. dean.

A movement is under foot for members of the Southeastern Conference to continue to have intercollegiate relations with members of the Southern Conference. This motion would at all times promote intimate and cordial contacts with members of the sister groups. Dr. Hobbs' statement, however, in all likelihood, will remain the policy of the "Big Ten" of the south.

Pre-War Business

Before the big split several matters of interest had been taken up but not considered after the thirteen schools in the far south had withdrawn. The cage committee had recommended that the annual tourney be conducted in Atlanta again this year; but it suggested that the body vote as to whether Raleigh would be selected. Also it was decided to give Carolina the indoor track meet once more this year; to give Duke the outdoor bunion jamboree; but it was not decided as to whom the mitt meet should be awarded.

The body voted also to finance a court test of the legality of the ten per cent tax on admissions; and it was decided to reduce the salaries of officials—Chuck Collins' "autocrats of the field"—from $75 to $50 per game.

Editorial Inspires Sermon

Rev. Albea Godbold, pastor of the Methodist church, takes the subject of today's sermon from the editorial "In Far Scattered Places" which appeared in THE DAILY TAR HEEL, December 6.

him in that division.

Tom Evins who went to the tourney semi-finals, will see action in the unlimited class unless Murry Kanner, winner of the title, who is at present uncertain about doing any fighting, takes the post away from him.

NAMED LEADER OF ALL-STAR TEAM

John Cain Fullback - Ala

Alabama's plunging fullback and captain, picked by coaches as the best fullback in the south, was appointed captain of The Daily Tar Heel's eleven in its official all-southern selection printed below. "Hurry" Cain has been a star for three years at Alabama.

FRESHMAN COURT TEAM PRACTICES

Tentative First String Composed Of Whitaker, Nelson, Kanner, Phelps, and McCachren.

Coach Sandy Dameron's freshmen basketball aspirants wound up a strenuous week of practice with some concentrated scrimmage sessions Friday night in the Tin Can. Six full teams saw action, as the coach gave every player a chance to show his merits. The first team selected, which, however, is subject to change before the first game, lined up with Whitaker and Nelson forwards, Kanner, center, and McCachren and Phelps, guards.

This first string outfit opposed the fifth team and then the third while the second team lined up against the fourth outfit in two periods of play.

TENNESSEE END ADVOCATES PAY FOR GRID STARS

Football Star and Honor Student Says All Good Players Are Paid In Spite of Rules.

"Honest John" Franklin, star left end on the 1932 University of Tennessee football team and senior, says, "Football players should be paid openly!"

"They pay them now anyhow and I'd rather they didn't have to dodge around in doing it," Franklin said in an interview. "Of course, there are some colleges where the players don't get anything. Incidentally, these colleges never win any football games."

Franklin is a star in the classroom as well as on the athletic field. He was the only member of the football team to make the Phi Kappa Phi, honorary engineering society whose membership is based solely on scholarship.

DUKE BASKETEERS LEAVE FOR FIRST TRIP NEXT WEEK

Only Two of Last Year's Regulars Are Back; Reserves May Fill Positions.

Duke University's 1933 basketball team will swing into action next week-end when a three-game swing northward will pit the Blue Devils against Baltimore, Georgetown, and George Washington on successive nights.

Coach Eddie Cameron, lacking Roy Alpert, Pete Carter, Nelson Colley and John Shaw of his last year's outfit, has been forced to build a new team around Herb and Jim Thompson, the only returning 1932 regulars. As a result of early season practice, it appears that last year's subs will gain the vacant places, for none of the sophomore candidates have been able to break into the regular lineup so far.

Jim Thompson at Center

Jim Thompson seems to have the center position cinched, while Henry Lewis, Wendell Horne, and Charles Hayes look good at forward, and Herb Thompson, Phil Weaver, and Fred Lewis shape up best at guard.

Duke will take another jaunt north in January when the blue team meets Maryland and Navy. Carolina will be played twice, January 31 in Durham and February 11 at Chapel Hill.

A. A. U. W. Will Meet Tuesday

The Association of University Women will conduct its regular meeting in the Episcopal parish house Tuesday evening, at 8:00 o'clock. Rupert Vance will speak on "Possibilities of a Planned Society."

Put HEALTH in your curriculum . . .

GOOD HEALTH means vitality. And it takes lots of energy to be a leader in the classroom, and in the social activities of college. So to succeed, you must make your health a required course.

Too often constipation is permitted to undermine health and sap vitality. It may cause headaches, loss of appetite and energy.

Try this pleasant "cereal way" to health. Two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN daily will promote regular habits. It supplies "bulk," vitamin B and iron. Ask that it be served at your fraternity house or campus restaurant.

The most popular ready-to-eat cereals served in the dining-rooms of American colleges, eating clubs and fraternities are made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. They include Kellogg's Corn Flakes, PEP Bran Flakes, Rice Krispies, Wheat Krumbs, and Kellogg's WHOLE WHEAT Biscuit. Also Kaffee Hag Coffee — real coffee that lets you sleep.

SARI MARITZA IS STAR IN SHOW AT THEATRE MONDAY

Austrian Star Supported by Herbert Marshall and Others in "Evenings for Sale."

Opening the week's bill at the Carolina theatre is "Evenings for Sale," witty Viennese musical romance, with a cast headed by Herbert Marshall, star of "Trouble in Paradise" and featuring Sari Maritza, Charles Ruggles and Lucian Litterfield. The story deals with the love affair of a penniless Viennese nobleman and the daughter of a nouveau-riche middle-class family, complicated by the presence on the scene of an American widow whose bank role is exceeded only by her naivete.

"No More Orchids," Tuesday's showing, offers the versatile actress, Carole Lombard, a greater opportunity to carry a major dramatic role than she has had in any other of the numerous films she has made previously. As a modern daughter of a wealthy banker who is thrown into distress by financial failure, Miss Lombard personifies the hundreds of charming and intelligent girls in this country who suffer an inverse social stigma and ostracism because "there has been money in the family."

Dorothy Wilson, Richard Cromwell, Arline Judge, Eric Linden, John Halliday and Aileen Pringle head the large cast in "The Age of Consent," Wednesday.

In "The Devil Is Driving," Thursday's feature, Edmund Lowe is cast as mechanic in a garage that serves as a "front" for an organized auto-theft ring. Wynne Gibson, James Gleason, Lois Wilson, Dickie Moore, and Allan Dinehart have the chief supporting roles.

Joan Blondell and Wallace Ford co-star in "Central Park," Friday. The story centers around this great playground of the New York metropolis, which is a meeting place for lovers, for rich and poor, for crooks and honest folks.

Henry B. Walthall, who plays one of the principal supporting roles in "Me and My Gal," Saturday's production, goes through the entire picture without saying a word or moving hand or foot. He appears as a paralytic, sitting in a wheel chair, his legs wrapped in a rug. Joan Bennett and Spencer Tracy portray the leading roles.

CUNNINGHAM AND McBRYDE WIN IN RHODES CONTEST

There are two Rhodes scholars from North Carolina at Oxford at the present: Grady C. Frank of Duke University, elected in 1930, and Dean Rusk of Davidson, elected in 1931. The former, who is specializing in mathematics, has not only made an excellent scholastic record but was elected captain of the Oxford tennis team last year.

The members of the state selection committee are: Josephus Daniels, chairman, Dean W. C. Davison of Duke University, Professor G. R. Vowles of Davidson, President H. S. Hilley of Atlantic Christian College, and Professor C. P. Spruill, Jr., of the University.

Airplane Moved

The airplane in the mechanical engineering department laboratory was dismantled and moved to a new position yesterday morning by the students in the department and N. P. Baily, instructor. The moving of the plane is expected to give more available room for practical work.

Einstein Sails for California
Professor Albert Einstein and Frau Einstein sailed for the United States yesterday on the steamer Oakland, bound for California, where he will resume his research work at the Mount Wilson observatory.

Debtors Will Pay
The foreign affairs committee of the chamber of deputies at Paris voted 20 to 6 last evening in favor of a proposal to recommend payment of the $20,000,000 due the United States, this week, on condition that America agree to a conference for reconsideration of the debt structure.

Budget 32 Million Less
Knocking $32,912,304 off the total asked by the budget bureau, the house appropriations committee yesterday reported its first annual supply bill for the session, recommending that $961,416,597 be allowed the post office departments for the next fiscal year.

Cover to Offer Bill
G. W. Cover, Jr., of Andrews, representative-elect from Cherokee county, said in Asheville yesterday that he would introduce a bill to repeal the Turlington act, often called North Carolina's "Volstead" act, at the forthcoming session of the general assembly.

Many Colleges Headed By University Alumni

schools, operated by the Methodist Church, are headed by Dr. S. B. Turrentine, '84, and Dr. W. A. Jenkins, '07, respectively.

Two University alumni are not only college presidents, but also the founders of their respective institutions. Coincidentally, both these schools are teachers' colleges. The president of the East Carolina Teachers' College, at Greenville, Dr. Robert H. Wright, '97, is largely responsible for the high educational standard that the school enjoys at the present time. In Boone, B. B. Dougherty, '99, is the president of the Appalachian State Teachers' College which was originally called the Appalachian Training School.

In North Carolina, is situated one of the oldest women's colleges in the country—Salem College. This school, established in Winston-Salem by the Moravian Church, has had as its president for the past twenty-three years, Dr. Howard E. Rondthaler, '93.

Mrs. Ernest Cruikshank, although not a graduate, attended the University in 1900-01, and was recently selected to head St. Mary's Junior College in Raleigh. During the past ten years, Mrs. Cruikshank was president of the Columbia Institute in Tennessee.

There are, too, among the University alumni, presidents of colleges situated outside the state. January 1 will see the resignation of Dr. Robert P. Pell, '81, as the president of Converse College, a woman's institution in Spartanburg, South Carolina, where he has served for the past thirty years.

Dr. J. L. Cunningham, '91, the president of the Scarrit College for Christian Workers, a Methodist institution in Nashville, Tennessee, and Dr. A. Caswell Ellis, '94, president of the Cleveland College of Western Reserve University, are also among the out-of-state college presidents who graduated from the University.

First Co-eds Scorned By Resentful Men

ing two editors-in-chief who resigned because of overwork.

Feeling against the co-eds ran high. January 18, 1898, the Tar Heel published a stern warning to Carolina students that the women were usurping the place of the men. Citing a story in the New York World of one Miss Abigail Laughton who at Cornell "incontinently beat the best wranglers the men could stand against her" to win a coveted forensic medal, the Tar Heel observed that Carolina too had a co-ed menace. The Cornell women students, the World continued, "by that sign rose from the slough of despondency to the pinnacle of eminent respect. They strut about the campus with their noses in the air, while the young men glance wondering at them from under their eyebrows at a respectful distance."

"This event," the worried Tar Heel cried, "ought to serve as a warning. Our 'co-eds,' although just admitted to the University last year, already rival the men in several departments and bid fair to outstrip them."

The derision of the co-eds was largely directed against their mental abilities, since most of them were intellectually superior to the men. Three of them had already graduated from an accredited college. In February, 1898, the Tar Heel published a scathing poetic denunciation called "The Varsity Girl." Five verses asserted that the co-ed was "stuffed with erudition as you stuff a leather cushion" and that she knew "all the learning in the burning mind of man."

"But she couldn't prepare a dinner for a gaunt and hungry sinner, Or get up a decent supper For a poor voracious papa, For she never was instructed On the old domestic plan."

Notwithstanding the apparent unpopularity of the new students, they seem to have found their way to the German club dances of 1897 and '98. Miss McRae attended both fall and winter dances with student members of the organization.

Miss Sallie Stockard was the only one of the five co-eds to graduate with the class of '98. She is therefore the first woman to receive a diploma at Carolina. Miss Stockard already held an A.B. degree from Guilford College.

In April, 1898, Miss Watkins received an appointment of teacher of higher mathematics at Peace Institute at Raleigh, which she promptly accepted. Miss Bryant did not finish the year with the original co-eds because she returned in the middle of the year to her professorship of geology and biology at the State Normal and Industrial school, which later became N. C.

LEADING CITIZENS PRAISE WORK OF STATE INSTITUTE

tute under Professor Coates.

Ehringhaus described the Institute "as one of the most significant events to occur in North Carolina in many years. People are beginning to realize that good government is not unattainable," North Carolina's next governor said.

Pledging cooperation from the Bar Association, President Kemp Battle said in behalf of Tar Heel barristers: "The Institute of Government, auspiciously launched in September, gathering momentum with every month, and now making this first state-wide contribution toward a better esprit de corps and a higher level of professional consciousness and aim on the part of our county officials boldly proclaims that North Carolina has mind and will sufficient unto the trials before her. The institute itself may fall and die. Behind a sprawling, sentimental, well-intentioned but ineffective, wasteful, slow-moving democracy, there always looms the spectre of the 'Man on Horseback,' the symbol of autocracy. The institute calls on the state to strip decks for action. If it succeeds here, it will spread to other states. The national government itself is a goal not too remote. And so we may say in very truth that the task upon which we are embarked is nothing less than the preservation of the Republic."

FIVE CASES TRIED BY LOCAL COURT

One White Man and Four Negroes Answer to Minor Charges Before Judge C. P. Hinshaw.

Dace Bean, of Chapel Hill, charged with breaking and entering into a store and with theft of merchandise, was bound over to superior court at Hillsboro under $500 bond by Judge C. P. Hinshaw at recorder's court Saturday. Judgment was suspended in another case against Bean, in which the charge was jail-breaking.

Judgment was suspended in a case against Morris Kearney, colored, charged with speeding in town and with damaging a stop-light, on condition that the defendant pay for repairs to the light and court costs, and that he not drive a car for ten days.

Olivia Edwards, colored, was charged with reckless driving on a state highway and damage to a car. The case was continued. Benny Alston, colored, charged with theft of clothes, was given a sentence of sixty days.

A case against Skinny Chambers, colored, charged with simple assault, was dismissed upon failure of the plaintiff to appear; and a second case was dismissed upon the non-appearance of Early Edwards, colored, charged with vagrancy.

Freshman Christmas Seal Sale Making Poor Progress

A report by Edwin Lanier, self-help leader who is in charge of the student Christmas seal campaign through the freshman friendship council, showed that only $8.76 has been realized from the sale of the holiday stickers to date. Several important dormitory reports have not been turned in yet, however, and Lanier expects a fairly good return.

As late as 1912 Dr. Kemp Plummer Battle wrote of the women students in his history of the University, "Owing to many excellent female schools in the state and to the Girls' Normal and Industrial College the experiment (at Chapel Hill) has not met with much success. The attendance has averaged about half a dozen a year, but of these there have been some brilliant students."

DEAN ANNOUNCES REGISTRATION FOR TECHNICAL SCHOOL

Dean H. G. Baity Gives Registration Schedule for Engineering Students.

The schedule for the registration of students in the school of engineering has been announced by Dean H. G. Baity. The program for these students is as follows:

Juniors and seniors must obtain registration permits from the registrar's office and present them to the registration committee in Phillips 301, between 2:00 o'clock and 5:00 o'clock Friday afternoon, December 16. Upon receipt of registration slip and class cards, students must file this slip and cards with the registrar's office before 5:00 o'clock, December 16.

Freshmen and Sophomores

The freshmen and sophomores must obtain permit cards from the registrar's office and present them to A. R. Hollett in Phillips 321 between December 17 and 21.

They will secure their registration slips and class cards, prepared during the holiday period, from Hollett between 7:00 o'clock and 10:00 o'clock Monday evening, January 2, 1933, and attend all classes as indicated by the class cards under the penalty of probation. They will file their registration slips and class cards with the registrar's office between 9:00 o'clock and 5:00 o'clock Tuesday, January 3, at such times as will not conflict with attendance of regular scheduled classes.

LAW FRATERNITY INDUCTS NINETEEN

Phi Delta Phi Gives Dinner for New Men; Series of Informal Gatherings Are Planned.

Phi Delta Phi, international legal fraternity, conducted its annual supper and initiation last night in the Graham Memorial. The purpose of the supper was to greet the new pledges of the fraternity.

At the supper, which was an informal affair, Dr. W. S. Jenkins of the history department made a short speech on the history of Phi Delta Phi. Other speakers were Professor J. H. Chadbourne and Professor F. B. McCall, both of the law school. It was announced that the fraternity plans to have a series of these informal gatherings throughout the year.

The initiation took place immediately after the supper. The new men pledged to the organization were: Thornton Brooks, Albert Cooper, Harry Finch, Pete Hairston, Ike Hughes, Bill Jarrell, Henry London, Bill Markham, Allen Marshall, Vass Shepherd, L. C. Skinner, Herbert H. Taylor, Haywood Weeks, Henry Anderson, Bill Anglin, Archie Cannon, Robert Geitner, Lynn Wilder, and Jules McMichael.

Members of the fraternity who were present are: Archie Allen, Bill Dunn, Bob Hovis, Bill Adams, and James Moore.

ORATORIO SOCIETY TO GIVE CONCERT TOMORROW NIGHT

Dr. Harold S. Dyer to Direct Singing Of Carols in Which Audience Will Participate.

The Chapel Hill Oratorio society will present its first performance of the year tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock in the Hill music auditorium, offering as its chief choral work When the Christ Child Came, by Joseph Clokey, an American composer.

Under the directorship of Dr. Harold S. Dyer, the organization will sing a number of European Christmas carols to signalize the spirit of Christmas. Concluding the program, the audience will join the chorus in singing several traditional carols.

Soloists will be Dr. Robert T. Clark, Jr., of the Duke University faculty, tenor; Dr. G. A. Harter, bass; Mrs. G. A. Harter and Mrs. R. H. Wettach, contraltos; and Mrs. L. C. McKinney, soprano.

IRISH UNIVERSITY REPRESENTATIVES TO DEBATE HERE

Wilkinson and Kaplan of Local Squad Will Uphold Negative Of Nationalism Query.

The Irish debaters of the University of Dublin will meet the debaters of the University Thursday evening in Gerrard hall. The foreign debaters will debate with the University of Georgia tonight in Athens.

Those representing the University are John Wilkinson and A. S. Kaplan. They will uphold the negative side of the resolution, "Resolved: That Nationalism is a Bar to Peace and Progress."

Representatives of the University of Dublin are James J. Auchmuty of Longford, Ireland, and Garrett E. Gill of the city of Dublin.

Outstanding Student

Auchmuty, scholar, moderator and bachelor of arts, did not only excel in a high scholastic standing, but he was active on the athletic field. He was a member of the cricket team and the rugby football team. After spending two years in the University of Dublin, he was awarded a scholarship in modern history. Since his graduation, in 1931, he has been engaged in research in Irish history, and ancient and ecclesiastical history. Auchmuty holds the gold medal of the College Historical Society for history, and is the author of a pamphlet dealing with the activities of Irishmen abroad.

Gill, B.A., L.L.B., barrister-at-law, graduated from the University of Dublin, in 1930, with high honors in legal and political science, and had taken honors in English literature, and won several essay prizes. He is a silver medalist in oratory of the College Historical Society.

The Irish debaters are touring America, and are debating with some of the leading universities and colleges of the country. They will spend Thursday night in Chapel Hill, and will conclude their tour Friday night in a debate with George Washington University, in Washington.

GOV. GARDNER TO BE ENTERTAINED AT STATE DINNER

Editors of North Carolina Will Give Live-at-Home Dinner For State Officials.

North Carolina editors will be the hosts to Governor O. Max Gardner Friday evening, December 16, at the dining room of the Raleigh branch of the Greater University of North Carolina in a live-at-home dinner, demonstrating the accomplishments of a plan begun by Governor O. Max Gardner three years ago at the executive mansion when he launched his live-at-home campaign.

Many Attended in 1929

Some two hundred guests accepted the invitation of Governor and Mrs. Gardner in 1929 to attend a dinner displaying the variety of products of the state, and this year the editors of the state are to reverse the previous procedure and become hosts of the Governor. Among the guests will be Mrs. Gardner, Governor-elect and Mrs. J. C. B. Ehringhaus, Lt.-Governor and Mrs. L. R. Fountain, and Lt.-Governor-elect and Mrs. A. H. Graham.

From Chapel Hill Professor Oscar Coffin of the journalism department and Louis Graves, editor of the Chapel Hill Weekly, will occupy places of prominence on the program in the "tall-story" telling contest.

The North Carolina Press Association, directed by its president, John A. Park, with the assistance of Raleigh news writers, has about completed plans for the event to be staged at State College.

Dr. E. C. Brooks Arose From Public School Ranks To Present Position

Graduate of Trinity College, Dr. Brooks, Despite Numerous Controversies During Reign, Has Always Sought to Instruct Raleigh Student Body for Service to Humanity.

"It is essential," said Dr. E. C. Brooks on taking over the executive position of State College in 1923, "that our higher institutions should be so broadened that those who enter the vocations shall be conscious of a distinct relationship to human welfare, and preparations for a vocation, either law or engineering, teaching or manufacturing, preaching or farming, should be based on the modern humanities which open up the avenues of understanding to the necessity of basing individual welfare on the social good." Ever since his accession to the leadership of State, Dr. Brooks has endeavored to carry out the ideas set forth in his inaugural address.

From a position of comparative obscurity as principal of the Kinston, N. C., city schools, Eugene Clyde Brooks has risen to a commanding place in national educational circles as head of one of the foremost engineering and agricultural colleges in the country.

Trinity College Graduate

In his ascendancy to his present eminent rank, Brooks, now vice-president of the Raleigh branch of the Greater University of North Carolina, has held many important positions in the state educational world. His career might be said to have begun when he graduated from Trinity College with an A.B. degree in 1894. The first stepping stone, on his way to a top position in his profession, was his selection in 1900 as principal of the Kinston schools, which was soon followed by his choice as superintendent of the Monroe county schools.

Y. M. C. A. GROUP PICKS MINOR AS STATE OFFICIAL

Ike Minor Made Secretary of State "Y" Cabinet at Greensboro Meeting Saturday.

Ike Minor, of the University, was elected secretary of the state Y. M. C. A. cabinet at the monthly meeting of the cabinet in Greensboro Saturday. Minor will hold the office for the entire scholastic year of 1932-33.

Guilford College, Davidson College, N. C. State, and North Carolina were represented at the meeting which was presided over by Archie Allen, president of the cabinet. Duke University and High Point College were unable to have their delegates present.

The meeting consisted of discussion of various college projects carried out this year in the respective institutions, especially those dealing with the freshmen. Plans for attendance at a national faculty-student conference in Atlanta, December 28, were also made.

The group unanimously decided to sponsor a joint Y. M. C. A.-Y. W. C. A. banquet to take place in the "Y" Hut at N. C. C. W., February 4. Bill McKee, president of the University Y. M. C. A., was appointed chairman of the committee on arrangements. Plans include a speaker for the joint meeting.

Graduates to Register

Dr. George R. Coffman will be in his office Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday afternoons from 2:00 until 4:00 o'clock to register graduate students in English. He will also meet at other hours by appointment students who cannot come at the indicated times.

Group Recommends Nominee To Head Libraries and Library School

Five Delegates To Go To Atlanta Congress

Bill McKee, Ike Minor, R. M. McMillan, L. L. Hutchinson and another delegate elected by the sophomore and freshmen cabinets of the Y. M. C. A. will attend the first annual Southern Faculty-Student Conference in Atlanta, December 28-31. Tom Wright, assistant pastor of the Chapel of the Cross, will also be present.

This will be the first south-wide convention dealing with inter-racial and economic problems to take place among student-faculty groups. The Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., and the Student Volunteers will cooperate in the project. The theme of the congress will be "The Responsibility of the Forces of Religion in Building the South of Tomorrow."

ORIGINAL DRAMAS TO BE PRESENTED BY PLAYMAKERS

Students' Work to Be Presented in Theatre This Afternoon and Evening.

The second bill of original, one-act plays will be experimentally produced before an invited audience tomorrow afternoon and evening at 4:00 and 8:00 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre. There are six plays on the bill, three of which will be given at each performance.

These experimental productions were written, cast and directed by students in the University courses in playwriting, English 55 and 225, and will be under the general supervision of Harry Davis, business manager of the Playmakers, with stage management by Ellen Stewart.

Three Afternoon Shows

The afternoon performance is headed by Marguerite McGinnis' play Coal, a play of West Virginia mine folk, directed by the author. In the cast are Jo Orendorff, Muriel Wolfe, Jane Knight, and Ed Martin.

The second play, The State Rests, is by Peggy Ann Harris. The drama, directed by Foster Fitz-Simons, is concerned with a small town court. The cast of this play is still tentative.

The last play on the bill for the afternoon is In His Hand, a play of village folk, written and directed by Betty Bolton. The cast for this includes Elmer Oettinger, Mrs. Sara M. Huntley, Betty Bolton, Rene Prud'hommeaux, Muriel Wolfe.

Their Elders Pay, a problem play of youth, by Sue Roberson, will be presented tomorrow night. The cast includes the author and Henry Page, and is directed by Mrs. Sara M. Huntley.

Honora Wade, a play of Georgia folk, by Eugenia Rawls, is to be directed by Marion Tatum. The author plays the title role, supported by Foster Fitz-Simons, Loretta Carroll Bailey, Jean Breckenridge, and Jane Knight.

Back Door, written and directed by Wilbur Dorsett, is a Carolina folk comedy. In the cast are Jo Orendorff, Walter Terry, Carl Thompson, and the author.

Should He Accept Former Librarian Would Assume Duties July 1, 1933.

ACCEPTANCE NOT CERTAIN Faculty Members Reported to Be Strongly in Favor Of Nominee.

Dr. Louis Round Wilson, for over thirty years librarian of the University and one of the outstanding men in the University administration, was last night unanimously nominated for the vice-presidency of the Greater University of North Carolina to head the University at Chapel Hill.

This nomination was made by a committee of five men appointed by Governor O. Max Gardner, at the November meeting of the board of trustees. This group spent the whole day here yesterday conferring with members of the faculty.

The committee also recommended that Dr. Wilson be elected director of libraries for all three institutions and of the library school of the Greater University.

Would Take Office July 1

Should Dr. Wilson be elected and accept, resigning from his present position as dean of the graduate library school at the University of Chicago, he would take office July 1, 1933. Meanwhile, Dr. Frank Porter Graham, recently elected president of the Greater University, embracing the University here, State College at Raleigh, and North Carolina College at Greensboro, would be authorized to engage such administrative assistance as would be necessary to (Continued on last page)

GRAHAM SPEAKS IN CHAPEL PERIOD

President Urges Students to Use Time Left Before Finals to Best Advantage.

President Frank P. Graham, speaking yesterday at the last chapel program to be presented this quarter, stressed the fact that very little time remains before final exams and urged that students make the best possible use of this time. The way in which students organize their time and study during the remainder of this quarter, President Graham stated, will in a great measure determine their success or failure during this school year.

Graham advised that all students take advantage of their opportunities here at the University, since parents have made it possible for them to attend the University, often at a great sacrifice. Students should organize each day, he suggested, in order that they may execute their work and also leave time for relaxation.

The difference between men, Graham continued, is their organization of time and opportunities. If a student successfully schedules the few remaining days before exams, he will have achieved a great deal toward future success.

In addition, Graham urged that students do honest work on the final exams.

Before Judgment

Among business pending consideration before Congress is the proposal to include the Glass Bill provisions for branch banks. There is opposition to the plan, of course, being offered by many large banking interests, but their arguments against it seem to center around the illustration that Canada's system of branch banking has retarded in normal times the prosperity of the country. There are only ten banks, strictly speaking, in Canada, but their branches scatter out over a vast amount of territory and make their services available to a majority of the people. These banks, in times of depression, are as safe as any in the world, for they are government-chartered and must guarantee a specific amount of capital before going into operation.

Our own experience with branch banks in this state shows the merits and defects of the system. It is true that money is more likely to be safe in a branch bank while others are closing their doors, and it is also true that branch banks extend credit in prosperous times as freely as any other banking houses. But the money stored in branch banks during depression, even though "safe," is idle capital. And in what we like to call normal times, credit is plentiful everywhere and cannot be attributed to branch banks as one of their peculiar qualities.

Idle capital is no capital. However plentiful credit may be in the golden eras of prosperity, when it is most needed is during hard times. Not that branch banks alone are guilty of withholding money that should be put to work; on the contrary, it is a well-meant mistake that often occurs. But branch banks, intent on remaining solvent—and then some—to the last ditch, too often refuse credit to businesses which, not being able to meet their excessive demands for collateral, go broke. This American tragedy has far-reaching effects on the economic well-being of a community and eventually affects the status of its banks themselves.

So, without pretending to pass judgment on an issue whose outcome will either accentuate or retard the growth of branch banking, we at least see that, however desirable it may be to further this growth, there are ample arguments against it.—A.T.D.

A Columbia graduate student's thesis contains data proving that Phi Beta Kappa college men have more children than the average-grade undergraduates. And that's one way to scatter the seed of knowledge.

Wolf in Sheep's Clothing?

The proximity of the final examinations serves to resuscitate the time-worn question: What do examinations really test, anyway? The answer to this question lies too deep for the mind of man; at least there can be only conjecture concerning it.

Do quizzes and examinations test the scholastic attainments and reasoning capacity of the student, or do they merely reveal the degree to which he has entered into the thought and mind of the instructor, during test periods, at least? The latter, many contend, is too often what it revealed, which not only does not encourage the student to do independent research and reach his own conclusions, but actually inhibits such tendencies.

Such is not the case with all students, by any means, but it is probable that the effect lies in that direction. If the instructor throws out a definite pattern of thought and expects the members of his class to accept it, as too often is the case, then why not do so and avoid the labor involved in investigating and comparing the various conflicting ideas and forming an opinion of your own, is an attitude fostered by such a pedagogical prospect from the chair. Furthermore, it is argued that many instructors have assistants to aid in grading the papers, which is no more encouraging to individual opinions and reasoning than if the instructor were doing the work himself, and has the added disadvantage that the last whit of personal sympathy and understanding disappears.

Some criterion by which to judge the student's attainments is necessary, but any system which makes no allowances for individual differences appears to machine-like and leads one to wonder whether the art of examining has kept pace with all the other phases of modern endeavor, and whether the present system is founded upon practical and scientific principles.—W.A.S.

There remain only nine more days for many students to do the work supposed to require three months of diligent labor, but apparently we have some equal to the task.

Marked

Why must certain individuals be forever intruding their opinions upon the public by writing remarks in library books? Who has not taken out a fine library book to read and found it filled with asinine marginal comments from some egotist who has an undue pride in his own opinion and a carelessness about the opinions or the comfort of others?

To find that on page after page a soft pencil has been dragged under various names, that felicitous phrases have been emphasized, that brackets have been drawn in the margins around whole paragraphs is sufficient to awaken the savage in the gentlest breast. There are persons who find a religious service enlivened by sundry barks of "Amen" or "Hallelujah" rising from remote pews. Most people's taste does not run that way. They would rather hear the sermon without comment. Likewise, they prefer to read a good book in silence. The noisy beatings of some previous reader first distract, then infuriate them. They would no more think of writing in a book than of scribbling their names on the ruins of the Parthenon or disfiguring the silver bark of a birch tree.

The habit of marking books is doubtless formed early in life. Education is partly to blame, since teachers have been known to encourage the practice of marking textbooks. In some people the habit formed in early school days has persisted.

They are not respectful towards any book; even their Bibles are rendered objectionable. One genius with more ardor than taste has even printed a New Testament with some hundreds of texts underlined in red, so as to save the Philistines trouble, as if a tailor were to put grease spots on a new suit of clothes in order to make us feel comfortable in it.—R.B.D.

And now one professor has actually denied the existence of a Santa Claus, which is spreading liberalism just a little too thick. Here, Mr. Clark, he is in your custody; spare him not.

Among Christmas cards exhibited in London was one bearing the Yuletide greeting: "Fifty million Christians can't be wrong."

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

Beer

It would appear that beer stories are no more popular in Canada, a wet nation, than in some arid sectors of our own country. A saga unfolding the adventures of a class of chemistry students on a tour through several large Montreal breweries (Our Times, December 3) and the consummate ineptitude achieved through the sampling of various brands of ale and mild intoxicants, brought the suspension of the news editor of the McGill University Daily by the student council of the Montreal institution. This was followed by a wholesale resignation of other staff members.

Beer, it would seem, is not news; at least it's not nice news. We presume that the Daily will change its policy which (again we presume) must have been "All the booze that's fit to print."

Science

Cognizant always of the latest advances of science, we note herein the inception of the latest boon to tired bridge players. It's the Hammond Electric Bridge Table, and if you'll pardon the interlude, it's the darndest thing we have ever seen. The U. C. S. P. has one of the tables down in its Franklin street office, so we dropped in the other afternoon to look it over.

You just push a pack of cards into a side aperture and an electric robot shuffles them and distributes them to little slots in front of the players in something over a minute and a half. The manager told us that an inquisitive bridge fan dropped in the other day and tried to figure how to stack the cards so that the robot would deliver a perfect suited hand to every player. It took him an hour and a half, and he was something of an engineer at that.

The Hammond table costs twenty-five dollars so we didn't buy one; it doesn't bid or play your hand.

Reading

We recommend the new issue of Bunk, which, unlike other funny magazines in its field, is surprisingly clean and humorous. Also chuckle over "Canine Primary," a brilliant satire in The New Republic.

Story

"No Longer Barren," a short story in the current Carolina Magazine, we have discovered, has real history behind it. The opening scene is disguised as Kentucky. It's really Tennessee, and if you lived there you could detect "Clark" as Sam Houston, Texas' great governor. The character known as Rice is in reality a prominent Nashville gentleman whose name is Sharp. Still living, he refuses to reveal the secret of why Sam Houston left Tennessee.

THE POLL CAT

Bill Lewis, editor of The Student Bugle ("Of, For, By the students"), chewed the end of his pencil, brushed a stray lump of hair into place, and scowled. "Dammit, dammit, and dammit," he muttered reflectively and without passion.

Pete Holland, head editorial writer, heard the moans and looked up from the editorial on the college funny magazine, The Howl, that he was writing in the midst of a jangle of typewriters. "Whassamatter now, Bill?" he asked in the tone of one who would in all probability be able to settle any vexing question that might ever arise in a college newspaper office.

"I gotta have an idea for a poll," said Bill, "and I'll be damned if I can think up anything new."

"Well," mused Pete, "we've had one on the most popular professor and the most popular co-ed and who should be the next president of the college. I tell you: why not have a poll to determine the most popular janitor on the campus? Remember, Bill, the Bugle is 'of, for, and by the students'!"

"That might be all right," admitted Bill. "But we've kinda run that 'most popular' stuff in the ground. Remember all the phony answers we got to the 'Most Popular Football Player' poll? Half the damn straw voters voted for 'Pansy' Baxton. We can't let these serious matters which might affect student opinion all over the country be made a joke of. You know that."

"Wait a minute!" shouted Pete, ripping the paper from his typewriter. "I gotta idea for an editorial." He pecked away for a few minutes then swung around to face Bill. "Listen to this lead!"

Bill listened, while Pete read the opening: "Evading the sincere motives of this publication in its recent polls, many sought to make a joke of the solemn business in hand, and many ridiculous and utterly insane ballots were cast—which served to cloak the polls in a supercilious light. These polls that the Bugle conduct are serious activities, affecting student opinion of the whole country. Every student should take the trouble to vote in every one."

"That's okay," agreed Bill, "but just the same, that ain't helping me to get a poll for the next week. I've run them on politics, on football selections, and some on real hot stuff like 'What the Co-eds Think of Necking!' and I'm just about out of ideas."

"Well," said Pete. "Remember you can always fill the paper by putting in a half or full page ad saying: 'Subscribe to the Bugle! Send one to the old folks. Send one to the girl friend.'"

"Sure," admitted Bill. "We can always do that. But, I kinda hate to just fill up the paper with faked ads. Remember, I did that for two solid weeks at the beginning of school. The readers get tired of seeing that kind of stuff. That's why I like to have a fresh poll every week. Remember that 'Popular Professor' poll? We got hard up for space-filling and ran that over again and the second time there wasn't anything but phony ballots in the box. One of the co-eds won the title that second time.

"Now, no reader is ever going to get tired of seeing a fresh poll in the paper every week, cause it is a thing of real importance for a student body to be able to express itself on some question that really matters. —And remember! The world has its eye on the collegiate press!"

Pete jumped up in wild enthusiasm. "I've got it, I've got it!" he yelled. "Boy, what a swell idea!"

"Calm down," said Bill. "Tell me what it is." "Just this," explained Pete. "Even if you do think up a poll for this week, you'll have the same trouble next week—and the week after that. So, I suggest"—his voice reached a shrill pitch as his enthusiasm grew—"that we conduct a poll asking the students to express an opinion on their favorite polls which they would like for the Bugle to conduct!!!"

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

Correcting an Impression

Information has come to me from a thoroughly reliable source that the figures I used in my recent letter concerning the appropriations to the University at Chapel Hill were incorrect, the profits from the various Consolidated Service Plants (the Laundry and the Book Exchange particularly) being too high. The figures were budget estimates, not actual reports of results. The profits from the service plants, all of them, are used by the University, and this money is particularly needed this year. Please correct the impression that I gave that the profits were as high as they were, but let me insist that the University should be appropriated sufficient funds to hold the present standards of instruction intact. Some other states with legislatures not bulldozed by lobbyists and frightened by the prospect of being scratched at the polls have made splendid efforts and splendid sacrifices for the sake of education and other governmental duties. (Note, for example, the luxury—tobacco and soft drink—taxes in numerous states and the sales tax in Mississippi.) Certainly the fine, progressive state of North Carolina can rely on the legislature to continue the support which has made the University of North Carolina one of the outstanding universities of the country and, indeed, of the world.

Over-Emphasis Passing

The contention that the normal order of things is about to replace over-emphasis upon college athletics has received public pronouncement in an editorial in the San Francisco News.

"Has a sense of humor struck our college at last and survived even the excitement of the football season?" the paper asked.

"Have the undergraduates ceased to be willing clay in the hands of the campus Babbitts and embryo high-pressure salesmen? Is the cheer leader passing as the archetype of what a college man should be? And is football itself subsiding to its proper level as a glorious sport and no longer a religion?"

"Certainly something of the sort is happening on the campus. We cite two phenomena in the very week of the Big Game that will spread acute alarm among old grads of the far-away Nineteen Twenties.

"At Stanford the Big Game bonfire this year was perfumery performance, listlessly carried out for old times' sake, and so characterized by the Stanford Daily in an editorial suggesting that the time, wood, and energy consumed might better have been spent in relief of the poor and that it be discontinued.

"At Berkeley still worse happened. Left unguarded after midnight by sophomores who thereby betrayed their trust and over-emphasized the importance of sleep, the Big C on the hill back of the campus was smeared with red paint and half of its incandescent lamps broken by vandals who were not even Stanford students but just irreverent high school boys.

"At least the Daily Californian had left enough of the old spirit to chide the sophomores in an editorial. But that such things could occur is certainly a reflection on those whose job it is to hypnotize college students into the delusion that the honor of their university is somehow bound up in the same package with the reputation of a high-salaried and overpublicized football coach."

All of which leads to the belief that the coming emphasis upon education may lead to changes that will bolster the value of the diploma.—Daily Californian.

LYONS WILL HEAD TOUR OF EUROPE DURING SUMMER

Party to Consist of College Men and Women Who Will Visit European Points of Interest.

Dr. J. C. Lyons, of the department of romance languages, will conduct his seventh private tour of Europe during the summer. This is a tour for college students only, and will be arranged to give them a fairly comprehensive view of ten capitals and countries of Europe.

The party will leave New York June 21, sailing on the Europa, and will arrive in Southampton, England, June 26. From England they will visit the following countries: Holland, Belgium, France, Germany, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Austria, Switzerland, and Italy. They will leave Cherbourg, on the Bremen, and will arrive in New York August 16.

The group, which is now being made up, will be composed of about fifteen or twenty young men and women of college age who will see Europe rapidly, and under the guidance of Dr. Lyons, who has had seven years of almost consecutive experience in conducting trips abroad.

Athletic Association Announces Awards And Football Schedule

Tar Heels Will Not Meet Tennessee Next Year Due to Duke Conflict.

SEVENTY-FOUR AWARDS

Twenty-Two Win Varsity Football Letters and Thirty-One Frosh Get Numerals.

The Carolina athletic association meeting in its regular fall session last night voted seventy-four athletic awards to members of the varsity and freshman football and cross-country squads. The council also worked on the University's reaction to the conference split and next year's football schedule.

Twenty-two members of the varsity football squad were awarded their football insignia for work on the Tar Heel eleven. Of these twenty-two, twelve men received their letter for the first time. These men were Barclay, Brandt, Burnett, Collins, Cozart, Daniel, Frankel, Kahn, McCaskill, Smith, Tatum and Woollen. Three men, Hodges, Chandler, and Underwood, were given their monograms for the third year. Other men getting their second insignia were: Croom, Lassiter, Newcombe, Philpot, Phipps, Thompson, and Walker. Robert Mebane was awarded a manager's letter.

Thirty-one freshmen were awarded numerals for their meritorious work on the frosh squad. They were: Baucom, Bullock, Cox, T. E. McCachren, J. R. Montgomery, Nelson, Pendleton, Phelps, Snyder, Speight, Sutton, and Womble, backs. The linemen were: Arthur, Brothers, Brown, Bryan, W. J., Denti, Evans, Barwick, Ellisburg, Hobgood, Watkins, Milloway, Joyce, Moore, Phillips, Webb, V. M., Kanner, Reid, W. L., Yoder, and Yeager.

The varsity cross-country men winning insignias were Cordle, Curlee, Donnell, Goldman, Groover, Hubbard, Jensen, L. Sullivan and H. Sullivan. Joe Zaglin was awarded a manager's insignia. Ten freshmen were recognized for their cross-country prowess as Carraway, Conte, Garrison, Keeney, McPhail, Napier, Neel, Mark, Sullivan, and Umstead won numerals.

Schedule Announced

The athletic council announced the Carolina grid schedule for 1933 and confirmed reports that the Tar Heels would play only a nine game lineup next year. Tennessee will not be met although the Vols and Tar Heels signed a two year contract last spring for the next two years.

Because Tennessee's schedule called for two games in North Carolina on successive weekends, Carolina agreed with Duke and Tennessee to defer the 1933 game at Chapel Hill until 1934 in order that Tennessee might carry out her plan of a return game with Duke in 1933—their first appearance in the Duke stadium. The Tar Heels will meet the Vols in Kenan stadium in 1934.

The schedule for next year is listed below:
Sept. 30—Davidson—Home
Oct. 7—Vanderbilt—away
Oct. 14—Univ. of Ga.—home
Oct. 21—Univ. of Fla.—away
Oct. 28—Georgia Tech—home
Nov. 4—N. C. State—away
Nov. 11—Wake Forest—home
Nov. 18—Duke—away
Nov. 30—Univ. of Va.—home

The Can Opener

by CLAIBORN M. CARE

THIRTEEN COLLEGES SECEDED from the Southern Conference at the regular fall meeting of the conference held last week in Knoxville. The sports writers everywhere who have been yelling for such a secession for the past three years now have plenty of copy. Many switch their stand and decry the action as unbefitting southern gentlemen. Indeed one writer in Knoxville said that "the rebels all went into the Southeastern league and left only gentlemen in the Southern Conference." Various opinions have been expressed by everyone on the Carolina campus and it is generally expected that before long the big game of the year will be that one between Carolina and New Catawba or maybe Lattimore. THIS BREAK HAS BEEN hanging fire for the past two years. The ring leaders in the movement have been Vanderbilt and Florida. Vanderbilt has always advocated having a Commissioner to supervise southern athletics who would have much the same job old Commissioner Landis has in baseball—looking over players' records. At New Orleans last year the vote on the Commissioner idea was brought up. Vanderbilt rallied her supporters around and decided to put the vote in the form of a threat. The insurgents said they would withdraw unless a Commissioner was appointed. This infuriated many northern schools and so the plan was killed. Carolina was included in that group last year but it wasn't because they wanted us, it was a political move to get our vote for the Commissioner. No legitimate vote was ever raised on the Vanderbilt plan this year, instead the thirteen institutions withdrew.

THE SOUTHEASTERN CONFERENCE was formed, they said, because the old Southern Conference was becoming unwieldy and they felt that another conference formulated along geographical lines would be a more compact group and one that would be easier to handle. The result is a Southeastern Conference which covers approximately as much territory as the old Southern Conference did. Besides it is the feeling of many that Tennessee and Georgia were not wanted especially by the group but that it had to include them to have a clear conscience on the geographical score.

DEAN HOBBS, CAROLINA'S faculty representative who was elected vice-president of the Southern Conference, believes that the move "was a lot of muddled thinking" and he wonders what the seceders had in mind when they said that it was time to have a division along geographical lines. Dean Hobbs said yesterday that that was all bunk and had nothing to do with the secession. Mr. Hobbs doesn't see any immediate effect on our schedules but he says that the tournaments naturally will be cut down in size. The Dean does not feel that the break will hurt Carolina athletics.

COACH BOB FETZER SAID last night that it was his impression that "the new Southeastern Conference was tending to emphasize football, whereas the trend in other sections was opposite. Coach Bob said that it would have been better to go on as before but that maybe the break was best "if a remedy could not be found for the restlessness, rumblings, gossiping, and threatening of the last few

VARSITY BOXERS ARE IN CONDITION AS EXAMS START

N. C. State, V. M. I., and Virginia Will Be Met in Meets In Tin Can.

With every man in fairly good condition and not an injury on the squad, Coach Rowe's varsity boxers swing into their last week of training before exams and the holidays.

In this respect, he is more fortunate than he has been in previous years, for charlie-horses, cuts, and broken noses usually come plentifully to most boxing teams around this period of training as Coach Rowe can testify from experience.

Some of the boys are still tiring quickly, but the majority of them are near the peak of condition, and will be just about right for the first meet which comes about two weeks after the winter quarter begins.

Before the boxers take off their gloves to pick up pens and quiz books for exams, Coach Rowe will remind them once more to keep some semblance of training over the holidays, for if they get too far out of condition during the next few weeks there will scarcely be time enough to whip them back into shape for their fights with V. P. I.

With Glover, Ivey, Levinson, Quarles, Lumpkin, Berke, McIntosh, Gidman, Edwards, and Carruth swinging gloves for the team, it appears that Carolina will have nothing to be ashamed of when next winter's campaigns are over. It is possible that Furches Raymer and Peyton Brown, stars of last year may return to school after the holidays, and that will make the team even more formidable.

The schedule:
January 14—V. P. I.—there
January 21—N. C. State—here
January 28—V. M. I.—here
February 4—Virginia—here
February 11—Penn State, there
February 18—Duke—there
February 24 and 25—Southern Conference Tournament at Charlottesville, Va.

WRESTLING TEAM WILL SOON END WORK-OUTS

Carolina's varsity wrestlers will lay aside their mat togs for the rest of the year when they suspend practice Wednesday in order to take time out for preparing themselves for the examinations. In order to participate in any matches, whether varsity or freshman meets, the wrestler must make himself scholastically fit as well as physically.

Coach P. H. Quinlan, realizing this, has consented to allow his men this suspension. However, the most promising boys will be given a special itinerary to train by during the holidays.

This gesture on the part of Coach Quinlan seems to be carrying out President Frank Graham's injunction in freshman assembly yesterday in that the chief executive said that the whole work of this fall quarter could depend on these last five days, and urged the first year men to put on more steam.

STUHLREHER MAY BE NEXT FORDHAM COACH

Here's another tentative change in the nation's coaching lineup. Harry Stuhlreher, who galloped across Notre Dame gridirons behind Chuck Collins in 1924, is prominently mentioned as successor to Major Frank Cavanaugh at Fordham University.

Stuhly, who gained fame as a member of the famed Four Horseman combine, has been coaching at Villanova College in Pennsylvania since he left Notre Dame.

Paulsen Will Fete Intramural Winners

Dean Paulsen, head of the laundry department, will tender a dinner to the winners of the intramural boxing tourney tonight at 7:00 at his home at 405 Ransom street. The medals for the new champions will be awarded when they gather to-night.

The invited guests are: Gene Eustler, Max Frucht, Ben Kalb, Charlie Sutton, Joe Pratt, Val Edwards, Mort Ellisberg, and Murry Kanner title winners. Coaches Crayton Rowe and Archie Allen, Herman Schnell, director of intramurals, Jim Lothian, who acted as manager and announcer during the entire tourney, and Jimmie McGurk who covered the fights for the TAR HEEL, are also invited.

COACH SHEPARD BACK TO DIRECT LAST PRACTICES

While Squad Is Not Definitely at Top Condition, Indications Are Promising.

Coach Bo Shepard, home from the Big Five basketball coaches meeting in Durham last week, resumed charge of the Tar Heel basketball squad yesterday, and sent his charges through a hard two hour drill.

This week will be the last practice session until after the Christmas holidays, although there is a possibility that several members of the squad will work out during the vacation period.

The squad seems not to have reached its peak yet, but that is only to be expected, considering the short time the practices have been going on, and also the fact that the opening game does not take place until a week after school opens indicates that there will be plenty of time for the squad to reach its playing form.

Gene Zaiser, injured frosh star, returned to active practice yesterday, although he still favors his injured hand.

Practically every man on the squad saw service in yesterday's scrimmage session. The Red team opened with Hines and Weathers at forward, Brandt, center, and McCachren and Henry, guards. Aitken, Glace, Zaiser, Long, Chandler, Minor, Jones, Markham, Blood, and Harris, also saw action with this squad. On the Green team were: Freeman, Jacobs, Kaveny, Strayhorn, Cope, Bennie, and Parsley.

Tomorrow night at Duke University, the Big Five coaches will meet to interpret the new rules. The following coaches will attend: Bo Shepard, North Carolina; Dr. Sermon, N. C. State; Eddie Cameron, Duke; Flake Laird, Davidson; and Fred Emerson, Wake Forest.

Champion Would Have Been Virginia School

Had the new Southern conference been in operation this past gridiron season with the new team grouping, V. P. I., the unheard of football power in the south prior to the current season, would have an undisputed right to the crown of Dixie football.

According to the new arrangement the Gobblers would have easily won four of their games and would have had no defeats on their record. However, the toughest break came to the Virginia team when it failed to click in its best bid for southern honors against Alabama, the Polys losing 7-6.

One of the most unusual teams in the country, the V. P. I. team, a team rated better than mediocre, continued to make fine headway against all comers, trouncing highly press-agented clubs like Kentucky.

GEORGIA JACKETS WILL PLAY HERE AGAIN NEXT YEAR

Except for This Year, Contest Between Georgia and Tar Heels Have Been Close.

Although the Georgia Tech team came to Carolina this fall and the conference split will change athletic relations in Dixie decidedly, the Yellow Jackets have announced that they will play Carolina again in 1933, with the meeting in Chapel Hill.

The present home-and-home arrangement between the two schools would call for the game to be played in Atlanta at Grant Field, but the Tech Engineers will only take three trips next fall, going to Vanderbilt and to Kentucky, besides their North Carolina invasion.

This series which started in 1927 has been very close with the Tech Yellow Jackets showing the edge in three victories over the Tar Heels. In their first meeting, the Georgia team won 13-0, but the Carolina Tar Heels gave Tech "the worst scare since Sherman marched through Georgia," as one scribe put it. The fine Tech team which won national recognition in 1928 turned back the Tar Heels 21-7, but the following year Carolina beat Tech 18-7 in Atlanta.

Then followed two tie games, beginning in 1930, with a 6-6 deadlock staged in Kenan Stadium, and then a 19-19 tie in Atlanta, before a huge crowd of fans who saw the Georgia club come from behind to knot the score.

Clemson is the only other Southern conference foe appearing on the Georgia Tech team's schedule.

VIRGINIA'S RAY BURGER RATED AS OUTSTANDING

Ray Burger, captain-elect of Virginia's 1933 gridiron club, is one of the most versatile students on the Charlottesville campus.

Burger, the fifth tackle to lead Cavalier football teams, has made the honor roll ever since his first term in Virginia, and this season he was given a certificate of intermediate honors for having passed all courses during the first two sessions with an average grade of not lower than 85.

Burger was one of the three regulars on last year's Virginia club who was not a fraternity man, and he is the first non-fraternity lad to captain a Virginia grid outfit in many a moon. Another honor held by Burger is having been voted by the Columbia University football team as being one of the two outstanding tackles met by the Gotham lads in their entire season.

Meal Given to Finalists

All finalists in the intramural boxing tournament may stop at the C. and C. cafeteria for a free meal at any time, Jim Lothian, assistant boxing manager, announced yesterday.

VIRGINIA TO ALTER DEFENSE SYSTEM

Coach Tebell Shifts Rookie Basketeers To Forward Position in Substitution for Veterans.

A trio of veterans will be back at the University of Virginia for the 1933 cage season.

Captain Sidney Young, a guard, and a brace of centers, Carrington Harrison and Reggie Hudson, will form the nucleus around which Gus Tebell is to build this year's outfit.

Here's the problem, however: Tebell, who turned out championship clubs at State a couple of years ago, is going to have to build a completely new defense. Harrison has been shifted to forward where he is matching his prowess with three rookies, Henry Sturm, Orlin Rogers, and Lucian Cox. Captain Young has Bob Nelson, Joe Marret, and Tommy Johnson working with him at the guard posts.

Lem Mayo and Bob Manley, former captains of Cavalier fives, will be absent this year; Bill Thomas, Jim Delafield, and Harold Hodgson are three more veterans lost for good.

A tentative slate announced by Virginia did not include Carolina; but in all likelihood Carolina will meet the Charlottesville boys.

Branch's Bantams Tie Washington Pro Team

Johnnie Branch's Charlotte Bantams slipped and slid through a scoreless game with the Washington, D. C., Senators last Saturday in Charlotte. This unsatisfactory finale marked the end of the Bantam string of victories, which shows eleven victories, one tie, and no defeats.

The Bantams penetrated dangerously into Senator territory in the initial quarter—within four yards of the goal line—only to have Johnny Branch fall as he was attempting to slip around the right flank. The Senators never seriously threatened, but the boys from the national capital tightened up in pinches.

Many former Big Five stars appeared in the game—Basil Melton, Roy McDade, Harry Schwartz, Jit Benton, and Johnnie Branch.

One more feature of the contest—it left as a matter of conjecture the South Atlantic pro championship, mythical crown for which the two clubs were playing.

Florida May Drop All Sports For This Year

It has been recently announced by Florida's athletic officials that all intercollegiate athletics at the University of Florida may have to be suspended January 1 for the balance of the school year.

Frank S. Wright, director of the publicity bureau at the Gainesville institution, said that the faculty committee on athletics had been seriously discussing this possibility.

STAFF PROTESTS YEAR SUSPENSION OF NEWS EDITOR

Authorized Publishing of Tactless
But Truthful Story Causes Action From Council.

The entire managing board and all associate editors of the daily newspaper at McGill University in Montreal, Canada, have resigned as a protest against the action of the student council of that school in suspending news editor Ernest Crown.

Beer Story

The cause of the suspension was a news story entitled "Beer Infuses Students With Care-Free Jollity." The story reported the actions of a group of students who went to visit a Montreal brewery. The beer was plentiful, and after the visit the students were shown into the barroom where the facilities were placed at their disposal. The final report of the Chemical Industries Club which conducted the inspection of the brewery was, "the machinery and brewing apparatus in Dawes' Brewery were the best; the minority were of the opinion that Dawes' ale was good ale, but still would like to see the Black Horse."

The day after this story was printed the issue of the paper in which it appeared was tacked on the bulletin board with the following notice on it: "No more publicity on beer drinking students."

Punish Responsible Person

The student council at its last meeting decided that the person responsible for the story should be suspended for the college year. Inasmuch as News Editor Crown had read the story before it was sent to the printer, it was decided to lift the responsibility from the reporter.

The sentiment of the student leaders is that the student council is making a mountain out of a molehill. In an editorial the resigning staff speaks of the story as being, "at its worst, tactless, but essentially truthful." This protest is based on the fact that the man suspended had worked for four years on the paper. The editorial closes with the statement, "The decision of the editorial board had been carefully considered and will stand until the council sees fit to reinstate the news editor." Don Shoemaker, chairman of the DAILY TAR HEEL editorial board, commented on the original story in his column Our Times in the issue of Saturday, December 3.

Two New Courses Will Be Given This Winter

It was announced yesterday by A. W. Hobbs, dean of the school of liberal arts, that two new courses will be available for the students in the school of liberal arts.

The first is Comparative Literature, an intensive study of "Lessing and Schiller," which is to be taught by Dr. E. C. Metzenthin. The time for the class is tentatively set at 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon and the class will be conducted five times a week. This course was offered in previous catalogs, but it is to be considered a new course because of the different treatment of the subject matter. Students intending to take this course are advised to see the instructor at room 115 Saunders before this vacation period; graduates and undergraduates will be allowed to register in this subject.

The second is geology 57, a study of the geography of North America, which will be conducted five times a week, and is open to sophomores, juniors and seniors. K. R. Byerly will be the instructor.

The Can Opener

WILMER HINES WAS RECENTLY obtained to referee a co-ed basketball battle. Wilmer had a pair of clean white linen pants and the girls said he looked "rite cute." The game had been going for a while when three of the girls collided and all sprawled to the ground. Hines rushed up from the other end of the court where he had been eyeing some frail and said, "Any casualties, girls?" Mercy me, Wilmer, how tender and educated you are becoming. The game went on into the last quarter when some roughness was overlooked and one of the girls lost her temper. She ran up to the referee and shouted, "Listen here, Hines, you don't know a damn thing about basketball, you haven't called a foul all this game."

CAROLINA FOOTBALL PLAYERS have taken to almost unbelievable activities. Tom White has a habit of building fires in box bushes at a certain woman's college in Virginia. George Barclay has left the narrow path and taken it upon himself to try and further Carolina football posterity, saying "To hell with basketball, Dave McCachren is taking care of that." Then Ralph "Jelly" Gardner became an astronomer over the week-end and gazed at the stars from a new observatory which is located on the outskirts of Raleigh. Jelly said the mist bothered the heavenly actions but that he saw enough.

Erratum

The management of The Daily Tar Heel wishes to correct any belief that might be prevalent on the campus as a result of a remark made in Sunday morning's "Ink Well" column that there was any stuffing of the ballot box in either of the recent straw polls for Vice-President.

Several votes for various candidates were at the time disregarded in the first vote. But an investigation later revealed that all of these had been officially cast and should have been tabulated. In the second poll each student was required to register his vote, and the counting of the ballots was entirely in the hands of the student council.

Committee Nominates Dr. Louis R. Wilson For Vice-Presidency

carry out the mandate of the 1931 legislature providing for consolidation of the state institutions of higher learning.

Acceptance Not Sure

The committee announced that it had not communicated with Dr. Wilson and did not know whether he would accept if elected at the next meeting of the full board January 14.

The committee spent a full day and part of the evening yesterday interviewing members of the faculty and receiving written nominations from them.

Reports from these interviews indicate that over seventy-five per cent of the full professors who participated in the interviews were strongly in favor of Dr. Wilson. It was also stated that faculty opinions on the selection of a head for the University had never been so unified except in the choice of Dr. Graham.

The committee which made the selection was composed of former Governor Angus W. McLean, chairman; Hon. Josephus Daniels, Arthur M. Dixon, and Judge John J. Parker.

An Important Call

Dr. Wilson is recognized as one of the outstanding librarians of the country, his call to head the graduate library school at the University of Chicago being one of the highest that can be made to a librarian.

He was known here as a busy builder whose hand had been in all important University activities for decades and whose individual constructive influences had made to bloom and prosper several enterprises of major proportions.

Organized Extension Division

In this line Dr. Wilson organized the University extension division and was its first director, 1912-21. He assisted in securing funds for and helped to organize the University Press, becoming its first director, 1922-1932. He was instrumental in securing a grant from the Carnegie Corporation and organizing the library school, of which he was the first head.

He assisted in the founding and was the first editor, 1912-24, of The Alumni Review; a member of the committee to draw up the constitution for re-organization of the Alumni Association in 1912; executive secretary of the Alumni Loyalty Fund Council until recently.

Activities in State

He is accredited as being the person who wrote a memorandum to President Chase in 1920 which was largely instrumental in setting in motion the movement which resulted in the legislation in 1921 for what became known as the $20,000,000 program for the educational and charitable institutions of the state. He served with President Graham as the University's other representative on the Consolidation Commission of the state's higher institutions.

Dr. Wilson's thirty-one years as librarian were brilliant, the institution expanding from 32,000 volumes to 235,000 volumes, outgrowing two buildings, and now being quartered in the present $625,000 structure.

He has also received much recognition in library circles, and has been a member of the Advisory Board of Editors of the Journal of Adult Education.

Scientific Society to Meet

There will be a meeting of the Elisha Mitchell Society, local scientific organization, tonight in Phillips hall at 7:30 o'clock. The program will consist of addresses by H. N. Jenks and Dr. H. V. Wilson.

Brooks Arose From Public School Ranks To Present Position

dismissed. An investigation conducted by the committee on academic freedom and tenure of the American Association of University professors reported that the determining factor in the dismissal was the personal tension that existed between President Brooks and Doctor Taylor. The official reason given was that a lack of funds necessitated the curtailment of that department.

When Louis H. Wilson, editor of the Technician, weekly State College paper, was expelled in the spring of 1932, a similar furor was created. Wilson had criticized Governor Gardner and President Brooks in his column. The feeling was prevalent that had Wilson been an ordinary student and not editor of the paper, he would have been reinstated despite the reason given out that he had failed to pass the required amount of courses.

His Numerous Works

The newly-appointed vice-president's published works make an imposing number. In character with his profession most of them deal with academic subjects. The Story of Cotton and The Development of the Cotton States and Our Dual Government are two examples of the textbooks for high schools Brooks has had published. Brooks has also been active in the Democratic party activities in the state. In 1916, he wrote a book on Woodrow Wilson's first presidential term.

Brooks is the recipient of the degree of Litt.D. from Davidson, 1918, and has received the degree of LL.D. from Trinity in 1919 and the University in 1920.

"NO MORE ORCHIDS" TO BE SHOW AT CAROLINA

Carole Lombard stars in today's presentation at the Carolina theatre, Columbia's "No More Orchids." Lyle Talbot, who had a prominent part in "Three on a Match," has the leading male role. He portrays an alert young lawyer with whom Miss Lombard is in love, but whom her wealthy old grandfather dislikes. The latter refuses to lend money to her father, whose bank is in financial trouble, unless she marries a Prince. He thinks this marriage would make a proper match with royalty. The supporting cast includes Ruthelma Stevens, Jameson Thomas, Allen Vincent, Ed J. Le Stain, and Arthur Houseman.

NUMBER CHANGES DUE TO ADDITIONAL STATIONS

The change in numbers in the new telephone directory was caused through the numbers of pay stations and private residences being in the same number block, resulting in an inefficient and confusing system, according to J. S. Bennett of the University service plants.

In Chapel Hill six years ago there were only six pay stations while today there are thirty-six of them. At first, numbers in the same range caused no trouble, but the increase in the number of pay stations made the situation more complex. With the numbers of the residences which were one time in the pay station block changed the operator will no longer have to look in the directory for the pay station number to avoid mistakes.

DEAN ANNOUNCES REGISTRATION FOR TECHNICAL SCHOOL

low the following program:

Students transferring from engineering to other departments must obtain a permit from Dean Baity. This permit and the permit from the registrar's office must be presented to the dean of that school for acceptance and registration before December 17. Students transferring from other departments to the school of engineering must obtain a transfer from their present dean and present it with the permit from the registrar's office to Dean Baity, for acceptance and instruction as to registration, before December 21.

Payment is due on January 3. The student is able to save time by sending a check or money order together with his bill during the holiday period. The bill will be receipted and returned. For those students who are unable to do this a schedule for payment has been arranged which all students must follow:

Jan. 3 names beginning A-B.
Jan. 4 names beginning C-D.
Jan. 5 names beginning E-F-G.
Jan. 6 names beginning H-I-J.
Jan. 7 names beginning K-L.
Jan. 9 names beginning M-N-O.
Jan. 10 names beginning P-Q-R.
Jan. 11 names beginning S.
Jan. 12 names beginning T-U-V.
Jan. 13 names beginning W-Z.

Failure to pay or make proper arrangements during this period will result in a $5.00 fee for delay. Any student, resident in the fall quarter, who fails to register during the registration period will be charged $5.00 and placed on class probation. No excuses will be accepted.

BRADFORD BISSELL WILL LECTURE AT BOOK SHOP

Bradford Bissell, graduate student, will speak this afternoon at the weekly Bull's Head "get-together" in the "Y" at 4:30 o'clock.

The subject of Bissell's address will be "Java," which Bissell has visited and with which he is quite familiar. Bissell will display several examples of Javanese batik work. Phoebe Barr will demonstrate the native Javanese costume, the sarong. Everyone is invited to attend.

SECOND STUDENT GROUP WILL REGISTER TODAY

Juniors, seniors, and graduate students whose names begin with "D" through "H" will register today at the registrar's office. Students with names beginning with "A" through "C" registered yesterday. A similar plan will be carried out through the week.

Freshmen and new students do not register until Saturday through Wednesday, December 17-21.

University Women to Meet

The Association of University Women will conduct its regular meeting tonight in the Episcopal parish house at 8:00 o'clock.

ORATOR WILL BE PICKED TOMORROW

Try-outs to Choose University
Representative Will Take Place Tomorrow.

The speaker who will represent the University at Raleigh in January in the fifth annual oratorical contest will be chosen tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

Contestants for the honor of representing the University will speak on "Public Education in North Carolina—Its Past and Future," both in Gerrard hall tomorrow, and at Raleigh January 20, 1933.

The American Legion, in sponsoring the fifth contest for the promotion of Americanism and patriotism in North Carolina, is offering four prizes, amounting to a hundred and sixty-five dollars, to the winners of the state contest.

Of the nine entries who will compete in Gerrard hall tomorrow, two have already distinguished themselves in public speaking at the University—L. H. Fountain, winner of the Mary D. Wright memorial medal this year, and E. E. Griffin, winner of the Legion contest last year.

Dr. George McKie of the English department and the faculty committee on debating is in charge of the local contest. It will be judged by members of the faculty committee on debating.

CABINETS SELECT REPRESENTATIVES TO ATLANTA MEET

Poole, Parker, Hutchison, McKee, McMillan, and Minor Attend Student-Faculty Meet.

Jack Poole and Jesse Parker were elected Monday night by the sophomore cabinet and the freshman friendship council, respectively, to represent those groups at the first annual faculty-student conference to take place in Atlanta, December 28-31.

The two will attend the convention along with four other members from the Y. M. C. A., L. L. Hutchison, Bill McKee, Roy McMillan, and Ike Minor.

Bradshaw Speaks

Dean F. F. Bradshaw addressed the freshman group Monday night on the subject of character and leadership. Bradshaw began his speech with a general interrogation of the members on "What Is Leadership?", and after receiving several definitions, proceeded to elaborate the chief requisites and characteristics of being a leader.

He told the council that a leader was not just by his campus positions but by his efforts and accomplishments in his particular field. He urged the freshmen to begin their college training early in personal development of the characteristics of leadership.

Other Cabinets Meet

Business meetings for the sophomore and junior-senior cabinets consisted of transaction of regular business and further preparation for the Atlanta conference. Ed Martin presided at the session of the former group in the absence of President Claude Freeman.

ORATORIO SOCIETY TO GIVE CONCERT

Local Organization Will Present Choral Work Entitled "When The Christ Child Came."

The Chapel Hill Oratorio society will present its first concert of the year tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Hill Music hall with Harold S. Dyer directing.

The chief choral work to be rendered will be When the Christ Child Came, a composition by Joseph Clokey, modern American composer, from the poem by Laura Spencer Porter. The chorus will also sing two European Christmas carols, The Sleep of the Child Jesus by Gevaert and Christmas Day by Holst. To conclude the program, the audience will join the chorus in singing Hark! The Herald Angels Sing by Mendelssohn, Silent Night, by Haydn, and O Come, All Ye Faithful by Reading.

Soloists for the concert will be Dr. Robert T. Clark, Jr., of the Duke University faculty, tenor; Dr. G. A. Harter, bass; Mrs. R. H. Wettach, contralto; and Mrs. L. C. MacKinney, soprano. Incidental solos will be rendered by Mrs. C. T. Murchison, Mrs. L. C. MacKinney, Paul Reynolds, and Beverly R. Thurman. Mrs. A. S. Wheeler will be at the piano and Professor Nelson O. Kennedy at the organ.

As is customary with all concerts given in the Hill Music hall, no admission will be charged and the public is invited to attend.

INITIAL ISSUE OF NEW PUBLICATION TO BE RELEASED

Magazine Edited by Carr for State Federation of Students Leaves Press Tomorrow.

The first number of a new monthly magazine to issue from Chapel Hill is expected to leave the press tomorrow. The periodical is The Student Journal, official organ of the North Carolina Federation of Students, edited by Claiborn Carr.

Carr's appointment to the chief editorial position by President Weeks was ratified by the executive committee. His staff of editors appointed to aid in assimilating articles of prominent students in the state are Vermont Royster, Carl Thompson and Donoh Hanks. All are experienced TAR HEEL writers.

SYMPHONY GROUP GIVES PLANS FOR INITIAL PROGRAM

University Orchestra Will Perform Four Major Works in Symphonic Field.

Making its first appearance on the campus this year Sunday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in the Hill Music hall, the University Symphony orchestra will perform four major works from the symphonic field.

The program will open with the Egmont Overture by Beethoven, which portrays the experience of the people's hero, Egmont, in his life of dreaming and reverie which brings him to his doom. Dr. Leopold Damrosch, father of the New York Symphony orchestra, once said that Beethoven rose to heights of vivid description in the Egmont Overture.

In commemoration of the Christmas season, Tchaikovsky's Nutcracker Suite is to be played. This represents the grotesque experiences of Christmas dolls, who suddenly, under a magic spell, come to life and dance. There is one exception in the suite, the Danse Russe Trepak, in which Tchaikovsky uses the rhythms and cadences of the Russian Cossack horsemen.

The third number of the program will be the Spanish Caprice of Rimsky-Korsakoff, a cycle of four related musical themes. The concert will be concluded with the performance of the Siegfried Idylle, by Richard Wagner. This number, written for and dedicated to his son, contains twelve of the principal themes taken from the Ring of the Nibelung, Wagner's operatic masterpiece.

Issue Tomorrow To Be Last Of Quarter

Tomorrow's issue of THE DAILY TAR HEEL will be the last edition of the paper published before the holidays.

This is in accordance with the paper's practice of suspending publication two days before examinations to allow staff members more time to devote to their studies.

Usually pre-exam publication ends on the Sunday before the tests; but, with the first examination falling on Saturday this year, it was deemed wise to cease publication for the quarter with tomorrow's issue.

Publication will be resumed with the issue of January 4.

NOMINATED TO HEAD UNIVERSITY

Dr. Louis Round Wilson (shown above), formerly librarian here and now dean of the graduate library school at the University of Chicago, was unanimously recommended for the vice-presidency of the Greater University of North Carolina by the trustees' committee to make the recommendation for a successor of President Frank P. Graham as head of the University here.

Dr. Wilson was also nominated as director of the libraries and library school of the Greater University. Should he be elected by the full board and accept, Dr. Wilson would assume his duties July 1, 1933.

Student Opinion Generally Holds Against Semester System Adoption

Of Students Interviewed Only One Believes That Semester System Would Allow Concentrated Study, While Favorites of Present System Affirm Their Faith With Various Reasons.

"Everybody knows the semester is lousy. The quarter system is the best. That's why girls' schools are so damned monotonous. In the quarter system you change courses, change professors, change everything. The semester is terrible."

This candid statement from a co-ed who has attended two girls' schools is highly indicative of the general campus sentiment regarding the recent proposal requiring the University to abandon its present quarter system in favor of the more conventional semester plan.

General View Presented

A cross section of the attitude toward the question was secured by selecting at random members from the various schools and departments of the University. In almost every case the answer was an explosive upholding of the current plan and a damning denunciation of the change which would divide the school year into two equal parts. The opinions secured were for the most part the result of an appreciable amount of thought on the topic but were in no case prepared statements.

In addition to the feminine point of view already cited, the following remarks were the spontaneous response to casual questioning as to the advisability of changing from the quarter to the semester system.

A sophomore holding a high office in his class replied: "I think of the two, the quarter system is the best. I like to take up so much, get it quickly, and then be through with it. The semesters are too long drawn out and broken up by vacations."

It's such a good feeling to go home holidays and not have any work to worry about."

Advantages of Quarter System

One of the political leaders of the campus, a senior, said: "I am entirely in favor of the quarter system. In the first place I don't favor the stretch-out system, and in the second place I believe in studying a few subjects and acquiring and intensive knowledge of them in as short a time as possible. Another thing, if a person is forced to drop out of school for a time, not so much credit can be lost under the quarter system—you see what I mean."

A prominent figure on the campus and a leader in many activities stated: "I think, personally, that the quarter system is much better than the semester because it gives one a chance to complete courses of work before holiday periods, leaving the mind free before returning. There is not so much overwork because of more direct contact with studies, classes daily, and no strain in preparing for exams. Under the semester system one returns from holidays about a month before exams—it takes him two weeks to get back to work and two weeks to review for exams. A whole month is almost completely lost in this way."

A transfer from another school which employed the semester system says he prefers the quarter system principally because "taking a subject every day for two quarters is the equivalent of taking it three times a week for two semesters. Un-

COMMITTEE WILL OFFER PROGRAM OF HINDU DANCES

Entertainment Group Will Present Uday Shan-Kar With Dancers And Musicians.

The next presentation billed by the student entertainment committee will offer a complete program of Hindu dances and music. The event, scheduled for January 11 in Memorial hall, will be the appearance of Uday Shan-Kar and his dancers and musicians.

This group of artists from East India present their versions of the seductive nautch dances and the religious, cosmic, and allegorical dances of the Orient.

The company is composed of eight male and female dancers and eight musicians. The latter play 120 instruments.

DUKE UNIVERSITY STUDENT NAMED FOR SCHOLARSHIP

Four Southerners Selected as Winners of Rhodes Awards For Oxford Study.

Four students of southern universities were recognized by the southeastern regional committee for Rhodes scholarships to Oxford University.

These four men selected from a choice group of twenty students from six states representing Tennessee, the Carolinas, Virginia, Georgia, and Florida, were: Merrimon Cunningham, of Duke University, elected as North Carolina's choice; Fenton A. Gentry, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; and John Page Williams, of Richmond, both students at the University of Virginia; and William A. McRae, of Jacksonville, student of the University of Florida.

Two candidates from each of the six states were examined by the committee, and the selection was finally completed after a lengthy conference on the part of the committee in Atlanta.

The winners of scholarships to Oxford were chosen by a group composed of: Clark Howell, business manager of the Atlanta Constitution; E. W. Moise, prominent Atlanta attorney; Carroll A. Wilson, New York lawyer; Judge J. Lyles Glenn, of the U. S. federal courts, of Chester, S. C.; and Dean W. C. Davison, of Duke University, Durham, N. C.

All of these men will receive, besides this opportunity for work in Europe, 400 pounds sterling as a stipend to cover the expenses of their courses.

Cunningham, is a graduate student at Duke University, having studied previously at Vanderbilt.

Playmakers Plan For Twelfth Night Revels

The Carolina Playmakers are making plans for their traditional annual Twelfth Night Revels on January 7. All Playmakers, old and new, are invited to submit stunts for the program either to members of the Playmaker staff, or to Marion Tatum, chairman of the Twelfth Night committee.

The Twelfth Night Revels is an informal celebration for all former and present Playmakers. The program, as usual, will be divided into two halves, the first being acted by the faculty, and the second half being done by students.

SENIORS TO USE SURPLUS TO AID NEEDY STUDENTS

Student Loan Fund Gets More Than Five Hundred Dollars From Class.

Setting a precedent for the history of the University, the senior class, through its executive committee, decided last Friday to give the entire surplus in the class treasury to the student loan fund, managed for the benefit of University students by University authorities. This announcement was made yesterday by A. S. Cate, president of the senior class.

The sum which totals more than five hundred dollars is given with two stipulations attached to it. Should the class of '33 have a deficit, it will retain the right of drawing on the gift to the extent of its deficit.

The other stipulation provides that at the close of the year the sum will be used to form a class of 1933 scholarship for the benefit of future students who may have need of financial support during the course of their work here at the University.

This decision was reached by the senior class executive committee after a number of factors had been taken into consideration. The student loan fund is practically continually in need of funds in order to carry out its work, and it is only by means of drives that it can continue to perform its service to the student body. Another factor considered by the class committee was that the surplus, while it remained in the custody of the class, did not aid directly anybody connected with the University, whereas now the University may draw revenue from the sum.

LIBRARY EXHIBITS OLD PUBLICATIONS

Editions of Campus Publications Shown With English and American Periodicals.

Three new exhibits have recently been placed in the lobby of the University library, of early campus publications, early American periodicals, and early English books. Cards giving a brief history of each copy give the necessary explanations.

In the collection of old University publications, is found an 1891 copy of the Chapel Hillian, the antecedent of THE DAILY TAR HEEL first published in 1893; a 1919 Tar Baby which was the first humorous publication and was succeeded by the Carolina Boll Weevil in 1922 and in turn by the Buccaneer in 1924. There is likewise a copy of the Carolina Magazine, the oldest permanent publication in Chapel Hill. Although it was discontinued several times, it has always resumed and is now a supplement to THE DAILY TAR HEEL. Copies are also exhibited of the Hellenian, which was published from 1890 to 1900 and was the forerunner of the Yackety Yack.

Other copies in this collection include: The Harbinger, which was a weekly published in 1893 by the University faculty, whose object was "to diffuse literary information with the correct taste to impress the importance of popular and academic education;" the Carolina Journal of

The Very

Man

Frequent and widespread expressions of approval, from faculty and students, greeted the announcement yesterday morning that Dr. L. R. Wilson, former University librarian, had been recommended by the nominating committee of the board of trustees for the office of vice-president of the Chapel Hill division of the Greater University.

Last summer, Dr. Wilson joined the exodus of prominent Carolina faculty members to the mid-western and northern schools. He is now head of the graduate library school of the University of Chicago, a position of great honor and considerable profit.

His nomination by the trustees' committee is as much an expression of regret at his loss as it is an expression of appreciation of his eminent abilities. For thirty years, Dr. Wilson played an important part in the growth of the University. In addition to his work in fostering the growth of one of the nation's best college libraries, his influence was instrumental in founding the extension division, the University Press, the Alumni Review and the library school. Practically every major improvement in the University's plant and services has come about with his help and advice.

Dr. Wilson is not a speaker, so, to the around-the-campus student his reputation is scarcely known. But his conferees on the faculty and in the administration know him for his worth: a worker in the interest of the University, an administrator of vision and ability, a major contributor to the University's strength whom Chapel Hill could ill afford to lose and in whose return the University community would rejoice.

As reluctant as we were to lose Dr. Wilson, even more gladly will we welcome him back.—E.C.D.

A Society to End Societies

Among the ills from which the United States suffers, the most sickening—if not the most dangerous—is the plague of societies whose stupid conduct forever threatens to make us the butt of the world's contempt and scorn. The latest symptom is the attempt of the Women's Patriotic Corporation to prevent the entrance of Albert Einstein into this country. This sorry little society, realizing that almost no one had ever heard of them, saw in the proposed visit of this noted man an opportunity to break into the press and to gain the notoriety that they felt was being withheld. Their efforts almost resulted in our losing a scholar whose presence must be of tremendous value and inspiration and a man who was persuaded to favor us only with the greatest difficulty.

Every so often intelligent citizens are disgusted anew by some manifestation of patriotic ardor accompanied by plenty of free publicity for some organization or other. The Daughters of the American Revolution insult the president of the United States or endeavor to prevent the teaching of the truth concerning what happened centuries ago. Some other league for naval protection and incidentally richer steel manufacturers adds new insult because the president will not vigorously support their measures. The American Legion convenes amidst scenes of drunken rowdiness and general vulgarity to make an unpatriotic and thoroughly selfish attempt to gain what they know themselves not entitled to. And so it goes; greed, bigotry, calumny, and bad taste issue forth from organizations which like horrid sores mar our national health, achieving nothing but to turn public sentiment away in repugnance from whatever foolish or evil measures they propose.

The land is full of these groups occupying themselves industriously with the dissemination of malicious hate and propaganda and attempting in every way to impede or divert for selfish motives the machinery of government. What we need today is a Society against Societies. An organization open to every decent and law abiding citizen whether his or her ancestors were driven from Europe two centuries ago or not. A Society of people anxious to see truth and fair play prevail over bigotry and narrow minded partisanship. A Society that would cleanse us from the nauseating crop of offensive groups that we have too long endured.—J.F.A.

Down at the University of Texas the students are asked to throw all their waste paper on the campus in order that the unemployed athletes will have something to do.

The University of North Carolina is very conservative so far as class cuts are concerned. But its budget cuts are quite liberal.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

Our Nathan Gets It

I would like to know how the TAR HEEL picked its play reviewer. Is it possible his name was picked from a hat? It is difficult to believe he was chosen because of his ability as a dramatic critic. We do not submit this complaint to the TAR HEEL merely to be contentious, but in the firm belief that it expresses the sober judgment of the campus.

Two of the four plays—the best two in our opinion—recently produced by the Carolina Playmakers, were dismissed with a few caustic words and a shrug of the shoulders. And, of the two plays that pleased our reviewer's discriminating taste, one depended entirely for its effectiveness upon trick lighting and a morbid subject meant to be romantic. The other, Davy Crockett, made a frantic bid for attention by using situations so trite, that today, any self-respecting third rate stock company would refuse to use them. The first fight in the play can be excused as intended to bring out the character of Davy Crockett, but why the second fight? The old standby of the rustic dance to give local color; the faithful negro going off into a strange interlude about the shadow of death,—is there a man living who hasn't at least once sat in the gallery when the stock company came to town and palpitated to these scenes? And what man of modest sensibilities could excuse those final tear-jerking lines of the 1890's—"As long as there are men there will be fightin' and as long as there are women there will be hearts that are broken."

As for Stumbling in Dreams, the most entertaining play of the group, which successfully portrays the tinniness of Tin Pan Alley,—how can a citizen of Wilmington, N. C., judge of the truthfulness of the picture given, no less to go so far as to pronounce it hackneyed?—H.K.

With Contemporaries

Student Marriages

A professor of sociology at a prominent American university recently expressed it as his belief that students in college should not be allowed to get married. He qualified his remarks, it is true, with the somewhat ambiguous proviso "if they are truly in love." This detail, however, can be omitted in a consideration of the question, because if two students wish to get married it is of little concern to anyone else whether they are in love or not.

"The convention that a young man must not marry until he can support a wife has been productive of enormous misery, vice, and heartbreak," said the same professor. His idea seems a sound one. Equally undesirable is the convention that a man should not marry until his wife can support him. Taking it for granted that college students will not marry until they are at least nearing their final year,—might be possible to impose a rule of freshman ineligibility in matrimony—we can see little objection to husband and wife living financially independent of each other for a brief period.

Student marriage would undoubtedly solve a lot of worries for the two participants. There would be no more of these obstinate questions, "Shall I take this woman to the dance, or that one, or neither?" It would be all settled. Whether he wanted to or not he would have to take his wife, or stay away. An inevitable obligation definitely removes anxiety. The path of least resistance becomes the only path.

Encouragement of student marriage would also have the effect of marrying students off upon each other—an obvious advantage to other people. An unmarried co-ed, being graduated out upon an unsuspecting world, is a potential menace to every would-be husband that has not been through the academic mill.

Only a college student could bear and appreciate such a wife.—McGill Daily.

More Froth

Mrs. Frothingham, who is already being spoken of in international circles as that terrible lady from Brookline, Massachusetts, has certainly started something. It was the effervescent Mrs. Frothingham, if you remember, who requested the immigration officials, wouldn't they please bar Herr Einstein from the U. S. as he was a member of "more communistic and anarchistic organizations than Stalin?"

Well, the Frothingham monkey wrench has been delicately picked up and tossed back into the machinery with still greater force by the board of the National Patriotic Council which has officially decided that Dr. Einstein is "a German Bolshevik" and which says that his theory of relativity "was of no scientific value or purpose, not understandable because there was nothing there to understand." The board has also demanded that bars be placed in front of Leon Trotsky and George Bernard Shaw because they are "radical and Communists."

Herr Einstein, meanwhile, has been busy with his rhetoric and the results show that if he wasn't such a famous mathematician, he could always become a "writing man." We think the professor's answer to Mrs. Frothingham is well worth reprinting in this column.

"Herr Einstein to Mrs. Frothingham et al:

"Give heed, therefore, to the sage, patriotic dear ladies, and remember that the capital of mighty Rome was at one time saved by the cackling of her faithful geese. Never before has any attempt of mine at an approach to the beautiful sex met with such an energetic rebuff. Even should perchance such have ever been the case, then certainly, not by so many all at once.

"But aren't they perfectly right, these watchful citizenesses? Why should one admit, to one's presence one who devours hardboiled capitalists with the same appetite and relish as once upon a time the ogre Minotaurus in Crete devoured luscious Greek maidens—a person who in addition is so vulgar as to oppose every war, except the inevitable one with his own wife?"

We are glad to see that Dr. Einstein admits fighting with his wife. It proves, to our satisfaction at least, that he recognizes one form of government.—Columbia Spectator.

You don't want too much Turkish but you do want Enough that's why Chesterfields Taste Better!

IT'S like this. Turkish tobacco is to cigarettes what spices are to food... the "seasoning" that points up the flavor of all the other ingredients.

In your cigarette... as in anything good... you want enough spice. Not too much. In Chesterfield you get just enough of the right kinds of the spicy aromatic Turkish leaf.

It's this "just-right" blending of tobaccos, both Turkish and Domestic, that gives to Chesterfields their better taste and rich aroma.

HIGBY WILL LEAD HEEL TRACKSTERS IN FIELD EVENTS

Pre-Season Indications Show Team to Be Strong in Broad-Jumping and Javelin.

Along with the javelin, the broad jump is one of the strongest events on the varsity track team. For the first time in many years, Carolina coaches are elated to have more than five men with consistent ability in the running broad jump.

The most brilliant performer of this group is Floyd Higby, holder of the school record in the broad jump and one of the finest jumpers in the state. Higby set this record at the state meet last spring, jumping 22 feet 9 3/4 inches. Higby turned in some very creditable performances in the running broad jump event against Navy, Virginia, and Duke—turning in firsts in the first named dual meets. In the Duke meet, he was nosed out of a first by Fulmer, Blue Devil ace performer. In the Southern conference outdoor meet, Higby gained a good fourth.

In addition to his jumping, Higby is a consistent runner in the 220-yard dash and was a member of the mile relay. He has also turned in a fine record in the class room, making a high "B" average in the engineering school. He weighs a little over 125 pounds stripped.

Johnny Phipps and Crook Stafford are two other fine men in the event. However, Stafford does not specialize in the broad jump, being a fine man in the hurdles and the high jumps. Johnny Phipps, football luminary, contributed some excellent work as a first year man on the squad last year competing in both the high jumps and running broad. Odell Childers and Charlie Hubbard are another good pair of men the varsity coaches are counting on for good work this coming season.

All these men are considered capable of improving to the point of where they can jump with a fair degree of consistency over 22 feet. Hubbard, Higby, and Phipps will be concentrated on this event.

THREE SOUTHERN GRID TEAMS PLAY THIS WEEK

A moratorium reigned in Dixie gridiron camps last week-end; but this week-end will see the final curtain rung down with a trio of important intersectional encounters.

Georgia Tech, weakened by an influenza attack on several members of its squad, is en route at the present moment to Berkeley, California, where they clash with "Navy Bill" Ingram's California Golden Bears next Saturday.

The Berkeley division of the University of California won't be the only one meeting a southern team this week. The much publicized "little Rose Bowl" game will be played between Florida and the Los Angeles division of the University of California at Gainesville, Fla., also on Saturday.

Louisiana State University, for whom Huey Long has claimed the Southern championship, entertains Oregon at Baton Rouge to round out the week-end menu. Both clubs are at top outfit is working hard to pre-strengthen, and the Baton Rouge serve its fine record.

Oh! You Big Meanie!

"Football is dishonest," editorialized the Baltimore Sun in 1897. "Secret signals," the paper confidentially informed the public, "are used—a practice no less dishonest in football than in whist."—Tar Heel, 1897.

TAR BABY CAGERS IN HARD PRACTICE

Coach Dameron Puts Yearlings Through Series of Stiff Workouts This Week.

Carolina's yearling basketball team faces its hardest week of practice so far this year as the time draws near for the Christmas holidays. Coach Sandy Dameron wants the Tar Babies in the best possible shape before the lay off.

Coach Dameron also has another problem on his hands as a result of winter football which starts next quarter. The first team of Whitaker and Nelson, forwards; Kanner, center; and McCachren and Phelps, guards, are all star football players and may desert basketball in order that they might get a better chance to make Coach Collins' team.

Many more good basketkeepers, who also star on the gridiron, will be missing when Coach Dameron calls the roll after the holidays. Then there are the problems of boys not returning for the winter quarter and of others who will not be eligible to play, which will hamper the speed of the Tar Baby basketball team.

Coach Dameron continues to drill the entire squad on new plays and to send everybody through scrimmage. Every man on the squad is being given special notice in order that no stars will go unnoticed. Practices are still being held every night at 7:15 with the candidates reporting on the nights that they do not have gym.

Georgia Jackets Take Examinations On Train

Members of Georgia Tech's football club have recently experienced one of the unique happenings in Dixie gridiron annals.

The Jackets, en route to Berkeley, California, where they will meet Bill Ingram's University of California aggregation next Saturday, are traveling in a classroom on wheels. Mid-term exams for Bill Alexander's Atlanta powerhouse commenced last Saturday morning when the crax were somewhere near Chattanooga, Tennessee.

This is the initial time in the history of Southern football that a team will get exams on a train. A brace of deans are along on the trip to conduct the tests. Tables are set up, and the players brought along books and paper. There will be one exam per day for the boys.

Duke's Crooning Halfback Makes Great White Way

Nick Laney, the crooning halfback of Duke University, has been engaged to alternate with Guy Lombardo on New Year's eve in the Roosevelt Grill, New York, for their annual all night celebration, according to the News and Observer.

This is a distinctive honor for the Blue Devil boys as Lombardo's band is rated as being one of the best orchestras in the country.

Chessners to Gather

The chess club will gather for an important meeting tonight at 7:30 o'clock in the lobby of Graham Memorial. All members are urged to be present.

Registration Notice

Juniors, seniors, and graduate students whose names begin with "I" through "O" will register today at the registrar's office. A similar plan of alphabetical arrangement will continue throughout the week.

Freshmen, sophomores, and new students do not register until Saturday through Wednesday, December 17-21.

Boxing Customs Surprise Carolina Teams In Fights Away From Home

Virginia Opposes Carolina on Mouthpiece Question, Penn Insists Upon Formal Attire at Meets, and Spike Webb of Navy Will Allow No Stools in Corner of His Men.

In past years, Carolina's boxing teams have encountered many surprises on their trips into enemy territory. Customs vary in different colleges just as they do in different countries; and if the veterans on this year's team have not informed the new men about these peculiarities, the rookies are in for a few shocks—and a few laughs, too.

Protection Causes Trouble

For instance, the fighting men of Carolina will be in the habit of wearing the rubber mouthpiece. Virginia, however, scorns the use of this excellent bit of ring equipment and resents the fact that any of its opponents should want to use it. Whether or not Virginia thinks that only sissies wear mouthpieces has never found out because no one ever called a Carolina fighter a sissy and got away with it.

Although Virginia fights at Chapel Hill this year, the old controversy about the mouthpiece may have to be resumed when the boys step into the ring at the Tin Can. V. P. I. regards the mouthpieces in the same light that Virginia does and the old argument may have to be gone through again when the Tar Heels go to Blacksburg.

Evening Attire

Perhaps the greatest surprise of the year will be given them when they travel north to meet Penn State. When they enter the arena in which the bouts are to be fought and find every one present in formal attire, they are sure to think that they have come to a dance instead of a fight. Not only do the spectators wear dress clothes, but the managers, seconds, reporters, and even the referee wear tuxedos; in fact, no one is permitted to enter unless he is dressed in this fashion. But, despite the genteel atmosphere usually so foreign to the prize ring, the veterans can assure the new additions to the team that the Penn State meet will be no dance.

On the last trip to this institution, the Carolina men were relieved of the necessity of being conventional by another strange custom of the Pennsylvania school. It is their unwritten law that two formal affairs are never held on successive nights; and as there had been a formal dance there the night before, Coach Crayton Rowe and his staff of assistants were spared the danger of having blood spattered on their white shirt fronts.

Spike Webb

Carolina does not box Navy this year, but in the past Tar Heel teams have witnessed the famous gesture of Spike Webb, Navy coach. His boxers are not permitted to use stools either before the fight starts or between the rounds, a tribute to the Navy men's remarkable condition. Stools, however, are supplied for Navy's opponents, should they desire them.

The antics of Coaches Larowe and Piambo of Virginia and Florida make an interesting side show at the conference tournament. Both these men become so worked up during the progress of the bouts that they weave, duck, sway from side to side, and deliver practically every punch that is thrown in the ring. Someone once suggested that, after the bouts were over, these two men needed a shower and a rub-down as much as the fighters did.

CONFERENCE MAY ADD PETITIONERS

If Davidson and Wake Forest Are Accepted, All Big Five Will Be in Conference.

With a half score colleges remaining in the Southern Conference, it is highly probable that about six more schools may be added to balance the slate of this winter's basketball tourney in Raleigh.

Among the schools mentioned are: Wake Forest, long an unsuccessful petitioner of the select but unwieldy group; Davidson, another Big Five member who has attempted for a long time to get in; Furman, a Baptist institution in Greenville, S. C., which has been wavering in and out of the S. I. A. A.; William and Mary; and the University of Richmond; and several other schools of more or less importance.

Should this new arrangement be made, Tar Heelia and Virginia will have a quintet of schools apiece in the conference. There was considerable talk of these schools entering the conference before the bomb-shell meeting of the old group in Knoxville last week. Chances for their acceptance now appear brighter than ever.

Dr. Henderson Will Make Two Addresses in North

Dr. Archibald Henderson left yesterday for Princeton, N. J., where he will speak Wednesday afternoon at 5:00 o'clock in the McCosh hall, under the auspices of the Spencer Trask Foundation, on "Eugene O'Neill, Premier American Dramatist."

Friday night, Dr. Henderson will deliver a lecture on "The Real Bernard Shaw" at the Hotel Barbizon, New York City.

FURCHES RAYMER TO BOOST BOXERS

Statesville Lad Returns to Fight in 135-Pound Class; Brown Will Not Return.

Furches Raymer may be back on the Tar Heel boxing squad this winter.

The Statesville lad who boxes in the 135-pound class would considerably bolster Tar Heel hopes in the lighter weights. He is light enough to make 125-pound, yet rangy enough to fit in the 135-pound division. He showed some mighty good form in his initial year with the varsity.

Peyton "Wildcat" Brown has written that he will not be back this season on account of finances.

Brown's decision to continue at his job in New York City leaves the Heels unusually weak in the upper weights. He won all his fights by kayoes in his freshman year, and made a good record as varsity light heavy last year, although he spotted his opponent a half score pounds in practically all bouts. He was due for an even better season in the newly created 165-pound class, for that is his natural weight.

NEW COURSE IN LIBRARY SCIENCE TO BE OFFERED

A new junior and senior elective to be given during the winter quarter, as announced by Dr. R. B. Downs, acting librarian, is library science 61. This is a course in the use of books and libraries. Instruction is given on the use of books and libraries. Methods of finding material on various subjects and practice with the reference books of the University library are covered.

HIGH CAGE TEAMS TO OPEN SEASON

Rankin Announces First Contest In East to Be Goldsboro vs. Raleigh January 6.

State high school basketball teams will swing into action January 6 when Rocky Mount and Goldsboro meet in the class "A" opener in Goldsboro, according to an announcement by E. R. Rankin, secretary of the state association, yesterday.

The North Carolina High School Athletic Association, under the University extension department, will sponsor the annual competition in class "A" and "B." Schedules for the court performers in class "A" have been arranged with the following schools entering teams:

Western division: Charlotte, Gastonia, High Point, Greensboro, Salisbury, and Winston-Salem; Eastern division: Durham, Fayetteville, Goldsboro, Wilmington, Raleigh, and Rocky Mount.

Western quintets get under way January 13 when Greensboro and Charlotte clash in Charlotte. The Queen City outfit beat Raleigh last year for the state championship in the finals held in the Tin Can. This year's final tilt will be played in the Tin Can, March 1.

BOWLING EVENT WILL COMMENCE THIS AFTERNOON

Graham Memorial Management Will Sponsor Tournament Today and Tomorrow.

The first mammoth bowling tournament is scheduled to get under way this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock at the University bowling alleys in Graham Memorial.

This will be an invitation tournament and only those men who have made a score of 140 or better are eligible to enter. Each man will roll three games for the high score, and the four high scorers will play among themselves for the four places. Play will be from 4:00 to 6:00 o'clock and from 8:00 to 10:00 o'clock today and tomorrow.

All men intending to enter this tournament are asked to sign up with the manager of Graham Memorial at his office before 4:00 o'clock this afternoon; the entrance fee will be ten cents to cover the cost of the game.

Alleys Cleaned

The alleys are being cleaned and shellaced and a new foul painted. The foul line rule will be strictly enforced during the tournament, and failure to comply with this rule will disqualify the player.

The following persons are eligible to enter the tournament and may sign up with Mayne Albright in his office in Graham Memorial: Brewer, who has bowled 218; Hudson, 201; Tucker, 165; Parker, 174; Atwood, 212; Scott, 145; Tracy, 163; Morris, 147; Hutchinson, 146; Yewins, 149; Hudson, 154; Sloan, 160; Lovill, 164; Frazier, 158; Torbert, 161; Ellis, 188; Gump, 149; Brandt, 143; Adler, 166; Blueglass, 157; Kalb, 146; Lynch, 155; Beebe, 148; Millaway, 152; Kavaney, 140; Kanner, 155; LeGore, 140; Napier, 145; Jimison, 162; Professor R. H. Sherrill, 155; and Professor Hugo Giduz, 155.

The favorites to take the tournament are Brewer, Hudson, and Atwood. Of the three Atwood and Hudson are favored to place higher than Brewer by virtue of their more consistent and accurate playing.

The bowling alleys have held up very well since their installation some time ago; however, they have been damaged some-

WOLFPACK WILL HAVE MANY VETS FOR BASKET QUINT

Brown, McQuage, Johnson, Clark And Nelms Boost Hopes Of Coach Sermon.

State College will start a basketball team with four veterans this year.

Jimmy Brown and Ralph Johnson, forwards, and Gilbert Clark, Allen Nelms, and Bob McQuage, guards, form a brilliant nucleus around which Coach Ray Sermon can build his 1933 quint.

A trio of rookies who warmed the bench last year have also a good chance to land a first team position. George Beaghen and Bill Avera are going to fight it out for the center position left vacant by Morgan last year. Clifton Palm, another greenie, has a good chance to displace one of the veterans at a guard position.

One team has been composed entirely of sophomores from last year's fighting freshman outfit. This outfit shows Frank Partel and Walter Lambeth at the forwards; LeRoy Jay at the pivot orb; and Don Dixon paired with Ray Rex at guards. This team showed a lot of speed in a recent workout; and several of these lads are going to see action in 1933.

With this outfit it looks like the three Tar Heel teams in the Southern conference are going to have to battle it out for the Dixie crown. Both Duke and Carolina are going to have clubs which are going to be hard to stop.

The Red Terrors open their season Friday night against little Atlantic Christian College in Raleigh.

what by those students who have not been observing the foul line. In the future this rule will be strictly enforced. If a player crosses the foul line as many as five times in one game, he must forfeit the remainder of the game. Students are asked to cooperate with the management in this matter.

McGILL STUDENT STAFF AWAITING COUNCIL'S ACTION

Associate Editors Continue Publication Until More Definite Action Is Taken.

The reporters and associate editors of the McGill University Daily have agreed to operate that paper temporarily until definite action is taken by the student council regarding the resignation of the entire editorial staff last week.

The agreement was for the reporters and associate editors to run the paper until Monday in order that the entire student body will not be inconvenienced. The associate editors presented a letter to the student council in which they stated their stand on the matter.

A portion of the letter states: "We have been informed that a meeting of the students' society has been called for Monday afternoon, which we hope may clarify the situation if the council has not already done so. Therefore, we suggest that no managing board be appointed until Monday evening, in the meantime, the Daily being conducted by the associate editors." The signature of most of the associate editors followed.

No Commerce Meeting

D. D. Carroll, dean of the school of commerce, announced yesterday that the usual Wednesday meeting of the freshmen of the school of commerce at assembly period will not be conducted this week.

Symphony Club to Dine

The North Carolina Symphony club will give a luncheon today at 1:00 o'clock in room 214 Graham Memorial.

World News Bulletins

Reject Move to Impeach Hoover

The House of Representatives by 361 to eight votes yesterday afternoon rejected a move by Representative McFadden, Republican from Pennsylvania, for the impeachment of President Hoover on the ground that he had betrayed the country on war debts.

Herriot's Proposals Rejected

The foreign affairs and finance committees of the Chamber of Deputies yesterday, in Paris, rejected Premier Herriot's proposal to pay with reservations the debt installment due the United States tomorrow.

Student Opinion Holds Against Semester Plan

Favors Semesters

Though he has never attended a school using the semester system, one student said that he preferred it for the reason that "one couldn't lose credits in that way and because having hard subjects, requiring much study, it is more difficult if taken five times a week. Under the semester system of having subjects three times a week there would be more time for concentrated study."

Among the 'bull sessions' prevalent here the trend of feeling is thoroughly against any attempt to return to the now antiquated semester system. It is the tendency of the students in these sessions to treat with scorn those who advance any points in favor of the semester.

Schedule For Paying Registration Fees

In order to avoid confusion in the payment of University fees for the winter quarter, the committee on registration has devised an alphabetical schedule for payment. Trouble on the student's part may be avoided, however, by attaching a check or money order to his bill and mailing it to the cashier of the University.

For the convenience of those who do not pay by mail the following schedule has been adopted:

Names beginning A-B, January 3; C-D, January 4; E-G, January 5; H-J, January 6; K-L (and all medicals), January 7; M-O, January 9; P-R, January 10; S, January 11; T-V, January 12; W-Z, January 13.

Failure to pay or to make proper arrangements for paying during this period will result in a $5.00 fee for delay.

"THE AGE OF CONSENT" SHOWING AT CAROLINA

H. N. Swanson, former editor of College Humor, assisted in the production of RKO-Radio Pictures' "The Age of Consent," showing at the Carolina theatre today.

Dorothy Wilson has the leading feminine role in the story, which deals with the problem faced by a boy and girl of whether to get married or to continue their education. Included in the large cast are Richard Cromwell, Arline Judge, Eric Linden, John Halliday, and Aileen Pringle. Gregory La Cava directed.

This announcement of the reduction in Dry Cleaning prices is a source of pleasure to us. It is in keeping with our policy of passing on to our patrons, any savings resulting from economies effected through the operation of our business, if possible without lowering the quality of our work or reducing the standards of our service. Reduced material costs, the savings to us, by your bringing and calling for your work and an increased volume are the reasons for these reductions.

It affords us a great deal of satisfaction to be able in such a practical manner, to express our appreciation for the liberal support accorded us, and as well, to demonstrate our ability at keeping dry cleaning costs in line with the present-day basis of income.

IRISH TEAM WILL DEBATE CAROLINA AT EIGHT TONIGHT

John Wilkinson and A. S. Kaplan
To Uphold Negative Against Debaters From Dublin.

The Irish debaters of the University of Dublin will meet representatives of the University, in Gerrard hall, tonight at 8:00 o'clock.

John Wilkinson and A. S. Kaplan will represent the University. They will uphold the negative side of the question, "Resolved: That Nationalism is a bar to peace and progress." Representatives of the University of Dublin are James J. Auchmuty, B.A., of Longford, Ireland; and Garrett E. Gill, B.A., LL.B., of the city of Dublin.

Carolina conducts one foreign debate each year. Last year's foreign encounter was with Oxford. This is the first time that the University has debated the University of Dublin.

The Irish debaters are touring America and are debating some of the leading universities and colleges of the country. They debated the University of Georgia last Monday night; and after spending Thursday night in Chapel Hill, they will conclude their tour Friday night, in a debate with George Washington University, in Washington, D. C.

The National Student Federation of America is sponsoring this series of Irish debates in America this fall.

PROFESSORS WILL GO TO LANGUAGE MEETING AT YALE

Several Members of Faculty to Read Papers at Conclave
During Holidays.

A number of University professors from both the Romance language and English departments will attend the forty-ninth annual meeting of the Modern Language Association of America at New Haven, Conn., December 29, 30, and 31.

Yale University is the host to the meeting this year, which is the convention of all the sections of the Modern Language Association, the southern division of which met in Atlanta during the Thanksgiving holidays.

Six University professors will read papers on various specialized subjects. Dr. Ralph S. Boggs will read a paper on "The Halfchick Tale in Spain and France," Dr. Sterling Stoudermire will speak on "The Popularity of Solis's Refundiciones of Siglo de Oro Plays," Dr. W. S. Wiley will read a paper on "Translations of Ovid in the French Renaissance," and Dr. N. B. Adams will speak on "The Year 1837 in the Theatres of Madrid." All of the professors mentioned are of the Romance language department.

Dr. George R. Coffman will speak on "Old Age From Horace to Chaucer: Some Literary Affinities and Adventures of an Idea," which is concerned with an account of the experiences of a passage from the writings of Horace in its changes at the hands of writers through the middle ages. Dr. Coffman will also discuss the use of this passage in Chaucer's Canterbury

Shaw-Henderson Fete Planned For January

A Shaw-Henderson festival is being planned by the Carolina Playmakers as their first offering for the next quarter. Dr. Archibald Henderson head of the mathematics department, will give a public lecture, "George Bernard Shaw, The Man And His Work," January 29, at 8:30 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre.

In the same week, February 2, 3, and 4, the Carolina Playmakers will present You Never Can Tell, one of Shaw's "pleasant plays." This drama, a satire on domestic relations, has been called one of Shaw's most popular pleasantries, and will be the Playmakers third public presentation of the season.

DANCE GROUP MAY CHOOSE BETWEEN LOWN AND WEEMS

Two Famous Orchestras Under Consideration for Spring

With plans for having either Bert Lown or Ted Weems providing the music unsettled, the main features of the junior-senior dance set next spring were announced yesterday. Scheduled for Friday and Saturday, May 12 and 13, the social activities will climax the program of senior week, a traditional institution here at the University.

The series of dances will be comprised of the junior prom, Friday night from 9:00 until 1:00 o'clock, the junior-senior tea dance to be given Saturday afternoon from 4:00 until 6:00 o'clock, and the final dance of the group, the senior ball, scheduled to last from 9:00 o'clock to midnight Saturday. This affair will be the last dance before the finals to be given at the close of the term.

The planning of the week-end is being handled by the committee composed of the senior and junior class committees headed by Bill McKee. Guests of the seniors and juniors are expected to come from many parts, including Sweet Briar, St. Mary's, Woman's College and others.

RECENT VISITOR DONATES BOOKS TO LOCAL SCHOOLS

Miss Helen Ferris, library editor of the Literary Guild of New York, in appreciation of the treatment she received while visiting Chapel Hill last week, sent a large box of books to Miss Marks of the education department. These books were distributed to the Carrboro school library, the children's library of the Chapel Hill graded schools, and to the colored school library, which libraries Miss Ferris visited during her stay here.

The donation will be made part of a special program at the graded school.

Graham to Speak

President Frank P. Graham will address the students' Bible study class at the Presbyterian church Sunday morning at 10:00 o'clock. All students and townspeople have been invited by the class to share the privilege of hearing Dr. Graham.

Lutheran Services

Lutheran services will be conducted Sunday afternoon at 5:00 o'clock in room 216 Graham Memorial.

TICKETS ON SALE AT Y. M. C. A. FOR LECTURE SERIES

Council for Student Expression Will Sponsor Lectures With Industrial Democracy League.

A limited number of season tickets for the lecture series planned through the auspices of the Council for Student Expression in co-operation with the League for Industrial Democracy will go on sale this morning. Tickets will be sold in the lobby of the Y building and in various other centers on the campus as well as through student members of the executive committee of the council. Committeemen with tickets include: Vernon Ward, chairman, Billy McKee, Bill Eddleman, Alton Lawrence, Don Seawell, and Don Shoemaker.

The lecture series will be inaugurated Thursday, January 12, and will run through to March 2 every Thursday evening. Speakers of national and international reputation have been invited to participate in the open forum discussion on matters of banking, economy, labor, farm problems and many other topics now prominent in the national view. Season tickets, obtainable at one dollar, will be good for all of the series.

Monster Cow Needed To Fill Swain Hall's Daily Milk Pail

Statistics Compiled by Manager Obie Harmon Reveal That About 130 Gallons of Milk Are Used Daily at Campus Commons to Feed Cassein-Hungry Students.

Twice during the past week a handsome cow grazed nonchalantly on the campus near Graham Memorial, totally impervious to the outraged looks on the faces of campus denizens.

Perhaps it was the sight of "Bossie" on the campus that led a Swain-fed freshman to ask a waiter at the commons: "Tell me, does this dining room keep its own cow back out here somewhere?"

If Swain hall management did keep a cow for such a purpose, it would have to be a mighty big cow—much larger than the one grazing near Graham Memorial this week.

In fact, if such were the case, Robert L. Ripley, genial compiler of "Believe It Or Not," would have given the animal national prominence as the "proud giver" of 130 gallons of milk daily.

Big Milk Drinkers

But the drinking of that much milk is no impossibility to the students fed at Swain hall. The University dining room has actually used 130 gallons of milk per day, according to figures compiled by Manager Obie Harmon.

His figures show that between the opening of school in September and the last day of November the management served its diners with 7,578 gallons of sweet milk and 1,373 gallons of buttermilk. The sweet milk purchased by the dining room is "grade A pasteurized" and has a butter fat content of 4.2 per cent.

This milk was served on tables at Swain hall for drinking purposes, for use with cereals, and for use in coffee and cocoa.

Weight Increases

In observing the tremendous amount of milk that had been consumed in a short while, Manager Harmon also became interested in the reports that certain freshmen employed in Swain

REV. TOM WRIGHT WILL LEAVE HILL FOR NEW POSITION

Assistant Pastor of Chapel of Cross Offered Position as Secretary of College Work for Church.

Rev. Tom Wright, assistant rector of the Chapel of the Cross, and closely connected with University life has announced that he will probably have to leave Chapel Hill to accept a new position offered by the National Council of the Episcopal church. An offer to serve as acting secretary for college work is now being considered by Wright.

Wright graduated from Seawancee in 1926, and, following his graduation, he took the regular three year theological course at Virginia Theological Seminary, finishing in 1929. At the seminary Wright was president of the student body.

Following the completion of his work at V. T. S., Wright was assigned by the National Council to help with various duties in the fourth Province, which includes the district south of the Mason-Dixon line and east of the Mississippi. His new work will consist mainly in bringing before the people of the church the activities of college work and the need for financial support.

University Symphony's First Program Sunday

The University Symphony orchestra will appear for the first time this year in Hill Music hall, Sunday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock, presenting four major works from the symphonic field.

The program will open with the Egmont Overture by Beethoven, followed by Tchaikovsky's Nutcracker Suite, commemorating the Christmas season. The orchestra will then play the Spanish Caprice of Rimsky-Korsakoff and will conclude the concert with the Siegfried Idylle by Wagner.

As is customary with all concerts given in Hill Music hall, no admission will be charged and the public is invited to attend.

MEETINGS DURING HOLIDAYS INVITE FOUR PROFESSORS

Odum, Groves, Murchison, and Ferber to Attend Different Meetings in Cincinnati.

During the holidays several University professors will attend meetings of three national conventions of men in their fields which will meet simultaneously in Cincinnati. Representatives from the University will have important parts on the programs of each of these meetings.

At the twenty-seventh annual meeting of the American Sociological Society in Cincinnati, December 28-31, Dr. H. W. Odum of the department of sociology will preside over the sessions of the division of cultural and folk sociology. At the same convention Dr. E. R. Groves will deliver a paper on the subject: "The Field and Problems of Social Psychiatry."

Dr. C. T. Murchison of the department of economics is planning to attend the sessions of the American Economic Association in Cincinnati at the same time. He is to deliver a paper entitled "The Requisites of Stabilization in the Cotton Textile Industry."

Dr. W. F. Ferger also of the department of economics will attend the convention of the American Statistical Association, where he will take part in the program.

LIBRARY KEEPS REGULAR HOURS THROUGH EXAMS

The University library will continue its regular hours during examinations. Holiday hours begin Wednesday, December 21. Students are reminded that all books are due December 17, before the holidays begin. The holiday schedule is as follows:

Dec. 21—8:15 to 5:00 o'clock.
Dec. 22—9:00 to 5:00 o'clock.
Dec. 23—9:00 to 5:00 o'clock.
Dec. 24—9:00 to 1:00 o'clock.
Dec. 25—Closed.
Dec. 26-30—9 to 5:00 o'clock.
Dec. 31—9:00 to 1:00 o'clock.
Jan. 1—Closed.
Jan. 2—9:00 to 5:00 o'clock.

Relations Club to Meet

Members and interested students are asked to assemble in 214 Saunders tonight at 7:00 o'clock for the final fall quarter meeting of the International Relations club. Dr. K. C. Frazer, faculty adviser, will outline the organization's plans for the winter quarter and distribute literature dealing with the proposed projects.

Free Expression

Made Useful

If directed in the proper channels the student opinions floating around the campus at this time of the year as to the comparative worth of various courses in the curriculum, can be of untold value to the professor if he will but grant them the liberty of expression.

After teaching a course from year to year for as many as five or six years—or possibly longer—a professor can only by an application of superhuman will-power prevent himself from getting into one definite rut. And in this rut he usually remains until someone points out his plight. He soon comes to the point where the course is nothing more than a matter of habit. The jokes are the same year in and year out; the notes remain identical except for a few minor corrections; and the entire method of teaching changes not one iota throughout the entire time.

To the professor who has become accustomed through continual practice to the details of his course, there appear few flaws. But to the student who must take the course only one quarter, and then along with others, the flaws stand out quite vividly. Hence if at the end of the quarter the professor will only require each student to turn in an anonymous criticism of his course, he would be able to see himself and his teaching in the light of his own pupils. And as a result he would be well supplied with new ideas, if ever he took upon himself the task of replanning the course.

The professor will, no doubt, disregard this suggestion, doubting the students' ability to teach a course anyway. But if he does take such a viewpoint, he overlooks the fact that such a doubt is likewise prevalent in the minds of the students regarding his own abilities in this field.

Hope Springs Eternal

Are you interested in puzzles? Jig-saw puzzles? Crossword puzzles? If you are, it is an indication that you have the makings of a scientific mind—a mind which takes delight in solving problems. There is a strong tendency, however, that one's interest in the apparently insoluble may stop with cross-word puzzles, or jig-saw puzzles—may just stop at that, "and nothing more."

Should such a deplorable condition prevail it would be an indication that the full flowering of this gift had atrophied through some perverse cause. An early interest in puzzles normally should blossom into an interest in ever more complex things. It is an indication of youth to be always developing. Leonardo da Vinci was an excellent example of this sort of thing; so was Descartes.

Nevertheless it seems that instead of developing our interest along such lines we allow it to wither away, thereby losing for ourselves and for society an invaluable, irreplaceable boon.

Why should we lose the full benefit of this tendency? How does it come about? The solution is one of extreme complexity. It carries with it notions of brain development, educational and familial influences, economic conditions and social pressures. The careful nurture of this combination of desire for achievement and curiosity constitutes a real challenge to the social order. Just as far as it develops and fructifies, thereby is determined the degree of hope for the solution of our weighty problems of today.—V.J.L.

Representative McFadden (R., Pa.) should get the Congressional Medal. He woke the entire House for the first time since Andrew Johnson.

Belgium and France are pretty smart. They have at last heard the latest styles in America: "Blame it on Hoover."

"Varsity Boxers Are in Condition as Exams Start" says a head in yesterday's paper. But wait until they are over.

If the co-eds here take up fencing as it has been rumored, we venture to say that the number of "untouched" girls will decrease rapidly.

Preferences

The New York Times, no bashful news sheet, reports that the seniors of Wheaton College, Norton, Mass., think it the best newspaper in the country; choose The New Yorker as a favorite magazine; like Dartmouth best of the colleges; prefer Robert Montgomery; Ogden Nash; author; John Galsworthy, Thomas Hardy and A. A. Milne next in order; matrimony ten to one; to start a home on twenty-five dollars a week.
